FROM HAZLEHURST, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Yesterday, at 10 a.m., we closed a meeting that was of fifteen days' duration, held under the leadership of the Hazlehurst Flying Squadron, and participated in by the three churches of the town.

Nearly fifteen hundred people made definite pledges of personal consecration to the Lord, and one hundred and sixty-five united with the churches of the town and surrounding country. About forty of these united with our church, and the others with the Baptist and Presbyterian. People were reached from a distance of twenty miles around in the county.

The preaching was done by Rev. J. E. Thacker, D.D., of Norfolk, Va., and the singing was led by Brother Roddy, of Chattanooga, Tenn., with his wife as pianist. This makes a great team, and any community will be fortunate to have these people hold a meeting.

Dr. Thacker is the evangelist of the General Assembly, Southern Presbyterian Church, and one of the soundest and safest preachers I know. He believes in God, Jesus Christ, the Holy Ghost, sin, and hell as the reward of unrepentant sinners; and he believes the Bible is the only safe guide to live by. The Bible is the Word of God. As a singer and pianist, never have I know any who gave more general satisfaction than Brother Roddy and his wife.

One of the crowning features of the meeting was that on Saturday Mrs. Thacker came and spent Sunday and Monday with us. She lectured in the afternoon of Sunday on "The Home Touch," which was one of the most appropriate and timely lectures it has been my pleasure to hear.

On Monday, at 10 a. m., she delivered a lecture on "God's Creation and Christian Science." This lecture should be given in every community. It deals with this question from a sympathetic standpoint, and reveals the folly of its conclusions and statements in the most convincing way. Nothing but blinded prejudice can stand before these mighty thrusts of facts. When it is known that Mrs. Thacker is a sister of the two great Dixon preachers, one will not be surprised that her lectures are gems of literary beauty, and most convincing statements of truth.

This team left here yesterday at noon with the prayers and benedictions of the people following them, and the community full of joy and happiness.

Cordially,
W. H. SAUNDERS.

A NOTE FROM REV. W. D. WENDEL.

Dear Dr. Carley: My family, consisting of my wife, son and myself, have been sojourning down here on this beautiful coast for some weeks. It has been beneficial to all of us. I am looking forward with great pleasure to the session of the North Mississippi Conference at Greenville, when I will take up active work again.

My son, William Bean, has just left for Memphis, where he has accepted a position as instructor in chemistry in the medical department of the University of Tennessee. He received the degree of B.S. at Emory last June.

I am sure the brethren will be glad to know that I am preaching and holding prayer meetings at every opportunity. I enjoy the Advocate.

Fraternally,
W. D. WENDEL.

THE SINGING HEART.

I trudge along the footpath way,
Sometimes a wee bit wearily;
It may be under skies of gray,
With low clouds drifting wearily;
Still on I fare right cheerily—
I' faith I would not part
For gear or gold with what I hold—
The Singing Heart!

For gold takes wings and flies afar,
And gear is ofttimes hampering,
And peace of mind it well might mar,
And deaden joy with pampering;
My merry thoughts go scampering,
Quite free from envy's smart—
Indeed, maybe some envy me
The Singing Heart!

And never think I walk alone
Upon the road I fare along,
For hearts than answer to my own
A-many pilgrims bear along;
There's comradeship full rare along
Our way, through field or mart—
No earthly ill for long can chill
The Singing Heart!

—Minnie Leona Upton, in Kind Words.

WHAT IS CHRISTIANITY?

In the home, it is kindness;
In business, it is honesty;
In society, it is courtesy;
In work, it is fairness;
Toward the unfortunate, it is pity;
Toward the weak, it is help;
Toward the wicked, it is resistance;
Toward the strong, it is trust;
Toward the penitent, it is forgiveness;
Toward the fortunate, it is congratulation;
And toward God, it is reverence and love.—Selected.

A MAN WHO BECAME FAMOUS

Doctor R. V. Pierce, whose picture appears above, was not only a successful physician but also a profound student of the medicinal qualities of Nature's remedies, roots and herbs, and by close observation of the methods used by the Indians, he discovered their great remedial qualities, especially for weaknesses of women, and after careful preparation succeeded in giving to the world a remedy which has been used by women with the best results for half a century. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is still in great demand, while many other so called "cure-alls" have come and gone. The reason for its phenomenal success is because of its absolute purity, and Dr. Pierce's high standing as an honored citizen of Buffalo is a guarantee of all that is claimed for the Favorite Prescription as a regulator for the ills peculiar to women.

Wheat is the Fuel of Life

You can get the most food value out of wheat by eating bakings that are made from good plain flour. A dependable baking powder must be employed or you do not get the full nutritious value of the wheat—nor will your bakings be as palatable and easily digested.

The same results cannot be had if you use Self Rising Flours, or any so called ready-to-use substitute for plain flour and good baking powder. Food authorities and physicians agree that bakings that do not raise properly are bad for the health. Such foods are hard to digest and in time cause stomach trouble.

Mothers who are interested in the proper growth and health of their children (and all mothers are) should never use anything but a good brand of plain flour and a time-tested leavener such as Calumet—the economy Baking Powder.

Calumet has more than the ordinary leavening strength. It raises every baking to its height of nutritious value. It is pure and dependable—do not look for a substitute—there is none.

Use Calumet and be positive of wholesome nutritious and economical foods.

FROM WALNUT GROVE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am writing you just a few lines to let you know what we are doing here at Walnut Grove, Miss.

We have organized one Woman's Missionary Society and one Junior Missionary Society.

Our revivals are all over, and I will give you the results by churches.

We began at Freeny, on July 22, with Brother T. B. Winstead doing the preaching for us. The visible results were, eleven members by profession of faith, the church revived, and a Sunday school organized.

On July 3, we began our meeting at Walnut Grove, with Brother J. F. McClelland doing the preaching. The visible results at this place so far this year are: Two organized Missionary Societies—one woman's, with eight or ten members, and one Junior Missionary Society, both doing fine work; we received two members by certificate, and we have licensed one young man to preach, and he is now in Millsaps College; we have also secured two lots at the new town. We expect to build a church down there another year.

The first Sunday in August we began our meeting at Zion, with Brother M. R. Jones doing the preaching. Our meeting continued until Friday night. The visible results of this meeting were nine accessions by profession of faith and the church revived.

On the fourth Sunday in July Brother T. A. Ferguson came to me at Sebastopol. Brother Ferguson captivated all the people with his strong gospel sermons. We closed on Friday. The visible results were, the church greatly revived, and three accessions by profession of faith.

I then held my own meetings at the following places: White Plains, Mount Horeb and Madden, holding about five days at each place.

At Mount Horeb and White Plains we received five members at each place, and at Madden we did not get any members. This is a schoolhouse appointment. We have added to our work where there is a consolidated school. This makes thirty-six members this year.

I hope to go to the Annual Conference with a good financial report.

C. H. HERRING, P. C.

ENTHUSIASM.

Dr. R. L. Russell tells this good story, which illustrates boyish enthusiasm. He says that recently the well-known Sam Steel was holding a meeting for the Rev. Arthur Moore, pastor of Travis Park Church, San Antonio, Tex. One night, Dr. Steel was preaching on the Glory of Methodism. At the close of his sermon he likened the various churches to ships. He described the Presbyterian ship, a good, trim, well ordered vessel coming grandly into port after an eventful voyage, but bringing home all her passengers. The ten-year-old son of the pastor, who always occupied a front seat, listened with some interest, but not a great deal of enthusiasm—for he was not a Presbyterian. Then Dr. Steel described at great length the good Baptist ship, which did not please the boy so well, for the Baptists in that region are somewhat of a competitor. The boy was impatient for that ship to get out of deep water, get home and forget it. Then at last Dr. Steel came to the Methodist ship, which proved to be a veritable "Good old Ship of Zion." The Doctor described her at length. Heart of oak were her boards, and heart of oak were her men, and they fought and they conquered again and again. They always had rough seas and squally times, but they fought their way through the roughest seas, and they always came into the desired haven, passengers and crew unitedly singing songs of victory. It was a wonderful description, and the boy's eyes lighted up like flame at the first mention of this Methodist ship. He listened with bated breath at every word, and leaned forward in his enthusiasm. As Dr. Steel finished in a grand burst of oratory, the little fellow could restrain himself no longer, and jumping to his feet, he waved his little right hand in the air, and shouted at the top of his voice: "Hot Dog."—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

IS IT WORTH WHILE?

Since we have in mind the serious, never-ending, sometimes almost heart-breaking round of daily labor for the betterment of the world when we ask the question, "Is it worth while?" we hasten to answer that it is everlastingly worth while.

We know all too well what it is to labor day after day with no apparent returns for that labor; to strive for a goal that we seem never to approach and that at times seems actually to recede; to encounter obstacles that we had never dreamed would arise, and to lose the help of forces that we had confidently assumed we could count on. We know what it is to pass through seasons of despondency, discouragement, and disappointment, and to feel the approach of the feeling so aptly expressed in the cynical question, "What's the use?"

With all this in mind, we emphatically affirm again that it is well worth while to spend and be spent in service that has as its end the accomplishment of good. Apparent defeat may stare us in the face—actual defeat may follow our most conscientious efforts to accomplish some desired end; but the good has been strengthened and the wrong has been weakened by these very efforts, and the gain immeasurably outweighs the loss. Immediate reward is a happy consummation of much of our labor, but we should never forget that reward is not the inspiring motive of self-sacrificing toil—the accomplishment of good is the motive. If the reward should be delayed, only a weak man or a coward will cease his efforts. Self-consciousness of rectitude is a sufficient satisfaction for all the rebuffs that may be administered to us. We remember, too, the exhortation of the great apostle: "Let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." The great law of the conservation of matter applies in the spiritual world as in the physical—a good deed can not be lost.

HOW THE CHURCH RESPONDS.

There are those who maintain that the Christian church is a decadent institution that it has lost its power and that it is fast losing its influence upon the thought and life of the world. Without undertaking to show that practically all benevolent and charitable institutions are largely fostered and supported by the church as such or by men and women who are members of the church, we simply call attention to the response made by the Christian people of America to the appeal in behalf of stricken Japan. The American Red Cross issued an appeal for funds and, according to press reports, the amount asked for was quickly over-subscribed. Those who know anything about the work of the Red Cross know that it is endorsed by the church and that a very large proportion of its resources are furnished by those who are members of the church. As a non-sectarian institution it is liberally supported also by non-professing Christians, but its usefulness would be very seriously crippled if it did not have the support of the Christian people of this country.

In addition to the contributions made through the Red Cross, the churches themselves raised funds and remitted them promptly to the stricken country. We have not the figures of other denominations, but the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has just announced that, in response to telegrams sent to the presiding elders asking them to call attention of pastors to the need, $10,000 has already been received, and other contributions are coming in every day. As the statement of the Board says: "There has been no pressure and no efforts to arouse unusual interest—the response is the spontaneous expression of Christian compassion in the presence of appalling disaster."

It is evident that the church has not lost its power and that it is not losing its influence upon the thought and life of the world.

A "GOOD" RACE MEET.

The president of the Business Men's Racing Association of this city has recently made the statement through the secular press that indications are that the 1923-21 racing season will be the greatest ever held in New Orleans. There will be seven races a day, except on Sunday, and six purses of $1,000 and one of $1,200 will be offered each day except Saturday, when the amounts will be $2,000 and $5,000. As many horses are expected as the stables at the race track can accommodate.

The president of the Business Men's Racing Association may think that all this forecasts a "good" racing season; but he evidently has not taken into consideration other things that go along with this carnival of gambling in New Orleans. It is commonly understood that a great horde of petty criminals—and some that are not so petty—throng the city during the racing season; that hundreds of "handbooks"—illegal devices for making bets on the races—are in operation throughout the city; that thousands of men and women, many of them still in their teens, place bets on the races every day; that defalcations and misappropriations of money are not unusual among those who patronize the race track; that every year there are suicides among those who have been driven to despair by their losses at the track; that scandals are frequently cropping out in the conduct of the races themselves; that the hotels of the city are so crowded with racegoers that other visitors are unable to obtain accommodations or they have to pay exorbitant rates for rooms; that immorality and vice flourish during the racing season.

A "good" racing season—God save the mark! And all this, too, in plain violation of the Constitution of the State, which says that gambling is an evil and that the Legislature shall pass laws to suppress it. So far as we have seen, not one of the candidates for the governorship of Louisiana has made any reference in his published statements to his position on this great moral evil. We should like to know where they stand.

A WARNING FROM WESLEY.

All the words of the revered founder of Methodism are well worthy of consideration; and when we find a statement from him that applies particularly well to a present situation, that statement ought to have much weight. With a keen insight into human nature, Wesley wrote the following words:

"The differences which begin in points of opinion seldom terminate there. They gradually spread into the affections, and then separate chief friends. Nor are any animosities so deep and irreconcilable as those that spring from disagreement in religion. For this cause the bitterest enemies of a man are those of his own household. * * * It is, therefore, nothing more than we may expect if those who differ from us, either in religious opinion or practice, soon contract a sharpness, yea, bitterness, toward us; if they are more and more prejudiced against us, till they conceive as ill an opinion of our persons as of our principles. An almost necessary consequence of this will be: they will speak in the same manner as they think of us."

In connection with the above, it is well, also, to reflect upon those other words of Wesley's that indicate his own catholic spirit and that of historic Methodism: "One circumstance more is quite peculiar to the people called Methodists: that is the terms upon which any person may be admitted into their society. They do not impose, in order to their admission, any opinions whatever. Let them hold particular or general redemption, absolute or unconditional decrees; let them be Churchmen or Dissenters, Presbyterians or Independents, it is no obstacle. Let them choose one mode of baptism or another, it is no bar to their admission. The Presbyterian may be a Presbyterian still; the Independent or Anabaptist use his own mode of worship. So may the Quaker, and none will contend with him about it. They think and let think. One condition, and one only, is required: a real desire to save their soul. Where this is, it is enough; they desire no more, they lay stress upon nothing else, they ask only, 'Is thy heart herein as my heart? If it be, give me thine hand.'"

DAILY THOUGHTS.

A little more kindness, a little less creed;
A little more giving, a little less greed;
A little more smile, a little less frown;
A little less kicking a man when he's down.
A little more WE, a little less I;
A little more laugh, and a little less cry;
A little more flowers on the pathway of life,

EUROPE AND THE LIQUOR QUESTION.

"European nations are cursed with drink more than with war debts," said Wayne B. Wheeler on his return from an eight weeks' visit in Europe. Dr. Wheeler was appointed by the late President Harding as chairman of the delegation from the United States to the seventeenth International Anti-Alcohol Congress at Copenhagen.

"If the money wasted for liquor were turned into useful channels as it is in the United States, the financial problems of these governments could be solved with comparative ease. Dry Finland, handicapped by a commercial boycott by Spain, Portugal and France, is the only European country, so far as I could find, that has squared her budget in this last year and provided for a reduction of her debt. England has a per capita tax of about $95 (two and a half times that of the United States). Building of homes by individuals has practically ceased. The government is building most of the houses now and taxing the people to make up the deficit. More than a million are out of employment and depend upon weekly doles from the government. In spite of the necessity for eliminating harmful luxuries, this nation of 47,000,000 is spending approximately $2,000,000,000 a year on drink. It means that the drinking class, when you exclude minors and abstainers, is spending about fourteen pounds per capita annually for liquor.

"In London on Sunday evening, July 22, I visited seven saloons in the better part of London nearest my hotel. I saw many drunken women as well as men in these places. Babies parked in perambulators or on the sidewalk near the saloon door were waiting for the drunken mothers to stagger out when the saloon closed. Twenty social workers in South London visited 121 public houses between 9 and 11 p. m. and found 239 baby carriages and 731 children apparently under 10 years of age waiting for their drinking mothers to come from the saloons. The whiskey and beer magnates are increasing their profits over the pre-war period, while legitimate industry is in distress. The big brewers and distillers are getting titles as lords and baronets and other recognition similar to that accorded our American liquor lords before prohibition.

"Germany is on the verge of financial and social ruin. The people know the diminishing value of the mark and spend it at once to save it. This means that the so-called temperate beer drinker in Germany is fast becoming an ordinary boozer, such as we had here in the United States before prohibition. There is practically no milk for the children, and many of the children's hospitals told me that half of the children in those institutions are tubercular. Food is scarce, and cheap bread is rationed. But in the face of all this distress, beer flows freely, and millions are spent for this harmful product. Sufficient money is squandered for beer to make payments of such size on war debts every year to show the world that Germany is in earnest in trying to meet her obligations.

"Some of the German delegates at the seventeenth International Anti-Alcohol Congress came to me, as chairman of the delegation from the United States, and urged that I advocate before the Congress that other nations should refuse further financial aid to Germany until she stopped her inexcusable waste of food, fuel and transportation in the making and distribution of beer. I did did not do so, of course, for reasons that are manifest, but it shows how some Germans feel about this criminal waste of money and food products for beer.

"What is true of England and Germany is revealed to a greater or less degree in most of the European nations. The broader-visioned people in these countries, however, are becoming aroused and are trying to stop this waste and curb the debauching influence of the drink trade. Most of them, however, are thirty years behind the United States in this great problem of reform. The encouraging thing is that practically everywhere the people are waking up to the necessity of destroying the evils of the drink trade.

"The most disgusting thing I saw or heard in Europe was the occasional notoriety seeker from our country railing at his nation's drink policy and telling Europe that the United States was strangling liberty and ruining the morals of the people by prohibition. Such misrepresentatives of our country did not have the respect even in the wet countries of decent people who believe in being loyal to the established policy of government and playing the game of democracy fair.

"The United States is the hope of the world to-day, financially, morally and socially. Those who want more personal liberty than is permitted here can get it in liquor-dominated Europe for a little while yet, but the exodus to the dry United States shows that those who want to better their condition go to a dry country instead of a wet one."

THE URGENT EDUCATIONAL NEED.

By Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Mississippi Conference Lay Leader.

On the first page of the issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for Aug. 16 appeared an editorial relative to the "Right of Way for the Christian Education Movement"; in the issue of Aug. 30, page 5, appeared the resolutions bearing on the same subject which were passed by the General Board of Lay Activities at its recent session; in the issue of Sept. 13, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth has an article on page 1, and our General Secretary, Prof. G. L. Morelock, another on page 3; and in the issue of Sept. 20, page 3, Bishop Ainsworth urges the importance of the plan for Sunday, Oct. 11. If there is a layman within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference who is an active participant in the work of the church, but has not read these articles, I would urge his reading them at once, and particularly that every lay leader give careful attention to the message of Brother Morelock, which deals more directly with the part our lay organization is expected to take in this campaign. The Christian Education Committee and lay speakers are being used to great advantage in many of the charges, and it is contemplated that they be used throughout the Conference. With a well organized District Board, composed of the district lay leader, two associates, the presiding elder, and the charge lay leader of the district, no church should be able to use its laymen to greater advantage in the large tasks that are assigned for accomplishment.

Our church has provided for active co-operation of the laymen, and our leaders have called us to a definite undertaking for the next few months, which we should carry forward without hesitation. Subscriptions were sincerely made with an appreciation of the value of Christian education, and a realization of the immediate need of better endowments for our colleges. It was never contemplated that there would not be some difficulties in the undertaking, but words are inadequate to convey a true idea of the needs of our institutions as seen by those in active touch with the situation; and unless a halt is to be called in our educational progress, and the pleas of many ambitious young men and women referred to other ears, moderate plans undertaken where great ones should succeed, and the inspiration of development and enlarging service deadened, our Christian Education campaign must yield results adequate to a very decided improvement in the financial endowment and material equipment of our college and universities. In the initial stages of the plan it was understood that we had preachers and laymen of strong faith, broad vision, liberality, and co-operative spirit, who would feel the importance of a great task like this and count it a privilege to take part in it. It is just as true now.

Other denominations are pushing forward in the face of difficulties similar to ours, and our opportunities are as great as theirs. We shall not urge the impossible, but expect the reasonable. If the committee on tithing in each local church would put on an aggressive campaign for four weeks, wonderful results would follow, and with a large increase in the number of those who practice some form of tithing our financial difficulties would decrease. The number of those applying for entrance to our denominational colleges is larger each year, and would be still greater if dormitory facilities were adequate, teaching force sufficient to handle the classes, and laboratories ample for the increased demands. Even the prompt payment of pledges will often depend on a vital interest in the cause, and confidence in the real value of its claims. Let us make this campaign one of awakening interest in the cause of Christian Education and stronger faith in our own institutions, that the results may enable them to do the work that an important and inviting field justifies, and to which the blessings of God challenge us.

SOMETHING OF THE WORK IN CZECHO-SLOVAKIA.

My Dear Brother Carley: You will no doubt be glad to know that Methodism continues to move forward in a most gratifying way in Czecho-Slovakia. The evangelistic work this season has been even better than last year. Europe's only hope lies in the early acceptance of Jesus Christ as a personal Savior from all forms of sin, most especially rationalism, racial prejudices, national hatreds and unadulterated selfishness. While I am a firm believer in a League of Nations, I am fully convinced that no League of Nations can be created without a spiritual basis, otherwise it is only a "Scrap of Paper." The greatest task in Europe to-day is not in the economic, political, or educational, but in the spiritual field. Christ, and Christ alone—the Divine Christ—can lead Europe away from self-destruction. Let me assure you that your workers here are doing all within their power to stay this downward rush; and, best of all, God is wonderfully blessing the effort.

We reached the point last winter when a church paper became a real necessity, but we didn't have the funds to start. We hoped and prayed, and still no funds, but we had to have the paper, and so on May 1, 1923, the first issue came from the press. It is a monthly, and so far we have been able to issue it each month. We sell it for one crown per copy (about three cents). If we are able to make it self-supporting, it will surely be a miracle. We are sending you the first five copies under separate cover. Read it, if you can, and then write a good editorial telling your people what you think of this, the youngest organ of Southern Methodism. As a starter toward reading it I will translate for you the title, "Krestansky Buditel," which, being interpreted, means "Christian Awakener." Under the word "Krestansky" is Ephesians 5:14, "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall shine upon thee," while under "Buditel" is a quotation from John Huss, "Czech Nation return to Christ!"

The entire mission force heartily appreciates the weekly visits of the Advocate, and in return we are putting you on our mailing list for the Buditel. We hope to have at least two pictures in each issue which we trust will be of interest, even though you may be unable to read all the contents.

With kindest personal regards and brotherly love, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

J. L. NEILL, Superintendent.

TOBACCO ABSTINENCE AND OUR YOUNG PREACHERS.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

It has come to us that there are scattered through our Louisiana Conference several young preachers who treat their pledge to abstain from the use of tobacco as a joke, and, either in the open or under cover, violate the promise that they made in order to get into the membership of the Conference; and it may be possible that some of the older members of the Conference, who hide behind the class legislation that was enacted when the law was made, and still indulge in this filthy and scientifically condemned nicotine habit, are either upholding or shielding them in the breaking of this ministerial vow. This might do for bootleggers and dodgers of the various anti-alcohol laws, with whose set the dodger of law is the "fine fellow;" but for a body of ministers and church members to tolerate in any degree the violation of a solemn pledge by one whom we allow to minister to us in holy things is a little "hard to understand," and every member of the Conference who has knowledge of such things on the part of ministers is himself a party to the crime when he allows "nothing against him" to be annually written in favor of his ministerial character. Where are our presiding elders, that they allow such reports to go the rounds and themselves make no move to uphold the name of the church, or to vindicate the character of their pastors? If these reports are true, and an immediate cleaning up is not had on the part of the members of our Conference, then we ought forever to stop railing at the violations of our State and National liquor laws by those who do not propose to have their "personal liberty" taken from them, and have never pretended to give any kind of a pledge either to stop making it or to stop drinking it.

Since this matter should be handled by example as well as by precept, how about the Conference asking, by petition or by resolution, that in our Conference colleges, where our young preachers get their training and no little setting of their habits and ideals, no officer or teachers, from president to janitor, be employed who does not consider his influence over the boys of our homes with seriousness enough to set them an example on the tobacco question in keeping with what they have been taught in their homes and in their public and Sunday school classes? And then as many of our preachers and boys from our homes spend from four to eight years in the churches where our schools are located, let the same rule, in a memorial to the bishop, apply to the appointment of pastors to these churches. And to follow the expurgation to its logical conclusion, since a cigar-smoking official is in no more position to enforce a no-tobacco law than would be a booze fighter to enforce a liquor prohibition law, let the request to the bishop in charge be that no presiding elder who takes advantage of his exemption under this law and disregards his [illegible] and example to the younger pastors, be appointed presiding elder over one or [illegible] the time.

And while the General Conference [illegible] at the last [illegible] the election of presiding elders to [illegible] for the appointment of preachers to the Conferences, nor to [illegible] with the [illegible] only a matter of time which such [illegible] would [illegible] it into force, either by the Annual Conference, or a constitutional law passed by the General Conference. In the meanwhile, let those members of the Conference who are whispering these reports of [illegible] pledge-breaking abroad come out in the open and turn in the information to their presiding elders, just as good citizens would do if they knew of open violations of the liquor laws of the State. Cowards and dummies have but little place in the Kingdoms either of heaven or of this earth.

"AS A LITTLE CHILD."

Dear Mr. Editor: All Laymen who truly love their church and are proud of her wonderful history, deeply regret the unhappy controversy now going on in the public press. Unfortunately, it is not confined to Methodism alone; it seems to be an evidence of the general restlessness of the nation. With other churches, we have NO CONCERN—they will take care of their own troubles without assistance.

Methodism was originally a protest against formal religion—a successful attempt to bring about a spiritual, personal knowledge of the SAVIOUR. It was the most successful revival in all history, and the effect of this revival still remains. If the great scholars who are doing so much harm to our young people would ONLY read the history of the "Methodist Movement," it would clear up many doubtful points in their minds.

Personally, I do not care what a man thinks—this is permitted by the Constitution of the United States. Under our starry flag, Buddha has many temples. Other so-called heathen religions flourish in many places, protected by the Constitution. But I most certainly do object to men claiming to be ministers of the Methodist Church teaching things contrary to our belief and to the teachings of the founders of our church. If they do not believe the doctrines of the church, let them go to the church teaching those things they DO BELIEVE. Do not try to raise doubts in the minds of sincere worshipers of HIM, whom to know is life eternal.

JESUS gave the ONLY easy rule of life—"If any man will do my will, he shall KNOW"—also the simple invitation to come as a little child—with the faith of a child, with the confidence of a child, and with the love of a child. He stated that certain things were hidden from the "wise and prudent, but revealed unto babes." The learned ones failed to "see Jesus"—they were verbalists of the most [illegible] type, and overlooked the great opportunity which passed their way. The "babes" saw [illegible]. "The secret of the LORD is with them that fear him"—it is not given to those who will not understand the great honor of personal knowledge of the blessed MASTER, but when the "secret" is given, it enables the [illegible] to endure as seeing Him who is invisible.

The old stale argument is still [illegible]: "Science has now [illegible] truth." This is EXACTLY what [illegible] refuses to accept. [illegible] "science" has so often [illegible]. For example: The great[illegible] in the world [illegible] was asked to study the problem of steam navigation of the Atlantic Ocean. The [illegible] carefully measured the [illegible] and discussed the problem [illegible] which is still on record [illegible] as follows: "Steam navigation of the Atlantic Ocean is impracticable for the ships could not be built large enough to carry [illegible] "Science" has [illegible].

Mr. [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] which [illegible]. We know [illegible] committed [illegible] letter [illegible] materialism [illegible] (The World's [illegible] August.) [illegible] the [illegible].

LESBA.

By Mrs. N. [illegible]

Seventeen years ago Mr. John Rundle, now superintendent of the city schools of [illegible], Miss., was teaching in the little town of W[illegible] Grove.

He believed in cultivating the heart as well as the mind of his pupils, so every [illegible] beautiful poems, or verses from the Bible were assigned to be memorized.

Among the pupils was a bright, lovable character, Lesba McLendon, who lived in the country and boarded in town to attend school.

One Friday afternoon the twenty-third Psalm was assigned to be memorized for Monday.

Mr. Rundle was at the school building early that morning. While engaged in some school work he heard the sound of horses running, and on looking out saw a buggy drawn by two frightened horses dashing down the road.

Mr. McLendon and daughter were in the vehicle, and just as Mr. Rundle reached the road, it was overturned and both thrown out.

Lesba was thrown against a tree; when picked up she was unconscious, and in a few moments breathed her last in the arms of her teacher.

Several days after, her father went to Mr. Rundle and with tears streaming down his cheeks asked him to write the verses Lesba was memorizing when she met her tragic death.

"I want to have them put on the tomb," he said, his face drawn with grief.

Now, in that little churchyard in the "[illegible] of the [illegible]" her grave is marked by a marble slab, and on it are chiseled the beautiful words of the twenty-third Psalm.

There, where the night bird sings and the golden stars keep vigil, Lesba sleeps on, undisturbed.

Several years after, her father, who was not a member of any church, attended a protracted meeting. One night the minister rose and took for his theme the twenty-third Psalm. Suddenly, from the rear a man came up, and with broken sobs accepted Christ as his Redeemer. This man was Lesba's father.

All these years the memory of those inspired verses had lain in his heart, and now, touched by the eloquence of the minister, he knew that he, too, could say:

"The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

NEWS FROM THE DISTRICTS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Ruston District Notes.

We started our first round of quarterly conferences on Sept. 9, at Homer. We had a delightful service at 11 a. m. in their new church. The choir did well their part. At 3 p. m., we held the quarterly conference. The reports showed a healthy condition and everything running smoothly. Brother Tucker reported that their meeting would begin about the first of October, with the Widom Sisters to assist the pastor.

On Sept. 16, we had a splendid service at the morning hour, at Spring Hill—held the quarterly conference at 2:30 p. m. The pastor gave a good account of his work. The Sunday school superintendent and the president of the Missionary Society had good reports. Brother R. A. Smith, one of the faithful laymen and church treasurer, said finances would all be in full. This is one of the habits of Spring Hill.

On the evening of the 16th, at Minden, we were met by a good congregation, in spite of the rain. Quarterly conference followed immediately after the service, with most all of the officials of the church present. The reports showed that good work was being done in all departments of the church.

Our next quarterly conference was at Farmerville. We had our quarterly conference on Saturday evening, Sept. 22, at 7:30, which is very unusual on these busy Saturdays. All the claims ordered by the Conference were reported paid in full. Sunday morning, the 23rd, we had a good service. I spent a very pleasant night in the delightful, newly fixed-up parsonage.

In the afternoon of the 23rd we drove over from Farmerville to Bernice, and held the quarterly conference at 4 p. m. Each church on the circuit was well represented. A full report of the finances is expected at Conference. Brother O. L. Tucker, the pastor, has just closed a meeting at Bernice—did his own preaching, and they say it was one of the most profitable meetings ever held on this work.

Haughton and Doyline charge, Rev. J. O. Bennett. has had two good meetings. At Doyline Rev. H. W. Ledbetter assisted him. At Haughton, Rev. A. S. J. Neill assisted.

At Dubach, Brother Faulk and his official board are making a great effort to have everything in full by the fourth quarterly conference, which will convene the 7th of October.

The two new buildings which are being erected will add much to the convenience and appearance of the Orphanage. They have also added new rooms in their school department. This is a busy time with the managers of the Orphanage—starting off their school and arranging for Work Day and Harvest Day. I am adding a clipping to these notes from the Orphanage Visitor.

Our School.

"We feel safe in saying that no children in our State are getting better school advantages than the children of our Orphanage. Our own Orphanage school is conducted by a corps of as fine teachers as can be found in any school of our State. We feel sure there are none better. The result of our school is gratifying in every way, and we feel most fortunate in being able to keep most of the teachers we had last year. Miss Leola Rodgers, who did splendid work for us and whom we all love and esteem very highly, decided to add to her educational equipment and is now attending one of our great universities. The vacancy caused in this way will be filled by Mrs. J. M. Henry. Sister Henry is the widow of our lamented friend and brother, Rev. J. M. Henry, who for so many years was a prominent leader in our church. Sister Henry is widely known as a most successful teacher, whose Christian character and noble life of service are known throughout the State. We are most fortunate in being able to secure her services in our Orphanage, and her influence and life among the children in our home will be a high source of inspiration and good to all connected with our work. Mrs. Henry has been on a trip to California, recuperating from a strenuous year's work in the Louisiana Polytechnic Institute, and will return to take up her work in the Orphanage the 24th of September. In the meantime Miss Lilla McLure, an experienced and accomplished teacher, is substituting for Mrs. Henry. With Miss Jewell Bond teaching music and the second and third grades, and Miss Agatha Dodson teaching the fourth and fifth grades, and Miss Olive Gunby in charge of our primary work, our school is starting off in a splendid way and is promising to be the most happy and successful year in our school work. With this array of teaching force and our children eager and anxious to do their work, we are confident that the progress and development among our children will be of the highest type."

K. W. DODSON, P. E.

Shreveport District Notes.

The interest in the George Tucker evangelistic tent meeting in Shreveport was well sustained to the close, and the co-operating churches were pleased with the results.

Claiborne Church in Shreveport has been organized with forty-one members and a Sunday school with an enrollment of ninety-six. The pastor, Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., is much pleased with the prospect, which is beyond our expectation.

There are now seven Southern Methodist churches in Shreveport, all of which will make good reports at Conference. Six of these churches reported accessions on Sunday, Sept. 23.

As a result of the donation from the City Church Extension Board the Bossier City congregation recently held a get-together meeting, which was addressed by Rev. George S. Sexton and others, and the entire amount of the old parsonage debt was subscribed. The pastor, Brother Parker, is greatly encouraged with the prospect of a splendid report for Annual Conference.

The Cedar Grove congregation, under the leadership of Brother H. L. Johns, are ready to begin the construction of the new Sunday school building. Some needed improvements are also being made in the parsonage.

Rev. J. L. Lay recently assisted the pastor, Rev. W. F. Roberts, in a good meeting at Longstreet. He has also held several of his own meetings without outside assistance.

The prayers and sympathy of all Advocate readers are urged in behalf of Brother S. A. Alexander and family, of Greenwood, who have recently been bereaved of the only son, Dr. S. Y. Alexander, a successful physician of Shreveport.

Rev. J. W. Pearson, of Mansfield, has been transferred by Bishop McMurry to the Southwest Missouri Conference and stationed at St. Paul's, Springfield, Mo. Brother Pearson will leave for his new field of labor the middle of October, at which time the financial work of the year will be completed.

Rev. R. T. Ware, of Vivian, has successfully undergone a surgical operation in the Highland Sanitarium, Shreveport, and is rapidly recuperating. Brother Ware is in high favor with his people and is doing a great work there.

Plans are being rapidly perfected for the Sunday School District Training School, which will meet in First Church, Oct. 14-19. Dr. A. S. Lutz is the director.

This is opening week at Centenary College. On the first day more than two hundred were registered in the college proper, besides a record-breaking enrollment in the academy.

The Mansfield College opening was highly gratfying. nearly every room in the dormitory being occupied.

R. H. WYNN, P. E.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Notes from the Greenville District.

The somewhat feverish "last days before Conference" are on. There is a hopefulness that bespeaks a wonderfully plucky people despite the untoward conditions that stir the world of finance. We shall see what we shall see.

The Jonestown and Duncan charge will not only report "everything in full," but as complete and satisfactory a plant at Duncan as will be found in any town of the size in the State. They worshiped in their new church recently for the first time. On the same lot is a modern parsonage, complete enough in every detail to satisfy the most exacting.

The fourth quarterly conference for the Lula and Dundee charge was held recently. It was in every way satisfactory. There is not found a more loyal people or a more painstaking and popular pastor. It is always a pleasure to visit them.

Clarksdale Methodism has enjoyed a year of marked prosperity. T. M. Brownlee is popular and efficient. All the machinery of the church is functioning well. The Woman's Missionary Society is sending a fine young woman to Grenada College. At no distant day this will be one of the outstanding charges of Methodism.

Merigold and Alligator will make the usual report, plus. They are asking for the return of one L. A. McKeown for the fifth year. The new church at Merigold is taking form rapidly these days. When complete it will be ample for all the needs of this splendid people.

Rev. Dan Kelly is holding a series of meetings at Glen Allen at this writing. The only report received to date was most favorable for happy results. This charge, Glen Allen and Benoit, is in fine condition. The new church enterprise is halting because of local conditions, but it is only temporary.

There is little if any restlessness among the brethren, lay or clerical. The next news letter from this district will give enough of real and definite information to forecast the final results. The call for educational funds is not receiving the hearty response this, the most vital of all the calls, demands. It is by no means a case of indifference.

JAMES H. FELTS, P. E.

FAITH.

It is the easiest thing in the world to obey God when he commands us to do what we like, and to trust him when the path is all sunshine.

The real victory is to trust God in the dark and through the dark. Let us be assured of this, that if the lesson and the rod are of his appointing, and his all-wise love has engineered the tunnels of trial on the heavenward road, he will never desert us during the discipline. The vital thing for us is not to deny and desert him.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

The Lord hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary.—Isa. 1:4.

AT THE PRISON CONGRESS IN BOSTON.

By Chaplain H. S. Johns.

Mr. Editor: It was a great opportunity when our General Manager, Hon. H. L. Fuqua, appointed me to go as the representative of the Louisiana State Penitentiary, with all expenses paid, to the Prison Congress which met at Boston, Sept. 13-19.

This organization is over fifty years old and is composed of all those interested in prison work who care to attend. Forty-two States were said to be represented at the meeting, which was indeed inspirational and instructive, and the good accomplished, in my opinion, was great. The foremost men and women engaged in prison work were there, besides speakers of national reputation.

A short account of some of the incidents of the trip might be interesting to your readers.

The entire trip covered 3,664 miles, the shortest route from Baton Rouge, which was by Cincinnati, thence through Buffalo and Albany to Boston.

Between trains at Cincinnati, I visited again the Zoo there, which is one of the best in the world for some things I wanted to go again to settle a question of the status of the black leopard. I had seen one there in 1919, but could never find a single person who had ever heard of such an animal. Some even thought perhaps I had been dreaming. But he is still there—a black leopard! I learned by particular inquiry that they flourish in southeastern Asia, and it seems like a freak of nature that some are black—like a black cat, for example. There are lions, tigers, bears, big pythons, etc.

Then, again, because I could not travel on certain trains between Buffalo and Albany on the New York Central on a clergy ticket, I had another lay-over in Buffalo. The big trains, like the Empire Special and Twentieth Century Limited, on account of the heavy expense and large demand for space, admit only full fare, extra fare, and Pullman passengers. No passes or reduced rates allowed. However, in the afternoon I got a train for Albany which "rode just as well" and at half rate, too, and got to Albany in time to get a good night's rest at a hotel.

Taking advantage of the morning, I went out to see Niagara Falls again. Who can describe that great cataract? Suffice to say, the morning was well spent. Just above the Canadian Falls a steel barge lodged several years ago in the rocky shoals, loaded with coal. It still sticks, and all the observers speculate as to when some "freshet" will send her over the precipice.

Taking an early train out of Albany, we wound around the hills through Massachusetts to Boston, arriving there at 3:15 in the afternoon. Going over, we passed through Springfield, where the rifles were made for the Union armies during the Civil War. At another town is the place where all the paper is manufactured for the making of currency by the government at Washington. It is made by a secret process known only to a very few persons of the highest character.

Hotel Brunswick, Boston Congress headquarters, is a modest hotel, nice enough, but not up to the big hotels of New York and other places. There is a dearth of "fine" hotels in Boston. I saw only one, the Copla-Plaza, of the same rank as the St. Charles or Grunewald of New Orleans. Most of our sessions were held in the rooms of the Boston School of Technology, just across from the Brunswick.

The Boston street car system is a puzzle, especially to a stranger. I never knew when I got on a car on the surface whether it would turn out into a subway, or an elevated. The fare is ten cents, with transfers good all around. I took the elevated train one day, which ran into a subway, and then emerged to the surface. My plan was to follow directions and stay on' till I got where I intended to go.

There are many historical sites there to see. Boston enjoys the distinction of having precipitated the war of the American Revolution, although the fires of liberty were lighted down in Virginia and the Carolinas. The Boston Massacre and the battle of Lexington-Concord, however, began the conflict. Washington took charge of the American army, July 3, 1775, under an elm tree, which is still standing, although dead, in a park just across from Harvard University in Cambridge, which is just over the Charles river from Boston.

The people of Boston were very hospitable toward the Congress. Auto rides were given us, amounting to two whole afternoons in sightseeing, where all the historic places were pointed out. We got out of the cars as often as we pleased and stood on the hallowed ground. Bunker Hill Monument, 220 feet high, in Charlestown, was visited, and the old State House of those stirring days, Granary Burial Grounds, King's Chapel, Faneuil Hall, Old South Meeting House, Tea Pier, the site of the celebrated tea party, and many other places were pointed out.

Boston Commons is a place of great interest. Here the boys "engaged" General Gage, of the British army, because their playing rights had been interfered with by the soldiers. I had all my life pictured the Commons as a mere village green of some six or eight city blocks in size. Imagine my surprise to find the Boston Commons a great park of 50 acres, and the Public Gardens are alongside, with a street separating them, of 25 acres. Seventy-five acres right in the heart of Boston for recreation and play! It was certainly a good thing, for there on Sunday afternoons vast crowds of people were congregated, enjoying the fresh air. Two preaching services were in progress.

On Saturday afternoon a boat ride was given the delegates on Boston Harbor, a trip of some fifty miles in all. First we went to the Naval Station at the junction of Charles River, just above Boston; thence down the Bay, passing by Tea Pier, where the British ships were moored when the Americans boarded them and threw the tea overboard; thence out to get a few swells of the Atlantic. A stiff, cold, northeast wind was blowing, and we were all glad to get back into the smooth waters of the Bay. The next day was Sunday, and a trip was on schedule for Plymouth Rock to see the county prison and farm. I did not go, however, and it turned out very rough for those going. Some got seasick. Plymouth is 45 miles around the Bay from Boston. I remained in Boston to go to church.

On Monday afternoon, after the sessions at Framingham, we were treated to a regular New England picnic of clam-bake and boiled lobsters, corn on the cob cooked in the shucks, fresh cider, etc., after which we were given a ride of four hours to places of interest. My party went to Lexington-Concord battlefield, where the "shot heard around the world" was fired, and walked over those places where the first battle of the Revolution was fought. Returning, we came over the route traversed by Paul Revere in his famous ride of warning, and through Cambridge to the tree known as Washington Elm, which, unfortunately, is dead, but still standing, fenced about and a tablet on it; thence by Harvard University, and back to Boston.

On a previous afternoon we had been driven to Salem and saw the Witch-House, House of Seven Gables, both of early Colonial times, perhaps the oldest standing houses outside of Plymouth Rock settlement.

The closing evening we were the guests of the city of Boston at a grand banquet and speaking fest at Copla-Plaza Hotel, where addresses were made by the mayor and other distinguished speakers.

Altogether, we rode 120 miles sight-seeing around Boston, the Congress had two boat trips, four "feeds," and every attention. Boston has few national conventions on account of its geographical position, and they certainly did the handsome thing by us.

I do not know how they raised all that money to entertain us; it was not our business to ask how—we simply enjoyed it!

OPENING OF MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Friends of Millsaps College will be gratified to know that it opened on Wednesday, Sept. 12, with the largest enrollment in its history. Up to date 314 have been formally registered.

While the Freshman class is large, a feature of the attendance for this year is the large number of old students who have returned. Another notable characteristic is the large number of those who have applied for advanced standing, having come from other colleges. Among the institutions thus represented are: Blue Mountain, Hillman, Whitworth, Mississippi State Women's College, Mississippi State College for Women, Agricultural and Mechanical College, University of Tennessee, Southwestern Presbyterian University, University of Mississippi, Mississippi Normal College, Grenada, Belhaven.

All phases of the work of the college are organized, and the college is entering upon what promises to be a successful session.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION—MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Please say through the Advocate to all the subscribers to the Education Fund that I am sending out letters from Bishop Ainsworth. Oct. 14 is pay-up day, and he is asking all the subscribers to pay up their first and second payments. On Nov. 1, the third payment will be due.

I am looking to the preachers and the collectors to remind their congregations of this matter. If you have paid your pledges, read the letter and urge other subscribers to pay up. I think that this letter from the Bishop is well worth reading.

I am also sending placards to each collector or preacher, which are also gotten out by Bishop Ainsworth. I am going to put on these cards the amounts due on the first and second payments.

Cordially your brother,

J. M. MORSE,
Secretary-Treasurer.

P. S.—The Mississippi Conference is due about $35,000 on the first and second payments.

THE THINGS THAT COUNT.

By Ernest Lee Thompson.

'Tis not the talents nature gave,
  Nor birthrights men have had;
'Tis not the fame of honored sires,
  Nor gold that counts, my lad.

But what men are by their own choice
  When in the scales they lie;
And how each spent the life God gave—
  These cast the fateful die.

Inheritance of fame and wealth,
  Of gifts in brawn, or brain,
Are helps when taken at their worth,
  But otherwise are in vain.

Choose right "when morning gilds your sky,"
  And when the sun goes down;
This world will be a better place,
  And you will w[illegible]r a crown.

GOOD TIDINGS FROM OTHER FIELDS.

Last week I gave the readers of this page a few items of encouraging news gathered at the Illinois, Denver, and Western Virginia Conferences. In every instance the "forgotten man" was at bat and giving a creditable account of himself. And now I have some other things to relate that serve to make every friend of the old veterans rejoice in the realization that our great church is at last clearing for action in behalf of her now infirm and aged servants who contributed so much to make her great.

Missouri Conference.

It was held at St. Joseph, Mo., beginning Sept. 5. As my train ran through the outlying district of the city, cautiously making its way to the Union Station, my thoughts went back twenty-four years when I landed at this same station to take up my first work as a pastor of one of our churches in St. Joseph. At that time I was a mere boy, and my chief thought was: "How can I make good?" Of course, the "forgotten man" was present in the church even in that day, but I could not see him, for I was chiefly conscious of myself alone. Young preachers ordinarily think but little about the deprivations of aged and worn-out preachers. If I had then realized the facts about my church's veterans as I know them to-day, the years which followed would have been used in a manner more to save my church from the reproach for neglecting her own.

It was very satisfying to mingle again with the preachers among whom I had worked in my youth. And yet it was saddening to realize that many of them who were so vigorous and strong twenty-four years ago are now either languishing in the great silence of superannuation or else entirely removed from the group by death. Heads that I recalled as crowned with thick hair, cheeks without wrinkles, and eyes undimmed, now have a few white hairs drawn across the top in camouflage or else entirely bald, cheeks cut by care lines running every way, and eyes, though still having the same kindly light, yet apparently turned toward some scene not reassuring. This is a good place to record again what I have repeatedly stated hitheto—namely: "Every active pastor in the church is a 'forgotten man' in the making."

The plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment was presented to the Conference according to schedule. Bishop W. F. McMurry guided the program of presentation very effectively. Bishop James Dickey delivered an inspirational address for the moment that stirred those present to a determination to work with a will to win. Throughout the entire program, which lasted one and a half hours, the preachers and lay members kept their places in eagerness to hear every word of instruction on the method of procedure. I was told that not a member of the Conference was loitering outside the Conference room while the "forgotten man" cause was being considered. This good news was very gratifying. I do not mind the killing work now necessary for the success of the special effort if the preachers and lay members co-operate.

At the conclusion of the service a young preacher called me aside and said: "One of my laymen came to this Conference for the sole purpose of having me returned as his pastor. After hearing this morning about the movement looking to secure a minimum of $10,000,000 for superannuate endowent he told me that this cause appealed to him with such conviction that he desired at once to subscribe $500 on the quota of the charge that he represented. He also said that he wanted to be placed on the committee in his charge that would have in hand the matter of raising the money for its quota." Many lay members throughout the church are expressing themselves in similar manner. If they could know how such expressions encourage their pastors, they would be surprised. The preacher in this case was bubbling over with joy and expectancy. Every preacher in the church would respond in like manner if given the assurance by some lay member that his charge's quota will be raised.

Another good layman sought me out at the hotel and said: "I contributed liberally to all the other financial campaigns. Since that time I have lost a lot of money. However, I am not quite broke yet, and I want you to know that I mean to do something very substantial for the superannuate cause." I wanted to hug him. Bless his dear, good soul! His words were like a tonic to me. I believe we have thousands of such men in the church. When the call for the "forgotten man" comes to them, they will find a way to make a worthy response.

At the night service Dr. R. H. Cooper, fifty-one years in active service, and Dr. S. P. Cresap delivered telling addresses on the great movement to an audience which filled the auditorium, gallery, and overflowed into the Sunday school room. After them, Bishop W. F. McMurry, though weary from a summer of very strenuous work in his episcopal district and the labor of holding two Annual Conferences, concluded the program with remarks that not only deepened the convictions of the brethren on the subject but inspired in them the determination to have the Missouri Conference at the head of the list when the returns are all in. God bless the boys on the border and give them the desire of their hearts.

Kentucky Conference.

A few hurried clasps of the hand, a few pats on the shoulder while passing by, a snatching of a grip and a hurry-up ride in a taxi, a night and a day and half another night, and I found myself in Winchester, Ky., where the Kentucky Conference had transacted most of its business except that pertaining to the "forgotten man," which was reserved for Saturday. At 10:30 a. m. Rev. Frank L. Wells was introduced to deliver the inspirational address. I thought his work at the Western Virginia Conference was oxtra fine, but now he was even better. He was complete master of the situation, as was plainly manifested by the hearty responses which issued from the great audience throughout the time he was speaking.

Bishop Darlington, fagged from the strain of holding three Annual Conferences in as many weeks, rallied perceptibly when he realized that he was guiding a program having a decent support for the "forgotten man" as its objective. No man in the church is more considerate of the church's superannuates than this good bishop. He impresses me as actually feeling in his sympathetic soul the deprivations which these old veterans endure. With him in charge of the Kentucky Conference I feel confident that the blue grass preachers will respond to his leadership in a manner to obtain a notable victory in the special effort for superannuato endowment.

It required forty minutes for me to explain the plan. All the preachers appeared to be in their places, and, like all true Kentuckians, they seemed determined to master all the details of the movement. Afterwards dozens of them gave me a hearty handshake and with an interest that could not be doubted promised faithfully to do their part. They realized fully that the success of the plan depended chiefly on them and their lay members, and they assumed the responsibility in a manner that was very reassuring. What a joy it is to work for preachers when they give such evidence of a definite purpose to assist with the task!

There were many lay members present, and many of them came to me with very encouraging words. Not one said the thing should be put off or complained about the movements of the church for special funds. They were all of one mind on the subject of the special effort, and all promised to work faithfully for its perfect realization. One good layman said he had already prepared a speech on the subject and expected to deliver it wherever he had an opportunity. If laymen generally get the "call of the 'forgotten man'" into their plans as this brother has it, nothing on earth can stop the raising of the $10,000,000. This brother has a heavy law practice and ordinarily has but little time to give to anything else, but he says he means to take time to work for this sacred cause. One man like him can so arouse the laymen of a community that the raising of its quota for this work will be accomplished with ease.

Many good women of the Kentucky Conference assured me of their determination to see this thing through. They will do it, too. When a woman sets her head to something, there is no stopping her this side of realization. She can find so many ways of doing a difficult thing that she lands on her goal, notwithstanding all obstacles. One of them said to me: "I am going to do a lot of work with your 'forgotten man' pageants. The young people will be delighted to put them on, and wherever one is presented the people are sure to be fully instructed concerning the cause. When the people know the facts, they will give all the money that is needed." God bless these women and make their plans to prosper, and bless the entire Kentucky Conference in her work for the "forgotten man."

THE LITTLE THINGS OF EVERY DAY.

By W. C. Page.

When troubles daunt, and sorrows crowd,
And the way seems rough and long;
When the sun is hid behind a cloud,
Doubt and despair have hushed all song;
'Tis the little things of every day
That make the game of life worth while;
The warm hand-clasp, kind words of praise,
A cheerful "Good-day," the friendly smile.

It does not take much time each day
To do some simple, some kindly deed,
To help a comrade along life's way;
Give some aching hearts the hope they need,
Then place a friendly shoulder 'neath the load;
Don't leave your burdens for others to bear,
Stop and help the ones that fall beside the road,
And the tasks of others ever gladly share.

JOHN'S REWARD.

A long time ago in the days when there were fairies there lived a widow and her three little boys. She was poor, and so she had to work hard to earn enough money to keep them from starving.

Now it happened that in the yard of the cottage where they lived there grew a rosebush, and one day a beautiful rose blossomed upon it. The children were proud of the rose, and as they stood admiring it and talking about it an idea suddenly occurred to John, who was the oldest.

"I shall pick that rose and take it to market and see if I can sell it," he said to his brothers. "I'm sure mother would be pleased to have the money, and it is so beautiful that I ought to get a great price for it."

So he picked the rose and started for town with it.

When he was almost there he heard some one say, "Oh, how I should like to have a rose like that!"

He looked to see who was speaking and found that it was a little hunch-backed girl who sat in the window of the tenement house that he was passing. She looked lonesome. There was not a flower in sight to cheer her, and John, who had a kind heart, thought to himself, "Perhaps I should not get much for just one rose anyway." He called to the little girl, "Here, catch it."

In another moment the rose was in her hand and she was smiling happily and clapping her hands in delight.

John turned to go home, but the little girl called to him. "I should like to give you something, too," she said. "Hold out your cap."

John held out his cap and she threw a handful of hazelnuts into it.

"The children will be pleased with these," John said as he put them into his pocket and went on his way.

But he had gone only a little farther when he saw a little boy no bigger than himself with a thin, sad face and a ragged coat.

"What's the matter with you, little boy?" asked John kindly. "You look sad."

"I'm hungry," answered the little boy. "I wish I had something to eat, but I haven't any money to buy food."

John put his hand into his pocket and brought out the hazelnuts. "This isn't much," he said, "but it will help a little." And he gave them to the boy.

"That is good of you," said the little fellow, "and since you are so kind, you may have my only plaything." He took from his pocket a rubber ball.

"No, no. You keep it. I don't want to take it away from you."

"Please take it. I want you to have it," replied the little fellow so much in earnest that John took it.

"We can have lots of fun with it at home," he said to himself as he continued on his way.

While he was bouncing it on the pavement and catching it as he walked along he heard the rumble of wheels behind him. A farmer was returning home from town where he had been to sell his produce. When he caught sight of John bouncing the ball, he said eagerly, "My boy, I'll give you the nicest red apple I have left if you'll give me that ball. To-day is my little boy's birthday, and he wanted me to bring him a ball, but I forgot all about it until I saw yours. He will be so disappointed!"

"It would be a pity to disappoint him," said John. So he gave the farmer the ball and took the red apple in exchange.

"I shall give it to mother when she comes from work," thought John. "In a way it will be better than the rose, because she can eat the apple, and she couldn't eat the rose."

Pretty soon he came to a little cottage in front of which grew a large cherry tree. An old woman stood under the tree.

When she saw John she called out to him, "Little boy, do you happen to know where I can get a nice red apple? I'm so hungry for an apple dumpling that I don't know what to do. I have many cherries, but I can't make an apple dumpling of them."

"Why, I have the very thing you want," said John, and he took from his pocket the apple that the farmer had given him.

"Oh, thank you," said the old woman joyfully as she took it from him. "But you shall not part with it for nothing." She quickly filled a paper bag with cherries and gave it to John.

"Well," he said to himself, "this is even better than the apple, for now we can all have some."

"Don't throw away the seeds," called the old woman as he left. "Save them and plant them and you will have some cherry trees of your own in a few years."

Pretty soon John came to his own house, and when he went inside he found that his mother had already come home from work. A scanty supper was ready and waiting for him. You may be sure that his mother was glad to see John, for he was just a little boy and had never before been far from home by himself. She had begun to fear that something had happened to him. The cherries made a great difference in their simple meal. After all of them had been eaten John gathered the seeds and put them into a [illegible] until the next day when he could plant them.

But in the morning when he went to the dish he found no cherry [illegible] at all, but only little lumps of shining gold. He called his mother and his little brothers and while they were gazing in astonishment at what was in the dish they heard a gentle tap at the door. When the door was opened, there stood the most beautiful fairy that ever was seen or that probably ever will be seen till the end of time. When John looked at her he thought that he had seen her somewhere before, but he could not remember. Her lovely smile seemed to light up the whole room.

"This," said the fairy, pointing to the dish of gold pieces, "is a just reward for John's kindness of heart in helping so many people. I was the lonely little hunch-backed girl. I was the poor little hungry boy; [illegible]. I begged of him his ball; I was also the old woman to whom he gave the apple. May he and his be happy the rest of their lives!"

With those words she vanished, but just as she was disappearing she touched the poor cottage with her wand, and it became a pretty cottage with comfortable furniture. John and his mother and his little brothers lived happily on the money that they received for the lumps of gold until the boys grew up and were able to earn a good living for their mother and themselves.—Bessie [illegible], in Youth's Companion.

"TIME OUT."

Wasted Kindness.

A popular rector, going up the steps of his church to conduct the service, was approached by a stately old lady in difficulties with her breathing.

"Pardon me," she said, "but would you do me the favor of assisting me up the steps?"

"Certainly, madam," assented the rector, giving her his arm. They reached the door when the old lady, pausing for a moment's rest, said:

"Pardon me once more, but do you happen to know who is preaching this morning?"

"The rector, madam," replied the cleric.

"Oh!" she said. "Then might I beg you to do me yet another favor?"

"Certainly," replied the rector. "What else can I do for you?"

"Would you be so good as to assist me down the steps again?"—Methodist Times.

WORK DAY FOR THE MISSISSIPPI ORPHANAGE.

When we called attention last week to the fact that Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 13 and 14, were to be observed by the Methodists of Louisiana as Work Day and Harvest Day, respectively, for the Louisiana Orphanage, we had not been informed as to the dates for a similar observance for the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage. Since then, however, we have learned from an exchange that the same dates have been designated for observance by Mississippi Methodism. We are sure the occasion will be properly observed, but we call special attention to it lest some superintendent or pastor fail to mention it far enough in advance to secure the best results. A response to the appeal of this sacred cause should be made by every Sunday school and congregation in Mississippi.

A NEW BOOK BY BISHOP CANDLER.

Few men have made as many lasting contributions to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as its present Senior Bishop, and none, perhaps, has added more richly to its literature. The latest production from Bishop Candler's facile pen is a "Life of Thomas Coke," just issued by the Cokesbury Press (the trade name adopted by the Publishing House for its publications of general interest).

We have not yet completed the reading of the volume of about 400 pages, but we have gone far enough into it to realize that it is a most valuable addition to the Methodist Founders' Series, of which it is a part.

As the Bishop states in the Preface, Thomas Coke has not been justly appreciated by the Christian world, even the Methodists, whom he served so unselfishly and zealously, having estimated him far below his real worth. The inaccuracies of former biographies are corrected in the volume before us, and the treatment of the subject is fuller and more satisfactory than in other books by other writers.

The book may be had of the Publishing House for $1.50, and we heartily commend it to all those who would gain a comprehensive knowledge of the life of the man who was second only to John Wesley in the propagation of Methodism.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. H. Sharp, of the Nebo charge, Mississippi Conference, reports that his work is moving along well.

To date, our Board of Missions has received $40,000 for the Japanese relief fund, and contributions are still coming in. This is a most appealing cause.

Brother E. P. Harper, of Star, Miss., now sixty years old, has been a reader of the Advocate from boyhood. We appreciate his kind words in renewing his subscription.

Brother J. G. Calhoun, of Mount Olive, Miss., now seventy-eight years old, has been a subscriber to the Advocate since he was a young man. He is one of the faithful "Old Guard."

In spite of adverse crop conditions, Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, presiding elder of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, reports that his district will carry up a good report to Conference.

Rev. L. C. Wilson, our pastor at Clinton, La., was in New Orleans last week in connection with placing his son, Clifford, in Tulane University. He paid several appreciated calls at the Advocate office.

Rev. H. S. Johns, chaplain of the Louisiana State Penitentiary, was elected president of the chaplains' section of the National Prison Congress at its recent session in Boston, Mass. This is an honor worthily bestowed.

We call attention of our pastors to the fact that new statistical blanks have been prepared and must be used this year in making reports to the Annual Conference. The blanks can be had of the Publishing House.

Rev. J. W. Pearson, who has served a successful pastorate at the First Methodist Church, Mansfield, La., has been transferred by Bishop McMurry to the Southwest Missouri Conference and appointed to St. Paul's, Springfield, Mo.

Rev. Lee F. Soxman, formerly connected with the work of the Institutional Church of Kansas City, Mo., has arrived in New Orleans to join the staff of workers at St. Mark's. He will be connected with the men and boys' department.

Rev. H. W. May, our pastor at Gilbert, La., under date of Sept. 30, writes: "We occupied the basement of our new brick church to-day. It is a thing of beauty. Funds for the pews are provided and we will open the auditorium in a few weeks."

The new parsonage of the First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., has been completed, and Rev. Osmond S. Lewis and his family are now occupying it. It is a beautiful and commodious preacher's home. The old parsonage is being fitted up for class rooms for the Sunday school.

The Nashville Tennessean of Sept. 24 has a half-column editorial in appreciation of Mr. Henry H. Ahrens, who resigned his position in the Publishing House at Nashville to become Religious Editor of the Times-Picayune, this city. Mr. Ahrens assumed the duties of his new position on Oct. 1.

Rev. Mark Terrell, of Sherman, Tex., one of our general evangelists, who was a visitor to the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences last year, recently held a great meeting in the First Methodist Church of Mayfield, Ky., in which more than 400 persons professed conversion, reclamation, or reconsecration.

The congregation of the Mount Olivet Church, Satartia charge, Mississippi Conference, are raising funds to build a new church. Mount Olivet is one of the historic churches in that section of the State, and we congratulate its membership upon their progressive spirit. Rev. B. H. Williams is the pastor.

The Chief Chaplain of the United States Army, Colonel John T. Axton, has issued an urgent call to the one thousand clergymen who constitute the corps of chaplains of the three component parts of the Army, to begin early the preparations for the proper observance of Armistice Day, which this year falls on Sunday.

Rev. J. Early Gray, our pastor at Moss Point, Miss., has just closed a good meeting at that place. The church generally was revived, and there were eight additions to the membership of the church by baptism and vows. The pastor did the preaching for the most part, and the laity of the church rendered active and efficient service.

The following comes from Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Meridian District: "The Lauderdale and Electric Mills charge is the first in the Meridian District to report the assessments for the support of the ministry paid in full. Who next? Rev. W. H. Lane, the wide-awake pastor, is working hard for level columns along all lines."

Rev. R. E. Simpson, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, but last year pastor at Blytheville, Ark., in the North Arkansas Conference, has returned to Southern Methodist University, where he will complete the course for the Bachelor of Divinity degree. Brother Simpson has had a very successful pastorate in Arkansas, but he still calls Mississippi "home."

The Board of Managers of the Methodist Hospital at Memphis, Tenn., at their recent meeting authorized the building committee to ask for bids on the new hospital. These bids are expected to be in hand within thirty days, and work will begin as soon as possible thereafter. In the meantime, the Lucy Brinkley Annex will continue to be operated.

In the article in last week's Advocate, "H. G. Wells on Evolution," by Rev. P. H. Fontaine, our faithful pastor at Bonita, La., the word "creed" in the last paragraph should have been "crux." The sentence in which the word appeared would thus read: "The above being the crux of the whole subject, I must accept one or the other; so I, of my own free will and accord, accept the Bible." We regret the occurrence of the error.

Last week we made note of the fact that Rev. J. G. Snelling, of this city, had been called to Oklahoma by a telegram announcing the serious illness of his father. We announce with great sorrow that his father passed away on Sunday, Sept. 30. Our deepest sympathy goes out to Brother Snelling and other members of the family in the great sorrow that has come to them. The deceased was advanced in years and was ripe for his translation.

The American Bible Society has announced the startling fact that Yokohama, Japan, produced and sent out annually for missionary circulation more copies of the Christian Scriptures than any other city in the world. The printing concern which did the work was totally destroyed by the earthquake, and the director and the entire operating force of from 700 to 1,000 persons were killed. It is estimated that $300,000 will be required to rehabilitate the work.

Dr. Guy E. Snavely, president of Birmingham-Southern College, and also president of the Federated Methodist Men's Clubs of our church, has announced that Dr. John W. Frazer, Pensacola, Fla., has accepted appointment as general secretary, which position was made vacant by the resignation of Dr. George Stanley Frazer, who has become pastor of a Presbyterian church in Macon, Ga. All communications concerning the Federated Clubs should be addressed to the new secretary at 100 West Cervantes Street, Pensacola.

Rev. J. E. Selfe, our pastor at Hammond, La., writes that he is in the midst of a great revival, in which he is being assisted by Rev. W. Hardy Neal as preacher, Mrs. Neal as accompanist, and W. L. Shell as choir leader, soloist, and director of children's work. Large congregationns are attending the services and many conversions are being had. Those who are in position to know say that Hammond has not had such a revival for many years. Brother Neal has one open date, from November 1 to Conference, and he will be glad to correspond with any brother who may desire his services. In the meantime he will return to Arkansas for two short meetings, leaving his tent, however, at Hammond.

We record with great sorrow the death of Mrs. F. M. Williams, widow of the late Rev. F. M. Williams of the Mississippi Conference, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. C. Wetherbee, in Waynesboro, Miss., on Friday, Sept. 21. She was ninety-two years of age and had been in fairly good health until recently, when she fell and broke her hip. She was a native of Tennessee, but came to Mississippi shortly after her marriage. She was ripe in Christian experience and was ready for her translation. She is survived by her son, Rev. W. M. Williams, our pastor at Purvis, Miss., and the following daughters: Mrs. W. C. Wetherbee, Waynesboro, Miss.; Mrs. Mollie Grant, Baton Rouge, La.; Mrs. J. W. Alexander, Meridian, Miss.; Mrs. A. B. Kling, Satartia, Miss. The funeral services were held in the Methodist church at Waynesboro, conducted by Rev. H. A. Wood, with interment in the local cemetery. We extend our deepest sympathy to her loved ones and friends. We trust to have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Mrs. W. M. Wiggins, Leland, Miss., 6; Rev. T. B. Winstead, Carthage, Miss., 7; Rev. J. H. Sharp, Perth, Miss., 2; Mrs. Maude W. Martin, Bentonia, Miss., 2.

CENTENARY COLLEGE OPENING.

On Friday at 10 a.m., the college chapel was filled by a large and enthusiastic audience to celebrate the opening exercises for the collegiate year of 1923-24. Dr. George Sexton, the genial and enterprising president of this time-honored institution, presided. Service appropriate to the occasion was rendered, after which the new members of the faculty were presented. Judging from the introductory remarks concerning these, they are each fully equipped and furnished for the tasks devolving upon them. Choice selections of music were given by those in connection with this department. Suitable speeches were made by leading citizens, who represented, in some measure, the various commercial and civic institutions of our city. These speakers assured the college and its interests that they were in hearty sympathy and accord with its phenomenal growth.

There are now eighteen members of the faculty, not counting the coach and athletic director. The student body numbers 248 in the collegiate department and 125 in the academy. Improvements are being made in the way of additional buildings. A commodious brick building, rectangular in shape, is rapidly being pushed to completion.

The most marked figure of the opening day was the fine spirit manifested by those present. This is an assurance of future success. The students as a class are the representatives from families of sterling worth, and no doubt many of them will go forth from these classic halls bearing the impress of real culture and of those lofty ideals that have made this institution famous in the past.

S. J. DAVIES.

THE OBSCURANTISTS.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

They call themselves "Modernists"; but the class is nearly two millenniums old. There is nothing modern in their contention. Both Paul and John, in their Epistles, make it plain by warnings too clear and definite to be misunderstood, that the contention of these so-called Modernists was met and fought in their day. See Eph. 1:15-21, Phil. ii:5-11, Col. i:13-20, 1 Tim. vi:20; I Jno. 1-3, 11, 15, II Jno. 7. No! whatever they may or may not be, they are not modern.

Some call them "Progressives"; but we are sure that if they progress at all it is after the fashion of a well-known crustacean, i. e., backward.

Some call them "Radicals"; but the word radical is derived from the Latin radix, a root, and does not apply at all.

Some time ago this press dispatch appeared:

"Washington, May 26.—Eminent churchmen, scientists, writers, and men of affairs to-night joined in a statement rebuking William Jennings Bryan and others, who seek to array science against religion.

"Though the statement did not name Bryan directly, no secret was made of the fact that it was inspired in part by Bryan's recent fight against the Darwinian theory and his repeated attacks on science as being antagonistic to religious teachings.

"The signers of the statement asserted that science, instead of destroying religion, supplements it, and 'furnishes a sublime conception of God.'

"'We deeply regret that in recent controversies there has been a tendency to present science and religion as antagonistic and irreconcilable domains of thought, for in fact they meet distinct human needs and in the rounding out of human life they supplement rather than displace or oppose each other.'"

Mr. Bryan retorted:

"There is no antagonism between religion and real science. Science is classified knowledge; therefore nothing is scientific unless true. No truth can hurt the Bible. No truth can harm Christianity. Our objection is to unsupported guesses put forward by scientists in the name of science. The guess to which we most object is that man is a descendant of the brute.

"The document obscures the issue. If the man who wrote the statement had explained that the theology denounced as medieval, teaches that the Bible is true, that Christ was born of a virgin, suffered for man's sin and rose from the dead, it is probable that some of the men named would have refused to sign."

"The document obscures the issue." Mr. Bryan is correct. It seems to be a habit with those who question the simple, clear and strong statements of the Bible to "obscure the issue." When a young man, I undertook to read one of Ingersoll's lectures; but I became so utterly disgusted with his palpable misquotations and inexcusable misinterpretations of the Scriptures he sought to combat, that I abandoned the reading. Later, in reading Nelson on Infidelity, a book issued years ago by the American Tract Society, I found that Nelson, born of a French mother in France, concluded to follow the prevailing fashion and be an infidel; he began to read Voltaire, but found that every quotation and allusion to the Bible was inaccurate. Voltaire and Ingersoll and the rest "obscure the issue." Nelson concluded that any system dependent on falsehood to maintain it must be fearfully false; so he abandoned his infidelity and became a Christian, and wrote a strong and unanswerable attack on Infidelity.

Last year when the Kentucky Legislature, under pressure from the Christian parenthood of the State, seemed about to forbid the teaching of Darwinianism, i. e., the Evolution of Species, in her public schools, a lot of these obscurantists claimed that these pious men and women were re-enacting the role of the persecutors of Galileo in the dawn of the seventeenth century. They are ignorant of the fact that what Galileo taught was easily provable then, and has long since been unquestionably proved; while Darwin's theory, though presented more than half a century ago, is still unproved—not a single real "missing link," or half-brute and half-man, has ever yet been found; while if the theory be true, multiplied thousands of such would be in evidence especially in the broad Congo. Thousands of sensible parents in Kentucky and other States do not wish their children taught as science that which is not in any sense a science. Most of them heartily agree with Paul, exhorting Timothy, to turn away from profane and vain babblings and oppositions of science falsely so called." Falsehood, whether in the realm of biology or the sphere of theology, is not only "'profane and vain," but more or less inimical to religion. Kentucky parents say: "We do not want it and will not have it." They do not propose to persecute anybody. They would say, I am sure: "Prove Darwin's theory as thoroughly as Galileo's theory is proved, and then you may teach it to our children." Let us not permit the issue to be obscured!

I read somewhere the plea of some obscurantist that Genesis iii:19 teaches Darwinism. The passage reads: "Out of it (the ground) wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Did not this obscurantist know that Gen. i:26, 27 says: "God said, Let us make man in our image (not a monkey's) * * * and God created man in his own image"; and that Gen. ii:7 says: "Jehovah God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul"; and that Psa. viii:5 says: "Thou (God) hast made him (man) but little lower than God" (R. V.)? Do these passages suggest a monkey ancestry for man? or a monkey likeness? or any sort of monkey kinship? Why did this obscurantist ignore all these utterances except the dust business? He did it because he is an obscurantist and not a fair, honest reasoner.

Let it be understood always and by all people, that, as Mr. Bryan says: "There is no antagonism between religion and science." There is beautiful and complete harmony, and nobody believes this more fully than do we who reject earnestly and reasonably the unproved and unprovable "Evolutionary Hypothesis" of the blind followers of Charles Darwin. We ask for facts, real, established facts; and they give us theories, hypotheses, guesses half a century old that never have presented one iota of proof.

Whoever introduces a really good religious newspaper into a family does a work that is valuable beyond calculation. That work starts in the center of life's sea a ripple which will never cease in its outward and onward movement until it shall break upon the shores of Immortality. Do you realize that, sister? Do you also realize that the consequences of neglect in this important matter are correspondingly fearful in its consequences? Then go to work.—Selected.

IN MEMORIAM.

MINNIE LEE, the beloved daughter of Matthew R. and Lydia E. Jones, fell asleep in Christ, Juue 10, 1902, at the early age of twenty-three. Her mother preceded her to the Great City, leaving two-children, Murdock R. and Minnie Lee, with their father, March 26, 1906. Never did a sweeter, braver spirit respond to God's inevitable message than when Minnie Lee, the young, the gifted, the beloved, leaned her bright head on the bosom of death and fell into slumber. Possessed of every endearing and noble quality that could enrich and beautify a woman's nature, even in childhood's years to the natural graces of her heart she added the crowning grace of Christianity, and for more than half her life as a member of the church she acknowledged Christ and received the baptism of the Holy Ghost, living bravely up to the acknowledgment. With a heart and spirit attuned to everything pure and beautiful, she faded out of life as gently as the roseate tints of sunset fade from the evening sky, and found time but a flower-strewn path leading to eternal life. For her the white rose of spotless peace, for those left behind the thorns of an enduring sorrow. To her heart-broken father and brother and all the members of her family and schoolmates and friends of Port Gibson, where she was educated, is left the consoling memory of a faultless life, rounded by a beautiful Christian death, and in the certain knowledge of the resurrection of the body and the life of the soul lies the balm of all earthly parting.

"She sleeps! The lovely lashes lie
Upon her cheek at rest;
No longer any mortal sigh
Disturbs her gentle breast;
While stricken love in anguish weeps
Over one who in her beauty sleeps.

"She sleeps! The strife of life is done,
And all its warrings cease;
She sleeps; that fair and gentle one
Has entered into peace,
And tender recollection keeps
Its watches o'er one who softly sleeps.

"She wakes! For lo the shadows fall
From her young soul away;
She answers to the morning call
Of God's eternal day,
And endless daytime brightly breaks
For one who in her Savior wakes."

Her friend and former pastor.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

FROM THE KOSCIUSKO CIRCUIT.

Dear Dr. Carley: Let me say for my pastoral charge—the Kosciusko circuit—that the general state of the church is in better shape than for years. Our revivals have been good, stirring and quickening the church life. Eighteen were added to the membership, and eleven infants were baptized.

My last meeting was a most remarkable one (at East Union), where I had with me Charles Assaf, our Syrian preacher, of Jackson, Miss. He came to me for the fourth Sunday in August, and remained through the first Sunday in September. I have never seen people more delighted with a preacher. He gripped them at the first service, and held them to the last. The meeting resulted in fifteen additions to our church and two to the Presbyterian Church. I took in one entire family from the Baptist Church—father, mother, and six children, the two youngest being baptized as infants. The father stated that he was reared by Baptist parents and had lived in the Baptist Church because he had never known before what Methodism stands for.

Another result of the meeting is that the people of East Union resolved and are determined to build a new and up-to-date house of worship. Steps to that end have already been taken—the old house and lot sold and a new and better lot deeded.

Praise God, from whom all blessings flow!

FROM TROUT AND GOOD PINE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I feel as if the work of the Lord should be praised, and especially the workers who seem never to tire in doing the Lord's work.

We have, so far, had a wonderful year here with both Trout and Good Pine churches. The pastor, Brother J. F. Waltman, has certainly endeared himself to the people of both communities by the fact that he is always willing and ready to help every one and to further the cause of Christ in every way possible. We have such interesting prayer meetings each Wednesday evening. The pastor explains and teaches (in fact) the Sunday school lesson for the following Sunday, which is indeed helpful to the teachers, giving them a better understanding of the lesson, and how to put it before their pupils.

Our Sunday school is as good as any in the State; some are larger, but I'll say no better. Mr. H. Hill is superintendent, and as Brother Waltman is first assistant in the work, the spirit of co-operation is manifest.

We have had a wonderful revival, too. The pastor was fortunate in securing the services of Brother Bass, an evangelist of the Mississippi Conference, who also brought his singer with him, Brother Holman; and with this singer in charge of the songs and Miss Marjorie Wyman at the piano, the song services were greatly enjoyed. As Brother Waltman had all plans mapped out and everything in readiness, having already invited all Christians, regardless of religious belief, to co-operate, the expected happened a wonderful victory for the Lord. The pastor and Brother Bass arranged to go out to the woods at the noon hour and hold services for the men; several of the men were converted, and are fine workers for the Lord. Cottage prayer meetings were held in the three towns—Trout, Tall Timber, and Good Pine, also in Jena, under the leadership of Mrs. J. F. Waltman, Mrs. Lufcy, and Mrs. Bond, also Mr. George Coleman, of Midway.

There were thirty-seven additions to the Methodist church, and about the same for the Baptist. Our Missionary Society, with Mrs. Waltman as president, is doing a fine work and has plans under way for something big. The society has more members than ever before, and is very interesting. As Mrs. Waltman is always with Brother Waltman in his pastoral work, naturally they are greatly loved by the people of both communities, as well as their fine young son, Joe Waltman, who will finish high school this year. The official board has asked the presiding elder to return Brother Waltman again to us next year.

SOLDIERS OF THE CROSS.

Before we weep over the sad fate of some of our major-generals who were not retired as lieutenant-generals, and who will be compelled to scrimp along on $7,500 a year or thereabouts, we might note that the superannuated ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church last year received an average pension of $272 each. This means, of course, that the majority didn't receive as much as $272. It is evident that they spent their lives for other recompense than money.—Selected.

MANY WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

Through the Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Two Interesting Cases

Some female troubles may through neglect reach a stage when an operation is necessary. But most of the common ailments are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same. When disturbing ailments first appear, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

Mrs. Edwards Avoids Operation

Wilson, N. C.—"For about a year I was not able to do anything, not even my housework, because of the pains in my sides and the bearing-down pains. I could only lie around the house. The doctor said nothing but an operation would help me, but I tried different medicines which did no good, until my [illegible] insisted on my trying Lydia E. I [illegible] was right, for I began to improve with the first bottle and it has done me more good than anything [illegible] I am able now to do [illegible] on the farm or in my home, and I recommend it to my friends." — [illegible] Edwards, R. ## NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Promotion Day is being observed by the schools that recognize the fact that children grow physically and deserve to have a chance to grow religiously.

Seventy schools have been asked to observe Children's Week, Oct. 14-21. There is a good prospect for half that number to do this helpful piece of work. Rev. Julian Duncan, of Pickens, is arranging to have his three churches observe the week, culminating on the second, third, and fourth Sundays, respectively. Good for Julian and his colaborers.

Miss Marie Parham, of Nshville, did effective work with the elementary officers and teachers at Sardis, the 22nd and 23rd. Miss Parham checked the four elementary departments in this church and found that every department was making progress toward its goal. Sardis, Batesville, and Eureka agreed to observe Children's Week. Rev. John A. Randolph and Mr. John Kyle mean to make the week a great success in behalf of the children of the church.

We did not have all the district elementary superintendents to meet with us at Grenada on the 24th, but those present agreed to do their utmost to have ten departments in each district attain the full standing within the next few months. Mrs. McRae, superintendent of the Cradle Roll in the Grenada church, made one of the finest reports I have heard this year. Her department lacks only one item, that of having her assistants read one book pertaining to this special work. The books were provided and no doubt have been read by this time. The beginner, primary, and junior departments were near the top. The steady progress in this Sunday school is helping produce sentiment for a new church at an early day.

On the 25th we had two meetings with the officers and teachers of Starkville. The teachers in charge of the elementary work are making some needed changes in classification and grouping in departments. In many respects this is a great church. There is no doubt but that it has one of the greatest opportunities of any church in the State. Their present building did fairly well twenty years ago, but it is almost wholly inadequate for today. Brother Woollard is leading wisely. This congregation will build, but how many will suffer for lack of religious instruction before the building is completed?

We met with a number of the workers of the First Church of Columbus on the 26th. The superintendent of the beginner department testified that she had been teaching little children for several years. Since she had been using graded lessons and training in graded worship, she had learned more about God, the Bible, and little children than at any period during her past life. Under the wise leadership of Brother Lewis, this church is making wonderful progress in the quality as well as quantity of its work. The school is correctly departmentalized, the teachers are religious and have a mind to work under the most approved plans.

CHILDREN'S WEEK—OCT. 14-21.

Slogan: "The Race Moves Forward on the Feet of Little Children."

Home and church co-operation in the religious education of children is the keynote of successful work, yet many homes have turned this work over entirely to the church. Sunday school teachers realize that they must have the active help of the home to accomplish anything. Children's Week is aimed at the very heart of this problem. Its purpose is to reach the fathers and mothers, to awaken them to the interests and needs of their children in the formative period of their lives, and to enlist their active help in the work the church is doing.

The first effort of the week in this direction will be the visiting in the homes by the elementary teachers. This will be a splendid opportunity for the teachers who have found it difficult to go into the homes, for it gives them the very definite mission of inviting the parents to the meeting that has been planned for them. At the same time they may seek to establish a friendly, cordial co-operation, a feeling of partnership in a great enterprise where each can trust and advise with the other. Such a feeling will go far toward making the Sunday school's work a success.

This visitation should result in a large and inspiring parents' meeting on the appointed day. All the good that is to come from the campaign depends on this meeting. The program calls for three fifteen-minute speeches on certain selected problems of child life. The speakers should be most carefully selected, should be furnished with the leaflets from which they are to speak, and should know not only the whole purpose of the week but the relation of one subject to the other. Their attention should also be called to the time limit set for each subject, since one speaker running over time can ruin the whole program.

In conclusion the forward step committee will report on some needed movements for helping the children of the church, and it is expected that the assembled groups will decide on one of these projects as their particular work for the new church year. The following is a suggestive program for this meeting:

Hymn—"Awake, My Soul" (two stanzas).

Prayer.

Talk (15 minutes)—"The Home and the Problem of Authority."

Talk (15 minutes)—"The Power of Adult Example."

Hymn—"My Faith Looks Up to Thee" (one stanza).

Talk (15 minutes)—"The Child a Citizen."

Hymn—"America the Beautiful" (one stanza).

Forward Steps Presented by the Committee.

The adoption of ONE forward step by the congregation.

Hymn—"O, Jesus, I Have Promised" (one verse).

Benediction.

FROM SALLIS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: It has been some time since we have written anything from the Sallis charge. But sometimes the empty wagons make the most noise, and we wanted to come loaded when we did come.

We have put up a hard fight, so far, this year (by the help of the Lord), trying to do things. I think the last time we wrote you, we were grading the lot for our new parsonage. I am glad to say that we have the new house built, a nice, first-class building, consisting of five rooms, a closed hall, a porch eight feet wide on the front, a back porch (screened), 16x24 feet. This is the nicest of all. It makes a delightful summer dining-room (and an ideal sleeping porch, just as one sees fit to use it), where a preacher and his family can enjoy what they have to eat, and not have to lose any time fanning to keep cool. I do not know whether the editor knows anything about being "backed up" in an 8x10 kitchen not very far from a cook-stove for a dining-room or not, but many of us (preachers) have been there, and when you turn one of us into a cool place, my! we know how to appreciate and enjoy it. There is a nice pantry, large enough to hold all the nice things the good people may feel like bringing to the parsonage for the preacher and his family.

We have, at the lowest estimate, a $2,000 building. The insurance people accepted it at $2,000 without a word. It is good enough for a king. You just ask W. N. Duncan and W. M. Campbell—they have been here, and they said they didn't see how I did it. I didn't only by the help of the Lord.

The next preacher that comes this way and his wife will have a nice home and many conveniences that have not always been here. It is truly a home.

My revivals are all over. My help consisted of Revs. W. N. Duncan, Drew; H. N. McKibben, Tchula, and W. M. Campbell, West Point. All did earnest, faithful preaching, and the Lord honored their work; the churches have been greatly revived, and souls have been saved. It was a real treat to have these brethren with us, and a blessing to our people for me to be able to get them to come to us.

I held two of my meetings. I was able to get the sympathy of the people, and the Lord blessed our work. The slogan is, and has been, "Go to it—work hard and prove yourself worthy," and you will get something better. But so often like, "Tige, put up a coon and I will give you some better food," Tige put up the coon, but when the tree was cut and there was only one coon, Tige didn't get any praise for the one coon, but was scolded because there were not two coons up one tree. Now my collections have to be "put up" and it is, "Go to it, old Tige, and get 'em up."

Wanted! Ambitious Men and Women

We are receiving calls daily for men and women of character, ambition and business training, men and women who can accept and efficiently fill responsible positions, positions that give every opportunity for advancement; positions of high salaries, positions in banks, law offices, insurance, real estate, brokers' offices; positions with manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, in every imaginable type of business in the South.

Many of them we capably fill, others are yet vacant. The men and women who fill them need not be wealthy, nor even moderately well-to-do. They need not be young, nor need they be college or even high school graduates. All that is necessary is that they possess character, ambition and a business training.

The character and ambition they must possess, the business training we will furnish under the direction of the South's most efficient training corps and in one of the South's most efficient and best equipped business colleges. A training with unique courses in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, accounting, banking, business administration or our secretarial course. Such a training we will furnish in a few months' time at little cost to you, and at terms to meet your own financial condition.

Thousands of Southern men and women have taken advantage of the opportunity and trained themselves for a higher calling, a better salary and a greater opportunity for advancement. Many who have accepted the positions we offer have risen to the top of the ladder, and are numbered among America's foremost and wealthiest business and professional men and women.

An institution with such standing and reputation as the Georgia-Alabama Business College does more to advance the business interests of its graduates than can be done by any amount of family or personal influence.

Consider your present status—would you not like to improve your station in life, increase your income, attain financial independence and success? An opportunity awaits you, for positions are being constantly offered us that must be filled.

Write for our inspiring book, "Your Future—What Does it Hold in Store?" It is sent free on request, explains our offer in detail and points the way to a brighter future.

CABINET NEWS.

Magnolia Park.

The biggest item of the State Cabinet meeting held recently was the topic of changing the Assembly grounds from Mansfield, La., to a more centrally located place, so that a larger number of Leaguers could attend and more Leagues could be reached.

This centrally located place was found about twelve miles outside of Aleandria, La., at a place called Magnolia Park. Part of these grounds have been cleared out where a private park is now located and the owner of the grounds lives right there. He stated that the park was once just underbrush and trees, but to-day it is one of the prettiest parks in all the surrounding country. The space that is under consideration for our Assembly grounds has not as yet been cleared, but the owner promises to clear it, and fence it in so that it will be quite private. The roads leading into the park are fine, and it will be well for the Leaguers to get their cars in trim, or buy one between now and Assembly time, for every-one will be Assembly-bound via machines. Even Miss Cook, our State treasurer, is all set in her Baby Overland to make the trip, so watch for Miss Cook, and she'll lead you straight to Magnolia Park.

Every member of the Cabinet agreed that this would be an ideal place for Assembly grounds, and you would think so, too, if you had the opportunity to visit it. The pine air rests you the minute you get there; and just think of two weeks of camp life in the open, with even classes out of doors!

Nothing definite has been decided, and cannot be decided until Conference, which meets in November; but all Leaguers should have this matter on their hearts and pray earnestly about it, so that if Magnolia Park is the place for our Assembly He may show us the way and help us in the realization of our plans.

Lake Charles District.

The Lake Charles League is very much on the job, as was seen from a very splendid letter received from the sub-reporter there. A splendid social was held last month in the League room, but since every one likes the woods, the decorating committee had the room so decorated that the Leaguers, when they entered, thought they were in one. The exceptionally large crowd was divided into the Yellow and White sides, our League colors, and the evening was spent in seeing which side could win the more points.

They are also planning a Get-Acquainted Social, to which they are going to invite all the school teachers as their special guests, with the hope that they will interest them in League work.

Not only do these Leaguers enjoy good socials, but special pains are taken with their devotional meetings. For the topic on "Good Books," an outside speaker who is well acquainted with all kinds of books is going to give them a talk. In an effort to have the Leaguers read good books, they are going to have a League library.

What are you other districts doing? Alex, we haven't heard from you yet this year.

HOW A WELL KNOWN PHYSICIAN FOUND A REMARKABLE TREATMENT FOR CATARRH

Davenport, Iowa.—After years of suffering Dr. W. O. Coffee, a highly respected and efficient physician and surgeon of this city, one of the most widely known in the central west, perfected a remarkable treatment for nasal, throat, or head catarrh, catarrhal deafness and head noises. The success of his treatment prompted him to confidently offer it to catarrhal sufferers for 10 days free. As a result thousands have found relief and freedom thru his method, many readers of this publication being listed among the fortunate. If likewise a sufferer you can do no better than place your troubles in the hands of so successful an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist. Write Dr. W. O. Coffee, 2082 Davenport, Iowa. He will immediately mail free treatment.—Adv.

A "GET-TOGETHER" MEETING AT LAKE CHARLES, LA.

On Tuesday, Aug. 28, the Senior Epworth League of the Broad Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, entertained with an enthusiastic "Get-together" League meeting in the form of an outdoor picnic, in honor of the young women and men of that church who would leave for college in a few days.

Gold and white, the League colors, were tastefully carried out in the decorations of gold and white streamers and baskets of golden glow and white jasmine.

College songs and yells were used, and novel games and contests helped to make the evening a most enjoyable one.

One of the rooms was decorated with pine, Spanish moss and trailing vines, making a veritable woodland scene. Flowers and Japanese lanterns further enhanced the beauty of the scene. Here, supper, consisting of several courses, was served picnic style, with the guests seated in a circle around a moss-covered stump.

Then came the introduction of the first speaker, Mr. T. A. Myers, who used "Excelling" as the theme for an inspiring talk. Mr. Myers urged the young people to go forward in their work for the Lord, not being contented with "well enough," but striving to excel.

Miss Julia Reid explained the League symbols, and urged all the Leaguers to wear the League pin.

Mr. Clyde Creagh, president of the League, made an interesting and impressive address on "The Genesis of the Epworth League," in which he told of its origin at a conference in the Central Methodist Episcopal Church of Cleveland, Ohio, on May 15, 1889, and how and why the name "Epworth League" was chosen.

Miss Julia Reid spoke on behalf of the young people who were leaving for college, and said that although they were leaving for a while, they still wanted to be counted as members of the League.

Then our pastor, Rev. A. W. Waddill, dismissed the meeting with a prayer.

IN MEMORIAM.

One year ago, Oct. 1, there anchored on that "Celestial Isle of Somewhere" the beautiful spirit of RUTH ATKINSON. She was called in the early morning of life, while the shadows were yet far-slanted toward the west and her "day's work" just begun. We question; but from the depths of mystery there comes no answer.

One year of sorrow and loneliness has passed in that little cottage home near Holcomb, Miss., from which once radiated only joy and happiness. But to those who have drunk the dregs of the bitter-cup, yet "endureth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things," comes the promise of another day when they, too, shall anchor on that beautiful isle and walk hand in hand again with noble, loyal, pure-hearted Ruth.

THE REVIVAL CAMPAIGN OF THE CORINTH DISTRICT.

We are closing out one of the greatest revival campaigns in the Corinth District that ever was inaugurated for the evangelization of an entire district. This campaign was put on by our wide-awake and efficient presiding elder, J. B. Randolph. Brother Randolph looks well after all the interests of our great church. But this year he has put special emphasis on evangelism. We have used two large tents in the district, and twenty or more tent meetings have been held during the summer. We have tried to reach every point in the country as well as in the town. Much of this work in the rural district was made possible because of that big-hearted business men's class of Booneville, who not only furnished one of the large tents, but liberally financed quite a number of country meetings. Such work on the part of this Sunday school class deserves the highest commendation and praise.

The presiding elder secured all the best talent possible, both among the evangelists and pastors. Gipsy Smith held a three weeks' meeting in Corinth that greatly impressed the whole city and surrounding country. Bob Jones, one of the greatest evangelists of the church, conducted a wonderful revival in New Albany. Brother Dave Bass has done a great work in a number of places. Billie Wilson, Conference evangelist, spent two months in the district holding meetings, and did a splendid work. Smoot, Brown, Mohler, Garner, and several of the other station preachers went out in the country and conducted revivals, and the Lord wonderfully blessed their efforts. Hundreds of souls have been converted and added to the church, and hundreds have pledged to tithe. My wife and I conducted five of those revivals, and the results of our efforts were great. This has been one of our most successful years.

There has been done a much-needed work in a constructive way. We sent twenty-three young people to a training school for Sunday school workers.

THE REVIVAL CAMPAIGN OF THE CORINTH DISTRICT.

We consider this very important. Having been in the evangelistic work for many years, we have been made to realize that something more is necessary than to get a man converted and into the church. If along with our soul saving work we would do more of a constructive nature, the results of our revivals will be more largely conserved. We love the old Corinth District. She is fast coming to the front.

We felt a little proud the other day when our Missionary Secretary, Brother Jaco, informed us that our district was leading this year all the others in the way of Centenary collections. A great revival solves all the problems of the church.

W. M. McINTOSH, Evangelist.

FROM ST. MARTINVILLE, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: While we are rapidly approaching the close of this Conference year, we are glad to state that this has been the best of our short ministry. Aside from our regular work, we helped in a number of meetings this summer in the capacity of song leader and soloist. The results have been most satisfactory, both numerically and financially. Two of the meetings were especially successful, namely, at Gold Dust and Sulphur.

The former was held in the White Chapel Church, where we had thirty-one accessions, which have been previously reported by the pastor. Brother A. M. Shaw, who did the preaching, won the esteem of his hearers. This is the first time we were engaged in a meeting together, and I must say that his ready wit, pointed story telling, and jovial disposition make him a most congenial and appreciated brother to work with. Having traveled and read much, he is a great and interesting entertainer, a conversationalist who is lively and pleasant. With earnestness of speech and keenness of logic he never fails to win his enthusiastic listeners. His preaching has a spiritual thrill that pricks his hearers to the heart and awakens those who wish to slumber on in their sins. His messages are profound, forceful, and instructive. The author of "Shorten the Line" respects the conviction of others and does not introduce these deep theological thoughts in his purely evangelical sermons.

The latter was a most gratifying meeting, in which we had thirty accessions. The people of Sulphur gave us a hearty welcome and splendid cooperation all through the meeting. Brother F. M. Freeman did the preaching. His sermons are always carefully prepared and delivered, and well adapted to gain attention and warm the heart. He draws his inspiration from far-off realms. He has a keen spiritual insight. He seems to have a spiritual X-ray to look into men's hearts, which he adequately uses to arouse the soul. He seems to put his finger upon the sore spot, the hidden sin, the unconfessed fear. There is something convincing in his discourse, a penetrating note in his voice, a flash in his eyes, that thrill with awe, awe that not seldom deepens into a bold decision for Christ. This was also our first meeting with Brother Freeman, and we hope that in the future we shall be again favored in working together in the promotion of God's Kingdom and the extension of his cause.

We are praying and working, hoping to say, "Bishop, everything in full."

THE REST WE SEEK.

By Henry Van Dyke

If all the skies were sunshine,
  Our faces would be fain
To feel once more upon them
  The cooling splash of rain.

If all the world were music,
  Our hearts would often long
For one sweet strain of silence
  To break the endless song.

If life were always merry,
  Our souls would seek relief,
And rest from weary laughter,
  In the quiet arms of grief.

A CAPITAL ERROR.

It is a capital error to imagine that religion and gloom are synonymous. Religion brings joy, peace, gladness, the radiant life, the upward look. We are false witnesses of Christ and sorry representatives of religion if we are persistently austere, hard, crabbed and cross, and we are true witnesses of Christ and fine representatives of religion when we are gracious, sunny and radiant happy tempered bringers of the best. Substitutes are generally more expensive in the end than genuine articles. Housewives have learned—they KNOW this is true where bakings are concerned.

Self rising flours are classed as substitutes for plain flour and good baking powder. The use of these special mixtures is very liable to result in false economy, failures and waste on bake day.

Remember there is a big difference, in many ways, between biscuits and other bakings made from these so-called self-rising flours and those made from good plain flour and a dependable leavener. Try the experiment—make a baking from each—convince yourself.

You will find the baking made from flour and baking powder far more attractive in appearance. It will raise higher—retain its full food value and taste better.

For best results, do not fail to use Calumet, the Economy Baking Powder, and a reliable brand of plain flour.

Just think of it—the sale of Calumet is 2½ times as much as that of any other brand. It contains only such ingredients as have been officially approved by the United States Food Authorities. It is pure and sure.

INTIMATE GLIMPSES.

A little book under the caption "Intimate Glimpses" has just come from the press. It contains a short personality sketch of Miss Belle H. Bennett by Miss Emily Olmstead. For those who knew Miss Bennett personally, this little book breathes, through its pages, the very aroma of her charming personality. As one reads, she seems once more to move among us, guiding again in the affairs of the Kingdom, and shedding about her a radiant love which ever urged us on to higher achievements.

Therefore, it is hoped that those who did not have the privilege of being co-workers with her may come to appreciate her great personality through the love-inspired words. It is not in any sense a biography, and is not intended to take the place of the biography which is to appear later. It is intended rather to give to many of our missionary women a real and sympathetic glimpse into the life of the woman who has been the master architect of the great work we all love.

Every member of the missionary societies throughout Southern Methodism should possess a copy of "Intimate Glimpses." Order from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn. Price 40 cents.

THE GREATER SCARRITT.

At a called meeting of the Board of Missions in Nashville, Sept. 27, it was voted to locate the Greater Scarritt in Nashville in affiliation with the George Peabody College for Teachers. This decision will bring satisfaction to the women throughout the church who have had the matter of the Training School at heart for many months past. The Woman's Missionary Council, at its meeting in Mobile in April, 1923, voted unanimously (except for the vote of one Kansas City member) to change the location of the School to a central place, to enlarge it and reorganize it so as to increase its usefulness. All the women members of the Board of Missions who were present at the meeting of the Board voted for Nashville as the new location, with affiliation with Peabody. These members represent Conferences in Alabama, Louisiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, Texas, Arkansas, Georgia, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, and Missouri.

There were the best of reasons for the solidarity of the vote. Nashville is in the center of the Southern Methodist constituency. A suitable charter may be secured in the State of Tennessee. Above all else, as an important reason, affiliation with Peabody College will provide those courses in teacher training and other subjects which many of the missionary candidates need along with or in addition to the Scarritt courses. All courses in Bible, Church History, Evangelism, Applied Sociology, Foreign Missions, Home Missions, Religious Education, and kindred topics needed for strictly missionary training will be taught in the Scarritt class rooms and by the faculty of the Training School itself. This provision applies to both graduate and under-graduate courses.

Eight other cities within the Southern States made overtures to the School; some with most generous offers of money and land as well as educational affiliations. The Council will always hold in grateful remembrance these invitations, and the friends who interested themselves in the welfare and future of the School. Friendship for the Training School is friendship for the womanhood of the church, for Scarritt, as the heart of the woman's work, is undoubtedly the best loved of the Council enterprises.

The task of carrying out the details of removal and organization has been committed to a Joint Committee, composed of the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Council, the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions, and the Board of Managers of the Scarritt Bible and Training School. This Joint Committee held a meeting the day following the meeting of the Board of Missions and took steps toward accomplishing their purpose. The School will remain in Kansas City for the current year, but it is intended that work on the new plans shall be commenced at once.

The Belle H. Bennett Memorial Fund, which is now being collected by auxiliaries and Conference Societies, will be used in connection with the Greater Scarritt, possibly to establish a School of English Bible. The decision as to the exact form the Memorial will take will be made by the Council in its next annual session. It was voted at the last session that the minimum goal should be a half million dollars, and a considerable part of this sum has already been subscribed. Collections will be made during the remainder of the period of the Christian Education Movement. Now that the School has been located in the place so desired by Miss Bennett for it, we shall all take courage and go forward joyously to the completion of the Memorial.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

HARD TIMES—AND GOD.

As is not altogether unusual at this season of the year, we are hearing a good deal about short crops and a consequent falling off in the collections for the support of the enterprises of the Kingdom of God. The cry of "hard times" is upon us, and "retrenchment" seems to be in the minds of a good many people.

It may be that crops are short, that times are hard, and that retrenchment will be necessary if we are to comply with the simplest principles of good business. But where shall the retrenchment begin—with our unnecessary personal expenditures, or with the sacred causes represented by the work of the church? Shall we feel the pinch first—or will God have to bear the burden?

We need to be scrupulously honest in our dealings with God. He will understand if we really cannot meet our financial pledges to Him: but we cannot be held blameless if we cut off our contributions to the work of the Kingdom while, at the same time, we continue to gratify all our personal desires. New cars and plenty of gas to run them; new clothes, even if the old are good enough to wear a while longer; continued buying of luxuries that by no stretch of the imagination can be considered necessities; indulgence in expensive forms of entertainment that at best minister only to our temporary pleasure—all these are out of keeping with the claim that "times are too hard" for us to make our usual contributions to the church.

When times are really hard, we feel it before God does; if we do not, we are the victims of selfishness, not of untoward economic conditions. Economy at God's expense is poor business and worse religion.

"THAT IS HEROISM."

The late Bishop John C. Kilgo, affectionately known to the students of Trinity College as "Doctor Jack," was accustomed, while president of Trinity, to deliver short addresses to the student body on chapel occasions. Many of these addresses were taken down stenographically by Mr. D. W. Newsom, treasurer of the college, and they have been given to the public in a volume entitled, "Chapel Talks." Every one of the talks is worth reading, and we wish college students all over the land could have the privilege of reading them—many of them would be immensely helped and inspired thereby. He is selfish indeed whose better nature would not be appealed to by an incident like the following:

"If you are wealthy, you owe me a debt. You owe it to me not to tempt me to spend too much money. Two young men came to college, one a poor man's son, the other a rich man's son—a veritable Jonathan and David. This wealthy young man went through college for four years on $175 a year, economizing and living like a poor man. He said: 'My reason is, I love my roommate, and I will not tempt him to spend money, but I will get down and help him to go through on as little as possible.' That is heroism."

WORKING WITH CHILDREN.

It may chance that these words will fall under the eyes of men and women who are working with children—teachers in our public schools, teachers in our Sunday schools, superintendents of Junior and Intermediate Epworth Leagues, of young people's missionary societies, and in other capacities. To all such we would speak a word of sincere commendation and utter a hearty "God bless you." The work at times may be trying and the results disappointing; but it is the work that, after all, is the most inspiring, the most promising, the most heart-gripping that can be engaged in. These boys and girls will be men and women by and by—and they will be largely the men and women you make them. What a glorious opportunity!

WHAT SUCCESS COSTS.

If there is one lesson more than another that we should like to impress upon the young men of to-day—apart, of course, from the great lesson of spiritual values—it is that hard work is the secret of success in business. Perhaps we can help impress that lesson by quoting the words of Edgar A. Guest in the October number of the American Magazine. Mr. Guest says: "There is a great deal of fiction in the romance of business. Success may come overnight; occasionally a genius will arise who can jump from mediocrity to eminence without years of preparatory labor, but these instances are rare. I do not say they never happen; I merely set it down that I have never known them to occur. All who have come to the top of their chosen fields of labor in my time and within my knowledge have been men who have worked and earned their way. I think the payroll history of some of our leaders of industry and finance would make an interesting study. Perhaps it might help us all to keep steady when the way seems long and rough, and the rewards seemingly not worth their effort." The good old Roman who wrote, "There is no excellence without labor," knew what he was talking about.

A NERVE SPECIALIST ON PRAYER.

In a recent magazine article, one of the most distinguished nerve specialists in this country declared that he recommends prayer to those who are threatened with a nervous breakdown. He was speaking primarily as a man of science and not as a theologian; his words, therefore, are especially significant to those who demand a scientific basis for their religion. His striking words are: "Prayer in the sense of communion with the infinite is a universal need. The question of whether or not you are a firm believer in some particular creed is not involved in this. One might hope you are a professing Christian, and that you can pray with the Christian's faith; but whether or not this be so, I must tell you that both the man with strong nerves and the man with weak ones finds new resources and strength in prayer. If you are not an orthodox Christian, you should at least retreat into yourself, contemplate the wonder of life, humble yourself before the idea of God and the vastness of nature, commune with the God that is within you not only in the solitude of your home, but during the day's work." Well said, Mr. Man of Science.

ELECTION OF STEWARDS.

The fourth quarterly conference is vital in its relation to the work of the church in that it is the time when the stewards for the ensuing year are elected. The responsibility of nomination rests upon the pastor, and there is scarcely a more important duty that rests upon him. He should perform that duty conscientiously and fearlessly.

The Discipline provides that stewards shall be "persons of solid piety, who both know and love Methodist doctrine and discipline, and of good natural and acquired ability to transact the temporal business of the church." If the preacher is himself to serve the same charge as pastor for another year, he knows how important it is that he is supported by a board of stewards that meet the disciplinary qualifications; if another is to take his place, all the more is it incumbent upon him to see to it that his successor has an official board upon which he can rely. A good board of stewards is half the battle in the material prosperity of any church.

"'HOW GREAT A MATTER!"

Oct. 7-13 has been designated as Fire Prevention Week throughout the United States, to be observed with special reference to educating the public as to the annual loss caused by fire, and the proper means of fire prevention. According to carefully gathered statistics, fire destroyed more than 15,000 lives in 1922, and property valued at $521,860,000, the loss being the largest ever known. The tragedy of it all is that most fires are preventable, carelessness being responsible for this enormous loss every year. "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth!" Put out the little fires, and the big ones will not give much trouble.

A NEWS STORY—AND STATISTICS.

By Edmund Thickstun, Author of "Adventures in Evangelism."

In a recent issue of a great religious weekly, Dr. Samuel Parks Cadman was featured to his immense advantage. This noted and noteworthy pulpit orator, who is serving a membership of nearly three thousand, makes a good subject for a story. But Dr. Cadman's appealing personality is "exceedingly next." The interviewer is fascinated by the talent which causes nine hard-headed trustees to give up twelve thousand dollars a year to this appealing personality. At short range, nearly the inevitable, consequence is a fine—nay, a superfine—news story. But a "close-up" is necessarily deficient in perspective.

Now, this story which I have started to tell about Dr. Cadman will have perspective. It will not be a "close-up." As a matter of fact, I am on a mountain in Alabama, while he is somewhere in Europe. But, I hasten to say that I haven't a thing in the world against Dr. Cadman; against the Central Church, which he serves; against the great and useful demonination in which he and his church are ranged for righteousness. I merely wish to show the difference between two great systems of Gospel propaganda, to-wit: the Congregational and Methodist Episcopal systems.

The glamour of Dr. Cadman's pastorate of twenty years, in which he has received four thousand members, dazzles the student of his career. As the writer of that news story remarks: "That would be about four a week." But from his official report of Jan. 12 there were but eighty-five members received into Central Church in 1922—an average of not quite one and two-thirds per week. This slump in 1922 would, of course, raise the average for the previous nineteen years. During 1922, fifty-seven members were dismissed and dropped; fifty-three had died. This left a net decrease of twenty-five. In 1922, there were thirty-three children and sixteen adults baptized—total baptisms, forty-nine.

This work was performed by the pastor, assistant pastor, secretary, and church visitor at an expense of $14,700, the major item being the pastor's salary of $11,000. En passant, the total receipts by the trustees of this splendid organization were $33,948.73. After meeting a deficit from the previous year of more than $1,000, and after paying all expenses for 1922, there was a snug balance of nearly $3,000 to bring over into 1923. Possibly this surplus encouraged the trustees to estimate an addition of $1,000 to the pastor's salary, making it $12,000 for this year.

Every one will admit that to be a fine showing. From the standpoint of Central Church, it is matter of congratulation. That organization has had the ministrations of one of the princes of the American pulpit, and doubtless Central Church is satisfied with the results for the year. Besides the expenses proper, there was $31,401.09 expended on more than sixty benevolent enterprises, which brings the grand total raised by the various activities of this church up to $65,349.82. However, the purposes of this study will be met by considering only the legitimate pastoral expenses. As stated above, this was $14,700. Looking at it from the expectation of church growth, the forty-nine baptisms in Central Church cost $300 apiece.

That is true, now, of what is probably the greatest Congregational Church in America.

As far as I know, there is not a church in Methodism which pays as much for ministerial services as does Central Church. But from the viewpoint of evangelistic results, we are getting more for our dollar than they are getting. I have selected two fields of activity from the two great branches of American Methodism to illustrate this point—namely, the Holston Conference, of the Southern branch, and the West Virginia Conference of Northern Methodism. Figures are from reports pastors of these Conferences rendered Sept. 27 to Oct. 2, 1922, practically the time considered in the report of Central Church.

In these two Conferences there are 541 churches, with 174,263 members enrolled. They were supervised by two bishops and seventeen presiding elders or superintendents. The total expenses for these 558 ministers was $864,931. The baptisms for the year were 13,358, costing $64.75 each, against $300 each in Central Church. Of the Methodist baptisms, 10,846 were adults; Central Church baptized sixteen adults. There are no detailed statistics of the Holston Conference at my hand, but in the West Virginia Conference there were thirty-eight charges where baptisms ranged from 49 to 229. Hundred Charge, where 229 were baptized, expended a total of $2,179 for ministerial support, in which budget there is an item of $110 for retired ministers, leaving an aggregate of $2,069 for support of the active ministry in charge of the work. Thus the baptisms on Hundred Charge cost a little more than $9.19 each, against $300 each in Central Church.

One might guess that Central Church has a more difficult field for evangelism than these Methodist Conferences have. That status would hardly exist, because Brooklyn is more nearly evangelized than the territory of these Conferences. The contrary is doubtless true. Then the average distance from a Christian to an unchurched person in Brooklyn is not comparable to the distances in Virginia and Tennessee.

The comparative missionary enterprises seems favorable to Central Church at first blush, her contributions per capita being $10.46, while our Conference contributed only $1.52 per capita. But if like produces like, her $10.46 will go a short way toward baptizing a convert. Here are the ratios: As $1.52 (Conference contribution) is to $64.75 (cost of a baptism in home fields); so is $10.46 (Central's contribution) to $445.57 (amount necessary to effect a baptism by Central). These ratios might prove deceptive, up or down, with positive data at hand, but judging mission work by home work, the deduction seems logical.

This showing will convince Methodists of the superiority of our system as an evangelizing agency. Doubtless many of my readers already believed that our system is the better, but did not know why they believed it. We have no superiority over those Brooklyn Congregationalists in character, zeal or knowledge, but as Methodists we stress the command to disciple folks. That imperative mandate forces us out to bring people into the Kingdom, and it has developed our ecclesiastical machinery principally for that purpose.

A Congregational Church can view with equanimity a net decrease of twenty-five in twelve months, then blandly raise the pastor's salary from $11,000 to $12,000 a year. Not so with a Methodist Church.

OUR METHODISM FACING A NEW EPOCH.

By Rev. Charles C. Jarrell, D.D.

Methodism is the moral wonder of the world. To know the world to-day is to know something of the origin and outcome of the Methodist movement. It must be seen standing on the past, like Wesley on his father's tombstone; it must be seen against the background of its own age; and it must be seen among the forces of to-day.

If Methodism is the apostolic church (as we surely believe she is), she must do the full work for which the New Testament church was chartered. In the evolution of her faculties and functions she comes to the hour when hospitalization and healing constitute a new era in her interpretation of the Gospel message and in her execution of her mission as a church. She stands just now tiptoe on the threshold of a golden hour. She is unfolding the fourth great function or form of service enjoined on the church by the Lord. We are facing an epoch in Southern Methodist history. She must cease to say, "Let us sing," etc., where and when Jesus says, "Heal."

The church has founded the Golden Cross Society as her faculty through which she can function in giving her healing service to the unfortunate. The Golden Cross is simply the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the uniform of a trained nurse or in the character of the Good Samaritan. Once a year, between Thanksgiving and Christmas, she calls the roll of her children; and they answer, "All here, crusaders of the Golden Cross for Christ and humanity."

Ten Plain Reasons for Putting Over the Golden Cross.

The possibilities of the Golden Cross can scarcely be overstated. Some of the definite results may be stated as follows:

1. It will crystallize the dormant sympathy which now exists in the heart of our own people for this movement in actual deeds and gifts.

2. It has a large advertising and educational value. If properly used, it will carry to the last man, woman, and child in our great membership the appeal for a definite service to this great cause. We can and must make it the fashion for every man, woman, and child to go home from Sunday school and church on the designated Sunday with a Golden Cross button on. What a tremendous program of hospitalization that would inaugurate!

3. It will determine that Southern Methodism shall qualify as apostolic by doing the full work of a New Testament church—Missions, Evangelism, Christian Education, and the Ministry of Healing.

4. It will lift a long standing reproach from our evangelical shoulders. Jesus said, "Go," and the church answered with her magnificent missionary enterprises. He said, "Preach," and the church answered with a thousand flaming tongues. He said, "Teach," and the church answered with her Sunday schools, colleges, and univerities. He said, "Heal," and we Protestants have been slow to hear, much less obey.

5. It will encourage the building of hospitals because it will prove that the church can maintain them. This will bring quick relief where large endowments have not had time to accumulate.

6. It will enable the church to act the part of the Good Samaritan (Luke 10:30-35) to the wounded traveler on the road of life. The church by this means can put through a vast program of constructive charity.

7. It will present the church as hostess to the sick. The sick man needs his church. She enters his life at a critical hour. She offers surgery for his urgent distress, medicine for his malady, serenity for his melancholy, faith for his forebodings, and whispers in the ear of the man appointed to die, "Don't be anxious about the wife and kiddies—we'll look after them.

8. It will introduce the church to the world in a program of practical Christianity—giving the whole Gospel to the world as Jesus did.

9. It will not substitute humanitarianism for religion, but it will glorify religion with humanity.

10. It will put the church to following the example of him who took neither sword nor sceptre nor throne nor crown, but took a towel and a basin of water and washed the disciples' feet. The church which washes the feet of To-day will have the Heart of To-morrow.

MRS. FRYE EXPRESSES HERSELF ON CHURCH-GOING.

By Grace Morrison Everett.

"Yes, I used to be just like the rest of them, but I've learned different."

It was a hot Sunday evening and Mrs. Frye was sitting on the back porch, fanning herself, and recounting to an old school chum the changes of the last twenty years.

"I used to go to church just like I'd go to a picnic, or to a circus," she continued. "But now I go like I go to dinner. You see, the whole trouble with these folks is they haven't got the right idea. They take church as they do light refreshments—few and far between, instead of taking it like hearty meals—regular and often. I know because I've done it myself. But I know better now.

"The way it happened was that I was reading my Bible one night, just anywhere, knowing I ought to get something out of it, but not expecting anything. I read the old story about Jesus asking Peter if he loved him and then telling him to feed his sheep. And the idea occurred to me all of a sudden that the preacher's business was to feed his people—spiritually, of course, I meant. 'Well,' I says to myself, 'our preacher doesn't do that.' Then I happened to think that I didn't know because I hadn't been there for a month. Of course I reckoned that I had had plenty of excuse. Molly had been sick one Sunday, and we had had company two Sundays, and it was terrible hot the last Sunday. Of course I'd 'a' eaten my victuals even if it was hot, but going to church was different. That was the way I used to reckon.

"But that night I got a vision—I guess it was a vision—of what Jesus meant church meetings to be to us. He meant them to be meals—regular and wholesome and tasty. I couldn't sleep that night for thinking through my new idea, and I made up my mind before morning that I'd give the preacher a chance to feed me. That I wouldn't expect him to come to the house to do it, any more than I'd expect Mary to serve me my breakfast in bed, and she's done that three times in the last five years.

"It's ten years since I made that resolution, and it's worked just fine. Of course I don't go to church three times a day, but I do go three times a week—public worship Sunday morning and Sunday school and prayer meeting—just as much a matter of course as I go to dinner. And I feel so satisfied and strong. I don't get nervous and weak when the children are irritable, and I don't collapse when a neighbor says some nasty thing, and, best of all, I don't worry all the time for fear some terrible thing is going to happen. The folks in the church that can't stand anything aren't eating enough. They're under-nourished. Malnutrition, I believe, is the word they use nowadays."

"But perhaps they don't enjoy the services as much as you do," suggested her patient listener.

"Perhaps not, but that isn't the point," went on Mrs. Frye. "Of course, not every sermon is a feast any more than every meal is a banquet. You know how it is, sometimes our meat is tenderer than other times, and we get it cooked to a turn, and have a favorite vegetable and something extra for dessert. And just so sometimes Mr. Smith gets his sermon done extra well, and we feel as though we were sitting in heavenly places while he is preaching it. There was a sermon two weeks ago on the everlasting love of God. Why, I felt as though I could sit the rest of my life and just listen to him talk about how God was like a father. And then once in a while he says something I don't like, but once in a while, too, I eat something that doesn't set just right.

"But the great mass of sermons are just plain helpful talks that just keep me going like a bread-and-meat diet. I can't say that I'm always especially hungry for it beforehand, but I always miss it if I don't get it."

"But don't you sometimes want a change?"

"No, I don't if you mean a change of boarding house. I don't believe in boarding 'round. I boarded 'round for two years before I was married, and I got indigestion, and now I eat at home. Oh, of course, I'm invited out two or three times a year and I go, and two or three times a year I go visiting to hear a bishop or a missionary, but unless there's something very extra special (as they say) I plan on eating at home physically and spiritually."

"But don't you sometimes like to go to a tent-meeting or a mission and hear a good old-fashioned gospel sermon?"

"I used to. When I went to church only half the time I went to all the extra meetings. But I don't piece between meals any more. And I don't believe the folks that are always exhorting us to repent and believe have any better gospel than the regular preachers. Again it's like eating. We used to think that if we fed milk to babies, and had a good dinner of meat, potatoes and pie ourselves, it was enough. But now I understand they feed carrots and spinach and tomato-juice to babies and we have to eat lettuce every day. Just so, I suppose repentance and faith are not enough, but we ought to add life-service and tithing and good citizenship to our spiritual diet. I reckon it isn't any worse to have new ideas about duty than about food.

"But I didn't mean to go on like this. I'm no philosopher, you understand. Only I know that folks who aren't on a hunger-strike ought to go to church pretty regular. But tell me, how's Sally Ann? Is she as clever with her tongue as she used to be?"—The Christian Advocate (N. Y.).

AN INTERESTING GIFT TO THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

About the year 1876, Mrs. Marmaduke Morton, the stepmother of Dr. David Morton, first secretary of the Board of Church Extension, presented to him an interesting picture entitled, "Eminent Methodist Divines." This picture was the first one to adorn the first office of the Board of Church Extension and hung over the mantel of the single room which constituted the space then occupied by the Board, and was a prominent feature of every office occupied by the Board of Church Extension during the lifetime of its first secretary, Dr. David Morton.

On Sept. 11, 1923, Mrs. H. W. Morton, the wife of Dr. David Morton, now living with her son, Dr. Daniel Morton, at St. Joseph, Mo., presented this picture to the Board of Church Extension. In sending the picture for his mother, Dr. Daniel Morton wrote us as follows:

"We believe that it is peculiarly fitting that this picture should have its final resting place in the office of the Board of Church Extension. It was made many years ago, about the year 1876, for my father, David Morton, by his stepmother, Mrs. Marmaduke Morton, who was in every way a true mother to him, David Morton's own mother having died when he was only a few months old. The picture was made by cutting out of the religious periodicals of the day the steel engravings of noted Methodist men and preachers. The idea of grouping them in one picture was original with Mrs. Morton, and she carried it out after having spent several years collecting the necessary likenesses. The picture contains some likenesses that cannot now be found, and for that reason is especially valuable. All of the faces are not known. In the book entitled, "David Morton, a Biography," there will be found a reproduction of this picture, together with an index, as far as known, of all the likenesses which it contains. This index will serve a very interesting purpose if it could be placed conveniently near the picture for use by those who want to know the names of each face there reproduced."

At a meeting of the Executive Committee held Sept. 15, 1923, the picture was formally accepted and the secretary requested to express to Mrs. Morton our sincere thanks for this valued souvenir of the days that are gone, and that it be given a conspicuous place in the office of the Board. A miniature of this picture, together with the key to it, is found in "David Morton, A Biography," by Bishop Hoss. We have had the key framed and placed beside the picture.

The Board of Church Extension is gathering together an interesting number of pictures of eminent Methodists and other relics of early Methodism. We have life-size pictures of Bishop Francis Asbury, Bishop Joshua Soule, Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh, Bishop H. B. Bascom; the Ordination of Francis Asbury, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 1858, and the Deacon's Orders of Drury Flowers, signed by Bishop Francis Asbury, Jan. 21, 1816; a table that was used by Bishop Asbury and Bishop William McKendree in presiding over the Tennessee Conference held at Kennerly's Chapel, Logan County, Kentucky, Sept. 29-Oct. 6, 1814, and placed in the office of the Board of Church Extension by the courtesy of the Lewisburg congregation, which is the successor of the old Kennerly's Chapel.

T. D. ELLIS, Secretary.

THE DELUSION OF GREAT WEALTH.

It seems strange to read that in 1922 seventy-nine millionaires committed suicide. The reasons for these suicides were no doubt various, but the startling fact is that so many men of wealth had failed to find in their wealth the happiness and contentment their souls craved. Possibly, their minds were unbalanced, but, in any case, great wealth had not brought happiness to its possessor.

Yet all about us are men and women who are striving with feverish haste to accumulate some degree of wealth in the unfaltering belief that that wealth will bring happiness with it. So certain are they of this that they are prepared, in probably many cases, to defy the laws of God, which are the laws of humanity, in order to attain the coveted boon. In case of failure they will probably declaim against the righteousness of God; and in case of success they will wonder why so much of gold can yield so little happiness; and there is a possibility that they may join the seventy-nine to whom we have referred.

We need to learn the old truth that happiness does not lie in great possessions. It is certainly true that "the little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked." And even when the owner of wealth retains his righteousness as he amasses his fortune, it does not follow that his happiness will increase with his wealth; in fact, quite frequently, increase of wealth means increase of care, and increase of luxury, without any increase at all of real happiness. Let us get rid forever of the absurd delusion that by making men rich we shall make them happy. This is not the case. The heart which is at peace with God has a happiness which no wealth can give, and which poverty is powerless to destroy, and the exhortation is still most necessary to "seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness."—Christian Guardian.

The day returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man; help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces. Let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely on our business all this day. Bring us to our resting beds weary and content and undishonored, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep. Amen.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

NOTES FROM MONROE DISTRICT.

All the pastors of the Monroe District are busily engaged in winding up the year's work, and the indications are bright for a year of progress.

Midway and Epps charge, under the efficient leadership of Brother McCullin, has had a good year. Midway church is the first in the district to pay ministerial claims in full. A new church will be built at Darnell, another point of the circuit. In addition to his own pastoral duties, Brother McCullin has rendered effectual service in revivals throughout the rural sections of the district. He will bring a splendid report to Conference.

The new church at Gilbert is completed, and is only awaiting the installing of the pews to be ready for all church activities. It is a commodious, well equipped brick building (a credit to the people, and an ornament to the community). Brother May has done a good year's work, and is happy over the completion of the church. A good revival was held at Wisner. Rev. H. W. Cudd did the preaching. Thirty members were added to the roll.

A very gracious and far-reaching revival, under the leadership of Rev. George Tucker and Mr. Tubbeville, closed at West Monroe Sunday, Sept. 23. Large crowds attended morning and evening services. The meeting for men only on the last Sunday afternoon was a memorable occasion. Rev. Mr. Tucker is a fearless, plain-spoken gospel evangelist. He does constructive work and leaves no bad taste. About fifty new names will be added to the register. In appreciation of the painstaking and arduous labors of the pastor, Rev. J. L. Evans, the church voted him a vacatoin of two or three weeks. He is now motoring through Louisiana and Mississippi in the hope of regaining strength for further activities.

In a few weeks Rev. F. M. Freeman, pastor of First Church, Monroe, will be domiciled in one of the finest church parsonages in the connection. It is a very spacious home, with all modern conveniences, located on one of the most prominent thoroughfares of the city. All church work at Monroe is progressing favorably. Brother Freeman is preaching to large congregations, and is held in high esteem by his people.

The district parsonage has been renovated inside and outside, and, with a few more conveniences added, it will be a real nice home for the presiding elder to enjoy. The district has responded graciously to the calls made for the purpose of repairing the parsonage.

Winnsboro, Ferriday, Bastrop, and Collinston are all busy in perfecting plans for the erection of new churches. Pastors of said churches are leading the hosts with success.

W. D. KLEINSCHMIDT, P. E.

ONE HUNDRED PER CENT CHURCHES.

Several churches have paid all they pledged on Centenary. I have the large, elegant certificates, suitable for framing and hanging up in the church. They are to be delivered at a public service by Bishop Ainsworth, or some one appointed to do so, at Conference in Greenville, Miss., on Wednesday night, Nov. 7, 1923. Other churches may have these certificates also on the following conditions:

1. A church that pays in full its pledge, although this is less than the quota, will get a One Hundred Per Cent Certificate.

2. A church that pays in full its pledge equal to quota gets a One Hundred Per Cent Certificate with a Red Seal bearing the words, "Honorable Mention."

3. A church that pays in full its pledge which is more than its quota, gets a One Hundred Per Cent Certificate with a Gold Seal bearing the words, "Highest Merit."

We have seven of these certificates, four plain, one with Red Seal, and two with Gold Seal. Guess what churches they are? The elders on the Grenada, the Aberdeen, the Corinth, the Columbus and the Greenville Districts will feel good when their pastors or treasurers are handed these certificates.

A goodly number of other churches can raise their balance at once. Send it to me, and I will rush it into the Nashville office and get the certificate sent to the seat of the Conference. The pastors and local treasurers should take notice and act quickly, so as to be in the receiving line.

BEN. P. JACO, Secretary-Treasurer.

APPROVED LIST OF PREACHERS' INSTITUTES.

By Dr. R. H. Bennett, Secretary, Minsterial Supply and Training.

The General Conference directs that undergraduate preachers shall take their Conference studies either through one of the correspondence schools at Emory University and at Southern Methodist University, or at a Preachers' Institute which is approved by the General Conference Board of Education. In accordance with this ruling, the Preachers' Institutes have reported their work to the Board of Education and, acting through the Executive Committee, the Board has authorized me to publish the following as the list of Institutes approved by the Board of Education, and whose work is, therefore, to be accepted by the Annual Conference examining committee:

Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi Conferences: Seashore Divinity School, Biloxi, Miss.

Central Texas, Texas, North Texas, and West Texas Conferences: Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex.; Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex.

Florida Conference: Southern College, Lakeland, Fla.

Holston Conference: Emory and Henry College, Emory, Va.

North Carolina, and Western North Carolina Conferences: Trinity College, Durham, N. C.

Tennessee, and Memphis Conferences: Clarksville, Tenn.

South Carolina, and Upper South Carolina Conferences: Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C.

Western Virginia Conference: Barboursville, W. Va.

We are informed by those in charge that no record was kept of the work of the Institute held at Birmingham-Southern College. The Board is, therefore, unable to make any report on this Institute, as no statement of this work has been received.

It is a source of gratification to announce that most of the Institutes have done good work. A small number of the Institutes did not come up to the requirements on all points. In view of the newness of the situation and in order to give the new regulations time for adjustment, the Board has decided to announce the above as the list of approved Institutes. This does not mean, however, that the Board approves all the work of all the Institutes, but that for the present year this list stands as announced, with the understanding that those few imperfect Institutes are all to be brought up to the standard next year.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

The supreme task of the church during these months is to conserve and to develop to the fullest possible extent the values which have been won in the Christian Education campaign.

At no time has it been regarded merely as a dirve for money, but spiritual values have been given first place in the exposition and advocacy of the cause.

The church has been made to realize its educational task. A new demand for trained leadership has arisen. The church has reached a higher plane of thinking and conviction in regard to the outstanding Christian truth of the trusteeship of life and property. Our people have been brought to a profound realization of the importance of Christian Education.

Now, it behooves us to see that there is a hearty financial response to pledges made at a time and under circumstances showing faith, courage and great loyalty to the cause of Christian Education. Not a single subscription ought to be lost. They can be paid.

Many of our people were in such economic confusion at the time of the financial appeal that they did not feel justified in making a subscription. Most of them are true and loyal and will yet do their part. Now is the time for a liberal response.

Money seems to be plentiful. The banks have large deposits. Cotton has enjoyed a decided advance. Conditions are such that cotton growers are feeling fairly confident that they will continue to receive satisfactory prices for their products. Rice, sugar-cane, fruits, lumber and other products are keeping abreast of the times. Surely, one-tenth of our income this year ought to put us over the top on all the claims of the church. Learn to tithe your income and you will soon be taught how to pay your pledge.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.

SINCERITY IN BELIEF AND HONESTY IN ACTION.

By Rev. J. Tillery Lewis.

"It makes no difference what a man believes, just so he is sincere in his belief; it makes no difference what a man does, just so he is honest in what he does."

The above text is taken from the unwritten book of the devil. The devil has no written book of lies, like God's written book of truth, the Bible, out of which his followers get their inspiration for the damnable and accursed deeds patent, like the above quotation. Some men are inspired by the devil, just as other men are inspired by God. The reason inspired thoughts of the devil are not written in a book and given to man as his guide, is because they are lies and, when in print, are too easily discovered to be but lies. Satan's one big business is to deceive men and damn their souls in hell. When dealing with intelligent, thinking men, he is forced to deceive by strategy and trickery. He hands to men packages, like the above quotation, that are full of snake heads. "The wise man foreseeth the evil and hideth himself, the simple pass on and are punished." In order that he might get unthinking men to build their characters upon falsehood and thereby ease their consciences into believing they are saved, while in fact they are in the process of being damned, the devil is constantly deceiving men with quotations like the above.

In his subtle satanic wisdom the devil plays upon SINCERITY IN BELIEF and HONESTY IN ACTION, which he knows are commendable and praiseworthy both before God and man. By laying stress upon sincerity in belief and honesty in action, rather than upon what the man believes, Satan is able to deceive the unwary and get him to put his faith and trust in a lie.

A man's character is not the fruit of the sincerity of his belief or the honesty of his action, but his character is the fruit of WHAT he believes. WHAT a man believes is either TRUTH or FALSEHOOD. The fruit arising out of his belief and action is in accord with whether or not WHAT he believes is the TRUTH or a LIE. If what he believes is the truth, then he will reap joy, peace, happiness and abiding soul-good. If WHAT he believes is a LIE, then he will reap loss, pain, sorrow and abiding soul-disaster.

Right now Satan is dancing with glee because he has succeeded in getting some boasted scholars to pronounce against the Bible as God's revealed word of truth. Glibly, blatantly and with satanic subtlety these deceived men are professing faith in Jesus as the Son of God, while in the same breath they are repudiating the Bible as the inspired Word of God. That, too, when any intelligent, thinking man knows that belief in Jesus as the Son of God is conditioned upon belief in the Bible as the inspired Word of God. If the Bible is but the product of man's human brain and contains not revealed spiritual truth as to whence man came, why he is here and whither he is going, then are we humans yet in darkness as to God and all things else concerning which the Bible purports to speak. That being true, Jesus is but a deceived fanatic or a contemptible deceiver of men. Either this, or Jesus is the Son of God and the Bible the inspired Word of God.

The Bible is God's revealed word of truth. Upon the evidence of fulfilled prophecy any fair-minded thinking man can know that the Bible is from God. Only God can prophesy as to what will take place in the future. Man can predict, but man cannot prophesy. Take, for example, the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. This book was written seven hundred and sixty years before the death of Christ, yet a better description of the crucifixion of Jesus was not written by eye witnesses. Only God could have thus foreseen the tragedy enacted upon the cross centuries before it took place. Then again, take the lives of men and of nations. England and the United States of America are composed of people who almost universally believe in the Bible as the revealed Word of God. The spirit of brotherly love, kindness and gentleness even toward enemies that is manifest in the lives of the people of these nations, is the legitimate fruit of belief in the Bible as the Word of God and in Jesus as the Son of God. The infidel scholarship of the world puts their faith in the Darwinian theory of evolution as the basis upon which to explain the universe. Just as there is a legitimate fruit that is the natural outcome of belief in the Bible as God's revealed word of truth and in Jesus as the Son of God, so, too, is there a legitimate and inevitable fruit that grows out of the acceptance of the Darwinian theory of evolution. The law governing in the hearts of those who really believe the Bible to be the Word of God and trust Jesus as their personal Saviour is the law of self-sacrificing love in behalf of others. The law governing in belief in the Darwinian theory of evolution is the "law of the survival of the fittest." The principle governing in Christianity is the principle of dying that others may live. The principle governing in the Darwinian theory of evolution is "might is right and the end justifies the means." While England and the United States of America are striking illustrations of belief in the Bible as the Word of God, Germany is a striking illustration of belief in the Darwinian theory of evolution. The German was, no doubt, as sincere and honest in his belief that God had ordained their nation as the princes of this world, while the rest of us were consigned to places of servitude to the lords of Germany, as were the Englishmen and Americans sincere in their belief in the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Both were sincere and honest, no doubt, but the German believed a lie, while the Englishmen and Americans believed the truth.

The doctrines of the various Christian denominations are but the man-stated tenets of the churches as to what each denomination believes is taught in the Bible as to God, the devil, heaven, hell, sin, Jesus Christ, and salvation through trust in Jesus as the Son of God. Of all the Christian denominations, Methodism is the broadest and most liberal. But the life of Methodism is builded upon a creed, upon doctrines and upon belief in the Bible as the revealed Word of God as much so as is that of any other denomination. Methodism's one great mission, as declared by her founder, John Wesley, and by her true sons of to-day, is to spread throughout the world SPIRITUAL HOLINESS. Belief in the Bible as God's revealed word is the only possible basis upon which Scriptural Holiness can be spread throughout the world. It is only as sane men believe that God is speaking to them through the Bible that you can get men to be interested in the Bible as the pattern of their faith and conduct. It is in the Bible that we find description of the glorious life of Jesus Christ. Look where you may, nothing is said of Jesus Christ save what is inspired through men's belief in the Bible as the Word of God. If the Bible is not the Word of God, then whence Jesus?

What a man believes is the most important and the most far-reaching single fact by which his life is touched. It is upon the basis of WHAT he believes that man builds his character. "A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways." He who is not sure and certain as to his belief in the Bible as the Word of God will naturally be slack in his obedience to the God revealed therein. He will naturally repudiate God's will and do as he pleases, acting in obedience to the dictates of his selfish nature. He who really believes in the Bible as the Word of God takes Jesus as his Saviour, Lord and Master and, like Paul, counts himself as but the bond slave of Jesus Christ to the glory of God the Father.

Some church members, who seemingly covet being called scholars by the infidel scholastic world, occasionally attempt to dissect the Bible and differentiate between the human and the divine found therein. It would appear that such men are more concerned about their rating as scholars before the infidel world than are they concerned about saving lost souls. Such men are really a greater curse to Christianity than was Thomas Paine. The sincerity of their belief that they are GREAT Biblical scholars, and therefore have the right to pronounce judgment upon God's revealed word, but makes their sins more tragical. Instead of humbly feeding a sin-cursed world upon the pure "Milk of the Word," they go about blatantly parading their alleged greatness as scholars. But don't let any one become frightened, please. God, Jesus and the Bible have stood against the attacks of infidels, atheists and agnostics for two thousand years, with the result that they are each more firmly intrenched in the minds and hearts of men today than ever before in the history of the world. The regret and sorrow to be found in the fact that some men are running after the world in their bid for recognition as great scholars is lodged in the fact that their position as leaders makes it possible for them to influence to their destruction many souls who believe in the sanity and holiness of their leadership. Their influence over trusting souls who follow them to damnation is both the sorrow and tragedy of the lives of these misguided leaders. They are blind leaders of the blind. Jesus said, "My sheep will not hear their voice." That is true, but some who might otherwise become His sheep do hear their voice and follow them to hell. God pity them!

In spite of one's sincerity and honesty, it makes the same difference as to what a man believes as there is difference between truth and falsehood, as there is difference between joy and sorrow, as there is difference between pleasure and pain, as there is difference between hell and heaven, and as there is difference between God and the devil. No living soul can afford to believe and put his trust in anything save THE TRUTH. Jesus is the WAY, the TRUTH and the LIFE; no man cometh unto the Father but by Him. The Bible is the only book among men that teaches the great truth that Jesus is the Son of God. He who would destroy belief in the Bible as the Word of God, yet expect men to believe in Jesus as the Son of God, is like a man who would burn down all bridges on our highways, then tell the public that bridges are not necessary to transportation.

He who is wise, he who loves God, he who sympathizes with poor, struggling, sin-cursed humanity and desires to see them redeemed from spiritual death, from the power of sin, from hate, and from war unto peace, happiness, love and life eternal, would sooner drink carbolic acid to the destruction of his house of clay than put the least doubt into the mind of the smallest of the human family as to the divine authenticity of the Bible and the virgin birth of Jesus Christ. Belief in the Bible as the Word of God and trust in Jesus as the Son of God are the only panacea known to the world by which men are lifted out of the mire and filth of sin and degradation into a holy, sinless and unselfish life that is in keeping with the dignity of mankind's high estate. It is the only panacea that gives promise of destroying hate, coveteousness and war throughout the world and establishing upon earth the glorious kingdom of God. As I see it, no scholastic recognition is worth the price paid therefor when, to secure it, one must sow broadcast seeds of doubt anent the virgin birth of Jesus and the divine authenticity of the Bible. He who thus trades is the worst spendthrift known to God or man. He trades away the only thing that has eternal value for a worldy commodity that real big men look upon with scorn. God pity that poor man who feeds his ambition to the damnation of his soul!

He who believes a lie, though sincere and honest, will suffer loss. He who believes truth will ultimately win joy, peace and life eternal. Jesus is the TRUTH. Hear ye Him.

Sardis, Miss.

ACCEPTING MARTYRDOM.

Toward the end of the third century a holy man named Phocas dwelt outside the gate of the city of Sinope, in Pontus, and lived by cultivating a little garden, the produce of which, after supplying his own necessities, he distributed to the poor. Uniting prayer and contemplation with labor and charity, his garden was to him an instructive book, his flowers supplied him with a fund of holy meditation, and his little cottage was open to all strangers and travelers who were in want of a lodging. One night, as he sat at his frugal supper of herbs, some strangers knocked at the door; and he invited them to enter and repose themselves. He set food before them, and gave them water for their feet; and when they had eaten, and were refreshed, he asked them concerning their business. They told him they were sent there in search of a certain Phocas, who had been denounced as a Christian; and that they were commissioned to kill him wherever they should find him. The servant of God, without betraying any surprise, conducted them to a chamber of repose; and, when they were at rest, he went into his garden, and dug a grave amid the flowers. The next morning he went to his guests, and told them that Phocas was found; and they, rejoicing, asked, "Where is the man?" He replied, "I myself am he." They started back, unwilling to imbrue their hands in the blood of their host; but he encouraged them, saying, "Since it is the will of God, I am willing to die in his cause." Then they led him to the brink of the grave, struck off his head, and buried him therein.—Mrs. Jameson.

A WAY CAN BE FOUND TO DO THAT WHICH OUGHT TO BE DONE.

At this writing six Annual Conferences of the fall of 1923 have been held. The plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment was duly presented at each one, and in every instance the great movement has been unanimously welcomed. I have yet to hear a single serious complaint against what is being projected in the interest of the "forgotten man." All are agreed that this thing should be done and have committed themselves unreservedly to the task of doing it. Of course it is expected that in some places serious difficulties will have to be overcome, but that part of the Church so far visited apparently has determined not to allow any obstacle to shunt the movement aside.

You Cannot Fail if You Believe You Can Do IT.

Success is the fruit of confidence. He can who thinks he can. All obstacles get out of the way of the man who grips his task with a determination to win. Whoever sits down and ponders the number of things arising in the path of something that ought to be done is soundly licked before he begins. Such a one is usually rated as a failure by all who observe his methods, and none are willing to trust themselves in his hands. It has been well said: "When a man loses confidence in himself he makes the vote unanimous." I do not know of anything that will so quickly bring fame and fortune to an individual as to find something that doubters say cannot be done and then do it. The special effort for superannuate endowment offers such an opportunity. Happy indeed should be the pastors of the church having such a chance to have their names writ big on the immortal roll of those who do this thing.

A Teacup and Superannuate Endowment.

Very few things are impossible in themselves. It is usually for want of application that men fail of success. If one strives intelligently, faithfully, and with singleness of devotion toward an object, one is sure to attain it in some measure. We are all inspired by the heroic efforts of Palissy to discover how to make the beautiful chinaware which adorns our tables of to-day. He burned under his oven the props that supported the trees in his little garden, the floor in his humble cottage, and the rude table and chairs; his children tugged at his frock and begged for food; for days he did not eat or sleep; and his neighbors laughed at him and pronounced him crazy. One hour more of firing was needed, and into the furnace went the last remaining piece of furniture, the bed on which his family slept. Hours later, when the oven had sufficiently cooled, trembling with emotion, he opened the door and cried: "Victory!" He had won.

If it is worth while to show such force and dogged perseverance to make a worth-while teacup, is it not also worth while to have such a spirit to win when providing a sustenance for the worn-out preachers of the Lord Jesus Christ? I will admit that the snow-white dishes and cups and saucers on the dinner table are pleasing to the eye, and I am glad that Palissy spent himself in such a manner to make it all possible. But I am also interested in an expression on the faces of our worn-out preachers indicative of the fact that they are not forgotten and neglected by the church which they have served. A preacher of the gospel, even though he is worn out and unfit for any kind of work, should never bear in his body marks indicating that he is underfed and insufficiently clothed. Such a preacher having given his life for others should from others receive those things that will make him happy and comfortable all the days of his life. As for me, I will work as hard for this as Palissy worked making a decent teacup. Will you?

A Snap Switch in Our Thinking.

It is very natural in these times of numerous financial campaigns in the church that pessimistic thoughts should seek control in the heads of those who are trying to think a way through to ten million dollars for superannuate endowment. It is a good plan to snap off pessimistic thoughts on this subject and snap on "peptimistic" thinking. At least let us be open-minded on the subject. By the way, it is well to remember the saying: "The open-minded man is young, no matter what year he was born." So if we keep out the thoughts that discourage us and let in the thoughts that encourage, we will suddenly find ourselves at the place of beginning with a determination to win. I was greatly impressed recently by a line which caught my eye in a secular newspaper, as follows: "The best angle from which to approach any problem is the try-angle." This is exactly what I am endeavoring to establish in the thinking of those who will have in hand the accomplishment of the special effort for superannuate endowment. Let us remenber that "to improve the golden moment of opportunity and catch the good that is in our reach is the great art of life."

To Fail Now Would Be a Real Tragedy.

The opportunity to go ahead with a real effort to secure adequate superannuate endowment has not come by mere chance. The friends of the superannuates have been planning and working for this day over a period of more than twenty-five years. Several fitful efforts have been made during this period, each one failing in its turn on account of a lack of proper organization. But now it is different, for the Board of Finance has worked patiently and industriously for five years making the necessary preparation to project the special effort for endowment in a manner to save it from the failure that has characterized other spasmodic efforts for this purpose. If the church does not now fit herself snugly into the harness provided by the Board of Finance and apply herself diligently to pull the load, she will forever bear upon her banner a stain of reproach which cannot be removed. The fact that the church may be able successfully to do other things and do them well will not be sufficient to cover her ignominy for failing to do this one thing. The days are now upon us when the call for service to others is most pronounced. Never in the history of mankind has there been such a turning of the people toward a square deal for those who do the world's work. If secular corporations now admit that they cannot longer fail to give attention to the needs of their aged employees and keep the good opinion of mankind, how will it be possible for a church, having the welfare of men and women as her chief reason for being, expect to hold up her head while her worn-out servants are bowed in the dust of pitiful deprivations?

Yes, a call for justice is ringing in our ears. The General Conference has cleared the field for action. A plan of effort has been carefully prepared and is being given to the preachers and lay members of every Annual Conference. If in the face of all this the response is not quick and powerful, we will go on staining the pages of the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with words concerning her neglect of the old preachers that will shame succeeding generations. Such a tragedy can be avoided provided that every man, woman, and child of the whole connection will now do a worthy part in behalf of the special effort for superannuate endowment.

Something Preachers Should Not Forget.

A preacher should not try to remember harsh words that are spoken about him. He should forget his failures of yesterday. He should not cling to feelings of resentment against anybody in this wide world. But there are some things that a preacher should forever hold in mind, and one of them is this: "Every preacher in active service for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a 'forgotten man' in the making."

AUNT REBA'S MEMORY.

"I never," Sallie declared, "would have believed it of Alicia—not if a hundred people had told me! It's the kind of thing you can get over after a fashion, I suppose, but you never can forget it."

Uncle Dan looked at her with interest. "Have you one of those memories?" he asked.

"One of what memories? I don't quite know what you mean."

"The kind that never forgets anything. I've always wanted to talk with some one like that; there are a lot of things I'd like to know."

"Of course not!'" Sallie retorted briskly. "You know it as well as I do. You're just leading up. I hate being led up to."

Uncle Dan smiled. "Sometimes I forget you aren't a little girl tagging at my heels all day long."

"Now you're leading away. That's being a quitter!" Her eyes were laughing.

"Well, then, have you ever noticed what a perfect memory your Aunt Reba has?"

"Why, no, I'm sure she forgets things often."

"Yes, I suppose she does. But I was thinking of the quality of her memory. I've lived with her going on forty years now, and I never yet caught her remembering a hurt or a slight or an unkindness any one did her."

"But any one couldn't be unkind to Aunt Reba!" Sallie protested.

"I don't see how they could, but they have been. There's Lizzie Marden—she's said some pretty mean things. And there was that Mrs. Hitchcock from the city who went off without paying two weeks' board. And there's Minna Kraus; she's the one who stole your aunt's election cake recipe and got a prize with it at the fair. But you ask her about them any time—"

"I will!" Sallie exclaimed. "This instant!"

She found Reba setting dough for biscuits. "I wish the judges could taste those!" Sallie declared. (She herself was not above leading up sometimes.) "Aunt Reba, what kind of a woman is the one who got the prize for election cake last year?"

"Minna Kraus?" Aunt Reba smiled. "She's the kind that would go through thick and thin when any one's in a pinch. Nursed an Italian family down in the Hollow through the flu—"

"Love fifteen!" murmured Sallie. "Is that all?"

"Ain't that enough? Poor forlorn things that couldn't speak six words of English. Minna deserves nothing but praise!"

"Love thirty," Sallie said to herself. Then aloud, "Didn't a Mrs. Hitchcock stay with you once? What kind of a woman was she?"

"Real pretty looking. And she had a little boy who worshiped her, and her him. I used to like to see them together."

"(Love forty!) Is Lizzie Marden always gossiping, Aunt Reba?"

Aune Reba's busy hands paused, and her voice was as nearly stern as Sallie ever had heard it: "She nursed her father through thick and thin for twenty-one years. Don't you ever believe any thing against Lizzie Marden!"—Youth's Companion.

FAITHFUL CARLO.

By Josephine C. English.

"Down, Carlo, down!" 'Twas a man's voice that broke the stillness.

The day was one of those hot, sultry days in late mid-summer, when the sun was extremely hot and even the heat waves could be seen in their zig-zag course over the dry parching grass of that prairie country.

Not a house was to be seen, not even a sod shanty, with a friendly face at the door, eager to greet any passer-by. Not even a tree to lend its shade as a welcome relief from the bright glare of the sun. Grass! Grass! Just a sea of dry, parched grass.

Since early morning the only sign of life as far as the eye could see was a covered wagon, drawn by two worn and weary horses. The sole occupants of the wagon were the owner, Mr. Dare, and his faithful dog, Carlo.

Stopping at the noon hour on the side of a small knoll, Mr. Dare fed his horses, then prepared a cold lunch for himself, as no one would dare run the risk of striking a match amongst those miles upon miles of dry grass. After sharing his lunch with Carlo, both lay down to rest in the shade of the wagon.

Waking from a restful nap, Mr. Dare hitched his horses to the wegon and again started on his journey eastward, not noticing that Carlo was lagging far behind. He had driven for some distance when suddenly Carlo ran dashing ahead, and running to one of the horses began jumping and snapping at the bridle. Again and again was this repeated.

"Down, Carlo, down!" called Mr. Dare; "down, down!" Still he paid no attention, but continued his wild barking, jumping, and snapping. "Down, Carlo, down or I must shoot," called his master's voice, yet the dog gave no heed to the voice he before so gladly obeyed. Once more he spoke to his dog, then as he seemed neither to hear or heed, and feeling sure he had gone mad from the heat or some other cause, his shot rang out in the stillness of the afternoon. Giving a low whine, the dog dropped and was gone.

Mr. Dare drove on for some time, not caring to run any risk with a mad dog, yet he loved his dog and his heart was heavy as he pondered the strange actions of his Carlo. Finally stopping his team, he unhitched one of the horses and rode back over the trail to see what had become of Carlo and if need be, put an end to his suffering. To his great surprise he found his faithful dog had returned to their noonday camping place and was lying guarding his well-filled purse, which in some way had slipped from his pocket while he slept.

This readily explained his strange actions, and great was Mr. Dare's sorrow as he thought how he had shot at him as he was trying his best to tell him of his loss. To his great joy he found the wound was not a serious one, so he dressed it, then placing the dog in front of him on the horse, he rode slowly back to the wagon. There he made a soft bed for Carlo and once more resumed his journey, thinking of his faithful friend Carlo. He had proved himself to be one of his most unselfish friends; he had never proved ungrateful, had never deserted him, but stood by him in the heat of summer and the long, cold winter, keeping guard by night while his master slept. He had asked no higher privilege than to accompany him and be near him to guard against all danger. Now in this he had proved himself again faithful, and nearly lost his life to do so.

Looking upon him as he slept, Mr. Dare thought, "Carlo shall have the best of care while I live. That man was right who said, 'There is but one drawback to a dog's friendship, it does not last long enough.'"—Selected.

"TIME OUT."

Still Missing.

Johnny—"Say, paw, I can't get these 'rithmetic examples. Teacher said somethin' 'bout findin' the greatest common divisor."

The Explanation.

A little four-year-old, a most attractive little fairy, suddenly lost interest in Sunday school. She had enjoyed so much learning about Moses that her mother could not understand the change of attitude.

"Why don't you want to go, daughter?" she asked.

"Oh," was the astonishing reply, "I don't 'ike to go to Sunday school since Moses died."—Selected.

Which Did He Take?

The man had just informed the Pullman agent that he wanted a Pullman berth. "Upper or lower?" asked the agent. "What's the difference?" asked the man. "A difference of fifty cents in this case," replied the agent. "The lower is higher than the upper. The higher price is for the lower. If you want it lower, you'll have to go higher. We sell the upper lower than the lower. In other words, the higher the lower. Most people don't like the upper, although it is lower on account of it being higher. When you occupy an upper you have to get up to go to bed and get down when you get up. You can have the lower if you pay higher. The upper is lower than the lower because it is higher. If you are willing to go higher, it will be lower." But the poor man had fainted!—Epworth Herald.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The regular annual meeting of the Publishing Committee is called to meet in the office of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La., on Thursday, October 18, at 10 o'clock a.m. It is hoped that every member of the committee can be present.

JOHN F. FOSTER, Chairman.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The fall meeting of the College of Bishops will be held at San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 14-17.

The registration at Emory University this year on the opening day was fifteen per cent in advance of the enrollment last year, a total of 1,070 being enrolled.

The Methodist Advocate-Herald, official organ of the Western Virginia Conference, has changed its name to Methodist Advocate, and is appearing in a more convenient size than formerly. Rev. W. L. Reid is the editor.

By agreement of all parties concerned, Dr. John S. Chadwick has taken over the publication of the Southern Methodist Handbook, so long edited by the late Dr. T. N. Ivey. The new edition will be ready for distribution about Jan. 1, 1924.

Dr. R. H. Bennett, secretary of the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training and Life Service of our church, recently did the preaching in a meeting with Rev. C. A. Parks, at Tunica, Miss. Needless to say, the meeting was a good one.

Brother Byron Smith, of Peoria, Miss., is now in his eightieth year, but he still reads with appreciative interest his church paper. Deafness, which makes it impossible for him to hear the preached Word, makes him enjoy the paper all the more.

Mrs. J. H. Jackson, an active Methodist of Jeanerette, La., underwent a serious operation at the Touro Infirmary, this city, last week. We are glad to learn that she stood the operation well and that she will soon be able to return to her home.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, of the Louisville Conference, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, is assisting the pastor, Rev. William Schuhle, in a great meeting at Morgan City, La. Thus far, 145 members have been received, and the good work continues.

Rev. W. A. Bowlin, of the Kosciusko circuit, North Mississippi Conference, is in his third year on that charge. The work goes well, and he will carry the best report to Conference the charge has ever made. A new church will soon be in process of erection.

We call special attention of those concerned to the quarterly conference announcements of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, as they appear in this week's Advocate. There are various changes from the appointments as previously published.

Rev. J. B. Cain, of the Ellisville charge, Mississippi Conference, reports that this has been a good year. He was assisted in good meetings at Mount Zion and Hinton by Rev. O. S. Lewis and Rev. T. A. Ferguson, of Laurel. The pastor held his own meeting at Moselle.

Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., observed Sunday, Nov. 30, as "Centenary College Day." This is the nearest Methodist church to Centenary College and it ministers largely to the religious life of the faculty and student body. Rev. W. W. Holmes is the pastor.

Rev. C. C. Wier, the beloved pastor of the Algiers Methodist Church, this city, has returned to his work after a month's visit to his mother and other relatives and friends in Houston and other points in Texas. Brother Wier is one of the most useful and efficient members of the Louisiana Conference.

The American Red Cross announces that the American people have given $9,000,000 in response to the appeal in behalf of the stricken Japanese nation. Of this amount, Louisiana contributed $40,007.66, and Mississippi, $19,246.25. The total amount raised by the Southern Division of the Red Cross is $270,277.

Rev. J. Lambuth Evans, the efficient pastor of the West Monroe Methodist Church, West Monroe, La., spent several days in New Orleans last week, on a richly deserved vacation. He made the trip in his car. He paid an appreciated call at the Advocate office and reported his work at West Monroe in a flourishing condition.

The total enrollment of Centenary College, including the Academy, at Shreveport, La., has reached the 400 mark. The personnel of the student body is unusually fine, and the faculty is enthusiastic in its work. Dr. George S. Sexton, president of the college, deserves the greatest praise for his brilliant success in the management of this historic institution.

The Sunday school of the Broad Street Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La., held its commencement exercises on Sunday evening, Oct. 7, at 7:30 o'clock. Large classes were promoted from the Beginners, the Primary, the Junior, the Intermediate, and the Senior Departments. Rev. A. W. Waddill is the pastor and Brother A. M. Mayo is the superintendent.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, requests us to announce that the date of the fourth quarterly conference, Pachuta charge, to be held at Adams' Chapel, has been changed from Tuesday, Nov. 6, to Friday, Nov. 9. Let all concerned take notice. This announcement was received too late to make the change in the regular list of appointments.

Under the auspices of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches, Dr. Nathan Soderblom, Archbishop of Upsala, Sweden and titular head of the Lutheran Church; Rev. Thomas Nightingale, Secretary of the National Free Church Council of Great Britain, and Rev. T. G. Brierley Kay, rector of Christ Church, Marylebone, London, are on a speaking tour in the United States which will last until December and cover a large part of the country.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from Mrs. Samuel Hays Bell to attend the marriage of her daughter, Elizabeth Arbuthnot, to Mr. John Baxter Ricketts, at the First Presbyterian Church, Staunton, Va., on Wednesday evening, Oct. 17, at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Ricketts is a son of Mrs. R. S. and the late Dr. R. S. Ricketts, of Millsaps College, one of the most distinguished of Southern educators. We extend all good wishes to this fine young couple in advance of the happy event.

Dr. C. M. Chapman, our efficient pastor at Shelby, Miss., has been under the surgeon's knife four times this year. We are glad to be able to state that he thinks his troubles are now over and that he will maintain his usual good health. Our readers will remember that Dr. Chapman's tour of Europe during the summer was cut short by reason of illness which forced his return home before he had visited Palestine, which was included in his original itinerary. The work at Shelby prospers and everything will be reported in full at Conference.

We take the following from the Central Methodist of Oct. 4: "Dr. W. O. Sadler, who transferred to this Conference (Louisville) from the Kentucky Conference, was with us and won a hearty welcome with his genial smile and brotherly bearing. He preached a great sermon on Sunday evening. We take Dr. Sadler into our arms and bid him welcome." Brother Sadler was formerly a member of the North Mississippi Conference, where he has many friends. He was appointed pastor of Lebanon station, in the Elizabethtown District.

The Advocate office was honored with a call by Captain John L. Collins, of Coffeeville, Miss., on Monday of this week. Captain Collins was returning home from Beauvoir, where he attended a meeting of the board of trustees of the Confederate Veterans' Home, of which he is a member, one chief item of business being in connection with plans for the new hospital, contract for which is soon to be let. In spite of his eighty-five years, the Captain is physically and mentally vigorous. He is one of the Advocate's "old guard," having been a subscriber to it for about fifty years. He is the father of Rev. R. L. Collins, one of the most efficient members of the North Mississippi Conference.

The third session of the New Orleans Standard Training School will begin on Sunday, Oct. 21, and continue through Friday, Oct. 26, the meetings being at the First Methodist Church. Two General Courses and five Specialization Courses will be given, the instructors being: Prof. M. L. Smith, Woman's College of Alabama; Dean R. E. Smith, of Centenary College; Miss Willette Allen, General Sunday School Board; Mrs. W. B. Ferguson, Elementary Superintendent, Oklahoma Conferences; Mrs. G. R. McDonald, General Sunday School Board; Mr. J. V. Thompson, Superintendent Young People's Work, Methodist Episcopal Church; Rev. J. L. Seneker, Southern Methodist University. Mr. J. H. Carter is chairman of the Board of Managers, and Miss Cora Perkins is Educational Director.

The Protestant Episcopal congregation of Woodville, Miss., celebrated, from Oct. 4 to Oct. 7, the one-hundredth anniversary of the first service of that denomination held in the town of Woodville. Both the Mississippi bishops of the denomination, and several former pastors of the parish attended and assisted. The Methodists began work in Wilkinson County as early as 1799, for Tobias Gibson, preacher-in-charge of the Natchez circuit, must have appeared in Wilkinson County before Lorenzo Dow assisted him with the preaching there in 1803. The Methodists of Woodville are proposing to celebrate next year the one-hundreth anniversary of their church building.

Mr. L. Boyce McCullough, of Bloomfield, N. J., and Miss Corinne Williams, of Eupora, Miss., were recently married in Montclear, N. J., Dr. William Judson Hampton, pastor of the Watessing Methodist Episcopal Church, officiating. The groom is the eldest son of Mrs. W. D. and the late Rev. W. D. McCullough, who for more than thirty years was a member of the North Mississippi Conference. He saw active service overseas, and is now senior member of the cotton brokerage firm of L. B. McCullough & Co., New York. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. U. G. Williams, of The Oaks, Eupora, and is a musician of note. Mr. and Mrs. McCullough will make their home at 27 Berkley Heights Park in the suburban town of Bloomfield, N. J.

FROM THE SARDIS DISTRICT.

Horn Lake circuit paid out on pastor's salary at the fourth quarterly conference, Oct. 7. This is the first circuit to pay out on pastor's salary. Brother J. H. Ingram is the pastor.

What circuit will be the next in the Sardis District.

Don't every one speak at once, please.

Conditions are about the same, financially speaking, on the Horn Lake circuit that they are over the rest of North Mississippi. What the good stewards of the Horn Lake charge have done, can be done by all the other charges of the Sardis District. It just takes a little of the grace of God, a little pep and a strong determination to make the landing on the part of the stewards. The sacrifice that the average preacher makes to preach the gospel deserves that the churches at least pay to them their meager salaries.

Let all the preachers and laymen of the Sardis District keep before their minds the one thought of having level columns on the blackboard at Greenville, then work enthusiastically toward the realization of that worthy goal.

J. TILLERY LEWIS, P. E.

FACING THE FACTS.

By Dr. W. W. Pinson.

If you do not like to face facts, do not read this. If you do, or want to learn that art, read it twice.

1. One of the main planks in the Centenary platform was that we should "double the regular income." It was clearly foreseen that unless this was done, embarrassment would be inevitable.

2. Instead of doing this, the regular income for the Foreign Department, General Work, has been reduced from $654,517 in 1918 to $464,089 in 1922.

3. The Foreign was the one assessment which was not increased in 1922, notwithstanding the vast increase in the budget.

4. One and a half million dollars on which we had been relying for our European work, was voted by the General Conference for the building of churches in university centers.

5. There were some $11,000,000 beyond the bare askings pledged in the Centenary. The General Conference voted 60 per cent of whatever surplus may be realized on this extra sum pledged, to strengthening the work on the border, thus leaving scant hope of any margin from that quarter.

6. The regular income for 1918 was $654,517, and the appropriation $403,304, thus leaving a margin of $251,312 to the good. The regular income in 1922 was $464,089, while the regular budget was $1,450,104, with a margin of $986,015 to the bad.

These figures are slightly relieved by the fact that $165,000 of specials from our budget are now carried in the Centenary, which we may reasonably count on as being continued as an annual asset.

7. To keep out of debt, we are using all available Centenary income to carry this excess on our regular budget for 1923, while legitimate Centenary askings wait.

8. We have added four new missions, 149 new missionaries and many new enterprises to our Foreign General Work, while the purchasing power of the dollar has been reduced by soaring prices.

9. When the Centenary comes to an end, if something is not done and done soon, we will be left with an income at least $850,000 short of our budget for bare maintenance, without any allowance for new missionaries or any other item of advance.

10. This inevitably demands that we increase the assessment 200 per cent, raise $1,000,000 annually by Specials, or sound a tragic retreat. In other words, having doubled our budget, we must now set about realizing that other Centenary goal, "double the income."

11. The case with the Home Department is similar. The budget for maintenance in that Department has gone from $133,975 to $365,000, while the income has been but little increased. Every argument made above for the Foreign Department applies to the Home Department.

13. We have been saved from debt by two wise provisions: the standard year, which provided that the Centenary Commission should guarantee out of its gross receipts that the income to each department should be kept up to that of 1918; and in addition to this, the maintenance budget was made first charge on the Centenary receipts of each department. These safeguards, we hope, will carry us safely through 1924, although it will be at the sad expense of specific Centenary objects.

13. There are ten thousand Centenary specials now carried by individuals, churches, Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues, aggregating $2,000,000 a year. It is one of our sources of encouragement that most of these may be continued, either in whole or in part, and every dollar of that amount will be sorely needed, if we are to keep going and growing.

14. Between now and 1925, we are faced with the solemn responsibility of finding a way to increase our annual income $1,250,000 a year for Home and Foreign Missions. The completion of the Centenary campaign is the beginning of the long siege. Success is costly and sometimes embarrassing—to those who lack the courage and constancy to carry on.

15. We face these facts at the hour of the world's sorest need, of the church's greatest opportunity, and in the flush of our greatest triumph, when success is crowning our efforts on every hand. It is a most awkward hour in which to halt or even hesitate. We stand at the bar of the future, to be judged by the high standards we, ourselves, have set. It is still more to the point that the Judge of all the earth will hold us to account in the light of that marvelous providence in whose splendor we have so bravely and so proudly come to this hour.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

I am reading Lapini's Life of Christ. Its style seems an adaptation to the present taste in literature. There are some gems of thought hidden in a mass of commonplace and rather turgid heaps of rhetoric. To my mind, his ideal Christ is rather far removed from the Christ of the New Testament. There is a lack of discrimination in regard to the well attested facts of our Lord's life and works, and the traditional, misty reports of doubtful import. And there are some conclusions concerning the characters and deeds of the twelve apostles which are rather new and startling, not to say far-fetched.

His summation of some of the leading events of Christ's active ministry is good and shows the results of faithful study; and not infrequently the applications are worthy and true. I think this author unduly exalts poverty as a virtue per se, and, it seems to me, does not place money in its proper relation to Christ's teaching on the subject, for surely the proper use of wealth has an important place in the kingdom. Possibly the Romish, ascetic view of poverty colors his view of this subject.

Mr. Lapini's scenic descriptions are good. He marshals in dramatic form some of the chief events of our Lord's life, especially those connected with his trial, passion, death, and resurrection. Viewed as a whole, I judge this book will do good, since no doubt it will be read by many who, perhaps, never before read a Life of Christ. If he be preached even a Christ of contention, we will rejoice. Paul had some right sensible things to say on this subject. He is a Fundamentalist in some of these.

We are appalled by the terrible news from Japan. Fire, flood and earthquake claim their fearsome toll of human life. Untold suffering, agony beyond the reach of imagination—hundreds of thousands slain, maimed, broken, burned, and great cities in ruins and desolation. No catastrophe of modern times of which I have heard equals this frightful disaster that has overtaken a strong, virile nation. That they are far from being a Christian nation we fully know, but no other nation is wise and good enough to sit by in judgment and hurl Jehovah's thunderbolts upon another. Why these fearful calamities come to pass belongeth only to Him who sitteth as Judge and Ruler of all things. Surely this old earth is shaky and a very insecure abiding place for man, the creature of immortal hope and infinite longing. Judging from human experience and observation, natural laws know no mercy. The righteous and the wicked perish together; only in the broader empire of spiritual law are forgiveness, care and mercy shown. Attributing these disasters to so-called secondary laws or boasting about the discoveries of science as to their cause and cure, does precious little good when cities rock and the foundations crumble. That supreme power that made all—the processes of His mighty creative power do not trouble me—and controls all is the only One to whom poor, frail human beings can appeal to at such times.

John Wesley preached a sermon on the cause and cure of earthquakes at the time the city of Lisbon was destroyed. What his conclusions were, I do not now recall, but presume they were just as valid as some theories propounded by the scientists on the subject. For no plummet has yet sounded the depths of this earth and measured the tremendous energies locked beneath strata, sand, rocks, and soil. When the mountains roar, and the seas swell, and the earth moves, we can still trust in the things unshaken.

A SILVERSMITH.

Most school children know Longfellow's poem, "The Ride of Paul Revere," and think of him, perhaps only as a patriot. However, it is interesting to know that he was also a silversmith; and that, in the Boston Museum in a notable collection of old American silver, there are admirable examples of Paul Revere's finest work. "He made in solid silver delicate ladles, exquisite teaspoons, stately flagons, rotund mugs, and salts, and braziers, and sugar-tongs. Not crude things, but exquisite ones; as exquisite as were made in England at that period." He also, as an artist, made prints, and copperplate engravings of ante-Revolutionary events which made successful appeals to patriotism. He certainly needed to be a successful craftsman for he was twice married, and had eight children by each marriage. He certainly was a brave man.—Exchange.

THE CENTRAL BATON ROUGE DISTRICT STANDARD TRAINING SCHOOL

From all sections of Louisiana comes good news relative to the training of Sunday school workers. The latest chapter in the history of training work is the first session of the Central Baton Rouge District Standard Training School held in Hammond, Sept. 4-8, with the Rev. James E. Selfe as Educational Director. This school was an unqualified success.

Because no training work had been previously undertaken in this part of the district, only four fundamental units were offered. The wisdom of such a selection of subjects was evidenced by the large numbers enrolled in each of the four classes. The course in Pupil Study was unusually popular, and the enthusiastic interest of the thirty-one parents and teachers who constituted this class showed an earnest desire on their part to gain a more sympathetic knowledge of the child life entrusted to their care.

A very attractive feature of the school was the inspirational hour every morning. The first of these was conducted by Mr. G. L. Duckworth, St. Louis Conference Sunday School Superintendent, who had the class on "The Organization and Administration of the Sunday School." This was Mr. Duckworth's first visit to Louisiana, but such was the inspiration and interest aroused by his address, "The Sunday School With an Untrained Force," and by his class lectures, that every one was sorry to say "good-bye" when he had to leave. The other speakers at the morning hour were Dr. W. W. Drake, who needs no introduction to Louisianians, and whose class in "The Program of the Christian Religion" was a rival of the one in Pupil Study, and Rev. B. D. Raulins, of Centenary College, who was the popular instructor of "The Pupil."

Probably no school has ever been held under such difficulties as was the one in Hammond. Yet with heavy rains every afternoon just before opening time, forty-nine students of the seventy-four enrolled, some coming twelve miles over country roads, carried the courses to completion and secured certificates. Nor did enthusiasm die with the close of the session—and this is the test of the success of a school—many students have entered upon individual study, and plans are well under way for a second session. With such spirit as this, training work is bound to succeed, the Sunday school must widen in its influence, and the Kingdom of God must come in the hearts of men. Great things may well be expected from the Sunday school workers of the Central Baton Rouge District. They, with their Educational Director, are to be congratulated on the outcome of the initial step in their educational program.

FROM TREES CITY, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: If you will allow room in the Advocate, I want to tell about what a wonderful meeting we had at the Methodist church at Trees City, La., Sept. 6-15. I say "wonderful" because it came nearer being an old-time Methodist revival than any I have had anything to do with in a long time.

The preaching, which was done by Brother R. A. Bozeman, of Oil City, was with the "demonstration of the Spirit and of power." Once more we saw that the Gospel was "the power of God unto salvation" to many who believed on the Lord. Not only were many saved, but it was a time of great rejoicing for those who knew the Lord. Such a victory was won over Satan and his forces that again the saints of God could shout his praises. Twenty-two were added to the church, and all the Christians were revived at this place.

Another great feature was the singing. T. A. Spinks, of Miami, Fla., was the leader, and he fully confirmed his former reputation in this part of the work. Not only did he prove his leadership, but his solos were also fine. Several well-prepared quartets were also a very attractive feature.

Nor must we forget the prayer meetings, for they were a great source of power. Each evening before preaching services, an earnest group of Christians would gather in a corner of the church and pray for the salvation of souls and for the success of the meeting. These, too, were conducted by Brother Spinks. Undoubtedly, this phase of the work was one of the strongest making for the success of the meeting.

Another thing of interest I will mention was the presence of visitors. The preacher visitors were Brother Ware and Brother Land, of Vivian, whom everybody knows. Then there were visitors from Oil City, Shreveport, and other places.

FROM QUEENSBOROUGH, SHREVEPORT, LA.

It has been over a year since I wrote you concerning Mangum Memorial Church. I've been too busy to write. It takes about fifteen hours a day here. The work, however, has yielded good returns. With the help of the Shreveport City Board of Missions and Church Extension we paid a $1,400 note and $560 interest on a $7,000 debt. So far, we have raised about $6,000 for all purposes, and while we are behind on our budget, plans are under way whereby our officials hope to have everything in full by Conference. Our Sunday school is growing and improving along all lines. We have installed the graded literature in the lower division, and are now planning for Promotion Day. We are working towards the B-type school. Mr. A. McGuirt, our superintendent, is faithfully on the job. Our prayer meetings are well attended. This spring, after Easter and during our revival, which was conducted by Rev. C. M. Morris, of South Carolina, we broke all records made in the past by this school, there being 376 present. Since my coming here, over a year ago, we have completed the new building, concreted the basement, and seated the main auditorium, besides fixing curtains and rooms for the Sunday school.

This is a live, growing church. Hardly a Sunday passes that we do not receive new members, and that on profession of faith.

The George Tucker revival, which we promoted under God and together with the Texas Avenue membership and pastor, was a great blessing to us as well as to them. Walton has received about 30, the Baptists an equal or like number, and I have received so far twelve as a result of the meeting.

Brother Tucker did faithful work among us. He denounced sin of every nature in every way he could. He held up a Christ powerful enough to save from all sin. I have no hesitancy in commending him.

A word about our Leagues and young people. They are on the job, and doing things.

Love to you and all readers of the Advocate.

Fraternally,

J. CUDE ROUSSEAUX.

FROM BELMONT, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: As I have just finished my work for the summer, I will make a short report of the same. Belmont charge was rearranged at the last session of the Annual Conference so as to give Belmont half-time. This has given new impetus to our work here, and we have had a real pleasant year. They built a nice six-room bungalow parsonage last fall, which is a credit to the work.

I began my summer's work the fifth Sunday in July at Dennis, with W. W. Jones, of Iuka, doing our preaching for us. We continued until Friday; while the church seemed to be benefited, we had no additions.

Our next meeting was at Belmont, the second Sunday in August, where we ran ten days, W. A. (Swede) Wilson doing our preaching. We had a very fine meeting here with 12 additions on profession of faith and 6 by letter. R. F. Cole, of Milan, Tenn., had charge of the song service, which added very much to our meeting. Any pastor who needs a singer need not be afraid to get Brother Cole, as he is a safe, sane man. He is also the son of a Methodist preacher.

The fourth Sunday in August I began my meeting at Patterson's Chapel, with E. E. McKeithen, of Houston, with me. We continued for five days here and had a fairly good meeting. We had two additions on profession of faith and one by letter.

The second Sunday in September we began our last meeting at Golden, and continued for eight days. W. W. Jones was with me here also. We had two additions on profession of faith.

I have dedicated to God in holy baptism three infants during the year, Liva Sue McCormack, Reese Shook, and Sarah Bea Shook. The last two were dedicated last Sunday, which was one of the best services we have had here since I came to the work.

The above brethren rendered faithful and efficient service during their stay with me. I very heartily commend them to any of the brethren who may need help in revival meetings.

C. WESLEY BALEY, Pastor.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

Epworth League.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT LEAGUES.

The District Institute of the Columbus District met at West Point on Sept. 15. The program was a very inspiring one. The topics discussed were of vital interest to every League worker. Judging by the interest and enthusiasm shown at this Institute, the Leagues of the district are determined to make this year the best in the history of the district.

Forty-five delegates and out-of-town visitors were present. This was the first meeting held in the Columbus District in several years, and it was a great encouragement to have so many representatives at the meeting. Most of the Leagues were represented. Teams were formed for visiting chapters and organizing new Leagues.

The inspirational feature of the day was the address by Rev. S. H. Caffey, of Macon. His zeal for the Master's work finds its best expression in his power to reach out and direct the thoughts of young people to God. The keynote of his talk was faith in God—a faith that holds on to God even though it may mean a sacrifice of cherished plans.

The Leagues are up and doing. Columbus League, First Methodist Church, excels all others in social service work. They visit the sick and shut-ins, nursing the sick where a nurse is not practical. The flower gardens of Leaguers are dedicated to use for bringing gladness to those who are ill. Convalescing patients are carried on delightful rides. Children are cared for by members, thus allowing tired mothers time for recreation and rest. The orphans have not been neglected. The sewing circle has recently made book satchels for them.

Crawford is a recently organized League that gives promise of doing great things. They were present at the Institute thirteen strong, and every one a live, enthusiastic Leaguer.

Brooksville has the distinction of being the only League in the district who can boast of an orchestra. Mr. Doner, the director, is doing a splendid work in training these young people.

Macon League is doing fine work. It has been organized only three months, but threatens to become the leading League if the others do not hustle.

Weir reports a membership of 59. They have collected $75 by means of dues and an entertainment. They have set an example in devotional meetings that all Leagues should follow. In one meeting, with an attendance of twenty-six, twenty-four took part in prayer.

Prairie League has the best recreational program on record. They put on a live social once each week. The members co-operate in planning the activities and obtain pleasure and profit from their efforts. Much credit is due their pastor, Rev. M. H. Burns who is one of the most enthusiastic Leaguers in the North Mississippi Conference.

West Point has three well organized Leagues—Senior, Junior, and Intermediate. The Juniors lead all others with a membership of almost a hundred. The Intermediates are to be commended for the library which they have made. The members use the gathering time before devotional meeting as a time to read, instead of using the time for conversation. The Senior League enjoyed a most delightful camp on Tombigbee River in August. The occasion was one of continuous pleasure for the three days of camp life.

RUTH N. BOYD,
District Secretary.

COURTESY IN CONTROVERSY.

Dear Dr. Carley: Apropos of the present discussion on "Orthodoxy," it might not be amiss for us to recall what Mr. Wesley said on this subject. Said he: "Orthodoxy or right opinions is never more than a slender part of religion; sometimes no part at all. In a child of God, it is a slender, part of religion; it is no part at all in a child of the devil. The religion of a child of God is righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. Now if orthodoxy be any part of this (which of itself might admit of a question) it is a very slender part. Though it is a considerable help both of love and peace, and joy. Religion is, in others, the love of God and man, producing all holiness of conversation. Now are right opinions any more (if they are so much) than a very slender part of this? Once more, Religion is the mind that was in Christ, and the walking as Christ walked. But how very, slender a part of this are opinions, how right soever!" "By a child of the devil. I mean, one who has no true religion at all; one who neither loves, nor fears, nor serves God. But it is certain such a man may still be orthodox; may entertain right opinions; and yet, it is equally certain, these are no part of religion in him that has no religion at all." (Black-faced type all his.) See Wesley's Works, 1813 Edition, Vol. XVI, pages 37, 38.

I would not be understood as opposing the discussion of this or any other subject involving questions of opinion, or even of doctrine. No question is settled till it is settled right. The tacit acceptance of an interpretation or doctrinal statement for long periods may be prima facie evidence of their truth, but not positive proof. If they are true, it will not harm them to discuss them again. If they are not true, they should be so shown and discarded. Truth cannot be hurt by letting in the light.

The thing against which I most earnestly protest is the spirit in which this discussion is being carried on. "We be brethren." No cause is served by bad-tempered partisans. Imputations of wrong motives and of insincerity carry no weight with right-thinking people.

I wish to commend the example of Bishop Cannon and Dr. Bland at Lake Junaluska. I have never seen a more beautiful spirit. Bishop Cannon, with the finest courtesy, requests permission to ask a question. Dr. Bland as courteously consented. Bishop Cannon then asked, "Did not the Apostle Paul hold the conservative view of the Old Testament?" Dr. Bland saw, as did every thinking person in the audience, where an affirmative answer would put him, but he did not hesitate or show the least impatience. He answered, "Yes." Then Bishop Cannon asked, "Did not Jesus hold the same view?" Again the answer came clear, "Yes." The temptation must have been great in the mind of Bishop Cannon to follow up the advantage which he clearly had, but he let the matter rest there. One's admiration is divided between a man who has the courage to answer unequivocally a question which he sees will put him at a disadvantage, and the magnanimity of an antagonist who gallantly declines to follow up an advantage that might embarrass a good man.

JOHN A. RANDOLPH.

Sardis, Miss.

FROM RICHTON, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a few words from Richton. This has been a very pleasant and profitable year on the Richton charge. There have been only twenty-five additions, but you will recall that we received over 200 last year. There have been so far 55 dismissed this year.

We had good revivals at each place. Rev. J. W. Coffman assisted at Ovett, where we have just completed a new church that cost $1,875. Brother Coffman is a splendid helper.

At Blodgett, where we built a new church last year, and have recently paid the balance due of $150, and where we have just raised $350 for seating the church, Rev. T. J. O'Nell, of Rolling Fork, did the preaching.

Brother O'Neil also assisted at Richton and did some of the most effective preaching I ever listened to. At a special service for men he brought a fine message—not the kind you sometimes hear, but one that inspires. At the close almost every man —and there were something like 200 —came forward and gave his hand as a pledge to live a clean, upright, Christian life. His message at the "mothers' service" was one of real joy. People were moved that have never been seen to move before. Something like 40 or 50 professed conversion. The entire town was uplifted by this meeting. I must not forget to give praise to Messrs. Geddy and Vallentine, who led the singing.

Our fourth quarterly conference was held Sept. 30. Brother Graves is in high favor in this charge and in all the other charges in the Hattiesburg District. Mr. Editor, you ought to hear his "double-barreled" sermon on Sabbath observance and tithing—it's fine.

Our Sunday schools are doing fine —about 85% of church membership in the Sunday schools.

All departments of the church are progressing nicely, but there is still a lot to do. I hope to be able to make a good report at Conference.

A. W. O'BRYANT.

MRS. BUTLER'S ACHES AND PAINS

Vanished After Using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

W. Philadelphia, Pa.—"When I cleaned house last April I must have overlifted, for after that I had pains and aches all the time and was so discouraged. I could hardly do my own housework, and I could not carry a basket of groceries from the store nor walk even four or five squares without getting terrible pains in my back and abdomen and lower limbs. I went to visit a friend in Mt. Holly, N. J., and she said, 'Mrs. Butler, why don't you take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My husband said that if it did her so much good for the same trouble, I should try it. So I have taken it and it is doing me good. Whenever I feel heavy or bad, it puts me right on my feet again. I am able to do my work with pleasure and am getting strong and stout. I still take the Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and am using Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash."—Mrs. CHARLES BUTLER, 1233 S. Hanson St., W. Phila., Pa.

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

It is not too late to make all necessary preparations for the successful observance of Children's Week. In a month from now it will be too late.

The church must practice the spirit of brotherliness if it wins any part of the world for Christ. The lack of faith in one another is the worm sucking the life-blood out of the roots of the church. This lack of common confidence is the cause of criticism, fault-finding, and a hundred other ills, or rather symptoms, of what ails us. We need to confess, repent, and return unto the Lord for forgiveness before we can shake the strongholds of the world, the flesh, and the devil. It is high time that we all come to God and get together for the fight against sin.

Several of the teachers at Senatobia have made eleven credits in the training course, and they would have finished the twelfth if a text book had been written for this course. The new Sunday school annex is already crowded. Promotion Day was observed in an impressive manner. They are getting ready to observe Children's Week and do everything else a good Sunday school ought to do.

Mrs. M. E. Dakin, superintendent of our Sunday school at Shaw, issued 45 promotion cards and 21 promotion certificates on Promotion Day. This school is undertaking the full program of work, from the Cradle Roll to the leadership training course.

The school at Kosciusko, under the leadership of Mr. B. G. Webb, is doing all kinds of good work, and has long since outgrown the church building. The teachers hold a brief prayer service each Sunday in behalf of the unsaved. Fourteen are enrolled in the class for leadership training. Some day this school will grow strong enough to erect the building needed for religious instruction.

Cheering reports are coming in from the schools that observed Promotion Day, and from the ones that are preparing to observe Children's Week. The Sunday school is getting to be the evangelizing agency it ought to be. We are training our young people to worship and to serve in a way that will help this poor old world to find its way to God.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT STANDARD TRAINING SCHOOL, OCTOBER 14-19.

The second annual Shreveport District Standard Training School will be held at the First Methodist Church in Shreveport, La., Oct. 14-19. Six courses, two general units and four specialization, will be offered.

Entertainment will be provided on the Harvard plan, that is, bed and breakfast. It is hoped that a number from the district, and others, will take advantage of this opportunity. Those desiring to come and wishing this entertainment will send their names to Mrs. J. M. Collins, 1056 Sheridan Avenue, Shreveport, La., chairman of this committee.

The courses to be offered are as follows: General Units: The Bible, by Dean R. E. Smith, of Centenary College; the Pupil, "Lesson Materials," by Professor D. B. Raulins; Specialization units: (1) Beginners' Department, Miss Willette Allen, Atlanta, Ga.; (2) Primary Department, Miss Caroline Hess, Alexandria, La.; (3) Junior Department, Mrs. R. G. McDonald, Houston, Tex.; (4) Intermediate-Senior Department, Rev. H. E. Wheeler, Little Rock, Ark.

The school will be opened on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 14, at 3:30 o'clock, with an address by Mr. W. C. Owen, superintendent of the adult department of the General Sunday School Board. Registration will follow. The classes will meet for their work the five succeeding days.

Organization by Miss Marie Parham, of the General Board, of a city-wide Elementary Council is expected to provide a stimulus to enrollment.

We trust that pastors and superintendents and workers from all over the district will accept this invitation to take advantage of this school. Dr. R. H. Wynn is the chairman of the Board of Managers, and Dr. A. S. Lutz is educational director.

H. L. JOHNS,
Publicity Chairman.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MISSIONARY SPECIALS.

The question of Sunday school missionary specials is becoming at the present time a vitally important matter. In the first place, the period for which a large number of our Sunday schools took specials in the Centenary campaign is coming to an end. Those schools which have kept up to date with those specials are now making their last payments. The question, What form shall the special contributions from the Sunday school take for the future? must be settled shortly.

Another fact that emphasizes strongly the importance of this question is the necessity of carrying on the great enterprises initiated by the Centenary. The church as a whole raised a great sum for enlarging our missionary work at home and abroad. The time will soon come when these special contributions will have been spent. To what sources shall we look for means to continue the enterprises thus begun? I do not know what complete answer the church will make to this question, but it is certain that no more far-reaching reply can be made than this: We must at once provide for the continuance and enlargement of the special offerings of our Sunday schools. Not only is this necessary because of the immediate value of these offerings in carrying on the work begun by the Centenary after the campaign period is over, but because if we are to live up to the mark set by the Centenary campaign, we must develop the missionary spirit in the coming generation through the Sunday school; and nothing will more surely develop that spirit than real specials through which the young people of our Sunday schools shall be brought to feel that they are directly supporting some missionary objective which appeals to their hearts. Of course, this special should be kept constantly before them and as much direct touch established as possible between the school and the special object of its efforts.

In choosing these specials, regard should be had for the prospect of arousing definite interest in the object selected.

By way of suggestion, I would call the attention of those in charge of these matters, particularly in our Louisiana Sunday schools, to the French Mission work in our own State as a suitable object of such specials.

As a good illustration of what may be done by others, I will mention the recent action of the First Church Sunday school in New Orleans. After paying out in full, before the expiration of the Centenary period, their pledge of $300 a year for the five years, the governing council of the school decided to increase their pledge to $500 a year and direct it for the coming year to the support of one of our French missionaries. This seems to me a very appropriate action, and may suggest similar action to others. If a number of our Sunday schools throughout the State would adopt specials connected with this great field in our own State, it would help to lay this work more fully on the hearts of our people in Louisiana.

It is time now for many of our Sunday schools to take up the question of future specials by sending to Dr. Cooks's office at Nashville for lists of specials and deciding on something definite at once. In doing so, it is well to consider the possibility of increasing the amount hitherto carried by the school. It is important, also, for schools which did not accept Centenary pledges to undertake something of the kind now.

NEW LAMP HAS NO WICK OR CHIMNEY

Most Brilliant Home Light Known—Costs One Cent a Night.

A new lamp which has no wick or chimney, yet, according to experts, gives the most powerful home light in the world, is the latest achievement of W. C. Fowler, 421 Factory building, Kansas City, Mo. This remarkable new lamp beats gas or electricity—gives more light than 300 candles, 18 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights, and costs only one cent a night. A blessing to every home, especially on farm or in small town. It is absolutely safe, and gives universal satisfaction. No dirt, no smoke, no odor. A child can carry it. It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall or church enjoy the increased comfort of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light, and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial to any reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate who writes him. He wants one person to whom he can refer new customers. Take advantage of his free offer. Agents wanted. Write him to-day.—Advt.

We are receiving calls daily for men and women of character, ambition and business training, men and women who can accept and efficiently fill responsible positions, positions that give every opportunity for advancement; positions of high salaries, positions in banks, law offices, insurance, real estate, brokers' offices; positions with manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, in every imaginable type of business in the South.

Many of them we capably fill, others are yet vacant. The men and women who fill them need not be wealthy, nor even moderately well-to-do. They need not be young, nor need they be college or even high school graduates. All that is necessary is that they possess character, ambition and a business training.

The character and ambition they must possess, the business training we will furnish under the direction of the South's most efficient training corps and in one of the South's most efficient and best equipped business colleges. A training with unique courses in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, accounting, banking, business administration or our secretarial course. Such a training we will furnish in a few months' time at little cost to you, and at terms to meet your own financial condition.

Thousands of Southern men and women have taken advantage of the opportunity and trained themselves for a higher calling, a better salary and a greater opportunity for advancement. Many who have accepted the positions we offer have risen to the top of the ladder, and are numbered among America's foremost and wealthiest business and professional men and women.

An institution with such standing and reputation as the Georgia-Alabama Business College does more to advance the business interests of its graduates than can be done by any amount of family or personal influence.

Consider your present status—would you not like to improve your station in life, increase your income, attain financial independence and success? An opportunity awaits you, for positions are being constantly offered us that must be filled.

Write for our inspiring book, "Your Future—What Does it Hold in Store?" It is sent free on request, explains our offer in detail and points the way to a brighter future.

Address: Dept. B5, Georgia-Alabama Business College, Macon, Ga., or Dept. B5, Georgia-Alabama Business College, Atlanta, Ga.

FROM FARMERVILLE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Upon coming to this charge, as a supply from the Alabama Conference, I requested you to send me the Advocate, and promised you that I would let you hear from this charge before the year was over. This letter is in compliance with that promise.

At your last Annual Conference Farmerville asked to be made a station. Your Conference was not able to comply with all the requests of this church, so no preacher was sent here. Bishop Candler asked me to come out here from Emory University and supply the work until Conference, with a view to transferring to this Conference. That accounts for my being here.

Now a few words about the progress that has been made on the work. There was no Woman's Missionary Society when the year's work began. Now we have one of the best in the Louisiana Conference, fully organized from the Baby Division to the Adult Department, with all obligations met in full save a few dollars on the Young People's pledge. These organizations have handled nearly $600 since their beginning in the early part of the year. Each branch of the society has met weekly, and not more than two or three meetings have been missed. Not content with being organized themselves, several of the good ladies, together with the pastor and his wife, went over to Marion and organized the woman's work there in all of its departments.

The Sunday school has almost doubled in membership. The regular Sunday school collections for the year have averaged about $20 per Sunday.

The stewards have been able to meet all obligations as they came due.

The membership of the church has been increased about fifty per cent during the year. The average attendance at prayer meeting during the year has been about twenty-five.

I hope to renew some old friendships, which I made while a mere boy, doing evangelistic work in this Conference while attending school at the old Southern University, Greensboro, Ala., and make many more new ones. Some of my friends, who knew me in those days, have been good enough to write me that they were not going to consider me a transfer, but simply one of the old boys come home. You see my first work was to supply the Slidell-Lower Coast work in 1900.

Yours truly,
JOHN H. WILLIAMS.

WEAK, TREMBLY, NERVES SHATTERED

Lady Says She Was In a Desperate Condition, But "Now In Splendid Health" After Taking Cardui.

Dale, Ind.—"About three years ago," says Mrs. Flora Roberts, of this place, "I had the 'flu,' which left me in a desperate condition. I had a bad cough. I went down in weight to little over one hundred pounds. I took different medicines—did everything, but nothing seemed to do me any good. It hurt so badly in the chest at times I would have to go to the door to get my breath.

"I would have the headache and . . . was so weak I felt like I would just have to sink down and stay there.

"My nerves were shattered. I looked for something awful to happen—I would tremble and shake at a noise.

"My mother said, 'Do try Cardui,' and my husband insisted till I began its use. I used two bottles of Cardui . . . and noted a big improvement in my condition. I kept up the Cardui and weigh 180 pounds. I am now in splendid health—sure am a firm believer in Cardui, for I'm satisfied it did the work."

After-effects of debilitating illness are often as alarming as the illness itself. For women, Cardui, as a tonic, is especially indicated. Thousands of women who have taken it after serious illness have found Cardui beneficial in toning up certain functions, so essential to bodily reconstruction and good, sound health.

DOING THINGS FOR GOD.

By Robert A. Bernard.

Man, the superstructure of God's creation, is the object of his infinite love and mercy. Blinded by reason and foresaken by faith, he gropes feebly up life's broad highway. Coming continuously in contact with the divine, the things worth while, he succumbs to their influence and, through faith, looks ever onward and upward, doing things for God, attaining life eternal. Others ignore their influence and through reason fail to surmount the inexplicable, lose all; for reason and faith cannot walk together, the one camping before the inexplicable, fails in life's mission; the other, triumphantly surmounting all obstacles, marches on, doing things for God.

Surrounded by the glories of creation, men fail to recognize the handiwork of the Great Master of the Universe until, by reason of a great awakening in their lives, they are drawn nearer to God; then the full significance of its wonderful meaning begins to dawn upon them, and not until then do they see in creation the wonderful handiwork of the Supreme Architect, and learn to call upon him when in distress, and are taught to dispense aid where aid is needed, charity where charity is due, to lift the sinner to a higher plane of living and teach him the great lesson of forgiveness—doing things for God.

Of such is the substance of the average man's life; and until he recognizes their influence over his life and the lives of others, he can never enjoy to the fullest extent the wondrous glories of creation and become a doer of his will.

To win, we must love, to conquer have faith, meet the enemies of light, and turn their ungodly influence away from the unsuspecting and the innocent as the flint turns the wind—be up and doing things for God.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

CHAMBERLAIN'S STOMACH AND LIVER TABLETS

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Vicksburg District Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Vicksburg District was opened at 3 p. m., Sept. 28, 1923, in the Methodist church at Rolling Fork, with a welcoming address and prayer by Rev. T. J. O'Neil, pastor.

Mrs. Cottrell, our charming and efficient District Secretary, then took the chair and asked for nominations for secretary. Mrs. L. M. Elliott, of Rolling Fork, was nominated, elected, and took her place at the desk. Mrs. Cottrell asked for a chain of prayers, with Mrs. O'Neil to begin, and Mrs. Cottrell to end. A number responded with earnest, heartfelt prayers.

The next thing on the program was roll call and reports from delegates. Good reports were made from Anguilla, Hermanville, Holly Bluff, Mayersville, Vicksburg (Crawford Street), Vicksburg (Gibson Memorial), and Rolling Fork. The following had paid pledges in full: Anguilla, Hermanville, Holly Bluff, Lorman, Mayersville, and Rolling Fork.

Mrs. Cottrell next called for a discussion on "Circuit Missionary Societies, and the Best Form for Weak Charges." The plan is to have four small circles within a larger circle, and to have the Woman's Missionary Society meet when quarterly conference is in session, the treasurer to make a recapitulation of the work done.

Mrs. Cottrell mentioned two items stressed in Conference, as follows: "Fifteen per cent gain in finances," and "The doubling campaign;" and also called attention to the fact that the most important local work is the care of the parsonage.

Mrs. Hegman, of Holly Bluff, gave an interesting talk on "Social Features in her Society." The ladies meet every week (as decided by ballot), in the members' homes, and the meetings combine the spiritual, business, and social features in each meeting—which is very easy to do when a society is run by electricity, and Mrs. Hegman is a live wire. In this connection, Mrs. Hegman asked the question, "What must an Auxiliary do to qualify for the 'Standard of Excellence?'" A copy of the requirements was found and read, and Mrs. Cottrell explained that each Auxiliary does its own grading.

Next, the program for the evening was read, and the business session adjourned until Saturday morning at 9:30.

Friday Evening at 7:30.

The program Friday evening was most enjoyable. It was begun with a song service by the choir. Devotional exercises were conducted by Brother O'Neil. Next a solo was sweetly rendered by Miss Juanita Levi, of Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg. Then came a demonstration by Vicksburg Crawford Street Young People, entitled, "A Missionary Clinic," which was beautifully done. It caused much laughter, and showed up our many shortcomings. Music by the choir was now enjoyed while the rostrum was being arranged for a demonstration to be given by the Vicksburg Gibson Memorial Young People, "Aunt Tilly Learns to Tithe." This was also given in a pleasing manner, and a lesson impressed. This demonstration was followed by a reading by Miss Pick, of Vicksburg, Gibson Memorial. which was enjoyed. The program was closed with a prayer by Mrs. Hegman.

Saturday Morning Session.

The business session for Saturday began at 9 a. m. Devotional exercises were led by Mrs. Hegman, who read a part of the fourteenth chapter of Matthew, and made an earnest talk about Service.

Mrs. Cottrell then led a discussion on "How to Keep Societies Missionary, and Fully in Line with Council Plans."

Next came blackboard work, which gave a summary of work in the Home Department, and answered the question, "Where Does Our Money Go?" Every delegate was requested to copy the blackboard outline.

Minutes of Friday's afternoon and evening meetings were read and approved. Mrs. Cottrell complimented the Vicksburg District upon the wonderful improvement made in the work in every way in the last two years.

The next discussion was, "The Standard Class, the Missionary Measuring Rod—How to Keep a Standard Class." Mrs. Cottrell told the delegates that much of the needed literature could be obtained free, upon request, from the Publishing House, if postage for delivery were sent.

The change of plans for the Week of Prayer was next enlarged upon, and a plea made for its observance. Literature is sent for only three days' program for adults, during the Week of Prayer. Delegates were asked to tell what they did during the Week of Prayer, and several responded with helpful suggestions. The free-will offering received during the Week of Prayer is sent to our needy institutions.

Our leader next asked for silent prayer, followed by sentence prayers—the burden to be "A Deepened Sense of Stewardship for an Enlarged Missionary Program."

An unusually interesting and instructive paper, entitled, "What to do to Advance Tithing in the Church," was read by Mrs. Goza, of Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg.

Mrs. Cottrell showed us a picture of some of our deaconesses, and explained why they wore uniform. This was followed by a very instructive and feeling talk by Mrs. Hegman on, "Needy Wesley Houses"—she had visited the Wesley Houses and could give first-hand information. Mrs. Cottrell reminded us that the pledges for these houses are made at Conference, and delegates were requested to send pledges and reports by the first of October. She also made an appeal for the Wesley House boxes that are to be given in the month of December.

Reports from the Young People's Work were called for. The delegates from Crawford Street and Gibson Memorial, Vicksburg, responded with splendid reports. The discussion, "How Shall the Adult Societies Sponsor the Young People?" was led by Mrs. Hegman. The question, "Which Shall be Encouraged—the League or the Young People, if Both Cannot be Sustained in the Same Church?" was discussed, and Mrs. Cottrell expressed the opinion that the two will be correlated in the near future.

Mrs. Lumbley, of Rolling Fork, gave a cordial invitation to the Young People to visit her home Saturday afternoon, and see her curios brought from foreign lands. The invitation was eagerly accepted.

The session was then adjourned until 2 o'clock.

Saturday Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session on Saturday began with the Junior Missionary Society of Rolling Fork composing the choir. The meeting was opened with the singing of "Since the Fullness of His Love Came In," followed by several other missionary songs, sung sweetly by the fresh young voices.

Minutes of the morning session were read, and with a slight correction, approved.

The president of the Junior Missionary Society, Elizabeth Clements, then took the chair, and after explaining that the Juniors had been organized only about six months ago, called for reports from the following: Junior Missionary Recording Secretary, Annie Gale Moore; Treasurer, Scott McComb; Corresponding Secretary, Francis Moore; Standard of Excellence, Hattie Gray Russell; Social Service, Dorothy Hinton. These reports were all good and read in a pleasing manner. Next followed a demonstration by the Juniors, "Outside of Heaven," which was enjoyed by all.

After this program, Mrs. Cottrell called for a discussion by Mrs. W. T. Rehse, of Vicksburg, Crawford Street Church, the subject being the "Belle Bennett Memorial," which was ably handled by Mrs. Rehse. She spoke of Miss Bennett's charming personality, her vision of a Training School for our women missionaries, and her untiring efforts in raising funds toward the building of Scarritt. Mrs. Rehse also gave the reasons for moving the Training School from Kansas City to Nashville, and the plans in connection with the "Bennett Memorial."

The next discussion was, "How to Get Best Results from Harvest Day." This was presented in a very beautiful paper, by Mrs. Bankston, of Anguilla.

Mrs. Cottrell now called attention to some of the instructive charts and literature she had brought with her, and concluded with generous words of thanks for the hospitality extended the delegates.

The final discussion was a general one, dealing with plans for future meetings. After a study of the question from every side, the most practical plan was decided upon, and was put into the form of a motion by Mrs. Hegman, as follows: "That because of the great distance from one end of the district to the other, and the consequent non-representation of so many Auiliaries at the annual meetings, that the district be divided by the District Secretary into three parts, in each of which an all-day session be held, and on a different day, so that the District Secretary may be present at each meeting." This motion was seconded by Mrs. Elliott, of Mayersville, and was carried.

The business of the annual meeting having been brought to a close, the final session was adjourned, after a prayer by Brother O'Neil.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. L. M. ELLIOTT,
Convention Secretary.

FROM CALEDONIA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed the seventh and last revival on the Caledonia charge. The pastor was assisted in the last two by Rev. A. S. Raper and Rev. C. W. Avery.

The services at Caledonia, where Brother Raper assisted, were exceedingly effective. Twenty-nine persons were added to the church; the membership was revived, and the Conference claims were subscribed.

Rev. C. W. Avery assisted at Murrah's Chapel. The membership was increased from twenty to thirty-five. There, too, the Conference claims were raised.

It looks now as if the Caledonia charge will have a fine report at Annual Conference. There have been one hundred and thirteen additions to the church up to date.

R. T. HOLLINGSWORTH, P. C.

A NOTE FROM REV. W. D. BASS.

Dear Brother Carley: I have had a good year in my evangelistic work. Most of my meetings have already been reported to you. I have some yet to hold.

Brother J. B. Randolph, our presiding elder, has done a fine work on the Corinth District. I hope the bishop may send him to us the fourth year—don't know who could fill his place any better another year. Brother Smoot has done the greatest work since he has been at Corinth of which the writer has any recollection. He seems to have the divine and acquired qualifications for the evangelistic work. He is a great preacher.

Brother McDougal has done a good work on Corinth circuit, also Brother Boggs has done well at South Side, so far as his health would permit.

W. D. BASS.

A GREAT DAY AT CROWDER—AND OTHER THINGS.

Our beautiful new church at Crowder, Miss., was dedicated by Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, Sunday afternoon, Sept. 30, after a great sermon preached by him from the text: "I have meat to eat that ye know not of." Among the many visitors present was Rev. M. W. Wood, the former pastor, under whose leadership the church was begun and almost finished before the present pastor came to the charge. Brother Wood remained and preached a good sermon at the evening service, to the delight of his many friends and former parishioners.

The pastor, assisted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh and his singer, Mr. J. O. Bryant, concluded an eleven days' revival meeting at Crowder, Sept. 12, resulting in 29 accessions to the Methodist church, 14 giving their names for membership in the Baptist church, and about 50 persons pledging to tithe their incomes.

T. H. PORTER.

COMMENDS "LAYMAN."

Dear Brother Carley: I want to commend the man who signed himself, "Layman," in the issue of the Advocate of Oct. 4. I believe, my brother, that you have the majority of the more than two million Methodists of the South with you, and that a show of your position on this matter will do more to correct this evil of Methodism than anything that we preachers can do. May the Lord bless you. I would like to hear from more of your "tribe" through the Advocate.

Westminster College in Salt Lake City is the only Protestant college in Utah. It was established and maintained by the Presbyterians, but has always had the co-operation and support of other Christians in its Board of Trustees, its faculty and student body. The Presbyterians are now in a campaign to raise $750,000 for buildings, equipment and endowment, and other denominations are proposing to add men to the faculty and funds to the resources of the institution, thus making it in reality a union Protestant Christian College.

Let the trustees have complete reports, and all the pastors do their utmost to have all collections in full. The Seashore District is blessed in that we are not suffering, as other districts are, from the boll weevil. Let us all work and pray for full reports.

There will be a Preachers' Institute at Poplarville Monday, Sept. 17, at 10 a. m., for the Picayune, Logtown, Poplarville, Lumberton, Columbia, Wiggins, and Brooklyn charges. Let all the pastors from those charges attend. There will be one at Biloxi Tuesday, Sept. 25, for the balance of the District, to meet at 10 o'clock. Brethren, come.

Don't fail to complete your every-member canvass and be ready to report results.

Please let every pastor see that special effort be made, from now till the Annual Conference, to collect all Benevolences. We have had a good year spiritually, and we cannot afford to go up to the Conference until we have done our very best to raise the finances so necessary for the ongoing of the Kingdom.

I am sure the laymen will see that their pastors are paid in full. They cannot and will not do less than this.

Pastors will please have all reports ready at the quarterly conference, as required by the Discipline.

A NOTE FROM REV. R. T. WARE.

Dear Brother Carley: I wish to thank my friends for their many kindnesses shown me while in the Highland Sanitarium for the last fifteen days, following an operation. All the preachers of Shreveport were so kind to call and help shorten the days with their words of cheer and comfort. Scores of friends remembered me with beautiful flowers, cards, and letters, which made my heart glad. Every day new, fresh flowers were brought into my room. When I returned home, I found money had been placed in the bank to my credit to pay all the bills. I say as David: "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me. I, too, will take the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord." A greater truth was never said than, "Friends are better than money." I will have to quit; it is a job to write flat of your back in bed. I hope to be out in six or eight days.

May the blessings of God rest upon all those who have been so kind to us.

BISHOP AINSWORTH AT BATESVILLE, MISS.

The Methodists of Batesville had a red-letter day, Sunday, Oct. 3, for the dedication of the church by Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, when the largest congregation in the history of the church gathered to hear the Bishop. The sermon was a masterpiece of genuine gospel preaching that dealt with the great essentials of salvation from sin, drawing a clear distinction between truth simply held as a doctrine and the truth appropriated by a living faith. Many old men said that not in a lifetime had they heard the like.

The choir rendered most splendid singing—especially one anthem was great. Several preachers were present as visitors. Rev. J. T. Lockhart and wife, of Itta Bena, under whose administration the church was built, were present, and took part in the dedicatory service, and he preached, to the delight of the people at night; we also had with us, besides our own presiding elder, the Rev. John T. Lewis; the Rev. J. B. Randolph, of the Corinth District, who also took part in the services; Rev. R. M. Evans, of Shannon; Brother Edwards, of Tyro; Rev. Eugene Johnson, superannuate, who lives here, and Rev. J. W. Lee, the Baptist minister here, and his congregation, with many laymen from many parts of our territory. It was an ideal day—the weather perfect, but dust horrid—a season of great things not to be forgotten by this generation.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE BULWARK.

In the midst of present-day unrest in all fields of human endeavor, moral and spiritual as well as economic and social, we have not felt that there was any occasion for undue alarm as to the ultimate outcome, for the simple reason that all the real values of life are bulwarked by the personal experience of untold thousands of men and women who know the right, who love it, and who will die, if necessary, in defense of it. That which has become a very part of life itself cannot be taken away as a thief would slip a purse out of one's pocket. A man cannot be deprived of the blessed memory of his mother because another man, an ingrate, speaks ill of the one who gave him birth; no more can a man be robbed of the blessed fact of divine companionship because another man professes to know nothing of it. The Bible has proved itself to be "a book of final values for all who would live nobly," and it cannot be deprived of its significance by those who will not yield to its divine imperatives. A man may deliberately hurl himself from the top of the Hibernia Bank building; he goes to his certain death in the street below, but the deep-laid foundations of the building remain unshaken. Good men and good women—they are the bulwark against which the forces of evil hurl themselves in vain.

IN DEBT TO OUR SCHOOLS.

If we should undertake to write the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, without any account of the contributions our schools and colleges have made to its life, we should have to leave out the record of some of the greatest achievements the church has accomplished. Christian education is so essentially a part of the work of the Christian church that we can scarcely think of one without thinking of the other. Certainly no great church of the present day would seriously consider the accomplishment of its task without the help and re-enforcement of its schools and colleges.

We are, then, in debt to these educational institutions for the contribution they have made thus far. In spite of numberless difficulties growing out of small endowment, insufficient equipment, and small teaching forces, they have wrought faithfully, efficiently, nobly, doing the seemingly impossible in the maintenance of their standards and the right training of those committed to their care. The church is in debt to them for what they have done for the church.

But we are in debt to them in a more definite and tangible way. When, after due consideration of the whole situation, the Christian Education Movement was enterprised, a financial campaign was launched for their relief, the response was prompt and, under the circumstances, generous. Thousands of our people definitely pledged specific amounts, to be paid promptly at specified times. Relying upon these pledges—and who will say that they should not have taken them at their face value?—our schools entered upon programs of enlargement and expansion that had become vitally necessary if they were to continue to fulfill their mission. These pledges were counted among their available assets, and they proceeded accordingly, as they ought to have done.

Yet we face the fact to-day that many of those pledges are past due and unpaid. The obligations voluntarily assumed to enable our educational institutions to function as they should are, many of them, unmet, and our educational system is feeling the strain of these unpaid debts more keenly than our people seem to realize. These pledges are a debt, and the only way to discharge the debt is to pay the pledges.

The payment of a debt is not a matter of expediency, but of principle. The meeting of an obligation should not be governed by convenience, but by conscience. The present time has been specifically set apart for the collection of all the pledges now due, and the appeal is to every one who has made a pledge. Now is the time to PAY.

"THE FORGOTTEN MAN."

Do you read every week page 6 of the Advocate—"The Call of the Conference Claimants"? If you do, you have been impressed lately by the encouraging reports that are coming of the launching of the special effort in behalf of the superannuates in the Annual Conferences that have already met. In every one of them interest has reached a high pitch, the plan proposed by the Board of Finance has been accepted, and assurances have been given that the special effort will be carried forward to a successful consummation.

The church is awake as never before to its obligations to the men who, having borne the heat and burden of the day, are now incapable of further active service, whose names have been placed on the "Honor Roll" as heroes of the Cross. The tragedy of their unrequited toil and of their helpless old age has become unbearable, and the church has set about making adequate provision for their needs. Never has a more just or a more appealing cause been brought to the attention of the church.

At the approaching sessions of the North Mississippi, the Mississippi, and the Louisiana Conferences, this cause will be presented in detail, just as it has been presented to the Conferences that have already held their sessions, and their endorsement and promise of hearty co-operation will be asked. We have no fear of the outcome. Not only will the preachers enter enthusiastically into the plan—and not for selfish reasons, either—but the laymen also will give it their endorsement and pledge of support. It is a cause that appeals to the laymen. Many of them have wondered why it is that a church that has been so signally blessed by divine favor should neglect in their old age those who have been the agents of its prosperity; and they have determined that this reproach shall no longer lie against the church that has ministered so richly to their spiritual welfare. We venture to prophesy that the laity of Louisiana and Mississippi will respond as enthusiastically to the appeal of this cause as that of any other section of the church. We are perfectly confident that they will assume and pay their share of the proposed $10,000,000 endowment fund for the support of our Conference claimants.

THOSE PROFITEERS!

It would seem that the appalling disaster in Japan, in which thousands of people lost their lives and millions of dollars' worth of property was destroyed, would touch the heart of universal mankind and loose the springs of pity that would flow as a beneficent stream of mercy toward the distressed nation. So it has, in a general way; yet the Secretary of Commerce has found it expedient to enter a protest against those commercial vultures who would coin the blood of their mangled fellow-men into gold by extorting a huge profit from their dealings with those who are helpless in their distress. They may be beyond the reach of human justice, but, thank God, they will have to stand in judgment before the Eternal Lawgiver, whose decree is always uttered: "inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these least, ye did it not unto me."

WHAT MAKES A GOOD SERMON.

A good many people seem to think that the effectiveness of a sermon is dependent almost altogether upon the amount of preparation the preacher puts into it and the manner of its delivery. We grant that these do have a good deal to do with a sermon—preparation more, of course, than delivery. But it takes more than a carefully wrought out discourse and a pleasing delivery to make a good sermon—it takes attentive, helpful listeners.

We offer no excuse for the preacher who does not half try—and we have none for the congregation that will not half listen. The preacher, even at his best, cannot preach a properly effective sermon to a congregation that is not at its best. The congregation is not simply a receptacle into which the message of the hour is to be poured; it ought to be in a receptive mood, of course, but it ought also to be a contributor to the service. Anyway, if the hearer has not put a thing into the sermon, he has no right to complain if he does not get something out of it. "Take heed, therefore, how ye hear," is no idle injunction.

THE FAITH THAT SAVES.

By Rev. J. E. Godbey, D.D.

When Paul said to the Philippian jailer, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved," he had in mind no creed formulary, but simply the claim of Jesus Christ to be the promised Messiah, and the Savior of man. Jesus was to be received as the plenary representative of the Father, whom to trust and obey was to fulfill all God's will. The best expression of the faith, before it received articulate and philosophic form at the hands of theologians, was in the statement of the Samaritan woman, "We know that Messias cometh which is called Christ, and when he is come, he will tell us all things," and it accepts Jesus as the promised Messiah. Paul's answer to the jailer was not doctrinal, or theological, but moral. True, it presented the doctrine that Jesus was an all-sufficient Teacher and Savior; but it was a test of will which was made; a challenge to enter the Master's school and become an obedient disciple. It is as if he had said, "Why ask me how to be saved? I accept Christ as all in all; do you the same." One may thus accept Jesus as a Savior who has much to learn. As a child enters school, so he enters as a follower of the divine Teacher. The saving element of such faith is simple surrender to the will of Christ; as who should say, "Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest."

One may have a systematic theology about Christ and his teaching without being obedient to his will or trusting in him for salvation. Many sincere seekers after salvation are confused at this point. Their teachers set before them dogmas of theology instead of the personal trust and moral obligation which are expressed in the teaching of the Master. They step between Christ and the seeking soul, and instead of Jesus' words, they present their own theories. It is not belief in Christ, but belief about Christ which they present. In this way, dogmatic intolerance and persecuting ecclesiasticism come to stand for the cause and kingdom of the Christ, who is ever calling, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," and in conscious fellowship with whom the soul only can find rest. The persecuting spirit which made martyrs of the holiest men still develops in contentions about orthodoxy and the authority of the church.

Coming to Jesus and entering his school to learn of him, what does he teach us? We meet a teacher who claims to be in perfect communion and accord with the divine Father and, so far as human duty is concerned, an unerring teacher of the Father's will. Jesus had not a shadow of misgiving as to how men should live; therefore, to believe on him is salvation. That is not to accept dogmas about the Trinity, the hypostatic union, or a theory of atonement. When we consider Jesus' teaching, we find him making the test of salvation in our love of obedience to duties which meet us in the common sphere of human life. To love God with all the heart is truly the whole duty of man; but in its expression, all duty is social, and respects man's conduct with man. The motive which controls it must be an all-embracing confidence in a divine scheme through which all good is mediated. A divine Father ruling over all men as his children is a conception to regulate all duties. It is a doctrine upon which to build the kingdom of heaven.

Now, Jesus' school is one in which we hear no theories, philosophies or reasoned conclusions, but simple precepts such as he spoke in his sermon on the Mount, "Blessed are the pure in heart, the peacemakers, the meek, they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, the merciful and such as bear persecution for righteousness." Against such teaching there can be no cavil or doubt. About its divine authority no difference of opinion can arise. Its authority does not even depend upon the teacher who announces it. It is God's everlasting truth, which man cannot deny. The teacher says. "The word is not mine; but the Father's which sent me." It is axiomatic truth addressed to man's moral sense. Jesus always assumes that his precepts cannot be challenged, and that men put them aside only because they hate the truth. He says, "He that heareth my word shall know the truth." He also says of those who reject his word, "I know you that the love of truth is not in you." There is much honest doubt of the things which we preach, but there could be no infidelity if we kept to the teaching of Jesus. The authority of Jesus' word is in itself. He says that his word shall judge us at the last day. When he says, "Blessed are the pure in heart," we must say it is false, or answer to it. His authority is in the truth itself. Here we are brought back from the confusion of sophists to the true process of thought. We do not begin with a revelation and proceed from it to establish conscience and the moral sense; but, finding in ourselves a conscience, and ideas of right and wrong, we ask, "Whence comes this voice which speaks in our own breast?" From conscience we set out to find God, and when he speaks to us, we know his voice. To a being having no moral sense by which to judge duty, no revelation of duty can be given. It is needless to give a lamp to a blind man.

In the Master's school we learn that while love of God fulfills the law, all definite duties, all actions, all tests of the love of God must be found in our relations with men. Therefore, the whole duty of man is capable of the statement, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The second commandment is like the first; in it the first is duplicated.

Jesus is very clear in teaching us that the love of God cannot be expressed abstractly in meditation, emotion or faith. He will recognize no vital union with himself that is not expressed in character. One may declare, and that truly, that faith is the vital bond and saving principle of spiritual life; but that bond is invisible. No man can judge it directly. We must demand and give proof of its existence in character and conduct. Faith is not a principle if it does not control life. To control life is its purpose, and therein is its whole value. It is the root principle. As the tree is planted for its fruit, so faith has meaning in fruit alone. We judge Christ's followers by character, and not by profession. For this we have the warrant of the divine Teacher. How strongly does he emphasize this point: "Not every one that sayeth unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit; therefore, by their fruit ye shall know them."

Jesus teaches us that he will disown, as strangers, in the judgment, such as claim his favor for spiritual gifts to prophesy and cast out devils, but will welcome into his kingdom such as have found a loving ministry so native to them that they did not even account it a service of God to give forth spontaneously the deeds of loving hearts. Our doctrine of salvation by faith would run into antinomianism if there were not teachers to rise up and say, "Show me your faith by your works." This is the way Jesus says it: "Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit, so shall ye be my disciples." "If ye continue in my word, then are you my disciples indeed." "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." Nothing can be farther from Jesus' teaching than the idea that there can be faith acceptable to God which does not involve personal submission to Jesus as the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

Jesus' teaching concerning the final judgment and salvation is that men shall be rewarded according to their works, and not their professions, and that they shall give account of every word and deed and secret thing. Therefore, while faith in Christ is the root of spiritual life and the saving principle, the life so hid with Christ in God is not hidden from the world, but shines forth as a candle set on a candlestick or a city set on a hill.

We are brought now to a more strict definition of saving faith as personal acceptance of Jesus as our Savior, for it is just for lack of clear views of saving faith, as Jesus taught it, that confusion arises. Paul said, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved;" Jesus also said, "Come unto me and I will give you rest." Now I will come to Jesus, for I need only to believe. But the Master says, "Except ye repent, ye shall perish." Do I believe on the Lord Jesus Christ? I believe that, then, for the Lord Jesus Christ said it. I will come to him, but now he halts me and says, "Except ye forgive men their trespassses, neither will your Heavenly Father forgive you." Do I believe on the Lord Jesus Christ? I believe that, then, for the Lord Jesus Christ said it. He says, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." I must consent to do this. Jesus does not allow me to believe on him as my personal Savior except in the sense of personal surrender to obey him. How far is this from accepting a doctrinal formula which men call orthodox faith?

Personal trust is an act of the will, but an intellectual conviction is not of the will; it is an idea composite of many reflected ideas and evidences. In so far as a man believes, in the purely intellectual sense, he believes because he must; and to change his belief, argument and not command must be presented. And when a change is produced, it is enforced by the evidence. This sort of faith—improperly so called—is not subject to will, and does not fall within the sphere of faith, as Jesus taught it. And if we here appeal to observation and experience, it will plainly appear that men may believe all the dogmas of theology and not be saved. We may assert the converse of this observation in the fact that there are many true children of God differing and disputing about every intellectual dogma involved in what the theologians call orthodoxy. The distinct point to be made here is, that faith is not the acceptance of dogmas, but submission to obey the will of God as taught by Christ. We are constantly witness to the performances of logical gymnasts who lay down as a major proposition, "Faith governs life." Their second statement presents the creed as expressing what is meant by faith. Their conclusion is, "He that believeth not shall be damned." With familiar platitudes this trick of legerdemain may deceive sincere people. But it evades the issue which Jesus constantly made as to the nature of true faith.

Belief in the sense of conviction is not faith. On historic evidence we believe the events which have marked the progress of our race. These events are not matter of faith, but of belief. Faith is trust of an individual in an individual. Belief of one individual in another is not faith. I believe in Woodrow Wilson, but I have no faith in him. Faith is a personal relation. Mr. Wilson does not know that I exist. But if he should make to me, personally, an offer of good based on my individual acceptance and action, that would be an overture for a personal relation of faith. I would be free to accept that overture or reject it. It would be an appeal to my will. The approval of my judgment would not determine the case, since one is conscious of often rejecting what his judgment approves. That in me which says, "I ought to do," is not that in me which says, "I will do." It is just here that Christ meets every sinner whom he saves. It is here that every sinner is responsible for his own salvation, through an act of faith which is in his own power.

The church has made a mighty struggle to control salvation by its authority. If men can be made to believe that saving faith is only rightly expressed by creed and ritual, then the church can set up shop to monopolize and sell the gifts of salvation. Measures of divine grace can be put up in packages marked, "None genuine without this label," priced and sold, for the support of the priesthood. It was from that tyranny, in the Church of Rome, that Protestantism revolted. But the same conditions of salvation are presented to us if Protestantism formulates a definite creed, and affixes to it the ultimatum, "He that believeth not shall be damned." A Catholic paper, observing upon the demand in certain Protestant quarters for an infallible standard of doctrine, asks who shall furnish this standard in the interpretation of Scripture—an infallible man or an infallible church? and rightly insists that the logic of the situation is return to the Church of Rome.

To conclude this article, we insist that all must recognize that there is a body of truth, which, if not necessary to be fully understood in order to salvation, is important to be understood to give religion its best expression; and the understanding of which will tend to end disputes which proceed from ignorance and misunderstanding. After that larger knowledge of truth we all should seek; and the best progress in the seeking will be made by allowing larger liberty to the individual inquirer. One who claims to follow Christ and casts out devils in his name we will not condemn because he followeth not us. If we seek truth, we must hold as a benefactor the man who, differing from us, shows us our errors and corrects them. We must also understand that our chief business is not to find out more truth, but to put in practice the truth which we already know and teach. It is probable that we all know how to be better Christians than we are. We need to be cultivating our own fields and improving the talent committed to us when the Master comes.

TO THE PASTORS AND PEOPLE OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

Dear Brethren: As president of our Conference Board of Education, kindly permit me to speak in the interest of Educational matters now before us and deserving of our immediate attention.

About three years ago our church launched a great campaign—the Educational Campaign. It was a campaign in behalf of CHRISTIAN EDUCATION and for the support of SOUTHERN METHODIST EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS distinctively under the supervision of the General and Conference Boards of Education.

These splendid men and women to whom our church had entrusted its educational policies made a thorough survey of our educational resources and opportunities, casting up our needs for a general reckoning, and then, thinking to take advantage of a wave of prosperity at that time sweeping over the country, planned a campaign and launched the propaganda upon the bosom of the church.

It was welcomed by the church. People in touch with the situation rejoiced in the hope of a resultant success, and the Annual Conferences, North Mississippi among them, voted to accept the apportionments as made by those informed and at that time in very proper authority. Everybody was happy in the prospect that now our educational interests would be taken care of.

These preparations were made in flush times—other churches and institutions were in like campaigns—the idea was prevalent—but before the active campaign for funds was actually launched there was a sudden change in finances all over the whole country—the great slump had come and our people were in the midst of a panic.

There were many who advised delay in the campaign, but our educational institutions were in need and could not wait—delay meant death to some of them. Thousands of our young men and young women—sons and daughters of Methodist families, and of people who had given to the church the most faithful lives of service and sacrifice—were knocking at the doors of our institutions while these institutions groaned over an overburden—equipment and building and teaching force all inadequate.

Tears were in the eyes of the church.

Then came the immortal moment. After prayer and meditation, there was heroic determination and our church rose to its task. The weeks that followed were weeks of prayerful purpose realized in sacrifice. We were of one mind. It was determined that our SONS and DAUGHTERS should be taken care of, that the Christian Education endeavor of our church should be made to succeed, that this should be done even though some should suffer real want.

The heroic of our nature is thoroughly acquainted with want.

Such was the sturdy resolution of a noble people under most adverse financial conditions in the spring of 1921.

What was true at that time is still true—the reasons that impelled the purpose of sacrifice then have not abated. Institutions, our very own, are struggling for existence, facilities are still wanting, our own sons and daughters are pleading for our church to educate them. Loyal Methodists still want sons and daughters educated at home—among congenial minds with friendly doctrines, in the schools of our own church.

In the face of the evident need, the church should still be in tears.

Three years, just about, have passed over our heads since that financial campaign of 1921. Just how much of the subscription has been paid, we shall not say—little enough.

The third payment is due—some of us have not even paid the first. Our tears are quickly dried—our wants easily altered.

But whatever change has come in our individual attitude, so much of the principle is now involved we cannot alter our expressed determination without serious interference with our standards of honor—the campaign has been made, pledges have been signed, work has been projected, the honor of the church is being used as collateral.

Pledges must be paid up to the point of ability—for conscience's sake.

We shudder at the thought of the possible results to accrue in case of failure.

In the early part of October will be launched an organnized campaign for collections. Will we pay our outstanding subscriptions, or shall we suffer the great educational efforts of our church to meet with failure? This is the question we now must answer.

We will pay. We know our people will pay, if it is at all possible.

In keeping with the dignity, integrity, and prestige of Southern Methodism, we must pay, and our church is still confident.

Help us, O God, in a time like this to be true and noble and determined.

Yours faithfully,

E. NASH BROYLES,

President Conference Board of Education,

North Mississippi Conference.

NEWS FROM MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

The total enrollment up to date is 322. There are 28 young men studying for the ministry, and 27 sons and daughters of ministers. The young ministers who are this year coming to us for the first time are unusually capable and able young men, as shown by their excellent high school records. The ministerial board has been organized and are meeting regularly.

During the past week Dr. P. C. Morgan, who has been holding a four-weeks' revival and Bible Study Campaign at the Capitol Street Church, has conducted a series of evangelistic services at the chapel hour. They aroused great interest on the part of the student body and, we feel, accomplish great good. At the last two services there were more than a hundred pledges to a better life.

The churches of Jackson are vieing with each other in service to the spiritual life of the college, and the Religious Education Department is co-operating fully with the churches in securing religious activity of students in the young people's organizations of the church. More than 135 Millsaps students are enrolled in the Christian service classes of the Sunday schools of the city.

The new members of the faculty are taking up their work with interest and are making a good impression. Pictures of Professor McKnight and Professor Summers will be found elsewhere in this issue.

THE RELIGIOUS LIFE OF PRESIDENT COOLIDGE.

In recent weeks there have been conflicting statements in the press concerning the religious life of President Coolidge.

In order to obtain the exact facts the editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate wrote to the pastor of the First Congregational Church in Washington and received the following reply, which he published in his paper several weeks ago:

Rev. J. M. Rowland, Richmond, Va.

Dear Friend: The morning mail brings several inquiries as to the religious affiliations of President and Mrs. Coolidge. For several days these inquiries have come. As my correspondence is heavy, and I am away from my office and secretary, please allow me the privilege of manifolding my reply; assuring you that my whole heart is with each as I extend fraternal greetings to you.

By ancestry, training, and life-long habits, both President and Mrs. Coolidge belong to the evangelical Congregationl Church. The only difference between them is as to literal church membership. Mrs. Coolidge's father, who recently died, was a deacon in the Congregational Church; she herself has been a member of the Congregational Church since becoming old enough to unite, and together, with her two sons, holds actual membership in the Edwards Congregational Church of their home town, Northampton, Mass.

As yet the President has not, so far as I know, actually formally joined any particular church. There is no reason why he should not, for he is whole-heartedly a Christian believer, openly avowing allegiance to Christ, earnestly seeking to serve Him.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge are never absent from church service on Sunday morning. It is no new habit with them. They are not of shallow nature, but both are of deep religious feeling, of genuine spiritual piety, of strong evangelical religious faith.

Possibly because he has not been literally a member, Mr. Coolidge has refrained heretofore from partaking of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, always remaining, however, and entering spiritually into that service. But last Sunday, as you may imagine to my heartfelt gladness, the President, as well as Mrs. Coolidge, partook of the bread and wine. It was a public manifestation of what in so many other ways he has professed, i. e., that Christ Jesus is his Lord and Saviour.

Catholics, Protestants and Jews will find the President just, impartial, tolerant. Protestant Christians naturally are glad that in their personal lives the President and his noble wife are strong, loyal Protestants, believing in religious liberty to all, and exercising it for themselves in the fellowship of the Evangelical Christian Church,

JAMES NOBLE PIERCE,

Pastor First Congregational Church.

THE LIBRARY.

By Rev. M. B. Sharbrough.

(Some years ago, I found in a certain library an article on Books, which I read carefully, but from which I made no notes. I have not seen the article since, and do not remember the name of the author, or the name of the book in which I found it.

About six years later, I was asked to prepare a paper to be read before the annual meeting of the Library Association, and in response wrote the article published below, on "The Library." I make the above statement, feeling quite sure that I am indebted to the article mentioned for the plan, and in part the scope of my own, though certainly not for style and arrangement. After being read before the Library Association, my article was, by request, published in the Mississippi Educational Advance, but, so far as I know, has not appeared elsewhere.)

The library is a true fairy land. Here the imagination and fancy disport themselves, soaring on boldest wing, even to the delectable mountains beyond the clouds. Here reason mounts her glorious throne, and rules in gorgeous majesty her splendid realm.

Here with the scientist, you can go back into the realm of chaos and ancient night, to the time when God said "Let there be light," and there was light,—watch the birth of suns and worlds, and the formation of stellar systems with their various activities. Or you can explore the hidden depths of the grand old earth, watch its wondrous growth, and search out the beginnings and development of terrestrial life. Do you tire of the depths? Then come to the surface of this wondrous world, and explore with the entomologist the realms of vegetable, animal, and human life. Or with the chemist enter the real wizard's chamber; resolve the earth into its original elements, watch the dance of the atoms, and the vibration of the molecules: watch these atoms as with rythmic movement and harmonious proportions always invariable they combine in the formation of various substances. Do you tire of things, and does your mind crave that which concerns humanity? Then go with the historian, back to the very dawn of tradition, and trace the great movements and mighty deeds of men.

Walk with the Pharaohs as they build the pyramids, and gaze upon the splendid but burdensome civilization of ancient Egypt. Go back beyond that to the Hittite civilization, some of the wonders of which the archeologist has recently brought to light—back with the sacred writer to the days of the flood, to the Tower of Babel, and to the creation of man. Go with Abraham as he journeys from Ur of the Chaldees to the Land of Promise. Go with Moses as he leads the chosen people to the land of Canaan. Watch the building of Solomon's temple in all of its ancient splendor. Live for awhile amid the departed glories of ancient Babylon, Nineveh, and Tyre. Watch the rising glories of ancient Greece. Note her splendid intellectual civilization and see her decline and her humiliation.

Look upon the building of Rome, and watch the growing power of the City upon her Seven Hills, until the whole known world yields to her sway. See the Germanic hordes as they break in upon her kingdom and rule like the succeeding waves of the storm-tossed sea, until her civilization is demolished and her rule is broken off from the nations. View with interest and yet with sadness the anarchy and desolation of the medieval times. Then see a wondrous vision—these Germanic hordes take form in the peoples and nations which represent the grandest civilizations of the present time. See them roll back the barbarian and Scythian and the followers of Mahomet by which their civilization and very existence are threatened. Withal note the rise, the fluctuation, the growth of that wondrous Kingdom which, like the little stone cut out of the mountains without hands, is moving on to the filling of the whole world until the "earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

Do you tire of the historian? Then go with the novelist. His way is the easier, and the most exciting. He goes in a flying machine—is a real bird man. Hence, indolent or tired people—and jaded people generally—prefer his company, regardless of the danger. With him you can explore all the realms of fancy, and fly through the whole world of imagination. You can come into touch with all of the sentiment of the race—know its joys and sorrows. You can converse with kings or beggars, masters or slaves. You can hear the whispered sweets of lovers, however secluded their retreat. You can even enter the under-world, if it suits your taste. You can enter into the conspiracies of criminals, or sail the seas with pirates. Or you can converse with saints or sages or kings. You can participate in the diplomacy of states, or sit in the conclave of nations.

Or you may tear yourself away from the novelist and converse with the philosopher. This is more reputable, if not more interesting. To say the least, he is always instructive, if not always conclusive. With him we can acquaint ourselves with the laws of thought and of mind. We can enter the realm of pure thought and busy ourselves with the relations of things, of their ultimate causes, and the ulterior reasons of existence.

Or we can find companionship with the astronomer, and with him can learn of worlds and of suns, and of systems; can study their varied movements and relations, and by means of his spectrum analysis, can even determine something as to their composition.

Or you can enter into communion with the poets. Indeed, they should often be our preferred companions. And yet they are generally neglected for the novelist.

The poets represent the very highest aristocracy of culture. They introduce us to the best from every other department of learning and of thought, and with it they blend almost celestial visions. Would you sit where fancy weaves her finest web, with splendors passing the hues of the rainbow, or the wealth of setting and of rising suns and withal more delicate than the finest needlework, or the rarest touches of the painter's brush? Then commune with the poets. Would you have imagination rise into realms beyond the power of the novelist to lead? Then go with the poets. Would you hear harmonies and symphonies even beyond the reach of music? Listen to the poets. Would you see all of the beauties of the flowers, from the daisy to the bloom of the magnolia? Look with the poets. Would you feel the weird witcheries of insect life and enter into closest sympathy with all the world of life? Feel with the poet. Would you catch all of the splendors of the morning, the glories of the noon, the beauties of the evening glow, and the mysterious magnificence of the night? Look with the poets. Would you have reason rendered more rational, logic more powerful, beauty more beautiful; would you have your emotions stirred to deeper depths; would you gaze upon the noble form of truth, behold ideal loveliness, and hear the music of the spheres? Dwell with the poets.

With all of its privileges, the library is strictly democratic. Neither wealth, nor power, nor station has any pre-eminence here. Its delights are open alike to the rich and the poor, the lofty and the lowly, the illustrious and the obscure. Its only aristocracy is that of the mind, and this is an aristocracy which seeks to take in the whole race, by raising it to its sphere. Indeed, this is the very purpose of the library.

AVOIDING A TANGLE.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

I am not disposed to intrude. I am only concerned that a large contingent of us Methodists be not classed with the adherents of "the Fundamentalist Movement," especially regarding the "premillennial advent" theory. In his reply to Bishop Mouzon appearing in the Advocate of Sept. 27, Brother Lipscomb says:

"In his recent article against the Fundamentalists, the Bishop again opposes the doctrine of the 'Imminent Physical Second Coming of Christ,' which doctrine is so obviously the teaching of Christ, Paul, Peter, John, Jude, that it is unthinkable how men professing to believe the Bible can question or deny it."

Does my Brother Lipscomb mean that he who denies the theory of the "Imminent Physical Second Coming of Christ," i. e., the Premillennial Second Coming of Christ, contradicts "the teaching of Christ, Paul, Peter, John and Jude?" I challenge the statement. My brother has no right to confound the coming of Christ "to judge the quick and the dead," as our Creed declares, with a Premillennial coming that cannot be proved from the Bible, is not set down in any doctrinal statement of Methodism, and is believed by a very small contingent of Methodist people. I know—and our brother ought to know—that in every one of these passages where "coming" is used which the Premillennial Adventists invoke to prove their theory, the Greek word is parousia, and means presence. (Maybe some one will ask —I heard it asked yesterday—"Did not two angels at his ascension say to his disciples: "This * * * Jesus * * * shall so come in like manner as ye beheld him going?" The Greek words here translated, "in like manner" are hon tropon, and the phrase occurs seven times in the New Testament, and only in this place is it translated, "in like manner"—"as surely as" would be a better translation—"as surely as ye have seen him go, so surely shall he return" would be an accurate translation.)

I know, and our brother ought to know, that our Lord on "that dreadful night before his death" said to his heart-broken disciples: "A little while, and ye behold me no more; and again a little while and ye shall see me." He had told them of the Holy Spirit coming in his stead, representing him. He had quieted Philip's anxiety by saying: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father; * * * and "I am in the Father, and the Father in me." Then fifty days later, or thereabouts—the death and resurrection being passed —he said to these same loved, loving and anxious eleven: "Lo, I am with you all the days, even unto the consummation of the age;" and I am sure that I—that all of us who love "his presence" —are included in this "YOU;" for "the consummation of the age" is still in the future.

To my thinking, the saddest thing said by John is this: "He came unto his own, and his own received him not;" the sweetest thing: "The Master is come and calleth for thee." Why should we, his own who love him, stand looking into the unanswering heaven to see him coming, when he is here?

I love to sing:

"Joy to the world, the Lord is come;
Let earth receive her king;
Let every heart prepare him room,
And heaven and nature sing."

I am sure that Bishop Mouzon and the great—very great—majority of Southern Methodists "steadfastly believe" what we say every Sunday: "I believe * * * in Jesus Christ * * * conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary * * * was crucified, dead and buried; the third day he rose from the dead, and ascended into heaven * * * from thence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead." With all our hearts we believe it; and yet we understand that in a sense, very much stressed, very sweet and blessed, "He is with us all the days."

"Why do you ask and question?
He is ever coming to me—
Morning and noon and evening—
Thank God, I have eyes to see:
And my daily load grows lighter,
And my daily cares grow sweet—
Oh! the Master is near—the Master is here—
I have only to sit at his feet."

For nearly two millenniums this teaching that he will "come to judge the quick and the dead" has been unquestioned by practically the whole Christian world. It is clearly set forth in Matt. 25:31-46, in Rev. 20:11-15, and clearly indicated in Eccl. 12:14; Matt. 19:28; Acts 17:31, and numerous other passages. All of these point to a Christ coming to "judge the world"—"at the end"—in no sense a "premillennial coming." Let us not get into a tangle. We all believe in a coming of Christ—let us not number it—the meaning of Heb. 9:28 is much disputed (Dr. Adam Clarke and other learned expositors insist that it refers to the Judgment Day)—but cannot be cited to prove a "premillennial coming"—we all believe in a coming. Let us not dispute about it! Some of the saintliest people I have ever known did not believe in the Premillennial Advent theory, and some did.

Jackson, Miss.

CERTIFICATES OF HONOR FOR CHURCHES PAYING THEIR CENTENARY.

Honor Flags are given to churches that pledged an amount equal to, or exceeding their quota alloted them in the Centenary Campaign in 1919. It is, therefore, very fitting that Honor Certificates be awarded the churches that pay in full the amount they pledged.

Several churches in the Mississippi Conference are ready to receive their Honor Certificates, and they will be presented at the Annual Conference at Gulfport by Bishop Ainsworth.

There are a number of other churches that have paid nearly the entire amount. Why not finish now and rush the remittance to us, so we can include your church in the number to receive Honor Certificates?

The basis upon which these Certificates will be awarded is as follows:

First—Gold Seal Certificates are to be awarded to churches which pledged more than the amount of the quota and have paid the pledge in full; also churches pledging less than the quota but which have over-paid the quota.

Second—Red Seal Certificates are to be awarded to churches which pledged an amount equal to the assigned quota and have paid the pledge in full.

Third—Certificates without seal are to be awarded to churches which pledged less than the quota, but have paid the pledge in full.

These Certificates are awarded on the basis of the individual pledge and do not include Sunday school payments except in cases where the Sunday school pledge was reported as an individual pledge.

All Certificates are issued from the General Treasurer's office after proper investigation and report has been made by our auditor.

I would appreciate reports from all the treasurers, with their remittance before Conference, so I may include in my report for Conference.

Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS,

Field Secretary-Treasurer.

TO THE PASTORS AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Co-Workers: I am to show on my chart at Annual Conference the churches arranged in four groups, as follows:

First—All churches which have paid their Centenary pledges in full.

Second—All churches which have paid four-fifths of their Centenary pledge.

Third—All churches which have paid three-fifths of their pledge.

Fourth—All churches which have paid less than three-fifths of their pledge.

In which group will your church be? This will depend in some measure at least upon the activity during the next three weeks in collections. Please collect all you can, and send all money collected to me, in order that I may give your church credit.

Thanking you for your co-operation, with every kind wish, I am,

Yours for service.

W. D. HAWKINS,

Field Secretary-Treasurer.

AVAILABLE FOR REVIVAL MEETINGS.

Dear Brother Carley: Owing to the fact that I have had to postpone a fall meeting, I have an open date beginning Oct. 28 and closing Nov. 11. If any pastor needs a helper for a revival during that time, I should be glad to give him the time.

I have a large gospel tent, seating capacity for 2,000 people, and now offer my service to any town or church for united campaign work. Any one desiring my assistance may write me at Hattiesburg, Miss.

The Lord has greatly blessed my efforts this year. Hundreds have been saved, and thousands of church people have been blessed in our services.

Yours fraternally,

JAMES M. SMITH.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: The time for our meeting will soon be here. We are praying for a great session. Gulfport will put herself out for your comfort and pleasure, but we will not be able to furnish entertainment for any besides the members of the Conference and the different boards. We wish we could take all, but cannot. Let the presiding elders who have not already done so send in the names of delegates, etc., to W. L. Linfield at once.

Come praying for a great Conference.

Your brother,

W. M. SULIVAN.

Your Christian Education Pledge—Why Did You Make It?

BECAUSE Christian Education is essential to our civilization and national safety.
BECAUSE American education is in grave danger of becoming materialistic and Godless.
BECAUSE it is the Church's responsibility to make education positively Christian, and Southern Methodism should do her full share.
BECAUSE you wanted to help save our schools and colleges from disaster and ruin.
BECAUSE these schools furnish practically all of our preachers, missionaries and Christian workers.
BECAUSE the world needs Christian leaders in all walks of life.
BECAUSE your beloved Church called, and, as loyal Methodists, you responded.

For these and other reasons you made your pledge. Have you paid it? Surely, you will not let it become just "a scrap of paper." On the prompt payment of these pledges depends the success and future of our schools. By every consideration of honor and urgent need, you should pay your pledge promptly.

Pay Your Christian Education Pledge!

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

A DAY AND A NIGHT AT THE SOUTHWEST MISSOURI CONFERENCE.

Returning from the Kentucky Conference, I arrived at St. Louis on Sept. 10 and was very glad to have a few days in the office to look after important matters which had accumulated during my almost continued absence for three weeks, visiting five Annual Conferences. The close application both day and night enabled me to get everything in good shape in time to take the Katy Flyer for Nevada, Mo., which landed me safely early Thursday morning, Sept. 20, in Nevada, where I found the Southwest Missouri Conference in full swing.

The Veterans Make Report.

The Conference opened its second day's session on Thursday with hard-working Bishop W. F. McMurry in the chair. After an uplifting devotional address by Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, the names of the superannuates were called one by one, and each of those present was given an opportunity to speak a few words. As I sat there watching them rise in turn out of their physical infirmities to speak, heard their words brokenly expressed concerning their love and loyalty to the church, and felt the tug of their abiding faith, notwithstanding the deprivations that were upon them, my very soul went out to them in tenderness, and I girded myself anew for even greater abandon to the task of providing for them a comfortable support. Not one uttered a word of complaint or criticized the church even by an implication for her neglect of him. If any referred indirectly to the hardships of superannuation, the situation of distress was quickly screened from view by additional glowing words of faith and confidence that the Lord would provide. These grand old men can never know the full measure of my love for them and my devotion to the work which looks to give them relief, and my soul yearns daily for a similar devotion expressed in their behalf by every preacher in active service throughout the whole church.

A Picture Worthy of an Artist's Skill.

Seated there on the platform close to the right hand of the presiding bishop was the grand old veteran, Rev. Dr. C. C. Woods. His eyes were a little more dim and his body a little more bent than when I saw him last. He leaned upon his cane and seemed to be straining all the faculties of his being to catch every word uttered by any speaker. His face, though furrowed by wrinkles of many hard years of service, reflected the light of heaven. My mind went back through the years to catch up again in memory the voice of the silver-tongued Woods which thrilled and inspired the people in so many churches where he served and to feel the lift of his facile pen which led the preachers of Missouri through sunshine and storm while he was editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate. He is superannuated now and is quietly and sweetly awaiting the last summons. I thought what a pity it was that a man like this, having given to the church fifty-five years of active service, should in the days of his old age and physical infirmities receive from the church from all sources the pitiful annual allowance of $273.67.

Such an amount is not even enough to pay the rent for a humble cottage to protect him against the heat and cold. If by chance he can stretch this sum to pay the rent, pray tell me how is the dear man to purchase food and raiment for himself and wife? His case is not an isolated one or an exception, but it is similar to hundreds of others that could be selected from our nearly one thousand superannuated preachers. Will the church continue to neglect such men? Can she fail to support the special effort for superannuate endowment when said effort has as its objective a comfortable old-age support for men like this veteran of the Lord?

Bearers of Good Tidings.

Promptly at 10:30 Bishop McMurry announced that in five minutes the representatives of the Board of Finance would present to the Conference the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment. He requested that all preachers and members of the Conference who were outside of the Conference room be advised of this fact and urged to be in their places to hear what was to be spoken on the subject. My heart went pit-a-pat with joy and appreciation as I saw the outside members in ones and twos coming through the several doors of the auditorium in response to the announcement. Bishop U. V. W. Darlington delivered the inspirational address, and it was most pleasing to see how thoroughly he captured the Conference with his wit and pathos as he spoke most appealingly concerning the call of the "forgotten man." The preachers all love Bishop Darlington, and they should, for he is their friend. When he had concluded his splendid address, I was introduced to present the plan of the special effort. It is not to be expected that ordinary human mortals, especially preachers, having listened to a wonderful address such as Bishop Darlington's, would find it possible to sit patiently for another forty minutes to listen to the likes of me, but they did. I watched the rascals closely, and I was unable to observe a single one of them with body bent low, head hanging lower, and stepping as if walking on eggs sneakin' out. They stayed with me while I gave them the analytical details of the method of procedure. Thus for fully an hour and a half those preachers and lay members sat there listening intently to our presentation. In the light of this fact I am sure that determined resolutions were made by every one present to do a faithful and honest part by the program for the benefit of the "forgotten man." Bishop McMurry concluded the program of presentation with a few pointed remarks on matters that had not been referred to by the other speakers. His confident attitude toward the great movement and his contagious expectancy for its outcome proved him a most worthy president of the great Board which has the leadership of this special effort.

A Chat With a Benefactor.

After lunch at the hotel, I sat down by that princely layman, Mr. E. T. Webb, of Webb City, Mo. Last February this brother gave $13,000 to the Southwest Missouri Conference Superannuate Endowment Fund and placed it in trust with the Board of Finance. It is yielding six per cent annually, and at this rate it will supplement the annual support of the claimants of said Conference in the amount of $780. I told Brother Webb that he never would be able to realize the full significance of this splendid gift until he got home to heaven and was surrounded by hundreds of sainted superannuated preachers and widows of preachers telling him about it. He replied that he had never made a gift to anything in his life that gave him more pleasure. As I watched the movements of his dear, good face while he was speaking the evident satisfaction playing there fully confirmed his words. God bless you, Brother Webb, and make his face to shine upon you in all of your ways and give you peace, and may the same spirit which moved you to do this generous act in behalf of a cause so sacred be caught up by many others throughout the whole church in such measure that they, too, will be led to do likewise!

A Presiding Elder's Testimony.

It is funny but true that the best-dispositioned presiding elder in the whole church is likely to appear prepossessed, nervous, worried, and unapproachable while the Annual Conference is in session. We should not criticize the poor dears too much for this and for the reason that this state of them at Annual Conference time is due to the fact that they are overburdened with anxiety for the welfare of the church and the preachers whom they represent. I sidled around by one of these boys and asked him to give me his honest opinion about the outlook for the special effort movement in his district and in the other districts of his Conference. As I recall, this is what he said: "Todd, we are struggling with many unpaid obligations of one sort or another, but I give you my word that there is but one thought on the part of the presiding elders—namely, to make a heroic effort to pay the Conference quota for superannuate endowment in full. I sincerely believe we will succeed. You can absolutely count on me in whatever relation I may be situated to do my level best." I slapped him on the shoulder. Then I said: "Bully for you, Tom. I knew you would do it, and I believe what you believe about all the other preachers in the Southwest Missouri Conference. The truth is, I believe that all the preachers of the whole church feel this way about it. They know that this opportunity has come just this one time in the whole history of our church, and they realize that it will not come again to this generation. Under the circumstances they cannot be true to themselves or to their aged brothers if they fail to do their dead level best."

The Flash of a Two-Edged Sword.

At the night service I stood for an hour and a half with others crowding in to hear the inimitable Dr. M. N. Waldrip deliver in behalf of the worn-out preachers of the church a powerful address entitled "Knights of the Sacred Scar." The flaming words of the speaker went home. The lack of space forbids further comment, except to state that Waldrip's wonderful address was a fitting climax to a day in the Southwest Missouri Cnoference spent almost entirely in the interest of the "forgotten man."

JANE'S SECRET.

"What can be the matter, Phyllis?"

"Nothing at all is the matter."

Phyllis hurried down the walk so that Jane should not see the sudden tears in her eyes. She did not like to cry.

Jane followed Phyllis, deep in thought. A secret is a terrible thing, especially when you can't tell it to your best friend. Jane knew that Phyllis felt bad and she was sorry, but she couldn't tell her this secret yet.

When the children reached the school yard Jane was quickly surrounded by three or four girls. Phyllis went off by herself.

After school Phyllis and Jane had a great deal of fun making paper-doll clothes. Jane had several sheets of tissue paper, blue and yellow and pink. She had even found some plaid paper for trimmings. With cutting and fitting and pasting the little girls soon made the paper into dresses.

"I do love paper dolls," said Phyllis. "Some times I think I had rather have them than real dolls. I asked mother to give me only paper dolls for my birthday."

"That's to-morrow, isn't it?" asked Jane, and she smiled to herself.

"Will you come over after school? Mother said I couldn't have a party this year. But she's ordered some ice cream, and maybe there'll be a cake."

Jane had a queer look on her face. "I can't come right after school, Phyllis. I promised Helen I'd go over there."

"Helen didn't ask me."

"I—I know."

"But it's my birthday."

"I'm sorry," said Jane; but she didn't look sorry.

Phyllis jumped to her feet. "If you don't like me any more, I'm going home."

She ran out of the yard.

All the next day at school Phyllis kept away from Jane and from Helen. More than once she saw them giggling and talking together, but every time she came near them they grew quiet.

She felt hurt and went home all by herself. Phyllis had a habit of sulking when things did not go to please her, and, even though to-day was her birthday and there was ice cream at home, she circled round the house to the back yard. She could do something to make those girls feel bad, and she intended to do it.

The paper dolls!

Lightly she ran across the back yard and down a side street to Jane's playhouse. She knew just where everything was. She picked up a box of colored papers that she had decided to burn or tear or spoil in some way. But when she took the cover off the box a scrap of white paper fluttered to the floor. She thought it was a paper-doll dress and stooped to pick it up, but then she saw that it was a note.

"Be sure to be on time," it said. "Won't it be a lark! Mrs. Cummins said—" The rest was torn off.

Mrs. Cummins? That was Phyllis' mother. What did she know about all this? Phyllis hadn't told her that the girls had a secret. Slowly she put back the box of paper dolls. She would go home and ask her mother what the note meant. Slowly and thoughtfully she walked up the front walk and opened the front gate.

"Surprise! Surprise!" a dozen merry voices shouted.

Then Phyllis realized what the note had meant and why the girls had avoided her and why Helen had not asked her to play. A surprise party! For her! Of course! It was her birthday.

Jane was hugging her tight. "Come on, Phyllis. The table is all set. There's a great big cake, and you are to have the first blow at the candles."

Of course it was intended that Phyllis Cummins should be the happiest little girl there, because it was her birthday and her party; but she wasn't, because she felt ashamed of herself.—Marguerite Murphy, in the Youth's Companion.

SIZE AND STRENGTH OF DOGS.

The largest dog I have ever heard of was the St. Bernard, Plinlimmon—weight 210 pounds, and height (measured at the shoulder) 34½ inches. When we consider mere bulk and weight, the St. Bernard is unquestionably the largest breed of dog, though some others are stronger—anyway, seem to be, because of more pep and adaptability.

Many people will tell you that the mastiff is the world's largest dog, probably because this breed is known to have been used years ago for draft purposes. The mastiff is a strong dog, and a useful one, but he is not, on the average, as heavy as a St. Bernard. The common impression that Newfoundlands are very large comes from the stories of their rescue work in the water and on the mountains. Their size is easily surpassed by that of several other breeds.

Of course, the Great Dane is a big dog—and "all meat," too, astonishingly muscular and powerful, and not a bit slow to exercise his great strength. One breeder tells of locking a Great Dane in a barn and seeing the dog tear the door completely down to get out. A few instances of 34 inches at the shoulder have been recorded, but usually Danes are considerably below this in height.

The most magnificent pair of dogs I ever saw, from the viewpoint of size, strength and efficiency, were "Zero" and "Arctic," huskies brought to Seattle from "north of 65." Each weighed 120 pounds, and together they could draw a sled weighted with 1,000 pounds of freight. On some occasions Mr. Scottle, owner and driver, found it necessary to load each dog with a pack of 100 pounds, and as a reward gave them a daily feed of twenty pounds of moose meat.

Any ordinary dog of average size is much stronger than is commonly supposed. A 40-pound bull terrier will drag a 200-pound man all over town unless the man wraps the lead cord around a post or resorts to some other stratagem. The dog's feet are better prepared for gripping the ground, and he has more of them, four as compared with two, four points of contact with the earth, better traction than man.

I have referred to the strength of the northern sled dogs. Not all of them are as big as Zero and Arctic, but they are all surprisingly strong. Even the Eskimo dog, regarded as too light for freighting purposes, does valiant service, and the Indian dog, being larger, makes a still better "horse." However, the huskies are the premier sled dogs. Weighing, on the average, 80 to 90 pounds, and with the fighting spirit and determination of an African buffalo, they do not know what it is to give up. Four of them will draw a load of 600 pounds, and go 40 miles a day—50 or 60 under pressure.—L. E. Eubanks, in Our Dumb Animals.

"TIME OUT."

Absent-Minded.

"Carson is the most absent-minded chap I ever saw." "What's he been doing now?" "This morning he thought he had left his watch at home, and then proceeded to take it out of his pocket to see if he had time to go home and get it." "But he doesn't beat the man who went out of his office and put a card on the door saying he would be back at 3 o'clock, and finding that he had forgotten something, went back to the office, read the notice on the door and sat down on the stairs to wait until 3 o'clock."—Kind Words.

He Used Speed.

A guest in a Cincinnati hotel was shot and killed. The negro porter who heard the shooting was a witness at the trial.

"How many shots did you hear?" asked the lawyer.

"Two shots, sahr," he replied.

"How far apart were they?"

"'Bout this way," exclaimed the negro, clapping his hands with an interval of about a second between them.

"Where were you when the first shot was fired?"

"Shinin' a gemman's shoes in the basement of de hotel."

"Where were you when the second shot was fired?"

"Ah was passing de Big Fo' depot."—Exchange.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Our Board of Missions reported on Oct. 12 that $46,281.33 had been received for the Japanese Relief Fund.

The Methodist Episcopal Church suffered a loss of about $1,000,000 (gold) in the recent earthquake in Japan.

Rev. Paul H. Grice, of Johns, Miss., has received 93 members into the church this year. All indications point to a fine rounding out of the year's work.

Rev. T. B. Winstead, of Carthage, Miss., reports that the work goes well on his charge. He is expecting to be able to make a good report at Conference.

The second session of the Shreveport District Standard Training School is in session this week. Six courses are offered under competent instructors.

One of the especially attractive features of the Big Brothers' Class, Greenville, Miss., is the orchestra. Good music is a tremendous asset in the work of the church.

Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Boykin, of Ponchatoula, La., accompanied by their fine young son, James, were visitors to New Orleans on Saturday of last week. Brother Boykin gave a fine account of the work of the church at Ponchatoula.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, our pastor at Durant, Miss., issued a printed appeal to his people for the observance of Work Day for the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage, on Saturday, Oct. 13. We are sure his appeal met with a generous response.

The officers and teachers of the Methodist church and Sunday school at Mer Rouge, La., recently passed highly commendatory resolutions concerning their pastor, Rev. J. R. Roy, who has served them so faithfully for the past four years.

The Department of Religious Education of Trinity College, Durham, N. C., now employs three full-time professors, two part-time professors, and three assistants. The enrollment in the Department is 567.

Rev. B. P. Fullilove requests us to make the following announcement: "Those desiring to communicate with me will find me at 1320 Tate Street, Corinth, Miss. Some of our preachers have never found out that I took the superannuate relation last fall. Please take due notice of the above address and govern yourselves accordingly."

The fourth quarterly conference of the Washington charge, Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference, adopted strong resolutions of appreciation of the work of the presiding elder, Rev. J. R. Jones, who has served the district so faithfully for the past four years.

Rev. C. K. Smith, the faithful and popular pastor of our church at Pineville, La., was the recipient last week of a brand-new, up-to-date Ford car as an expression of the appreciation of his people.

A church-wide social was given at the Felicity Street Methodist Church, this city, on Friday evening of last week, under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Society. It was largely attended and was a very delightful occasion.

The Methodist Preachers' Meeting of New Orleans tendered Mr. Henry H. Ahrens, newly appointed religious editor of the Times-Picayune, a luncheon on Monday of this week. The occasion was a very delightful one. Mr. Ahrens is pre-eminently qualified for the position he holds.

The Lake Charles American-Press of Oct. 8 gave a full account of the Promotion Day exercises of the Broad Street Methodist Sunday school on the previous day. The service was attended by one of the largest congregations that ever assembled in that historic church.

At the fourth quarterly conference of the Ville Platte charge, New Orleans District, Louisiana Conference, the Bayou Chicot church reported all its assessments paid in full. Bayou Chicot is the oldest Methodist church in Louisiana, having been established in 1814. Rev. E. V. Duplantis is the pastor.

Rev. Robert A. Clark, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, is having a great pastorate at Union Avenue Methodist Church, Memphis, Tenn. During the two years he has been there, he has received about 600 members into the church. A great church building is now in process of erection, which will probably be ready for occupancy next February.

A press dispatch to one of the New Orleans daily papers on Tuesday of this week announced the death of Rev. W. G. Burks, pastor of the Methodist church at Kossuth, Miss., on Saturday of last week. We have no details. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the family and loved ones of our deceased brother. We trust we shall have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

A note from Rev. J. W. Pearson, recently transferred from Mansfield, La., and appointed pastor of the St. Paul Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Springfield, Mo., states that he has reached his new field of labor, where he has been cordially received. Brother Pearson speaks in the kindest terms of his association with the Louisiana brethren and of the fine people of Mansfield.

A Constitutional Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association in North America will be held at Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 17-26. The Convention is called by order of the triennial International Convention of the North American Associations, held last November. It is instructed "to study all questions affecting the general polity of the movement, and of the organization, relationships, and functions of the Associations and their general agencies; and to present its findings to the Associations for their action, through referendum vote."

Rev. R. S. Walton, pastor of our Texas Avenue Church, Shreveport, La., requests us to make the following announcement: "Mrs. Olive Millsaps, who has been a student of the Moody Bible Institute, is open for further engagements through the fall and winter months. She conducts singing in revivals and gives Bible lessons and special children's meetings, and has been assisting Evangelist Andrew Johnson, of Wilmore, Ky., in meetings in Ohio. Her address is: Care First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La."

STORY OF A FAMOUS HYMN.

(The following story of the origin of the famous hymn, "The Rock That Is Higher Than I," appeared in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch about twenty years ago. It was clipped from that paper at that time by Captain John L. Collins, of Coffeeville, Miss., who has kindly furnished it to the Advocate for publication.—Editor.)

THE ROCK THAT IS HIGHER THAN I.

O sometimes the shadows are deep,
And rough seems the path to the goal;
And sorrows, sometimes how they sweep,
Like tempests down over the soul

Chorus—
O then to the Rock let me fly,
To the Rock that is higher than I;
O then to the Rock let me fly,
To the Rock that is higher than I.

O sometimes how long seems the day,
And sometimes how weary my feet;
But toiling in life's dusty way,
The Rock's blessed shadow, how sweet.
Chorus.

Then near to the Rock let me keep,
Or blessings or sorrows prevail;
Or climbing the mountainway steep,
Or walking the shadowy vale.
Chorus.

Erastus Johnson, of Snoqualmie Falls, Wash., author of the words of "The Rock That Is Higher Than I," a gospel hymn that ranks in the estimation of lovers of sacred songs along with "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and is printed in all the leading Gospel hymn books of to-day, visited his brother, Rev. William Johnson, pastor of the Olive Branch Congregational, at his home, 2631 Russell Avenue, St. Louis, last week.

Mr. Johnson is 75 years old, but he is vigorous in mind and body, and works upon his farm, which is at the outskirts of Snoqualmie Falls. He has written many songs—he continues to write them whenever the inspiration seizes him—but, in his own words, "The Rock That Is Higher Than I" is the only one that has achieved a permanent success. He prepared for the Sunday Post-Dispatch the following statement of the circumstances under which that song was written.

By Erastus Johnson.

A convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of Pennsylvania was held at Carlyle in that State, Sept. 18, 1873, and I was a delegate from the Pittsburgh chapter. John Wanamaker, the merchant prince of Philadelphia, was president of the Association. The meeting was to last three days, beginning on Friday and closing on Sunday.

Wanamaker presided at the first day's session and, while he was in the chair, a message was handed to him announcing that Jay Cooke had failed and that his firm had gone into bankruptcy.

Mr. Wanamaker, at that time, was not so rich as he is now. He had $70,000 in Cooke's bank, and there appeared to be no hope that he would ever recover any of it. The loss of it greatly embarrassed him in his business, and, after reading that message, he was the gloomiest man I had ever seen. He was popular with the delegates, and his misfortune was accepted by them as their misfortune. There was so much gloom in the convention we couldn't transact any business.

I felt called upon to write a hymn that would express the sorrow of the occasion and yet point the brethren to the brighter way. I sat down, took a pen in my hand and the words of "The Rock That Is Higher Than I" came nearly as fast as I could write them. I took the three stanzas to Prof. Fisher, a Philadelphia composer, who was in the convention, and suggested that he write the music.

The first song that Fisher sang on the following day was "The Rock That Is Higher Than I." Fisher had a magnificent voice, and I thought I had never heard anything so good as the song he had made out of my little verses. Wanamaker took it up and caused it to be printed—it went straight to his heart—and, on Sunday, hundreds of copies were distributed. It was sung several times during that day, often enough for all the delegates to become thoroughly familiar with it, and they took it to their homes with them, where they introduced it.

It jumped into immediate popularity everywhere, and it has been pretty generally sung in Protestant churches since. I have had some very interesting experiences through it, and I cannot resist the temptation to relate one of them. A year ago I was sick in a hospital in Seattle, Wash., and a young woman occupied the room alongside of mine. She played frequently upon a guitar, and she never picked up the instrument without singing "The Rock." She sang it well, too. When I was able to hobble around on crutches I sent her word one day that I would call on her. She hadn't the slightest idea why I took the liberty to visit her, but she greeted me very cordially.

I told her I had been so charmed by her music that I felt it would be improper for me to leave the hospital without telling her of the pleasure she had given me. I assured her that I had particularly enjoyed "The Rock."

She answered that it was her favorite and that she thought the man who wrote it must have been a grand man with a grand view of life. After this I was almost too modest to tell her I was its author. Besides, I didn't want to spoil the illusion. But finally I revealed the secret. She was so astonished that I have never yet quite assured myself that she believed me.

I have written many hymns, but this is the only one that has lived. The trouble with our religious songs is they are trash, both in the words and the music. That's why they die away so quickly. The old standard hymns, like those Wesley and Watts wrote, will not die as long as the church of Christ stands. They are meaty and substantial. There is true poetry in them, and that is as essential to a song's life as to a poem's. The music has little to do with their success—although its influence may be great under certain circumstances. If the songs are worth preserving, the music that will embalm them will be written.

There is no soul in nine out of ten of the songs that are written for worship. Their tunes are silly—absolutely without technical value—while their words express nothing.

I am glad to say we are getting back to the good old songs of the days of old—to the inspired poems of Wesley and Watts. A dignified song, such as they wrote, is the best vehicle of worship. There is not much satisfaction in going to church and hearing all the singing by a quartet choir. I do not wish to arraign this manner of worship, for it probably is full of good features that attract the non-church-going class. But I know I want to sing whenever I go to a service and I object if a choir usurps this pleasure. I believe a majority of church-goers are of this mind, and, for that reason, I think a revival of the good old hymns which are especially adapted to congregational singing, is coming.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. D. B. Boddie, Glenmora, La., 2; Rev. S. C. Yates, Carrollton, Miss., 2; Rev. T. B. Cottrell, Vicksburg, Miss., 2; Mrs. Maude W. Martin, Bentonia, Miss., 2; Rev. V. R. Landrum, Harleston, Miss., 2; Rev. J. L. Frazier, Springfield, La., 3; Rev. T. B. Winstead, Carthage, Miss., 7.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—NOTICE.

The new Statistical Blanks are so different from the old forms that it will be well for each pastor to provide himself with a new Pastors' Report Blank before leaving for Conference, that the necessary data may be supplied from the records at home. Order from Lamar & Barton, Nashville, Tenn. Do it now.

J. R. COUNTISS, Secretary.

NOTICE! LOUISIANA PREACHERS!

It will be absolutely necessary that all statistical reports handed in at the approaching session of the Louisiana Conference be on the new forms. There are radical changes in the reports, and no reports will be received unless the new forms are used. It is important, therefore, that each preacher be supplied with the new blanks, and we earnestly request that you order at once your blanks from Lamar & Barton, Nashville, so you may have them in time to thoroughly study them and be prepared to hand in your report at the opening session. This urgent request is for your good, and for the proper preparation of the statistics.

Sincerely,
ROBERT W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary,
Louisiana Annual Conference.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

My Dear Fellow-Worker: The third payment on the Christian Education pledges is due Nov. 1, 1923, which will, also, be the beginning of our Pay-Up Week. I know you are deeply interested in the Christian Education Movement, and want to render all possible assistance. Both our colleges—Centenary and Mansfield—have done a great work for our Conference and will be seriously handicapped and crippled if this money is not raised.

We would offer the following suggestions:

1. Begin work on the list at once. If you need a new list, let us know.
2. See, or write to, every person on the list.
3. Enlist your pastor; get him to announce from the pulpit that the Third Payment is due and urge the people to pay their pledges promptly.
4. If you need help collecting, appoint persons to aid you.
5. Urge every subscriber to make some payment; all that is due, if possible, or as much of it as he can.
6. If any subscriber has died, or changed address, or if any name is wrong on the list, please notify us.

Thanking you for all your service in this great cause, I am,

Yours very truly,
ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.

ARE WE ONE HUNDRED PER CENT CHRISTIANS?

We were talking with a preacher not long ago about practical religion, and he told us that one evening in the prayer meeting he noticed that most of the praying was for blessings to fall upon the man or woman who prayed, and he suggested that they forget themselves for a little while and spend ten minutes in praying only for other people. Possibly he may not have been wise in so limiting the prayers of the people, but at any rate he brought to their attention in striking fashion the truth that most of even our public praying is for ourselves. The ten minutes prayer for others was a pretty slow affair, and no doubt some of the people said the preacher had "spoiled the meeting." Possibly he had, but at least he had drawn the attention of his people to the fact that they were not doing very much praying for other people.

Is this a common fault? If it is, it probably is even more pronounced in private prayer than it is in public prayer, for in the latter for very shame's sake we must pray for other people even if we are not greatly concerned about them. But in private prayer we are under no such compulsion and will probably pray for those things which we greatly desire. Naturally we pray for ourselves; just as naturally and just as fervently we pray for our own well-beloved friends; but outside that charmed circle, whom do we remember in prayer? Do we pray for our church, for our Sunday school, for our pastor, for our day school, for the State, for the empire, for all national friends and foes, for the coming of God's peace and righteousness to every land? The Christian is essentially unselfish; are we one hundred per cent Christian? Are we even fifty per cent Christian?—Christian Guardian.

HAS WORRYING EVER HELPED YOU?

In all your life, did you gain anything, ever get the slightest benefit, from worrying over any situation? Did it ever help you to bear your burden better or to make it lighter? What have all the years of worrying in the past done for you? You know that worrying has done nothing but sap your vitality, lower your courage, weaken your initiative, handicap your executive ability, and distress and confuse your mind, thus unfitting you for clear thinking and decisive acting. It has probably cut off years of your possible life. It has deepened the furrows in your face, whitened your hair, put a drag on your steps, and taken the spontaneity and buoyancy out of your life. It has made you a poorer husband, a poorer father, a poorer friend, a less agreeable and less effective partner and comrade, whether in business or social life. It has crippled your efforts and your business. Multitudes of days have been pretty nearly ruined by worry and anxiety. The fear of disaster, of misfortune, of possible failure, has been your worst enemy. You have harbored it, welcomed it, encouraged it by dwelling upon it, listening to its doubts and dire predictions. Multitudes of people who have harbored it have been ruined by it. It has filled our poorhouses, our insane asylums, our hospitals. Fear is the great human curse.—Orison Sweet Marden, in the New Success Magazine.

Little Willie's father had taken him to Sunday school for the first time, and on the way home, in order to see if the youngster had learned anything, he asked:

"Who was it killed Goliath?"

"I dunno," said Willie. "I was sitting on a back seat and couldn't see."—Exchange.

CHRIST IN THE LIFE OF MAN.

The following, clipped from a recent issue of the Oxford (Miss.) Eagle, gives a brief resume of the sermon preached by the pastor of the Methodist church on the date indicated. It is worth reading:

"The subject of the sermon at the Methodist church next Sunday, Sept. 30, will be: 'The Actual and Potential Christ in the Life of Man'—how he affects the individual and social units of power, vitalizing, invigorating, and inspiring to aims and ends, which is the only feasible plan ever made known to man for a rational solution of life's irrational and amazing difficulties; how he is vitally and essentially related to the deepest springs of thought, the hidden source of Will, Choice and Character; how Jeus is related to the social fabric of mankind—Poverty, Wealth, Wages, the Economic, Political and Civic betterment of the race—in large, how we are to have more life of the highest type; also, the partial and half truths of various religions, cults, etc., such as Christian Science, Coueism, the adulterations, misfits, dreadful caricatures and monstrous errors which lead men and women by millions into interminable and irretrievable morasses of unnatural and false mental and moral therapeutics; how he is related to the physical health of mankind, to the body at its best, to the failure of science, education, philanthropy, etc. In fact, how a Whole Christ Fully and Competently Understood and taken into the heart of man's weakness, cowardice and failure will and does cure all his possible wreck and ruin. You are invited to worship with us and rejoice with us in a Full and Blessed Saviour and Deliverer."

FROM THE FRENCH MISSION.

Dear Brother Carley: A few words I would like to say about my work in the Lafourche Mission. When I came to this work last January I had two places to preach to; now I am glad to say that, with the help of God, I have discovered other places, which gives me eight places.

I preached last Saturday night where the gospel had never been preached before this year, among Roman Catholics, and the house was full. Two were added to the church. It is very hard to work among those Catholics, but now and then the power of the gospel breaks the ice, and I can't tell you how I like to see some one come through the cracking ice. It takes courage and faith, but it can be done by the help of God. I need your prayers.

Dr. W. W. Drake will be with me on the 28th, and we French people are always more than glad to have him with us. God bless him in his great work!

Your brother,
A. D. MARTIN.

THE FALSE TRAIL.

By Rev. H. W. Rickey.

The weak-minded Apists were led down the wrong road by false inferences.

False Inference No. 1—Men have for centuries, by careful selection of wisely chosen strains, produced many breeds of pigeons, poultry, pigs, cats, dogs, cows, horses. These breeds of domestic animals are no proof whatever that plants or animals evolute into "new creatures" that do not belong to their kind, type or forbears. They readily revert—there is no proof that Nature copies man's methods of breeding. It only proves that "pigs is pigs," "like begets like"; that great men are not wise, neither do the Evolutionists understand the commonest facts.

False Inference No.2.—Folks have observed for thousands of years the every day facts that seeds or eggs grow, develop, mature into full-grown or adult specimens of their kind. An acorn becomes an oak tree, an egg hatches out into a chicken. They all conform to the law "like begets like." The Apists set up a contrary notion that unlikes beget unlikes by slow stages and long ages. There are no sample specimens among fossils or living creatures. There are no connecting links between unlike species. Nature is not creating any new types of animals or plants. Unlike creatures grow, but they do not grow into something unlike themselves. Tadpoles do not change into humming birds or barnacles into geese.

False Inference No. 3—We rejoice that Mr. Luther Burbank has produced a thousand expressions of plant life, such as the spineless cactus, seedless fruits, etc., but Mr. Burbank has not made acorns grow into walnuts, or plucked strawberries from huckleberry bushes, or gathered figs from grapevines. The transmutation of species is the twin-sister of the transmigration of souls: products of imagination, factless fancies. That the only wise God employed Mr. Darwin's or Mr. Anybody Else's notion of evolution is quite grotesque. The old alchemists labored in vain to make silver or gold out of lead. The Evolutionist's toil has been useless in trying to bring forth a man out of a monkey. Only an unsound mind will throw the Holy Scriptures overboard, take up with a factless cosmology, fashioned out of an unproved hypothesis. The grand old Book has charitably buried many adversaries. No matter how ludicrous, illogical, grotesque, puerile theories may be, master-minds have championed such preposterous nonsense. Famous philosophers, the ablest writers, have espoused paganism, but that is no reason why we should take the path to paganism.

Evolution is the confusion of dissimilar ideas, the contradiction of realities. It is a system of sneers at that which Hebrews, Roman Catholics, Protestants deem sacred and holy. It misuses the taxpayer's money to propagate falsehoods in school books. It takes for granted that which nobody has proved, and assumes that which cannot be demonstrated. It excludes the religion of the Holy Scriptures from the classroom, and praises and applauds any boneheaded lecturer who propagates race-suicide, pagan or infidelic ideas among our young folks. There is no limit to its conjectures, no end to its shifting definitions, and is ever changing the bases of the argument of its errors. Huxley said: "The verdict is not proved, or provable." He knew.

The Holy Scriptures know no such burlesque as the Radio-God. The holy apostle Paul taught in Acts, the seventeenth chapter and twenty-eighth verse: "In God we live, move and have our being." Thomas Carlyle styled evolution a "Gospel of Mud." It is a mud-slinger at sacred things. The archbishop of infidels, Earnest Haeckel, begins with mud, ooze, slime, and not God; with spontaneous generation, and not with the acts of the Creator. He attaches immense importance to this ignoble theory of descent in his "History of Creation," for two reasons: First, "The unavoidable inference is the animal descent of the human race"; second, "The non-miraculous development of the natural history of the human race." Thomas Carlyle's testimony concerning the three Darwins was, "I knew all three of them right well, and they were all rank atheists."

The learned Lotze said that "A large part of the age feels profound hatred of what is called Spirit. Hence the effort to make man a brute, and lose his soul in matter."

Ask an evolutionist if he believes in miracles. It smokes them out. They show the cloven-hoof.

That man is ashamed to be called a philosopher which readeth not the books of philosophy, and to be called a lawyer, an astronomer, or physician that is ignorant of books of law, astronomy, and physic. How can any man then say that he professeth Christ and his religion, if he will not apply himself as far forth as he can or may conveniently to read and hear and so to know the books of Christ's gospel and doctrine? Although other sciences be good and learned, yet no man can deny but this is the chief and passeth all other incomparably. What excuse shall we therefore make at the last before Christ that delight to read or hear men's fancies and inventions more than his holy gospel? Let us, therefore, apply ourselves as far forth as we can have time and leisure to know God's word by diligent hearing and reading thereof, as many as profess God, and have faith and trust in him.—From the Book of Homilies.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE
Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?
Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

THE GRIP OF A GOLIATH.

David of old had many captains and "mighties" who helped to win for him a kingdom and to consolidate his power, and among these men of prowess, is mentioned a particular hero, Eleazar, the son of Dodo, who "arose, and smote the Philistines until his hand was weary, and his hand clave unto the sword: and the Lord wrought a great victory that day." This is a lesson in two things which do not always go together—grit and grip. The story of Eleazar relates to a rude and crude age. We do not altogether admire those pluggers and sluggers, who hit hard and mercilessly at whatever got in their way, and we have no good word to speak for a prize-ring. At the same time it is well to abstract certain qualities exhibited by those rough fighters, which may with advantage be applied figuratively to life's more ideal contests.

In the Old Testament story Eleazar showed grit, and fought with such abandon and utter self-forgetfulness, without stopping for rest, that toward evening his hand seemed one with his sword, and his fingers could not be released from its hilt. Eleazar completely identified himself with his big task and even when the victory had been won, could not let go. That was where the other element—grip—came in. Eleazar may not in stature have been a Goliath, but he had a giant's spirit, and could hold on! The trouble with too many people is that they let go before success is fairly attained—or hold on to the wrong things. Some grip a gold dollar so tightly that their fingers could not be release therefrom even with a crowbar. Others cleave to prejudice and poor habits in a way that is senseless and obstructive to advancement. But there are plenty of good things in the world to which one must cleave with the grip of an Eleazar. Our hands should grip the cross of Christ, to which we cling as to a rock amid the raging floods; our hearts should cleave to the Christ who hung upon that cross, making "salvation" a personal matter; our faith should hold to the worth-whileness of human life; our hope should settle with absolute confidence on the promises of immortality. When it comes to moral principles, too, and all manner of reform work, modern Israel must be led by Eleazars who will never let up on the fight, until their hands grow weary and cleave to the hilts of their swords.

How much the Bible has to say about keeping on, and holding fast—and while we are hold-fasters, we do not need to be fossils! What is needed is discernment and determination, as expressed in the counsel "Hold fast that which is good, and cast the bad away!" Life's crises are many, and the call to moral combat is incessant. A considerable number of the combatants show grit for a while—and then let go, the sword falling early from their weakening hands. Let us try for a higher distinction than that; be Eleazars whose grit shows itself in a gripp which a hundred devils cannot loosen, and who never stop work until they are through!—Zion's Herald.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Miss Marie Parham, of the Elementary Department, General Sunday School Board, came to our Conference, Thursday, Oct. 4. We had a fine meeting at Vicksburg. A good representation of the elementary workers attended, and the work was to the point. Friday was spent in Yazoo City. This was as fine a meeting as I have been in. We had hoped to have people from all over the county present, but only a representative from Satartia was present. This school is definitely working to become 100%, and they have made much progress.

Saturday I went to Raleigh. Brother Clegg has accomplished a fine work at Raleigh. They have repaired the parsonage and repainted it. Seventy-five out of 85 were present at Sunday school, and we had the largest audiences at preaching services I have seen in all my visits to Raleigh. Things look mighty good. They are talking building for the Sunday school.

Miss Parham spent Saturday at the Satartia quarterly conference, and Sunday with the workers in Jackson. She reported the folks received her gladly and attended upon the services in fine spirits.

Monday we had a meeting at Forest. Besides Forest, the Harperville charge was represented. Miss Parham did great work here. This school is working on the "B" Program of Work, and they are planning to build a Sunday school building in order to carry out the Program to better advantage.

Tuesday we visited Harrisville, D'Lo, and Mendenhall. Harrisville is 90% "C" type. They lack blackboards and screens to be 100%. Good for Harrisville! We had only a short session at D'Lo, but the workers were very interested. Mendenhall was a good meeting, too.

Wednesday was spent at Hattiesburg. There was a fine representation, with workers from Collins besides the Hattiesburg workers. Main Street is talking building. Court Street is well on the way to 100% "B" Program. Fine interest was aroused in a standard training school and other advanced steps.

Thursday and Friday were spent at Brookhaven in District Institute. Miss Parham did good work. The Elementary Departments pledge to go to 100% "B" type. The Beginner Department is accepting the "A" Program and going to work on it. The school as a whole accepted the "B" type and promised to put it over.

This was the smallest district meeting ever held in the Brookhaven District. It was a most interesting meeting and I believe a most helpful meeting.

Miss Parham did good and faithful work, and we will be glad when she comes our way again.

The work grows. Reports indicate the greatest year's work ever accomplished.

Pray earnestly for the workers.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

City Elementary Council, Shreveport, La.

The Louisiana Conference and Shreveport District have their first City Elementary Council.

The Council was organized Monday morning, Oct. 1, at First Church, Shreveport, under the direction of Miss Marie Parham, associated in elementary work with Miss Kennedy, in the office of the General Sunday School Board at Nashville.

Miss Caroline Hess, Conference Elementary Superintendent, has been most earnest and fatihful in promoting elementary work, and the Council is the fruit of her earnest endeavor. We are trusting that from this organization of Christian workers will grow an amalgamation of intrest and spirit of helpfulness that will prove a great blessing to the city and suburban churches of Shreveport in their elementary work.

The cabinet members of the Council are:

Chairman, Mrs. C. P. Munday; vice chairman, Mrs. N. G. Robinson; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. W. E. Hampton; district elementary superintendent, Mrs. N. L. Hudson. Key women: Mrs. J. W. Wilson, Bossier City; Mrs. F. Sieker, Oil City; Mrs. H. E. Gump, Noel Memorial; Mrs. C. T. Hitchins, Texas Avenue; Mrs. L. A. White, Claiborne; Mrs. N. G. Robinson, Mangum Memorial; Mrs. F. D. Hutchens, First Church; Mrs. N. L. Hudson, Cedar Grove.

MRS. N. L. HUDSON,
District Elementary Superintendent.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

In checking up the Junior Department of the Clarksdale school, the superintendent of the department, Mrs. H. L. Talbert, reported 46 on the roll, that 23 read the Bible daily. All second-year girls made maps of Palestine, two modeled maps of paper pulp, three boys modeled maps, three girls made models of sheepfolds, oriental homes, and tomb of Christ. Maudie Cartledge, Mary Fite, and Ike Hoskins made a perfect record of attendance for the year. The beginner, primary, and junior departments lack but little of covering the ten points of the program of work outlined for these departments. Verily, the work prospers under the prayers and hard work of these faithful women.

The report from our school at West Point is encouraging: Mrs. Roy Snider, superintendent of the Cradle Roll, has 117 in her department; the Beginners, Mrs. Harry Dalton superintendent, reports 25 on roll; Mrs. B. M. Howorth, superintendent Primary Department, reports 53 on roll; Mrs. B. T. Schumpert, superintendent Junior Department, reports 85 on roll; Mrs. T. H. Lipscomb, superintendent Intermediate Department, reports 54 on roll; Mrs. J. W. Belk, superintendent Young People's Department, 23 on roll; the Adult Department has 130 on roll. There are 25 classes in this school, with an enrollment of 617, including the Cradle Roll. The Home Department did not report. There were 52 who received the Robert Raikes' diploma, this for being present and on time for the year. Miss Ethel Hines holds the record in this respect for perfect attendance for 11 years, John Snider and Randolph Howorth for 10 years. The teachers in this school are doing work that is telling on the life of the church

The school at Jonestown is responding to the training given by Miss Kate Payne Owens this summer. As a result of the work she did for the teachers, the school is undertaking the full program of work for a school of the "B" type. Mr. C. P. Shelby is developing into one of the best superintendents in the Greenville District. Recently all the teachers agreed to take the first four books in the training course, and agreed to study until all the courses are completed. In checking up the schools, I find the weak point in all of them is a lack of trained teachers, but in every school the teachers agreed to study and read until they are prepared to do the work as it ought to be done.

Brother Superintendent, look after your Centenary pledge and see to it that your school pays the last dollar that it promised. Individuals may fail to meet their obligations, but do not let the school as an institution repudiate one cent of what has been promised.

Judging from the small number of letters received in regard to the observance of Children's Week, one would think that very few of our leaders have read the Advocate all the way through. More than one hundred letters have been written calling attention to this, but not a word in reply. However, a larger number of schools will observe the week than have made inquiry.

I will place no value on anything I have or may possess, except in relation to the kingdom of Christ. If anything will advance the interests of that kingdom, it shall be given away or kept, only as by giving or keeping of it I shall most promote the glory of him to whom I owe all my hopes in time and eternity. May grace and strength sufficient to enable me to adhere faithfully to this resolution be imparted to me, so that in truth, not in name only, all my interests and those of my children may be identified with his cause.—David Livingstone.

There is a story of an old man who carried a little can of oil with him everywhere he went; and if he passed through a door that squeaked, he poured a little oil on the hinges; if he came to a gate and it opened hard, he oiled it. And thus he passed through life, lubricating all the [illegible] squeaking, and hard places, and [illegible]ing it easier for those who came after him. He filled his can daily and carried it with him to lubricate when and wherever needed. Blessed is the girl or boy who carries an oil can to lubricate life and make things go smoothly.—C. A. Terhune.

The luckiest people in the world are not those who depend upon luck, but those who utterly ignore it. The moon, according to some, is good for potatoes, but luck is not good for a man. Neither the fault nor the fortune is in our stars; both are in ourselves. Iron in the blood is better than a rabbit foot in the pocket. The measure of Washington, Lincoln, and Lee, the immortal American trio, is to be found not with the god of fortune, but within their own matcless personalities.—North Carolina Advocate.

We are receiving calls daily for men and women of character, ambition and business training, men and women who can accept and efficiently fill responsible positions, positions that give every opportunity for advancement; positions of high salaries, positions in banks, law offices, insurance, real estate, brokers' offices; positions with manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, in every imaginable type of business in the South.

Many of them we capably fill, others are yet vacant. The men and women who fill them need not be wealthy, nor even moderately well-to-do. They need not be young, nor need they be college or even high school graduates. All that is necessary is that they possess character, ambition and a business training.

The character and ambition they must possess, the business training we will furnish under the direction of the South's most efficient training corps and in one of the South's most efficient and best equipped business colleges. A training with unique courses in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, accounting, banking, business administration or our secretarial course. Such a training we will furnish in a few months' time at little cost to you, and at terms to meet your own financial condition.

Thousands of Southern men and women have taken advantage of the opportunity and trained themselves for a higher calling, a better salary and a greater opportunity for advancement. Many who have accepted the positions we offer have risen to the top of the ladder, and are numbered among America's foremost and wealthiest business and professional men and women.

An institution with such standing and reputation as the Georgia-Alabama Business College does more to advance the business interests of its graduates than can be done by any amount of family or personal influence.

Consider your present status—would you not like to improve your station in life, increase your income, attain financial independence and success? An opportunity awaits you, for positions are being constantly offered us that must be filled.

Write for our inspiring book, "Your Future—What Does it Hold in Store?" It is sent free on request, explains our offer in detail and points the way to a brighter future.

FROM THE FRANKLINTON CIRCUIT.

Dear Mr. Editor: Friday, Sept. 28 marked the closing of two good meetings in the St. Tammany end of the Franklinton circuit, the Waldheim meeting holding from the third Sunday to Friday night; at Fitzgerald from the following Sunday through Friday night. These two meetings were the last of five held on my circuit.

At both places I heard "the best meetings we've had in years" more than once. Brother J. W. Booth, of Amite, did the preaching at Waldheim, and that explains why it was the best meeting in years. Brother H. C. Murphy, of Tickfaw, preached for me at Fitzgerald. I know of none better for a good "old-time religion" meeting. It is no reflection on other preachers for me to say that, taken day after day, I'd go just as far to hear Brother Murphy as to hear any one I know. Excepting one night, the Fitzgerald church was full to capacity. Visible results—nine additions to Waldheim, two additions to Fitzgerald.

Sorry I can't make such glowing reports of actual accomplishment, and promises of greater accomplishment, as some reports of revivals I've read. Like most others, however, I can say, "I hope to be able to report everything in full at Conference."

It might be of interest to note the most striking occurrences at the other meetings of Franklinton circuit. I am afraid to name places because the Advocate actually goes into three or four homes, and some one might get ruffled.

At one meeting, the second night, in response to a proposition, "Every member of this church who will pray for a revival and do all in his power to promote the interests of the meeting, come forward to the altar," no one moved. At a subsequent meeting six or eight came.

At another place, nearly every member of the church responded to a similar proposition. Yet during the entire meeting only one person evinced enough interest in the salvation of her soul to come forward for prayer, and she was a member of the Baptist Church. At another place we established a Sunday school. Not so bad.

Yes, I have great hopes, and faith in the realization of great things, and am realizing them in my own life. But I know, somewhat, the character of the people with and for whom I labor.

Yours for success,

JAY COBURN.

But the most important thing, which needs not only to be said, but also to be understood, is that life itself is the great school. Facts are teachers. Experiences are lessons. Friends are guides. Work is a master. Love is an interpreter. Teaching itself is a method of learning. Joy carries a divining rod and discovers fountains. Sorrow is an astronomer and shows us the stars. What I have lived I really know, and what I really know I partly own; and so, beginning with what I know and what I own, I move through my curriculum, elective and required, gaining nothing but what I learn, at once instructed and examined by every duty and every pleasure.—Henry van Dyke.

"INTIMATE CLIMPSES."

The little booklet entitled, "Intimate Glimpses of Miss Belle H. Bennett," would be appreciated by all who read it. Here is what Miss Haskin has to say:

"As those of us who knew and loved Miss Bennett read these pages, we verily feel that once more she walks among us. These words make her so vivid that we can all but feel the magnetic touch of her hand and dream that once more we look into her loving eyes; with all the greatness of her master mind and still more with the largeness and gentleness of her heart she lives for us again.

"Therefore, we send forth this little book with the hope that those who did not have the privilege of being co-workers with her may come to appreciate her great personality. It is not in any sense a biography, and is not intended to take the place of the biography, which is to appear later. It is intended rather to give to many of our missionary women a real and sympathetic glimpse into the life of the woman who has been the master architect of the great work we all love.

"Miss Emily Olmstead, who for four years lived in the inner circle, was to Miss Bennett friend and spiritual daughter. Had it not been for her untiring devotion, Miss Bennett could never have given to the church her last four years of service. When finally the last week of pain and suffering came, Miss Olmstead ministered to her with the love and tenderness that only a daughter can give. Miss Bennett's last thoughts and desires were often whispered into her ears, so that when we read this sketch we are indeed looking into the very heart life of one of the great servants of our Master. May He enlighten our eyes and strengthen our hearts with a great and noble purpose—the very God purpose that made her life strong and sweet and beautiful."

When men come and say, "Here we are, our interests, ourselves, our business, everything," then the windows of heaven are never shut—never! When my all is upon the altar, there the windows of heaven are open and the blessing descends.—G. Campbell Morgan.

OUSTS RHEUMATISM.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

REAL MISSIONARY WORK.

If any one wishes to see a real missionary hard at work, come to Biloxi, and watch Brother W. W. Moore. He lives in the Camp Ground, and preaches at the following mission stations: Wesley House, four miles away; at the Back Bay Mission, also four miles from him, and across the Bay; at Mississippi City, eight miles away, and finally at the Seamen's Bethel in Gulfport, ten miles away. This is in addition to funerals, baptisms, pastoral visits, visits to the sick and afflicted in the Veterans' Hospital, nine miles away—and other activities. Brother Moore is my neighbor, and I know him better than any one else around here; my testimony is from personal observation. After reading the above, do you wonder that the little Ford is now needing a new top, and general overhauling? But alas and alack! there is yet a debt of about $125 still due on it. I do wish some of the good folks who have an abundance of the Lord's money at their disposal, and who wish to help out a work that is about the truest missionary work in the State, would send a check to Brother Moore, and lift the debt from the car. No one can do this work as he does it without a car, and the car will be left with the man who follows Brother Moore—it is not his car. Some one gave the work a little portable organ, and outdoor services are held from the running board of the car, while some devoted young lady plays the organ.

Brother Moore and I are good friends—so he will not be angry when he sees this in print. He will be "de-light-ed" to acknowledge the receipt of checks from those who are interested in the work along this beautiful coast country. It was all missionary work only a short time ago; now there are several strong churches which are helping to care for these weak ones.

Perrysburg, Ohio.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I suffered with pains in my sides all the time. I can't remember just how long I suffered, but it was for some time. One day I was talking with a lady I met on a car, and I told her how I was feeling and she said she had been just like I was with pains and nervous troubles, and she took the Vegetable Compound, and it cured her. So then I went and got some, and I certainly recommend it for it is good. Whenever I see any woman who is sick I try to get her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. ADA FRICK, Route 3, Perrysburg, Ohio.

In nearly every neighborhood in every town and city in this country there are women who have been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the treatment of ailments peculiar to their sex, and they take pleasure in passing the good word along to other women. Therefore, if you are troubled in this way, why not give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

CHURCHES AND THE RED CROSS.

Genius is oftimes, among other things, a great Faith. It is not infrequently the imperishable flower which springs from the dark soil of sorrow and misfortune. Of the latter, Balzac says: "It makes of certain souls a vast desert through which rings the voice of God."

As we study the circumstances out of which have sprung our greatest hymns, together with so many of the masterpieces of art, music and literature, we believe that this is true. Such hymns as "Abide With Me," "Lead, Kindly Light," and "O, Love That Will Not Let Go," are deathless, and they have come to us out of the very depths of human suffering.

The Red Cross, national and international, has come to us "out of the very depths of human suffering." Its history and program are too well known to the churches to need much comment, for it is in the religious bodies of America that the American Red Cross has found the high per cent of its best leadership in the furtherance of a work which, perhaps more than any other, effectively demonstrates to the world at large the ideal of the Brotherhood of Man. The Seventh Annual Roll Call date is Nov. 11-29, and that date is approached by the American Red Cross with full confidence so far as the churches are concerned.

The human heart is the greatest thing in the world, and the power to reach the human heart is the greatest form of genius of which we know. Music may fail, art may fail, science may fail, but genius of the kindly spirit never fails. It flourishes in the summer sunshine; it makes the cold of winter time less bleak; it gilds our happiest hours with the touch of a magic wand, and it eases our defeats with its ready song of cheer. It is the friend of little children, the guiding star of youth, and the blessing of the aged. It is the priceless jewel of the time in which we live and a gem of ever-brightening lustre for all of time to come. Whatever life may hold of sunshine and success, or of shadows and defeat, genius of the kindly spirit is the one great deathless trophy of this life; it is Truth.

In Hangchow, China, the Commissioner of Police for the Province last fall became a Christian and united with the church. Later he was elected to membership on the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. He has made a fine record in politics, having held his present office, in spite of changes in governors every few years, since 1911. Because of his strength of character and long service he is easily the most influential man in the Province. Humanly speaking, there was nothing for him to gain in becoming a Christian. His clear-cut stand means much in Christian China.

When the spirit of MR. JOHN W. PATTERSON "returned to God who gave it," many hearts were made sad, for Brother Patterson was loved by all who knew him. His had been a long and useful life. He was born May 27, 1848, one-half mile from Tula, Miss., where he died after a few days' illness on Sept. 6, 1923. At the age of twenty-four, Brother Patterson was happily married to Miss Catherin Smith, of Oxford, Miss. After the death of his wife he was married a second time. His last wife survives him. Besides his wife, there are ten children living, and all are proving the statement of Holy Writ, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." Brother Patterson was truly a good man, kind-hearted and generous. He was one who was depended upon to see that the interests of the church were attended to, always in his place at worship, and always the pastor's friend. His was a cheerful disposition—he looked on the bright side of life. Many of his neighbors joined with his loving family in ministering to him in his last illness. He was stricken with paralysis during the protracted meeting and died ere the meeting closed. He has three splendid sons, Claud, Eugene, and Ike, living in Oxford. His seven daughters also were with him when the summons came. He will be greatly missed, and his memory will be a constant benediction to his children and neighbors. May the God of all Grace comfort all of the bereaved family and friends.

His pastor,

A. Y. BROWN.

A TRIBUTE.

God, in his all-wise power, saw fit to remove from our midst to the great beyond MISS MARGARET BLISS, daughter of our brother, W. S. Bliss.

We, the Blackwater Sunday school, realize a great loss in her answer to the summons to come up higher. She was one of our most faithful members, being always present and on time with a smiling face, it mattered not what the weather. She was one on whom we could always depend, was a faithful attendant upon the church and Epworth League services, ready cheerfully to serve when called upon. Her sweetness of nature made one feel cheerful and happy.

We urge upon the membership of our school and church that we draw from her life the lessons of faithfulness, cheerfulness and service which will help us to grow and glow.

Her beautiful mission in life is filled and she is gone. Her going away was a shock to her many friends, but we must remember that "God sometimes moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform."

She was laid to rest in the Blackwater cemetery with a flower-covered grave, symbolic of the love and sympathies of relatives and friends. Among the floral offerings came one from the King's Messengers class and one from the Sunday school she served so faithfully. Rev. C. E. McLeau conducted the services.

We extend our sincere sympathy to her loved ones. May our Heavenly Father lay his healing touch upon the broken-hearted ones, making them to know his consolation and finally unite them in the beautiful home of the soul prepared by our blessed Redeemer.

HALLIE SMITH.

A Good Thing—DON'T MISS IT.

Send your name and address plainly written together with 5 cents (and this slip) to Chamberlain Medicine Co., Des Moines, Iowa, and receive in return a trial package containing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs, colds, croup, bronchial, "flu" and whooping coughs, and tickling throat; Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for stomach troubles, indigestion, gassy pains that crowd the heart, biliousness and constipation; Chamberlain's Salve, needed in every family for burns, scalds, wounds, piles, and skin affections; these valued family medicines for only 5 cents. Don't miss it.

There is, first, the joy of acquisition, whether of postage stamps or old China or mere money. There is, second, the sleek, substantial joy of possession. But we never master the first letters of the alphabet of joy until we have bled into the veins of others some part of ourselves. This is the joy of redemption. One of the quaint legends come down to us from Palestine says that in heaven the first notes heard at dawn are trumpet tones of joy. Heaven is glad because the language its inhabitants speak is unselfishness. When Lucifer became self-seeking, he fell. And when that fallen son of the morning was asked what he missed most in exile, he replied: "I miss most the sounds of the trumpet in the morning." Selfishness poisons its own cup; commits hari-kari; kills the joy it seeks.—George Clarke Peck.

Horace Bushnell bore the following testimony relative to the Bible, a testimony that many can reiterate: "My experience is that the Bible is dull when I am dull. When I am really alive and set in upon a text with a tidal pressure of living affinities, it opens, it multiplies discoveries, and reveals depths even faster than I can note them. The worldly spirit shuts the Bible; the Spirit of God makes it a fire, flaming out all meaning and glorious truths." Even the Bible must speak to an attentive ear.—National Sunday School Teacher.

Charles F. Aked says: "The best thing in this world is to preach to this world the gospel of Jesus Christ."

"FACING THE FACTS."

In the Advocate of Oct. 11, under the above caption, there appeared a statement by Dr. W. W. Pinson, one of the Secretaries of the Board of Missions, setting forth the alarming situation now confronting the church with reference to its missionary enterprises, both home and foreign. The "facts" the church is called upon to face are tabulated in part by Dr. Pinson as follows:

The Facts.

1. One of the main planks in the Centenary platform was the doubling of the regular missionary income, it being clearly foreseen that embarrassment would inevitably result unless this were done.

2. The regular income for the Foreign Department, General Work, has decreased from $654,517 in 1918, to $464,089 in 1922.

3. The assessment for foreign missions was not increased in 1922, notwithstanding the fact that there was a vast increase in the budget.

4. The General Conference voted $1,500,000 upon which the Board of Missions had been relying for European work, for the building of churches in university centers.

5. The General Conference voted 6[illegible] per cent of the $11,000,000 pledged beyond the Centenary askings, to the strengthening of our work on the border.

6. With a regular income in 1918 of $654,517, the appropriations were $103,304, leaving a margin of $251,312 between income and appropriatinos; the regular income in 1922 was $464,089, while the budget was $1,450,104, leaving a deficit of $986,015.

7. Between now and 1925 we must find a way of increasing our regular income to the amount of $1,250,000 a year for home and foreign missions.

Facing the Facts.

It is needless to say that the facts thus presented are distressing, and we agree with Dr. Pinson that we should face them fairly and squarely. Facts, as is well known, are stubborn things. Nothing is gained by ignoring them—they cannot be "blinked" out of the way. With the facts in hand, we are in position to understand the situation and are prepared to take the necessary steps toward meeting the difficulties that have arisen. Such difficulties may not be solved off-hand, but every suggestion toward their solution ought to be welcomed. We venture to make a few suggestions to that end.

First of all, though, we confess our ignorance when we say that we were not aware until we read Dr. Pinson's statement, that one of the main planks in the Centenary platform was that we should "double the regular income." We knew—and all those who tried to look into the future of the Centenary program knew—that the vastly enlarged missionary activities would necessitate a vastly increased regular income for their maintenance; but the tremendous emphasis, as we recall it, was upon securing pledges to cover the $25,000,000 of the Centenary askings. The point was emphasized that the Centenary pledges were to be in addition to the regular assessments for missionary work—but we missed the "doubling" propaganda. As we stated, however, this is simply an acknowledgment of our own ignorance.

Some Observations.

Some observations, too, we would make upon the situation as revealed by Dr. Pinson's statement before we venture upon our suggestions.

The startling revelation that the regular income of the Foreign Departmeut, General Work, has decreased from $654,517 in 1918, to $464,089 in 1922, calls for pause. It seems strange that there should be this shrinkage of $190,428 during the very period when the missionary cause was being presented to the church with a fullness and urgency never known before. We can only guess at the explanation: it may be due to the emphasis placed upon the necessity of securing the Centenary askings without a corresponding emphasis upon the necessity of keeping up the regular assessments; it may be due to the financial stringency that has prevailed during a large part of the poriod; it may be due to the fact that the machinery of the church has been more largely devoted to collecting the Centenary pledges than to securing the regular assessments. Whatever the cause—or causes—may be, the fact is ominous.

Another observation is based upon the fact that, in spite of a diminishing regular income, the budget was more than a million dollars larger in 1922 than the total appropriations in 1918. Disaster is the inevitable result when expenditures are constantly mounting and receipts are constantly diminishing. The immortal Micawber made that important discovery a long time ago. Within proper limitations, the principle that "the future will take care of itself" may work very well, but it is a poor reliance in the management of vast enterprises. This statement is no discount upon a reverent and profound faith, either—it is simply an application of sound business methods.

Still another observation: if the regular income for missionary causes has steadily decreased since 1918, there is a great deal to be done in bringing the income back to normal before the effort to increase the regular income by $1,250,000 a year can hold much promise of success.

Some Suggestions.

These observations, however, are largely by the way—the urgent matter is the solution of the problems arising out of the facts as presented by Dr. Pinson. What can be done?

1. Let the Board of Missions begin to practice the most rigid economy. We do not believe the Board has been extravagant in its expenditures, and we make no such charge; but the probability is that it could reduce its expenses somewhat in some directions without decreasing materially its efficiency. Corporate finances have to be handled sometimes just as personal finances are—when a crisis arises, everything except what is absolutely necessary is dispensed with. We do not know, but we suggest that it might be possible to effect economies by reducing the personnel of the Board, reducing the office forces, reducing printed matter and stationery costs, reducing traveling expenses (by having less traveling). Possibly this program of the most rigid economy has already been put in force; if so, well.

2. Let the Board make such retrenchments as will bring the receipts and expenditures appreciably nearer together with the least possible disarrangement of the whole missionary program. Retrenchment may be embarrassing. It may be tragic—but it may be necessary. It certainly cannot be more embarrassing or more tragic to retrench than it is to continue a program that is headed straight toward disaster—and it is not more morally reprehensible. Retrenchment is not the worst thing in the world, by a great deal. The Six Hundred advanced into the jaws of death—a heroic spectacle—but "some one had blundered." To retreat through fear is rank cowardice—but to fall back before overwhelming odds to save an army may be an act of heroism. If retrenchment is demanded by the facts—and we are "facing the facts"—let retrenchment be made.

3. Let every Centenary subscriber who has not already done so, pay his pledge in full. We must not forget that the Board of Missions enterprised its enlarged program upon the basis of these pledges and upon the assumption that they would be paid. Every subscriber is responsible, therefore, to the extent of his own pledge at least, for the enlarged program, and he is under the strongest kind of moral obligation to pay what he promised to pay in order to carry it through. If we will not pay to the church what we have solemnly promised to pay, we have a definite part of the blame for any financial embarrassment that may arise in the administration of the church's business. If the partners in a business enterprise refuse to function as partners, they themselves help to bring about the failure of the enterprise.

4. Let a permanent campaign of Christian stewardship be inaugurated in the church without any reference to special interests to be promoted or specific amounts of money to be raised. We need to bring an end to the era of special campaigns and high pressure methods of collecting money, and enter upon an era of education in the

AN AUTUMN DAY.

By Eleanore Myers Jewett.

On such a day of singing blue
The maddest, gladdest dreams come true!
I know, because the maple-trees
Have turned a redder, golden hue,
And every keen, smoke-scented breeze
Thrills me with hinted mysteries.
I know, for heaven was never spanned
With fleeter, whiter clouds than these!
On such a day each road is planned
To lead to some enchanted land;
Each turning meets expectancy.
The signs I read on every hand,
I know by autumn's wizardry
On such a day the world can be
Only a great glad dream for me—
Only a great glad dream for me!

THE DESERT PLACES.

By William C. Allen.

We think of the desert as the equivalent of desolation. The sea has its glory, its beauty, its moods. The heavens declare the handiwork of God. But to most of us the desert appears unfruitful, hard, inhospitable, cruel.

The alkali plains of America are white and arid. The sands of the Sahara sweep like a torrent across the blinding sunshine. The Cohi desert of Northern Asia is a weariness to the traveler. The vast treeless levels of Australia at periods promise no loveliness or charm. The wild wastes of South Africa are masses of heaped-up rocks for hundreds of miles. Yet we may love the desert wherever we find it. Its alternate grayness and exuberant colorings, its lights, its shadows offer rare instruction to our intellects and souls.

At times the Christian perforce crosses parched places as he journeys through life. There are experiences wherein no beauty cheers him, there are trials that hide from his sight the eternal hills of hope. His feet bleed as he treads the rock-strewn valley or laboriously climbs the mountains of despair. He thinks of the ancient cry, "My soul thirsteth for Thee in a dry and weary land where no water is!" He appeals to God for help.

Yet the desert may be good to trek across. In it is stillness—how often the world-tired heart, when temporarily deprived of earthly joys, finds in the desert of the soul the quietness, the holy communion that imparts fresh vigor for physical outlay, for spiritual success! Within the desert, or close by its borders, are undreamed riches which, like the diamond mines of Kimberley, yield splendid stones of renown, scintillating, exquisite, pure. In the void places of the earth have been discovered vast supplies of material things for the use of millions of men. The forsaken wastes of far-off countries contain precious minerals and metals yet to be extracted from their confines—this is the story from many lands. Even so, as the follower of Jesus moving through the dull or indifferent experiences of life halts to discover the secret treasures they contain, he finds there is rare reward in doing so—he acquires courage, patience, love. His earthly trials become of value beyond all estates, shares, gems, gold or bonds. The desert has yielded to him her treasures. If wise, he retains them in his grasp when again he enters the pleasant country and once more participates in the lovely things of life. How often whilst touring the solitary places we fail to realize the years of happiness yet to be!

Some of us who have traveled widely have observed that often the serpents match the hues of the rocks or soil of their environments. But, contrarywise, let us think of the gracious things of the desert, the marvel of the flowers. In the Karroo of South Africa there are little plants, the color of the leaves and bloom of which imitate the stones amid which they grow. Their very shapes copy the broken rocks about them. You thoughtlessly kick aside a stone and, behold, you crush one of the tender plants of God. Even so may the tired Christian, whilst passing through flinty places, by gesture or with voice, do violence to his better moments and inadvertently trample on the material or spiritual aspirations of others who also are endeavoring to live above their solitude, their pains, their fears. May we remember that we oftimes hold within our keeping the faith and fortitude of others as they, too, tread the desert paths!

Is there enchantment in the desert? Are there beauty, fragrance, vision? At some seasons of the year their bare, bleak lowlands or mountains are bedecked with captivating flowers. I know of one vast desolation in Western Australia which claims 6,000 different kinds of wild flowers, of which 3,000 are said to grow in no other land. Is it not true that there is One who makes the wilderness to rejoice and blossom as the rose? Shall we trust Him? Is it not true that the followers of Jesus may sometimes be insulted or defeated, yet, like their Master who knew the loneliness of the desert, feel all the while their unseen nearness to their Lord? We obtain long views of the desert—we see wonderful things in its rarified, pure air. From amid the sands and thorns we very often gaze across great distances to the purple mountains crowned with glistening snow. O, you who read these lines, do not, in hours of weakness, forget to look away from the aridity about you up to the everlasting hills of God—they will renew your strength—the names of those who do so are recorded in the Book of Life. God never fails finally to lead or guide his faithful people out of the desert places into the Promised Land.

LETTER FROM DR. CHARLES P. M. SHEFFEY.

The position of our Mission here is four degrees south of the equator, at which latitude the continent is approximately 1,985 miles wide, whereas a straight line to the west coast from Wembo Nyama would measure about 915 miles. Of course, however, in following the circuitous water routes, in order to reach the coast, one covers a greater distance. The work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, launched among the Otetela tribe, now consists of four stations at which white missionaries are living.

At the present there are seven missionaries at Wembo Nyama, three at Tunda, 62 miles to the eastward, four at Kabengele, which is located on the Lubefu river, about 30 miles west of here, and three at Minga, probably 35 miles to the southeast. Minga has been recently established to replace our old station at Lubefu, which was abandoned because of the severe thunder storms which played around the hill upon which the mission compound was located. Not until the latter part of March was Minga actually manned. Rev. L. M. Kinman had been working on the building there since last fall, and for a while this year he stayed there alone. It was not until nearly the end of March that two other workers were sent to aid him. In addition to these four stations, our mission is represented at Lusambo by Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Higgins. The work of Mr. Higgins for our mission has to do with the transportation and mail service. He serves us and the Presbyterians jointly, and though Lusambo does not at the present come within the scope of our evangelistic efforts, and though it was abandoned as an evangelistic center by the Presbyterians at their conference in October in 1922, in his spare moments Mr. Higgins manages still to keep up considerable work among the natives there.

Judging from the extensiveness of the territory to be covered and the scarcity of white persons on the field, the need of native evangelists is obvious. Hence we have trained natives stationed in various villages who preach the gospel. These villages are called out-stations. At the present, we have about forty-five of these out-stations, not including a few villages in which there are teachers but no evangelists.

One can readily see that the task of training evangelists is no small one, especially when one usually has only illiteracy to begin with. At Wembo Nyama, we have a group of boys whom we call mission boys. After going to school for some time and getting the rudiments of an education, some of these boys may enter the Bible school, and after a course of three years' study, they may be accepted as evangelists if they have proved themselves worthy in other ways. It is needless to say that many fall by the way for various reasons.

At the present there are villages which would be glad to have an evangelist and which would build a church in order to obtain one. I remember an incident which occurred at a village called Ona Basango, where I spent the night after my first trip on the path. We had stopped there en route from Lusambo to Wembo Nyama. In the afternoon, much noise and the beating of drums came from one end of the village, and just at twilight we decided to investigate the cause of the disturbance. It was at the time of the new moon and there were a number of little girls, ranging perhaps from 9 to 13 years of age, going through the gyrations of a dance which, as yet, has hardly reached Paris or Broadway. The dance was in honor of the new moon, for many of these people are moon-worshipers. In spite of the fact that such a celebration was in progress, as I was returning to the rest house, a rather pleasing looking young man approached me and spoke to me in the Otetela language. I understood very little then, but I learned that this man was a chief, or at least a leading personage, in a nearby village and was asked that a teacher be sent to his village.

As a rule when these people have heard something of God and Christ, it is not so difficult to get their nominal acceptance. When approached upon the subject, they will often reply, "Why should I not accept God," or, "Why should I not want the religion of God?" The great test comes in actually understanding the true import of Christianity and living according to its ideals. Here many fail repeatedly, but even so do we all.

From April 22nd to 29th we held a revival here in our mission village, and on the last day about a hundred and one people stood up and promised to follow the right path. Some of these were backsliders, but a greater number were new converts. Of course, we are not able to take all of these into the church immediately. They will have to undergo a period of probation and attend catechism classes in order to learn more of what Christianity is. Sunday before last, 231 people partook of communion at the church here. This is 56 in excess of the number partaking at the preceding communion. This sounds very small to the people in the homeland, and indeed it is small, but the process of making men over is a tedious one and requires prolonged effort.

It must be said that conditions in the capital nearby, where Chief Wembo Nyama lives, are rather discouraging. Of the population there, which exceeds a thousand, very few attend church services at our two churches. As the white man goes by on Sunday morning, many will call out their greetings, many sit idly before their huts or go about their business, apparently indifferent to the word of God, which they could hear with little trouble.

Recently I undertook the teaching of a class of small boys at one of the churches there, although my command of the language is still inadequate, and naturally I experienced much difficulty. The little fellows are restless and inattentive. Last Sunday there were about 57 of them, and they had me going, trying to hold their attention and at the same time groping around to find the proper words with which to express my thoughts. Apparently they remember very little of what is said, and yet we think that the idea of Sunday school in their minds is something, and that if these things are constantly brought to their attention eventually the meaning of it all will dawn upon them. Herein lies one of the greatest hopes of any missionary effort—the training of the youth. One cannot hope to change the traditions of generations in a year. Old Chief Wembo Nyama, who met Bishop Lambuth when he first came into this country, declares he is a "child of God," but it is hard to say just what he has done to merit such an appellation. He is still holding on to his numerous wives, of which there are more than twenty. Chief Tunda, across the Lomami, is reported to have fifty-six!

O that we should not falter for words with which to impress these Africans, but that we might speak with such fire as to instill into their minds a vision that will lift them from their stagnant ignorance into a knowledge of those things which will abide forever! Will you help us by bringing your plea before the Throne of Grace?

Wembo Nyama, Africa.

REV. N. F. HOFFPAUIR—A TRIBUTE.

It is recorded in the old Book, under the inspiration of the Almighty and by the pen of the disciples whom Jesus loved and personally taught, that "There came a man, sent from God, whose name was John." It matters little as to the name, or the surname, but if similar records were now in the making, one of them would read, "There came a man sent from God whose name was Nelson Hoffpauir."

Of the parents of that ancient home, it was said, "They were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord, blameless." It was equally true of this humble, modern Christian home in Louisiana. The children of it bear witness that they lived in a home where the incense of prayer and devotion arose morning and evening from the family altar; and that they neither saw nor heard anything from father that a very devout Christian could not say or do.

Around that sacred spot, their home, four lads and six lassies gathered with father and mother. The firstborn, Nelson, became a herald of the Cross of Christ; and three sisters, as wives, entered as many Methodist parsonage homes in Louisiana.

Nelson F. Hopffpauir was born July 3, 1877, on a farm in the lowlands of Louisiana. The lad felt the call of God from his earliest years, and has left on record the fact that he knew before conversion that he must preach the Gospel as soon as the Master had complete sway in his life.

At twelve years of age he was soundly converted, and knew it. At seventeen he was preaching Christ on his own initiative to the French at Lackacine, La. When only eighteen years of age, he was licensed to preach under the pastorate of Joshua Sanders. Those who knew him best say that even at that age "He was filled with the Holy Spirit and power," and that when he prayed it seemed as if he brought Heaven down to men. It is not to be wondered at, then, that many hundreds of his young companions, as well as men and women of maturer years, found God under his ministry. A number of these young converts are now preaching the Gospel.

Feeling the need of better educational training, he entered Centenary College, Louisiana, where he studied several years. He became a pastor of the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when twenty-two years old. Five pastors are now serving what was our brother's first charge, so large was the territory served by him, and so great the results.

At twenty-three years of age, he married Miss Bonnie L. Andrus. Two children, Eris and Hamilton, were born to them in those early years of their happy union. Five years of incessant toil told on the strength of the wife, and for thirteen years they lived in New Mexico, Arizona, and California, seeking health for her. Then she died.

In addition to his Louisiana circuits, our brother served Littleton, Williams, Yuma, and Willcox in Arizona, and Azusa, Dunsmuir, and finally Yucaipa in California.

On March 10, 1919, he was very happily married to Miss Mabel Kent. To them were born Francis and Ruth, who are much too young to realize their great loss.

It was my happy privilege to be in our brother's home and work at his call, twice in Arizona; and just a few months ago, for three weeks, we served together at Grace Church, Redlands.

His was a surrendered life; a Spirit-filled life, thoughtlss of self, and possessed of a Christ-like passion for souls. His people loved him, and his presence was always a benediction in every place where he labored. I knew and heard and saw this man of God, and bear witness to his unquenchable zeal, to the Christ-likeness of his character, and to his unselfish devotion to home and loved ones and to the Kingdom of God. After a short illness, when only forty-six, he fell asleep. It was not given him to be widely known, or highly honored among men. But, like John of old, he was "a man sent from God." He gladly answered the call, and all Heaven often rejoiced over the souls won, and the work done, and his record is safe in God's hands.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Ignorance is the bane of humanity. "If the light in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!" The old blue-back speller—sweet and tender are its memories—had for its frontispiece the temple of wisdom and a tall, imposing figure pointing to its entrance with the motto, "Knowledge is power." To know, to learn, to seek and find hidden things of wisdom, things of real worth and lasting value, things that will never wear out because they are baptized in the fountain of perennial truth and thereby given a lease of eternal life—this, I hold, is man's supreme right and loftiest privilege. No man can steal knowledge—he may steal its pretense; no man can buy knowledge—it is not for barter or sale. To own it, in the right sense, requires thought, labor, effort; and many will not pay this price; yet it is the only coin current here—all else is counterfeit. A friend of mine some days since showed me an oriole's nest, made of horse hair and hung from a stout cord which the bird had flung across the twigs of a pecan tree. Here was instinct, skill, and adaptation. Orioles had been building nests before our fathers brought horses to Louisiana, or had twisted cotton into cords, yet this wise little builder used something better and stouter than strands of grass. Brother Goodale, of Baton Rouge, La., once said to us boys at Centenary, "I would like to know how the little bird builds its nest." Not that he or any other had any use for the nest, but there was the passion for learning, for knowing the useful, beautiful things in Nature's great school. Those old English poets—and they wrote right good poetry, considering their limitations—had some things to say about "the flower in the crannied wall" and "the primrose by the river side." They even intimated if we knew all about these things we would know more about God. The poet saw far beyond the flower; its beauty was evanescent, he saw the eternal. This is a vision worth having. Much of the joy of life, the beauty and worth of life, lie in the seeing and the knowing.

My friend, the critic, said I was reactionary, because I plead for the points and principles in church and State that had stood the test of time and, as I judged, had proved their worth by years of trial and experience. For life and affairs related thereto are like a game we sometimes play. The forfeit of a misplay is to return to the goal and start anew. Men swing away from our Federal Constitution in the conduct of civil affairs, enact laws that are contrary to fundamental statements, or teach fancied new, improved doctrines that are subversive of the rights and liberties of the people, or assume powers not delegated to them by popular franchise and organic law, and thereby create unrest, evil, riot, disturbance throughout the body politic. A certain William Shakespeare, of fairly well established fame, says:

Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven
As make angels weep."

Then comes the storm, and the ship of State, with all the people aboard, undergoes no little stress of weather, until with broken spars, battered hulls and torn sails, she returns to the old port for new credentials and refitting. No, I am not "reactionary," but I am strongly "actionary." I don't believe in punching holes in the drum head to find where the noise comes from, or, like Pat, putting the full "powder in horn" in the musket for one load. I thank God there are some things in this old world that can't be improved on. It would be right hard to make a prettier sky than God Almighty has created, or a love sweeter than that of a little child. Men can work with nature, but cannot excel nature's work. It took time and patience, courage and genius, years of self denial, toil, and suffering to build this great American Commonwealth and crystallize its deathless principles of law and government into the very fiber of our being, and with these a religion of home and heart. These, by the grace of God, we will guard to the end.

PICKPOCKETS OF THE SPIRIT.

By Julia W. Wolfe.

A class of spiritual burglars ravages the earth, as robbers and thieves break locks and steal valuables. The prey of these criminals is the illusions which alone make life worth living for hundreds of struggling souls. The very word "illusion" enrages those men and women—chiefly women—who vaunt their devotion to the "plain truth" as if it were the only virtue.

A widow passes her life in the cleaning and running and mending and meager cooking by which a humble lodging-house is made to keep soul and body together for herself and four children. She is sustained through the monotonous and weary days by an unquestioning belief that when the weary life is ended she and her fellow-disciples will sit on thrones and mete out judgment to the nations of the earth.

Along comes a spiritual burglar, and cries, "Fiddlestick! An old woman's story."

Behold, the strong tower of faith into which the tired woman had been able to withdraw from toil is forever desolated by the hand of the thief!

A little child, scrawny, sallow, with scanty hair and red-circled eyes, has dreamed through all her nine years that she will grow up a beautiful woman, to whom scores of handsome youths will offer their homage. When her mother scolded, her teacher frowned, or her eyes pained her, she forgot herself in a dream.

One day a conscientious teacher lost patience with the child's absence of mind, and told her in a few cruel phrases what she looked like and what she was growing up to be.

When that school-day ended, the teacher walked away scot-free; but she deserved the dock and the prison more richly than many a felon, for she had stolen and destroyed an irreplaceable treasure.—Christian Guardian.

THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

There are some items concerning the Alexandria District that might be of interest to the readers of the Advocate, particularly those who are within the bounds of the Alexandria District.

As to the district parsonage, during the past three years about $600 has been spent in making necessary repairs and improvements on the property. This has all been paid except $70. Besides this, insurance has been kept up. Another premium will be due in November, covering insurance for three years. Paving, for street and sidewalk, has cost some $700. All notes to date have been paid. There are two notes of approximately $140 due for paving, and three of about $40 for the walk. The district parsonage is a comfortable home for the presiding elder, but needs some other repairs and attention.

During the present year one young man has been licensed to preach. He is giving full proof of his ministry. There are four other applicants to come before the licensing committee, which will meet at Alexandria on Nov. 3. We will also have before that committee one man asking for recommendation to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

During the past year we have had a number of good meetings on the district. These have brought many into the church. Our preachers are all faithful and constant at their work.

Since coming to the district, it has been my good fortune to see marked improvement at several points. At Pineville, Rev. C. V. Breithaupt ministered to our people for three years. His business affairs permitted him only to fill the pulpit on Sundays. But under his constructive efforts much good has been made possible. During the last year of his service, the church paid to the preacher only $300. He promoted the raising of a budget sufficient to secure a regular pastor. This year the church will pay a salary of $1,200, and make a creditable showing on other claims. They have also raised $1,000 for improvements on the church and have been paying rent of $30 per month for the parsonage. They expect to build a parsonage immediately. The membership has increased until there are now more than two hundred and fifty members. Congregations are large and the Sunday school is full. This people have recently presented their pastor with a new Ford. The pastor at Pineville also ministers to the men in the Veterans' Hospital near Pineville. For the support of this work, the General Board of Missions from the War Fund is paying $600 per year. Pineville is in a good way of advancing to a strong point in our Conference.

Elizabeth was left without a pastor the year that the present incumbent was assigned to the district. The congregation at Elizabeth was worshiping in a mill company church, together with the Baptists. They had no house for their preacher and no furniture. It was difficult to get this congregation to agree to pay as much as $75 per month to the support of the pastor. About the first of March, Brother A. E. Barrett was secured for this work. He labored faithfully for the remaining Conference year. During the last year, Brother J. F. Waltman labored faithfully at the same point. During his service, the company built a church for the use of the Methodist people, at a cost of about $8,000. This church has been fitted by the congregation with good furniture. They have secured a comfortable home for their pastor, and this year are paying $1,600 for three Sundays. The charge will pay about $1,900. Brother W. S. Henry is having a good year there.

About a year ago, Rev. L. I. McCain went to Woodworth and held a meeting, which resulted in greatly renewing the religious life of that town and also in stirring our Methodist people to the extent that they offered to pay a salary of $1,200 for two Sundays, and also meet the other financial obligations of the church. That point was attached to Lecompte. Rev. H. W. Bowman was sent there at the last Conference. He has had a good year. He has received forty-three members this year, besides those who came in through the work of Brother McCain, who will be counted as this year's gain, seventy-six. He reports that all financial claims against the charge will be paid in full.

Two years ago, Jena and Jonesville paid the preacher $814, according to report made to the Conference. Their parsonage was in very bad state of repair. Last year the assessment was paid. At the last session of the Annual Conference, Harrisonburg was removed from the charge, leaving Jena and Jonesville to themselves. They assessed for their pastor a salary of $1,500, and will pay it this year. At the present time, carpenters, painters, and paper-hangers are at work on the parsonage. A comfortable house, furnished anew, and a salary of $1,500 will await the coming of the new pastor. It is with much regret that we must report that Brother B. H. Sheppard expects to lay down his work, asking for superannuation. He has wrought well, however, under great difficulties this year. His people have also done well.

Last year a new charge was constituted, Melder circuit. Brother Moss has had a fine year on this circuit. He has reported considerable gain in membership, members of the church restored in their religious experiences, and four Sunday schools organized. The people are now putting forth every effort to raise their finances and also to purchase a parsonage for their pastor. This is an important field that must receive attention.

These are points that it was my purpose to mention particularly. There are others that have also made good advancement. Among these the following might be mentioned: Coushatta has increased the preacher's salary $600, and is completing a $20,000 church; Boyce has largely increased the salary of the pastor and has rebuilt the parsonage; the Colfax circuit has been strengthened by having Tioga attached, and is on a firm, self-sustaining basis; Campti circuit has made substantial progress; Oakdale has increased the salary and built a new church this year, though the latter is not paid for; Bunkie has increased the salary, is reaching out and bringing in people from the country, and is going along well; Marksville charge is doing well under Brother French; the people of Alexandria are giving their pastor the greatest co-operation—he is preaching to large congregations and is doing much good work.

All the other points on the district are in good hands and are in a satisfactory condition. The brethren have wrought well. There are other items that deserve mention, but this paper is now too long.

REV. WILLIAM GREEN BURKS.

Rev. William Green Burks, son of Joseph Marcus and Nancy Cornelius Burks, was born in McNairy County, Tennessee, a few miles north of Corinth, Miss., Jan. 17, 1870. He was reared on the farm, and attended the public schools. When he was a young man he attended the Chalybeate Springs Normal School, where he spent several years under Professor Walker, receiving the foundation for a liberal education, which he continued at home as an itinerant Methodist preacher.

He joined the Methodist Church when a small boy of ten years of age. At twenty-two years of age, he was licensed to preach, and the next year, 1893, he joined the North Mississippi Annual Conference, at Columbus, Miss., Bishop R. K. Hargrove presiding. He was ordained deacon at Water Valley, Dec. 1, 1895, by Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald. At Tupelo, Miss., Dec. 7, 1902, he was ordained elder by Bishop Joseph S. Key.

On July 16, 1893, he was happily married to Miss Minnie Lynch, who survives him. To this union ten children were born, nine of whom still live, as follows: Mrs. Ida May Gandy, Pine Bluff, Ark.; Miss Aline is teaching in Kossuth; Miss Evangeline is dietitian in a hospital in Philadelphia, Pa.; Miss Willie Lee is teaching in Union, Miss.; Marcus is attending Millsaps College; Miss Jessie, William G., Jr., and the twins, Elizabeth and Virginia, are attending school in Kossuth. His devotion to his family was beautiful.

As an itinerant Methodist preacher, Brother Burks has served the following charges: 1893-6, Jonesboro circuit, three years; Dumas, 1896-7. Then he located on account of poor health. Readmitted in 1898 at Water Valley, he was appointed to Ashland, where he remained one year. His next appointment was Blue Springs, 1899-1903, four years; he next served at Ripley, four years, 1903-7; then he went to Grenada circuit, serving two and one-half years; in the middle of his third year he was appointed to Guntown, where he finished the year; he next served Winona circuit for one year; he served Byhalia two years, 1911-13; his next pastorate was Shuqualak, 1913-15, two years; then he served Dumas again, remaining there four years; from Dumas he went to the Blue Mountain charge for three years; at the last session of our Conference he was appointed to Kossuth, where he has had a successful year. At the fourth quarterly conference, resolutions were unanimously passed asking for his return for another year.

Brother Burks was a strong preacher. He was timid and shrinking is his nature, so he never passed for his real worth.

On Saturday, Oct. 13, after a brief illness, he passed away in his parsonage home at Kossuth. Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church in Kossuth, and concluded at Henry Cemetery, Corinth, Miss., by Rev. E. R. Smoot, Rev. S. A. Brown, Rev. B. P. Fullilove, Rev. D. R. McDougal, and this writer, on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 14, 1923.

Brother Burks must have realized that he was going away soon, for only a short time ago he composed these lines:

"There's a coming day, and it is not far,
When the golden gates will for me unbar,
When the Heavenly Home in its glory bright
Will burst on my enraptured sight.

"There's a coming day—life's journey done,
Its battles fought, the victory won,
Its toils and pains and perils o'er,
When I shall rest forevermore."

Brother Burks will not attend our Annual Conference at Greenville this year, for he has gone to be with his Lord. We shall miss him. This writer feels a distinct loss in the passing of a real friend. Sincere sympathy for his family.

DEVOTIONAL READING AND THINKING.

By Arthur Madison Shaw.

Bishop Candler has wisely observed that what is needed to-day is not more translations of the Bible, but more people to read the Bible. And I would add one or two observations to this timely utterance of the great Bishop. The first is, that we are not greatly in need of more books written about the Bible, or about theologies supposed to be based on the Bible. If one attempts to keep up with all the latest discussions of Scripture and theology, he will have no time to read the Bible, or to study its doctrines and precepts; much less to live them out in actual service to God and men.

The theology that is needed to-day is the theology of the Holy Scriptures, drawn directly from that source and assimilated by the aid of the Holy Spirit. In utilizing this, various translations are useful—not that one may be subtituted for others, but that they may supplement each other—but we hardly need any more translations. It is questionable if we need all that we have. But we do need, regularly, systematically, earnestly, prayerfully, to read the Bible, that its message may grip and control our lives.

Again, I would observe that the greatest need is not for more study of the Bible and of religious books—taking the word "study" in the sense of trying to find out all that a book means. A measure of that is needed, of course. Mere superficial skimming of books is a waste of time. They should be read thoughtfully, or not at all. But, even in dealing with ordinary literature, there is immense profit to be derived from reading for inspiration. And a much larger share of our religious reading should be devotional than is now the case. Particularly should the Bible be read devotionally. The lives of the patriarchs, the Psalms, the book of Job, the Prophets, and the New Testament are full of such divine truth and inspiration that, if one will forget all analysis and criticism and read simply in the spirit of devotion, he will be led almost insensibly into the most edifying and inspirational worship. The words of Jesus, wherever I read them, always fill me with a sense of the nearness and goodness of God, and of the reality of the spiritual life.

Many of us read much of that which is calculated to make us learned or wise; but how much do we read of what will make us good? Even in reading the Bible and other religious writings, we feed the intellect and starve the spirit; whereas in much that passes under our eyes, and much more that lies within our reach, are vast sources of inspiration and spiritual energy, if we only have within us the right kind of medium and receiver.

In addition to the Bible, there are many well-known books suited to devotional reading. But I wish to call attention to the devotional value of two that have helped me greatly—two that I have not heard mentioned as devotional books. The first is "The Tongue of Fire," by Arthur. I had often seen notices of this book, and had seen the book in various libraries; but I acknowledge my debt to Bishop Candler for having called particular attention to it. It has much of instruction in it, something of entertainment, and some exhortation; but its outstanding virtue is in the fact that it brings one into an atmosphere where "deep calleth unto deep," and one rises from the reading with his spirit tuned to the touch of God!

The other book is "Wesley's Journal." I am sure that many have discovered the inspirational power of this book; but I doubt if many have thought of keeping it always on the table, and reading brief portions now and then, simply for the sake of the divine uplift that it brings and the worship it inspires. For preachers especially, such use of it is of great value. A personal story may serve to enforce this: My wife remarked not long ago that she thought the best preaching I had ever done was at a certain time and place, and asked how it was that I seemed to excel all former and subsequent efforts there, when the crowds were neither larger nor more appreciative than many that I have had. I replied, "I was reading Wesley's Journal." My little daughter then chimed in: "Well, daddy, why don't you read it again?" Hence, I now keep it always at hand! Its inspiration is literally inexhaustible.

Literature, music, and painting minister primarily, not to intellect, but to spirit. The appeal is, emotional, esthetic, or religious; and a modicum of such ministry is essential to the life of the soul. Recently I stood for almost an hour before Lundahl's painting of "Christ on Calvary." I am no art critic, and I observed the details and technique of the picture only sufficiently to discover that it is more true to the New Testament than most such paintings that I have seen. But its appeal went straight to my heart—I trembled, wept and worshiped; and had I been there alone, I am sure I should have sung and shouted praises to Father, Son and Holy Spirit. The experience was to me a revival. In like manner does devotional reading uplift and enlarge the spirit.

VITAL SUGGESTIONS FOR THE GOLDEN CROSS ENROLLMENT.

By Dr. Charles C. Jarrell, General Secretary, Hospital Board.

I. For the Pastor.

1. Read Matthew 28:19, Mark 16:15, Luke 9:2, and reflect that the same Lord who said "Go, Preach, Teach," said also, "Heal."

Determine that Southern Methodism shall qualify as apostolic by doing the full work of a New Testament church—Missions, Evangelism, Christian Education, and the Ministry of Healing.

2. Read Discipline (1922) paragraphs 534-535. Read also the leaflet, "Golden Cross Society." Master the simple and flexible plan of organization of your church.

3. Appoint as director for your charge (one for each congregation in it) some man or woman of courageous leadership and social vision, who knows how to organize and who will say with you, "this big thing shall be done."

4. Secure his or her consent to serve, and ask the quarterly conference to confirm the selection.

5. Give your moral support to the movement and open the way for the enrollment when the "peak-day" comes.

II. For the Local Director.

1. Rejoice that our church is at the beginning of one of her greatest undertakings. Rejoice that you are a pioneer and a pathfinder.

2. Read and master the literature sent from the Central Office.

3. You and the pastor secure a strong Hospital Committee to serve with you, or use the Social Service Committee, if one exists.

4. By personal conference, enlist the intelligent support of the heads of the various organizations of the church. Report your progress to the pastor.

5. Get the pastor to designate some Sunday in the enrollment period as Enrollment Sunday, when the cause is to be publicly presented. Where this day is designated by your Annual Conference, come as near using this day as local conditions permit.

6. Begin from one to two months beforehand placing our literature in the hands of the people. Study the best method of doing this. Devise for yourself methods of publicity. Home-made posters are often effective.

7. Let every congregation, every organization, every Sunday school class, every Epworth League, have the nature and method of the work carefully explained. Get as many Sunday school classes as possible to agree beforehand to endeavor to become "100% classes." Explain the button and the enlistment card.

8. Announce at least a week (on circuits a month) in advance that Golden Cross Enrollment Day is coming, and what day. Have ample supply of membership cards, and distribute widely and wisely through all the Sunday school classes, the League, and the congregation, that each member and adherent and friend of the church may know ahead of time what the work is, and be ready on the designated day. Explain the different grades of membership and make it plain that the enrollment is a cash proposition.

9. On the designated day, let a message by the director or a sermon by the pastor set forth the obligation of the church to follow the example and command of the Lord to heal the sick. Show how she can do this with the Golden Cross Society. The "Parable of the Good Samaritan," or "Jesus the Healer," or "The Works of the New Testament Church," would do for the subject.

10. Let the signed cards, with the cash to cover, be taken up at once. Then let the director and his committee complete the canvass the following week and report promptly to the General Office a correct list of all members by grades. The total amount raised should be sent in with this report—the General Board will make the proper distribution.

We can make it the rule in Southern Methodism for every man, woman and child at church and Sunday school on the designated Sunday to go home with a Golden Cross button on. Think what this would mean for Methodism and humanity!

APPEAL FOR THE ORPHANAGE AND OLD WOMAN'S HOME, JACKSON, MISS.

The railroads generously donate a car to run from Picayune, to Meridian, State Line to Meridian, Theadville to Quitman, and thence to Meridian, besides cars from other points to Jackson over other roads.

Let all friends of the Baptist and Methodist Orphanages and the Old Ladies' Home at Jackson begin to prepare what they wish to donate to them. The cars will begin to run about December.

These four hundred children need to eat and wear everything you have for your children, and when there are no younger children to wear the outgrown clothes, send them to the orphans. They need tablets and pencils for school. The two Orphanages consume many gallons of our good home-made ribbon cane molasses.

W. H. PATTON.

Shubuta, Miss.

TO THE MEMBERS AND VISITORS OF THE NORTH MISSISIPPI CONFERENCE.

We are looking forward with pleasure to the visit you are to pay us in November.

We are anxious that you should enjoy your stay.

If you have suggestions to make as to your entertainment, we will appreciate receiving them before assignments are made that all things may be arranged as far as possible for your comfort and convenience.

You will in due time receive from the entertainment committee your card of assignment, designating the home where you are to be entertained.

Please retain this card—don't lose it.

When you arrive you will be met by the transportation committee, which will convey you to "Big Brothers Hall," headquarters of the Conference.

At headquarters you will register, receive your badge, check your assignment, and then be conveyed to your home.

We welcome you to our city, and while you are here it will be our very great pleasure to devote to your entertainment the best we have.

Yours faithfully,

E. NASH BROYLES, Pastor.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Louisville Conference.—When I arrived on Thursday morning, Bishop Darlington, presiding, informed me that everything was in readiness for the presentation of the plan of special effort at 11 o'clock. This was Bishop Darlington's fourth and last Conference, and I regretted the fact that my teamwork with him this fall in behalf of the superannuate movement should end so suddenly. He has been so kind and considerate, so efficient in his co-operation, that I know I shall miss him terribly. However, it is comforting to know that other bishops are in their places along the way, and each of them, I am sure, will be just as responsive and helpful.

Bishop McMurry was scheduled to attend the Louisville Conference and assist in presenting our program, but he was prevented from doing so on account of being busily engaged entertaining an ugly carbuncle on the back of his neck. So the work was left to Bishop Darlington and myself, and we did our best to make the Conference thoroughly understand the program for the ensuing year in behalf of the superannuate cause. The preachers were very attentive, listening closely to every word that was spoken and doing so in attitude of acceptance and determination to carry on. One brother made my heart sink when he told me that he thought a number of the preachers remained on the outside while the program was being presented inside. But later I learned that this brother was surely mistaken, for one well acquainted with the Conference who was on the outside told me positively that he did not see but two or three preachers outside during our program, and they expressed the intention to go within if they were able to find seats. All of this indicates the feeling of the preachers toward this movement. Surely they are interested in it; and if their willingness to hear and understand the plan may be taken as an index, they will do their best to raise their respective quotas.

I was especially pleased with the reaction of the presiding elders when I spoke to them concerning certain service expected at their hands during the meeting of the Conference. Every one of them responded heartily, giving me to understand without doubt that they would do everything requested in full measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over. Since they are blue-blooded Kentuckians, it can be expected that they will keep their word.

One brother said to me: "Well, I thought at the General Conference that the special effort for superannuate endowment should be postponed for a while; but now that it is on, you can depend upon it that I will spend myself to the utmost to make it successful." I know he meant what he said, for his actions at the Conference and elsewhere prove his sincerity.

It was especially pleasing to strike hands with a group of very young preachers who were talking together in front of the church. One of them said: "We are enthusiastically in favor of the movement for our worn-out preachers. We have just been agreeing among ourselves that we cannot permit anything this year to hinder us from reaching whatever is expected from our charges." How delightful it was to have these dear boys give such assurance of a willingness to do their part!

After explaining the plan, meeting with the Bishop and his cabinet, meeting with the Conference Board of Finance, and holding two or three conferences on important matters with individuals, I left for our busy offices in St. Louis, feeling that the Louisville Conference would not fail to do a worthy part by the special effort for superannuate endowment.

Not for Himself, But in Behalf of Another.—At an Annual Conference held recently I met with the Conference Board of Finance in the midst of its work to determine the amount to be paid for the claimants for the year just closed. As I walked into the room a dear old brother was making a speech to the Board. The sight of a bent and feeble superannuate presenting his need to such a Board was not unusual, for frequently my heart is pained and my head bowed in shame as I witness such scenes. But this brother was not pleading his own case; he was there pleading the case of another claimant and urging the Board to do its best for the one represented. As he finished his remarks and was carefully feeling his way from the room he was asked by a member of the Board this question: "Brother ——, you have been urging us to do our best for another. What about yourself? How goes it with you? Have you had a comfortable year?" Further similar questions by members of the Board and much urging by all finally induced the superannuate to tell what had happened to him during the year. He had been faithful to his charge and had not neglected any duty devolving upon him. He said they were not able to pay him anything, but they "nearly loved him to death." Then he told of an incident early in the year when he was thrown from a vehicle and had, as I recall, both arms broken, one leg broken, and was terribly bruised in all of his body, barely escaping with his life. The doctors bandaged and patched him up, and, according to other witnesses, he kept right on riding that circuit, which paid him nothing but nearly loved him to death. This dear man would rise from his bed of affliction and have himself taken to his pulpit in a far-away country church and would sit there, unable to stand, preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ when he knew that he was receiving practically nothing in the way of remuneration for his services. Long before he could hold the lines in his hand to drive his horse he would drop them over one of his injured arms and manage in some way to guide the horse along the path he was itinerating.

I would like to go on telling other things in connection with this case, but I have given enough for my readers to complete the picture. This is the spirit of the average preacher, whether he is active or superannuated. In the name of all that is pure and good I maintain that the church of the living God cannot neglect these prophets of the Lord and stand guiltless at the judgment seat. The great movement now setting in, looking to provide a comfortable support for worn-out preachers, is one that should stir us to the depths of our beings. We should rise in determination to surmount every obstacle and with a mighty effort do the thing that calls to us out of such pitiful deprivations.

Interesting News Items.—Our Second Church in Maysville, Ky., has the honor of being the very first to report the amount of its quota agreed to, the names of the members of the Charge Special Effort Committee, and the plan to be used in raising the quota. All hats off to this church, and let us give them the grand honors.

---

The presiding elders, without exception, are co-operating with the Directing Committee in a manner to make us all very happy. These men are not only doing what they are requested, but they are responding in a spirit of enthusiasm and great interest. If this thing becomes a habit with the three hundred presiding elders of the church we will soon have to take "forgotten" out of the "forgotten man."

---

It is very gratifying to find that in many of the first quarterly conferences thus far reporting on quotas agreed upon are voluntarily adding to the minimum amount expected from them. This is as it should be. Certainly no church in the connection should fail to reach its minimum quota, and most of them should go beyond the minimum expected.

---

Every day in every way the active preacher is coming nearer to superannuation.

CHEER UP.

The pathway is pretty steep, lad,
It's hard and it's rough to your feet,
But the sky above is blue, lad,
And the breezes are cool and sweet.

There's a thorn for every rose, lad,
Every smile is close to a tear;
But the thorn protects the flower, lad,
And the smile drives away the fear.

The rainbow lurks in the cloud, lad,
Though hid by the rush of the storm,
And Poverty's meanest garb, lad,
May enfold an exquisite form.

So banish the doubt and fear, lad,
And still search for the good and true,
And Life's tree, though warped and twisted,
Will most surely bear fruit for you.

THE LEGEND OF THE WHITE CHRYSANTHEMUM.

By Mrs. Caroline Van Petten.

Long, long ago, in a plain not far from the city of Kyoto, at that time the capital of Japan, two little blossoms grew side by side; one, the color of bright, new gold; and the other a pure white.

Straight and tall the stems grew, and wider and wider the little blossoms opened, while they happily listened to all that the sunshine and the whispering breezes could tell them.

By and by little Goldy grew discontented, and said she wished she could go to the great city where were so many beautiful things, but her white sister said, "No, no, we are placed here, so here we ought to stay with the flowers and the grasses that love us!"

But Goldy was not convinced, and when, one day, a man came and looked at the two flowers and said: "This yellow flower is just the one I need for my collection. I will take it home with me," Goldy was too happy to care, though her little white sister wept with loneliness.

"Please take me, too," begged the little flower, in sorrow; but the gardener said: "No, I have plenty of white and do not need you," and went off without her, carrying her little sister home.

Goldy was so cared for and petted that she grew large and handsome, so that one would not know her for the same blossom. Sometimes she thought of her sister, but she never wanted to go back to comfort her.

In the meantime the poor, lonely little flower, after crying a while, thought: "This will not do. I must be bright and cheery, even if I am sad." so she turned a smiling face to the grasses and flowers who tried to comfort her.

Ever so many days went by, when at last a very great man, who was traveling along the road, stopped at the door of the gardener's house and asked if he knew where he could find a white chrysanthemum with sixteen petals. The gardener did not know, but showed him his handsome Goldy, whose petals were just that number.

"No, no," said the man, "it must be white, and it must be in its natural state," and he went off disappointed.

Now it so happened that his road passed right by the spot where the lonely little white flower stood. As she heard footsteps approaching the tears stood on her petals, for she remembered that some one who walked like that had taken away her sister and had not wanted her.

But the great man stopped as he drew near in his palanquin and, in a tone of joyful surprise, said: "Why, here at last is just what I've been seeking so long!" And he lifted the dear little plant very gently from the ground, saying: "Go with me, little flower, I need you in my palace."

"But I am only a poor flower of the fields," she answered modestly. "How can I be of use to you?"

"You are pure white and have sixteen perfect petals. You are just the one I have been searching for for months," he told her, and she went with him, her heart filled with happy wonder that she could be wanted in a palace.

Of all that befell the white chrysanthemum after this I can stop now to tell you only this: she was joyfully received in the palace and came to be the best-loved flower in the Empire, even by the Great Emperor himself, and it was all because she was a perfect little flower, who could be brave and cheery in misfortune. Do you suppose the same thing would be as true of children as of flowers? I think it would.—From Boys and Girls of Sunrise Land.

"ABSOLUTE DARKNESS."

The word "absolute" is tabu with the editor of this paper. He says in the family life: "There is no such thing." However, when so distinguished a man as Dr. David Starr Jordan uses the word, it has authority; and that has been one of the delightful characteristics of Dr. Jordan as a public speaker, the freedom with which he uses telling words and phrases, even those of the campus.

Wyandotte Cave.

Early in his career as an educator, when making a second visit to Wyandotte Cave, Indiana, Dr. Jordan became seperated from his party. He tells us in his book, "The Days of a Man," that the huge cavern in the limestone rock extends for several miles and "has never yet been explored to the end. Our party, after penetrating underground for about three miles, started back at noon. Being somewhat in advance of the rest of the party, I decided to try a little experiment and see what absolute darkness would be like. I therefore sat down on 'the Hippopotamus,' a large clay bank in an open chamber, blew out my candle, and prepared to wait for the rest to come up. Meanwhile, however, it was very dark and very quiet, and I went to sleep, awaking just as the last light disappeared around a bend.

"I at once rushed after my friends, but very soon discovered that without light or sound it is impossible to maintain direction. The plan often suggested of following one side steadily in and out of the passages until you come to the end was wholly impracticable, for I was upward of three miles from the entrance, and many side chambers diverge on the way. So, choosing a comparatively open place, I felt about on the floor until I found the track of a woman's shoe, which indicated that the party had passed the spot, and the direction in which they had gone. I then determined to stay right there until I could be rescued. It was damp and cold—a minor matter, of course, when one is young—and occasional droppings of water sounded unusually loud, not having to compete with anything else.

"As the other knew I had walked on ahead, they naturally thought I had gone out; not finding me, however, some said that my interest in botany had led me to roam about for a while, but luncheon or surely dinner would bring me back to the hotel. Fortunately one or two persons, especially one business man, were not satisfied with this argument. So, when I failed to come in for the midday meal, he insisted on sending three guides back to the cave with food and brandy. Along about 4 o'clock, therefore, I heard a noise and soon the men appeared. The flask of spirits I left to others, but the food was welcome." So, during those long hours of waiting, Dr. Jordan was able to experience what "absolute darkness" was like.—California Christian Advocate.

WHERE DOES IT GET AMMUNITION?

Robert P. Manard, a distinguished traveling salesman and deacon in the First Christian Church at Macon, Ga., has recently invented a unique collection box which he recommends as a cure for small church collections. When you "put in a nickel it will ring a bell; when you put in a quarter it rings a bell three times; when a penny is dropped in the box it fires a shot; and when you fail to put in anything it takes your picture."

Be useful where thou livest, that they may
Both want and wish thy pleasing presence still;
Kindness, good parts, great places, are the way
To compass this. Find out men's wants and will,
And meet them there! All worldly joys go less
To the one joy of doing kindness.

—Herbert.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts principles of Christian giving that will ultimately bring into the church a membership of men and women, trained from childhood, that will gladly, joyously give of their substance as God prospers them so freely that the treasury of the Lord will overflow with their offerings. The kingdoms of this world may maintain themselves with taxes collected by force, but the Kingdom of Heaven is supported by a better way.

FACING THE FACTS.

5. Let all the people go to prayer. Prayer has not lost its efficacy, and the church should not forget how to pray. When we have done all else we can do—practiced rigid economy, made necessary retrenchments, met our personal obligations, educated all our people in the principles of Christian stewardship—then God can and will hear our prayers; and who knows but that He will change the tragic facts that now stare us in the face into occasions of glorious opportunity and privilege? If we will do what we can, God will do what He can.

REPORT OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met in annual session, pursuant to call, in the Advocate office, on Thursday, Oct. 18, at 10 a. m. After prayer by E. K. Means, J. F. Foster was re-elected Chairman, and T. H. Lipscomb re-elected Secretary.

The following members were present: Representing the Louisiana Conference, J. F. Foster, C. C. Miller; representing the Mississippi Conference, J. T. Leggett, W. H. Saunders, E. K. Means; representing the North Mississippi Conference, J. H. Felts, T. H. Lipscomb.

The report of the Chairman brought the encouraging news that the Advocate "is now in better financial shape than in years past," the debt having been reduced to $836.88. By another year it is confidently hoped that the entire indebtedness will have been wiped out.

The report of the Editor affirmed that " in the fear of God and with an eye single to the good of the church, I have earnestly sought, in the midst sometimes of perplexing situations, to send out a paper that would strengthen the faith, confirm the hope, and at least help to develop the spirit of Christian love in those who might read it." It called attention also to the request of the Southern Methodist Press Association that Sunday, Jan. 27, be designated throughout the church as Christian Literature Sunday; and the Publishing Committee took action further requesting that the Conference designate some such time for special effort also in behalf of securing new subscriptions.

The report of the Business Manager reveals that the circulation of the Advocate still continues around the 6,000 mark, though there has been a falling off during the year in the amount received from subscriptions, making imperative the prompt payment of all arrearages and activity in behalf of new subscriptions throughout our territory.

Suggested Reorganization, and Change of Name and Place of Publication.

The matter of most far-reaching importance which came before the committee was the adoption, with one dissenting vote, of the following resolutions, to be submitted for consideration at the approaching sessions of the Conferences:

"Resolved, That the approaching sessions of the participating Conferences be asked to act upon the advisability of reorganizing the New Orleans Christian Advocate under the new name of The South Central Christian Advocate.

"Resolved, That they be asked to act further upon the advisability of changing the location of headquarters from New Orleans, La., to Jackson, Miss."

A special committee, consisting of J. F. Foster, of the Louisiana Conference; E. K. Means, of the Mississippi Conference, and T. H. Lipscomb, of the North Mississippi Conference, was designated to present these matters to their respective Conferences, and further consider matters pertaining to publication and preparation for change should such be authorized by action of the several Conferences.

Bids for publication by contract from various firms were submitted in report of Special Committee appointed last year and the matter given extended consideration; the final unanimous action of the committee being expressed in the following resolution presented by J. H. Felts: "That in view of the possible changes that may be ordered by our patronizing Conferences, and in fairness to Brother Chalmers, our Manager and Publisher, we continue our present contract, which is on record, for one more calendar year."

Rev. H. T. Carley, D.D., was re-elected Editor for one year also for like reasons; and the Editor and Publisher were commended for faithful and efficient service rendered.

The following resolution relative to the policy of the paper was adopted:

"That it is the judgment of the Publishing Committee that the columns of the New Orleans Christian Advocate be kept open for a free discussion of all matters of vital interest to the church, that our people may be fully informed of all facts and issues before us."

T. H. Lipscomb was thanked for special committee service rendered, and requested to report the proceedings. On motion, with the benediction by J. H. Felts, the committee adjourned.

T. H. LIPSCOMB, Secretary.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. Theodore Copeland is now engaged in what he terms "a wonderful meeting" at Lexington, Ky.

Rev. C. F. Sheppard, our pastor at Athens, La., has received 51 members into the church this year, 44 of them upon profession of faith.

Rev. John A. Randolph, our pastor at [illegible] Miss., expects to have a 100 per cent report at Greenville. This has been a fine year at [illegible]

Under date of Oct. 16, Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, of Summit, Miss., writes: "We are in the midst of a great meeting in Summit, led by Brother Earl B. Moll."

The Ninth International Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement will be held at the Cadle Tabernacle, Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 28, 1923-Jan. 1, 1924.

Rev. Walter M. Hester, of the Greenwood Springs charge, North Mississippi Conference, reports that he approaches the end of the year with marks of advancement along all lines.

From the Grenada Sentinel of October 19: "Rev. and Mrs. Melville Johnson returned home the first of the week from La Center, Ky., where Mr. Johnson has been conducting a ten days' revival meeting."

In the recent meeting at Crystal Springs, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. W. B. Jones, was assisted by Rev. J. V. Bennett, with Rev. J. M. Lewis as song leader, 24 members were added to the church, 17 of them on profession of faith.

The New Orleans District Standard Training School began its sessions at the First Methodist Church, this city, on last Sunday afternoon. The attendance was good, and there is every prospect that the school will be one of the most successful yet held.

The bulletin of Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., for Oct. 21, was, in effect, a "Louisiana Conference" number, containing a large amount of interesting and valuable information concerning the work of Methodism in Louisiana. It is well worth preserving.

We had the pleasure of meeting Rev. H. N. Harrison, our pastor at New Iberia, La., in the city one day last week. He stated that Rev. Geo. Tucker, general evangelist, would assist him in a meeting beginning last Sunday. Conditions seemed to be favorable for a good revival.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Hand have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Ina Wayne, to Mr. Inman Cooper Rawls, at the Methodist church in Poplarville, Miss., at 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 8. We extend all good wishes in advance of the happy event.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, has sent out 3000 copies of "A Reminder" to his people of the tasks to be completed before the assembling of the Annual Conference at Gulfport, Nov. 14. It is an inspiring message, and we are sure it will greatly forward the work of the church.

Rev. Floyd W. Dick, our pastor at Zwolle, La., assisted the pastor, Rev. T. J. Holladay, in a meeting at Pelican, La., during the month of September. There were about 35 conversions, and the church was revived. We greatly appreciate the fact that attention was called to the Advocate during the meeting, and several new subscriptions secured.

Dr. E. W. O'Neal, formerly of Minneapolis, Minn., later of Duncan, Miss., is assisting Rev. O. W. Bradley in a meeting this week at the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, La. Dr. O'Neal is a great preacher, and the people of Alexandria will enjoy a rare privilege in hearing him. Rev. C. K. Smith, pastor at Pineville, La., will also assist in the meeting.

The recent death of Brother R. S. Austin, of Jackson, La., removed a notable figure from the life of the church at that place. Brother Austin was greatly beloved by hundreds of students who attended "Old Centenary," and the news of his death was received with sorrow throughout the State. The editor of the Advocate feels a personal loss in the going away of this good man.

At the fourth quarterly conference of the Woodville, Miss., charge, a junior board of stewards was elected, a committee was appointed to fix the exact date for celebrating the 100th anniversary of the Woodville Methodist church building, and resolutions commending the services of the pastor, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, and of the presiding elder, Rev. J. R. Jones, who is ending his fourth year on the district, were adopted.

Mrs. R. E. Smith, wife of Dr. R. E. Smith, dean of Centenary College, passed to her reward on Saturday morning from her home in Shreveport, La. Mrs. Smith was an unusually gifted woman, a devout Christian, active in the work of the Noel Memorial Church, to which she belonged, and she will be sorely missed. She is survived by her husband and three children, to whom we extend deepest sympathy.

Miss Caroline Hess, Louisiana Conference Sunday School Elementary Superintendent, has accepted a similar position in the Upper South Carolina Conference, with headquarters at Spartanburg, S. C. Miss Hess has been a faithful and efficient worker in the Sunday school cause in Louisiana, and she will be greatly missed. We congratulate the Upper South Carolina Conference upon securing her services.

We heartily commend the action of the congregation of the First Methodist Church of Alexandria, La., in voting unanimously against the running of the Central Louisiana Fair on Sunday in the future, and commending Mr. Geo. Petrie, president of the Fair Association, for opposing the running of the fair on Sunday this year. We are unalterably opposed to politicalizing and commercializing the Sabbath, as is too often done in Louisiana.

Evangelist Walt Holcomh recently addressed the National Convention of Safety, in its meeting at Buffalo, N. Y. This is the second time Dr. Holcomh has heen honored in this manner, he having previously addressed that body at its annual convention held in Boston, Mass. On his way back to Georgia, Dr. Holcomb stopped over a Sunday in Washington, where he preached at the Representative Methodist Church in the morning and at the Fifth Baptist Church in the evening.

Dr. and Mrs. A. F. Watkins, who have spent so many years in Jackson, Miss., where Dr. Watkins has rendered notable service as president of Millsaps College, will make their home for the present at Vicksburg, Miss. The bulletin of the Galloway Memorial Church, in its issue of Oct. 14, pays a beautiful and deserved tribute to Dr. and Mrs. Watkins, who have been identified with the work of that church for a long period of time. We understand that Dr. Watkins is now in good health, which is good news to the church.

Rev. D. E. Kelly, Mississippi Conference evangelist, recently held a great meeting at Glen Allan, Miss., Rev. A. R. Beasley, pastor. Large congregations attended the services, and the interest continued to the close. There were 35 additions to the membership of the various churches of the community, about 18 of them being on profession of faith. At the first regular prayer meeting following the revival, 78 persons were present. Brother Kelly went from Glen Allan to Louise to hold another meeting.

A note from Rev. J. Wilson Brown, Holden, La., brings us the sad news of the sudden and tragic death of Brother Isaac Singletary Richardson, on Thursday of last week, caused by the falling of a log from a loaded wagon. The funeral took place at Carter's cemetery, near Springfield, La., conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. L. Frazier, assisted by Brother Brown, Rev. E. D. Fayard, and Rev. H. T. Cornish, of the Baptist church at Ponchatoula. The deceased is survived by a large family and many relatives and friends, to whom the Advocate extends sincere sympathy.

The Winston County Journal, published at Loulsville, Miss., contains, in its issue of October 19, the resolutions unanimously passed by the church conference of the Methodist church requesting the return for the fifth year of Rev. J. W. Dorman as pastor. The resolutions pay a highly deserved tribute to Brother Dorman for his faithfulness and efficiency in all the work of the church, calling attention to the high esteem in which he is held by the entire community. In reply to the resolutions, Brother Dorman stated that he was seriously thinking of retiring from the active ministry after 44 years of service, though the resolutions would be given prayerful consideration. Brother Dorman is one of the greatly beloved members of the North Mississippi Conference.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. T. A. Ferguson, Laurel, Miss., 4; Rev. J. D. Wroten, New Albany, Miss., 3; Rev. T. J. Holladay, Pelican, La., 2; Rev. Floyd W. Dick, Zwolle, La. (for Pelican), 2; Rev. W. M. Hester, Greenwood Springs, Miss., 2; T. M. Babington, Franklinton, La., 2.

OUR SPECIAL SEASON OF SUNDAY SCHOOL EVANGELISM.

By Dr. John W. Shackford, General Secretary, Sunday School Board.

There is no longer any question that the field of our largest and most immediate evangelistic opportunity and responsibility is with the children and youth who are in our Sunday schools and who are thus already closely related to the church. Other aspects of our evangelistic responsihility we must not neglect, but this field which lies ready to our hand ought to receive our most careful and prayerful attention.

Those who have made a careful study of the opportunites for Sunday school evangelism and have made an intelligent effort to adapt evangelistic processes to the conditions and needs of the pupils in the schools have had a most gratifying experience. In fact, there are a number of pastors who will testify that when they have made adequate provision through a series of years for the evangelistic work in their Sunday schools there have been very few boys and girls of the school who have passed out of the teens without entering into the Christian life and becoming identified with the church.

The General Sunday School Board has felt that we have made far too little use of the splendid possibilities afforded hy our Sunday schools for an adapted and effective evangelism. While an opportunity to decide for Christ has been given, perhaps annually in most of our schools, too often little has been done to prepare for such an occasion in any proper fashion. Little has heen done either to prepare the teacher to co-operate sympathetically in this work of evangelism or to prepare the minds and hearts of the pupils themselves. The Sunday school may be made, and ought to he made, one of the greatest evangelisitc agencies the world has ever seen. The more than 160,000 teachers and officers in the Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, ought to constitute tho strongest possible reenforcement to our pastors in their evangelistic work. The intimate relationship which these Sunday school workers sustain to the pupils of the schools gives them an opportunity unsurpassed in all the organized work of the church for intelligent, sympathetic, personal evangelism of the best sort.

If, however, the splendid opportunity thus afforded by the Sunday schools is to be utilized to the fullest extent, more attention must be given to the study of Sunday school evangelism and to the training of our teachers and officers in this form of service; more attention must be given to adapting our processes of evangelism, and more attention must be given to the pastoral care and training of those who are received into church membership.

The General Sunday School Board is, therefore, asking the co-operation of all our Sunday schools, as far as practicable, in a simultaneous campaign of Sunday school evangelism. The plan, briefly, is as follows:

That the first month or period be given to the preparation of the forces, the training of teachers and other Sunday school workers, in mind and spirit for the work of evangelists; that the second month or period he given to active evangelism in the Sunday school, in the classes and hy personal effort, this period culminating with Confession or Decision Day; and that the third month or period be [illegible] [illegible] preparation of [illegible] for [illegible] [illegible] membership.

The Board suggests for the [illegible] begin with January as the month of the preparation of the forces, that February be devoted to the active evangelistic campaign, leading up to Decision or Confession Day, and that the remainder of the time before Easter be used for the careful preparation of those who are to be received into church membership on Easter Sunday.

In order to assist all Sunday schools desiring to follow out this plan, the General Sunday School Board is supplying, free of cost, a number of specially prepared leaflets, [illegible] for use in evangelistic study groups and for the general direction of the workers in Sunday school evangelism. These should be ordered of the General Sunday School Board, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Personal fellowship with Jesus Christ is central in Christian experience. If we shall succeed in leading our pupils into this relationship, we shall not have failed utterly, even though many other things have been imperfectly done. Here we all agree. But evangelism is a more profound and complex work than is often supposed. There must be the growth as well as the ripening of the grain. Harvesting is only a part of the process. We think of conversion or decision for Christ as an act of a moment. In reality, this eventful moment grows out of the past religious experience and is conditioned upon it. The Sunday school affords us the opportunity to deal with the continuous process of seed sowing and cultivation as well as with the harvesting. If there is to he the largest and most abiding outcome, none of these must be neglected.

WHY MEN FAIL.

Major William T. Morgan is one of the men who enlisted as a private in the World War and came out a major. At present his job is delivering a course of lectures throughout the United States under the auspices of the International Correspondence Schools.

Among the favorite topics upon which he speaks are, "Why Men Fail," "Why Men Are Not Promoted," "Making Good Where You Are," and "Finding and Holding a Joh."

Speaking to a group of men from the Street Railway and Light Company of New Orleans, Major Morgan inquired:

"Is there any job in this organization you would like to have?" To this sally the men replied with a laugh. Then the major came hack at them by asking, "Do you know all about the job you are on?" To this there was no affirmative answer. "That's the reason," went on Major Morgan, "why you haven't a bigger job. I have put the same question to nine thousand people like you in the last three weeks and have found none who would say they knew everything ahout their job."

Speaking directly of why men fail, the Major said:

"It is safe to say that ninety per cent of all failures in America are caused by one or more of the following reasons:

"The failure did not find his right place in the world.

"The failure has not mastered his job.

"The failure has no capacity for hard work.

"The failure will not overcome difficulties.

"The failure is not reliable, not trustworthy, and cannot be depended upon; his character will not stand the spotlight of publicity.

"The failure is not willing to stand alone.

"The man failing to reach the top has ceased to grow."—The Baptist Young People.

BROTHER R. S. AUSTIN was born March 1, 1846, near Port Hudson, La. When a small child, his father, the late Louis S. Austin, bought a plantation near Jackson, East Feliciana Parish, La., and moved there for the purpose of educating his children.

Brother Austin, as a very young man, joined the Confederate Army, and served with distinction during that bloody period; and, after hostilities were over, he again materially assisted in saving his country from carpetbag rule during the ten years after the Civil War.

Brother Austin had been a member of the Methodist church about fifty years, superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school for about thirty years, and during most of the time for the last thirty years he was church treasurer, recording steward, and church secretary.

About forty-eight or forty-nine years ago, Brother Austin married Miss Anna Holcombe Austin, of Jackson, La., and while they had no children of their own, they reared four sets of orphan children, their nephews and nieces.

At the time of Brother Austin's death he was a widower, his saintly wife having preceded him to the grave about three years.

Since Sister Austin's death, Brother Austin had visited most of his living relatives in Louisiana, Texas, Alabama, and just two weeks prior to his last illness he had returned from a prolonged visit to his nephews and nieces in New York and New Jersey, who were delighted to have him, and who, he said, gave him the time of his life.

Uncle Bob, as he was lovingly called by all who knew him, was an unusual man in many respects. He was a fun-loving man, always in a good humor, always looking on the bright side of every subject, always looking out for the interest of the church.

He was buried from the Methodist church, on Sept. 24, 1923, assisted by the Masons, he having joined Plaines Lodge about forty years ago.

In the little town of Jackson, La., God's people mourn because a good man, a good citizen, a patriot, a churchman has fallen, the like of whom we will not soon see again in our midst.

DR. A. L. JARRATT, of Batesville, Miss., died at Eureka Springs, Ark., on the night of Oct. 11, 1923. He was the son of R. F. and K. A. Jarratt, born on March 22, 1835, in Limestone County, Ala. He died in his eighty-ninth year. He was married to Miss Emma Brooks, in Marshall County, Miss., April 24, 1861. To this union were born eight children, four of whom and the wife preceded him to the Spirit World. The living children are: B. E. Jarratt and Mrs. Lula Jones, both of Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. Wilma Ellis, of Eureka Springs, Ark., and M. E. Jarratt, of Batesville, Miss. There are seven grandchildren. Dr. Jarratt was a Confederate Veteran and a surgeon in the war between the States. He was among the oldest Masons in the State, having joined before the Civil War. He professed faith in Christ when a boy, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and lived a consistent Christian. He greatly loved his church and her doctrines. He was a Bible reader and student. He was deeply interested in all the great doctrines of the Bible. He was pre-eminently a Bible Christian. Dr. Jarratt suffered much the last few years of his life; still, he made his way to church, and was often in the Bible class in Sunday school, remaining to hear the Gospel which fed his soul. He belonged to the class of the old-time Southern gentleman in his courtesy and his high regard for womanhood; but it was in his religious convictions where he was seen conspicuously, standing for the old-time faith and Gospel. He has not lived in vain—his noble children stand loyally by the same faith, church, and father's God. Evidently a rich reward awaits this brother and venerable saint of the Lord.

MRS. W. T. SIMMONS.

Our church and community life have suffered a great loss in the death of Sister Simmons, which occurred on Sunday, Sept. 30, at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Simmons, before her marriage, was Miss Mary Ella Lott, and was born in Kilmichael, Miss., Feb. 14, 1866, and moved to Arkansas in 1899, and was married to her surviving husband, W. T. Simmons, July 28, 1903.

Upon her marriage, the grave and delicate duty of rearing her husband's three children, two small sons and a little daughter, devolved upon her. I dare say that no woman has ever met this responsibility more beautifully than she did. These sons are now splendid men, and the daughter, a lovely woman, and their affection for her in life was beautiful, and their grief at her death was truly touching. They could not have loved her more had she been their own mother.

Only one child was born to her, a son Thomas, now a young man of great promise. Her love for her only boy was one of the most beautiful things I've ever witnessed. She was planning large things for his future. I trust that, despite her going, these plans may be realized in his life.

Besides her aged husband, stepsons and stepdaughter and son already mentioned, she is survived by two brothers, R. E. and Y. D. Lott, of Mississippi. These brothers, the only surviving members of this splendid Southern family, came from their far-away home to attend the funeral of their sister whom they loved so tenderly. The grief of these brothers was heart-breaking. After all others had left the grave, they remained. It was pathetic to see these splendid men standing beside each other at the grave, each wiping the tears from his eyes.

She was buried from the First Methodist Church of Benton, Ark., of which she had been a devoted member for many years, on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 2, at 3 o'clock. The large auditorium and annex were filled to overflowing with those who knew and loved her. As an attestation of the esteem in which she was held, I desire to mention the fact that every place of business in the city was closed for the funeral.

The floral offerings were beautiful and profuse, the gift of loved ones, friends, and different organizations of which she was a member. She was prominent in many organizations, but it was in the church and the Order of the Eastern Star that she did her greatest work. She was president of the Woman's Missionary Society of the church she loved for many years, and for four years was Worthy Matron of the Order of the Eastern Star. This Order rendered their beautiful burial service at the grave.

I do not believe that it was a coincidence that the end should have come to this good woman on Sunday afternoon. It was beautiful to have her go to heaven on Sunday.

She glorified every relation in life and "has fallen on sleep." "She is not, for God hath taken her." Burial was in beautiful Rosemont Cemetery, where that which was mortal of this noble woman awaits the resurrection morn.

He who gives a child a book
Gives that child a sweeping look
  Through its pages
  Down the ages;

Gives that child a ship to sail
Where the far adventures hail Down the sea
  Of destiny!

Gives that child a vision wide
As the skies where stars abide Anchored in
  The love of Him;

Gives that child great dreams to dream:
Sunlit ways that glint and gleam
  Where the sages
  Tramp the ages.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

From the Conference Secretary.

Dear Leaguers: Here's some news for you! We're going to make this the greatest year the League Conference has ever known—if you will help make it so. And a splendid way to make it the best year your Chapter has ever known is to get into the competition for the District Banner that will be awarded at the Conference next June to the District that has the highest percentage on the District Standard of Excellence, which includes the following points:

Fifty per cent for highest average of points on Conference Standard of Efficiency. This means that the points each Chapter makes will be added in with the points of all the other Chapters in the district to determine the average percentage per Chapter for the district.

Fifteen per cent for highest percentage paid on Conference Fund pledges.

Fifteen per cent for greatest number of Chapters doing Epworth League team work, which includes visiting and assisting other Leagues and in organizing new Chapters.

Fifteen per cent for largest representation at Summer Conference on basis of number of Leaguers, number of miles traveled, and number of persons.

Five per cent for largest number of Leagues in each district in proportion to number of churches.

Now, let's all get busy, and each Leaguer do his share to make his district the winning district. As you will quickly see, the greatest percentage will be given for points on Standard of Efficiency, so work first to make yours a Standard League and you will help your district to win the Banner. If you do not know what the Standard of Efficiency is, write to your Secretary, or to Mr. Ralph Nollner, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., for information. Let's see how many Standard Leagues we can have next year.

And while we're talking about the Standard of Efficiency, how many of you have ever stopped to think about the importance of sending in reports each quarter on time? Please remind your Secretary to send in reports to the District Secretary before the 10th of the first month in every quarter, beginning in January, so your Chapter can make those points on the Standard. Write to your District Secretary for report blanks.

We are all interested in news, aren't we? And surely we are interested in other Leagues and Leaguers, especially in North Mississippi. If you are interested in League news, read the New Orleans Advocate, for, beginning the first week in October, there will be news items from the different districts in North Mississippi. Get busy and appoint a news reporter from your Chapter to send news items once each month to your Secretary and let's make the North Mississippi League Column fairly hum with news from our Leagues.

Now that summer is over and our Leaguers are all at work again, let's put our shoulders to the wheel and work to make this a great year for the North Mississippi Epworth League. Resurrect your dead members, wake up your sleeping members and let's make our slogan, "Bigger and Better Leagues in North Mississippi in 1923-24." Officers, wake up and sound the call to arms! Catch the spirit of the League and rally to the colors. Get in touch with your District Secretary and keep in touch with her—she will help you. Call on your Conference officers if they can help you. Pay up your pledges, subscribe for the Epworth Era and get in touch with other Leagues, and attend your District Institute. Get busy, Leaguers, and help your district win the banner, and let's all work together to make North Mississippi "All for Christ."

MISS MARTHA DaBERRY,
Secretary.

PREPARED PEOPLE NEEDED.

By Garfield Evans.

Knowing that there would be many inquiries from young people for positions in church work occasioned by the Summer Assemblies, I made inquiry of the several Administrative Secretaries of the Board of Missions regarding the positions open. Among the replies was this very significant reply from Mrs. J. H. McCoy:

"We are receiving more applications from young people desiring the relationship of pastor's assistant than we are able to place, though we have a great shortage in home workers, well trained, for Educational and Social Settlement Work. What we are needing is more women with the same convictions of their call to service that the minister has, who have had good preparation, or who are willing to continue their studies until they are prepared."

From the minister's viewpoint and that of the local church worker, it is a fine sight to see young people responding to a call for Christian service. But it is a finer thing and far more sensible to tell these young people just what they can and ought to do and help them get prepared where they can actually serve.

Our Life Service files are crowded with names of young people who can never effectively serve because they are not adequately prepared. Shall we be concerned to see that, before any young person is allowed to consider himself a volunteer, he is properly instructed regarding the meaning and requirements of Christian life service? And shall we be concerned further to see that these young people have our heartiest co-operation and practical assistance in getting their preparation?

Nashville, Tenn.

The only crown I ask, dear Lord, to wear
Is this—that I may help a little child.
I do not ask that I shall ever stand
Among the wise, the worthy, or the great,
I only ask that safely, hand in hand,
A child and I may enter at thy gate.

MRS. COFFMAN ILL SEVEN YEARS

Saved from an Operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sidell, Ill.—"I was a nervous wreck. I was suffering from a pain in my left side, which was almost unbearable, and I could not even let the bed clothing rest on my body at night. I had been sick for seven years, but not so bad until the last eighteen months, and had become so run down that I cared for nobody, and would rather have died than live. I couldn't do my work without help, and the doctors told me that an operation was all there was left. I would not consent to that, so my husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged me to take it. I have taken fourteen bottles of it and I feel ten years younger. Life is full of hope. I do all my housework and had a large garden this year. I never will be without the Vegetable Compound in the house, and when my two little girls reach womanhood I intend to teach them to take it. I am never too busy to tell some suffering sister of my help, and you can use my name and letter to spread the good news of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines."—Mrs. IDA M. COFFMAN, R.R. 2, Sidell, Ill.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Harrisville Institute.

The Harrisville Sunday School Institute met at Poplar Springs, Sunday, Sept. 31. We had a splendid address at 11 o'clock by Brother Summers, of Millsaps College. After dinner, we began the program of the Institute:

1. A paper on Cradle-Department, by Mrs. Ainsworth.
2. "The Value of the Sunday School to the Adult," by Prof. J. C. Jones; which was an inspiration to all who heard it.
3. "The Value of the Year's Aims," by Mr. Carley Hilton, showing definite work for each month of the year.
4. The report from each Sunday school:

Poplar Springs reported 9 points on the program of work.

Harrisville reported 9 points and almost all of the tenth.

Rexford reported improvements in Sunday school work.

Many expressed their appreciation of the Institute and what it had meant to the entire circuit.

Next we went into the election of officers, with the following result: Dr. Ainsworth, president; Mr. Drewey Hilton, vice president; Mrs. Otha Barron, secretary.

The Institute then adjourned to meet at Harrisville the fifth Sunday in September.

S. T. BELL, President.
MRS. J. B. AINSWORTH,
Secretary.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The last item in the observance of Children's Week is to report what was done. In case you failed to receive the blank you may simply give name of church, approximate number of parents present, number of homes visited, percentage of elementary homes visited, and the forward step taken.

In a few days a duplex post card will be mailed to every preacher in the Conference that the report of the year's work may be given to the Conference Sunday School Board. Paragraph 399 of the Discipline requires this report. In the past about 60 per cent of the preachers have given this important information. We are going to improve on this kind of work some day.

Since the close of the training school held at Booneville during the last week in August, that school has organized three training classes to train leaders. One of the books has been completed and they are at work on the others. This school claims the largest number of credits issued to any school during the year. This school had representatives at New Albany, Grenada, Lake Junaluska, and of course in their own school. The more they learn, the more they want to learn; and as they learn their interest in the kingdom of God deepens and intensifies. The gratifying results to Brother Mohler are: worldiness is decreasing, love for the church grows, the means of grace are being used, and the work abides. Would that we had more men with the vision that Mohler has!

Have you read an article from the pen of Dr. Richardson in the September number of the Sunday School Magazine? A paragraph from the article is in the last issue of the Nashville Advocate. Have you read from the October Magazine an article that tells how a furniture merchant built a great business on the basis of the cradle roll idea? There is a good lesson in the last mentioned article.

The General Sunday School Board offers all literature needed for making a campaign for members. The literature is free. Increase the membership of the school and you will increase the membership of the church, and thus establish the kingdom of God. During the months of December, January and February especial emphasis will be laid upon the winning of these souls to our Lord Jesus Christ. Keep your eyes open to this opportunity.

Jacinto was once the county site of Tishomingo County. The old brick courthouse is owned by the Methodists, and it is used for preaching and other church services. The jail is now used for a school house. Two of the teachers from the Jacinto Sunday school attended the training school held at Booneville. These teachers became deeply interested, and made a plea for the training work to be established in their own church. In answer to their call I spent two days with the teachers, and as a result organized a training class and helped them start the observance of Children's Week.

Fulton, the county site of Ittawamba County, is one of the most promising fields in the Conference. It is said one hundred homes are needed to accommodate the families that want to move into the town. Rev. W. C. Newman has been in charge of the Fulton circuit since June, and has raised more money for church purposes than has been raised in several years. The Baptist people have a seasoned college man in charge of their church, and he proposes to take the county for his church in a very wise and proper way. It seems to me that the Methodist church might do more than it has done to evangelize these people. As a result of two days' work with the teachers a training class was organized and the four elementary departments were strengthened. The teachers took hold of Children's Week and propose to make it a great occasion.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

To Pastors, Superintendents and All Intermediate-Senior Officers and Teachers.

That teen-age boy and girl are one of the big problems of every Sunday school. As your Conference Intermediate-Senior Superintendent, I have at least been thinking, and more than ever before, of the tremendous opportunity in the keeping of those who labor in this field of religious education.

We are voluntary workers, but that should be no deterrent to an active, consecrated effort. As I have been slowly coming in contact with these men and women who work with our Intermediate-Seniors, I see what a noble body of Christians would be assembled if all of them were gathered together! What an experience meeting we could have!

Your Conference Intermediate-Senior program is not extensive this year. As Conference and district officers, as your servants, we have tried to ask for simple things, that a foundation for a larger work in the future might be laid. To this end, we have asked (1) that all Intermediate-Senior classes be organized and registered at Nashville as Wesley classes; and (2) that, in order to know our field and the workers therein, each superintendent send to the district Intermediate-Senior worker, and thence to me, a statement of his teen-age organization and the names of all officers and teachers of this group.

What we seek is the development gradually of an Intermediate-Senior departmental consciousness. We must know ourselves, if a larger Conference or district work is to be projected in the future. I am happy to say that we have now in our Conference more organized Intermediate-Senior classes than any other department. But we cannot stop here. We have not yet reached our goal of 150, and we must press on. Organize!

Another happy tendency indicative of a growing spirit in this work is the fact that in the several standard training schools, almost always now is offered a course for Intermediate-Senior workers. Gradually we will find rising up a body of trained leaders.

I am sorry that we have not had a general response to our appeal to superintendents for the names and addresses of the Intermediate-Senior workers. This is my request now. Brother Pastor, Brother Superintendents, send in this report. It will be helpful to us, perhaps to your teen-age work. We are standing still until we know the field better. Before the end of the present Sunday school year, I hope to be able to publish by districts the name and affiliation of every Intermediate-Senior worker in the Conference, together with some definite plans for making this work more effective in the local church, the district, and the State.

Above all, may the Master of our lives be near to counsel and guide as we seek to live with these growing young people and capture them for the kingdom!

"Sow on in faith!
Sow the good seed! Another after thee
Shall reap. Hast thou not garnered many fruits
Of others' sowing, whom thou knowest not?
Canst tell how many struggles, sufferings, tears,
All unrecorded, unremembered all,
Have gone to build up what thou hast of good?"

H. L. JOHNS,
Conference Intermediate-Senior Superintendent.

PAPERS FROM EVERY STATE AND AROUND THE WORLD

Half the victories of life come from a confident belief that one is going to win. The world has little use for the man who is continually down at the heels.—Anonymous.

Wanted! Ambitious Men and Women

We are receiving calls daily for men and women of character, ambition and business training, men and women who can accept and efficiently fill responsible positions, positions that give every opportunity for advancement; positions of high salaries, positions in banks, law offices, insurance, real estate, brokers' offices; positions with manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, in every imaginable type of business in the South.

Many of them we capably fill, others are yet vacant. The men and women who fill them need not be wealthy, nor even moderately well-to-do. They need not be young, nor need they be college or even high school graduates. All that is necessary is that they possess character, ambition and a business training.

The character and ambition they must possess, the business training we will furnish under the direction of the South's most efficient training corps and in one of the South's most efficient and best equipped business colleges. A training with unique courses in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, accounting, banking, business administration or our secretarial course. Such a training we will furnish in a few months' time at little cost to you, and at terms to meet your own financial condition.

Thousands of Southern men and women have taken advantage of the opportunity and trained themselves for a higher calling, a better salary and a greater opportunity for advancement. Many who have accepted the positions we offer have risen to the top of the ladder, and are numbered among America's foremost and wealthiest business and professional men and women.

An institution with such standing and reputation as the Georgia-Alabama Business College does more to advance the business interests of its graduates than can be done by any amount of family or personal influence.

Consider your present status—would you not like to improve your station in life, increase your income, attain financial independence and success? An opportunity awaits you, for positions are being constantly offered us that must be filled.

Write for our inspiring book, "Your Future—What Does it Hold in Store?" It is sent free on request, explains our offer in detail and points the way to a brighter future.

FROM LAKE ARTHUR, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Things are moving along O. K. at Lake Arthur. The Sunday school is large, with an average attendance of 15. The Woman's Missionary Society is well organized. We have a splendid Epworth League. The prayer meeting is good—not as well attended as it ought to be. The attendance at the preaching hours is good.

I am here every Sunday and preach at Thornwell on the second Sunday evening at 3 o'clock. We have no church there—the members there belong to Lake Arthur. We have a small Sunday school there, but a good one.

The church is behind on the finances, but I am sure that the church will pay out on some lines. Ever since I have been here, the times have been exceedingly hard. Things are looking better now, somewhat. Yours to serve,

S. D. HOWARD.

CARLISLE CAMPBELL, JR.

Carlisle Campbell, Jr., was and will ever be the beloved, manly, kindly, open-hearted, noble son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Campbell, of West Point, Miss., nephew of Rev. W. M. Campbell, of the North Mississippi Conference. At the age of twelve, on Friday morning, Oct. 12, suddenly God took him from loved ones and a host of friends; and the whole town mourned, and filled the church and covered the altar and casket and grave with flowers. Truly this child also "grew and increased in stature and wisdom and in favor with God and men." As a boy of twelve, he loved to be in his Father's house; and in the Sunday school, the Junior Epworth League, of which he was secretary, the Junior Missionary Society, of which he was treasurer, none could be found more devoted and faithful than he.

West Point witnessed as sublime a manifestation of faith in God as it has ever been our lot to see as the sorrowing parents answered through their tears the ancient question asked of another stricken mother: "Is it well with thee? Is it well with thy husband? Is it well with the child?" And they answered, "It is well."

Good-by, dear, beautiful boy, for a while. Soon we will meet again in the Father's house above. God grant that yours may then be "a united family in heaven.'

His pastor,

THOS. H. LIPSCOMB.

FROM ANGUILLA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Please permit space in the columns of your paper for a brief account of the work that is being done on the Anguilla charge.

In many respects this has been one of the most eventful years in the history of the Anguilla charge. Early in the Conference year the official Board met in the home of the pastor, Brother Schultz, and made a budget covering the entire expense of the church for the year. Seventeen hundred dollars of this amount was subscribed by those present, and the obligation for the collection of the remainder was assumed by the Board. The pastor has been paid monthly all the year, and surplus has been accumulated each month with which the other items are to be met. We feel sure that Brother Schultz will be able to report everything in full at Conference.

There have been many contributions made toward the futherance of God's Kingdom other than the pastor's salary and the Conference claims. Over one thousand dollars have been paid on the church debt, which practically closes out this account. Other contributions have been made for specials and to the Orphanage. A nice communion table has been donated to the Anguilla church by Mr. T. W. Fields. As an appreciation of the activity of Brother Schultz and the good work he is doing, his salary was raised to $2,400 for this year, and the charge gave him a new Ford car. The charge also made quite a liberal offering for the district parsonage. Brother Jones, our beloved presiding elder, made a strong plea for funds to complete the home for the presiding elder of the Vicksburg District. This was characteristic of the unselfishness of this sweet-spirited man of God. For many years to come will this district reap the benefits of the constructive work that Brother Jones has done.

In a spiritual way the Lord has wonderfully blessed the people of the Anguilla charge this year. Early in the spring Rev. Lloyd Decell, of Meridian, held a very successful meeting. His sermons were of the highest type, and much and lasting good was accomplished. A flying squadron, called "the Sharkey County Flying Squadron," was organized about six months ago. These men have been zealous in the work of the Lord. They have gone out and held services at many of the near-by towns and villages, many times driving from thirty to forty miles on Sunday afternoon to hold services. God has wonderfully blessed the work of these men. He has given them souls for their hire, and has enriched their lives with a bright Christian experience. We have three good Sunday schools on the charge. Regular prayer meeting for men only at two churches, and also weekly prayer services for everybody.

Brother Schultz, the popular pastor of this charge, has been very much present at this great religious awakening. He is energetic and has been very zealous in the work of God; he is keen and able to take hold of the different situations as they arise in the midst of a rapidly growing sentiment, and, being a good student of psychology and a consecrated man, he has been wonderfully successful in taking hold of these spontaneous movements and crystallizing them into great and solid working forces for God. The people of the entire charge love and respect Brother Schultz, and they are hoping that the presiding elder and bishop will see fit to assign him to this charge again.

CHARGE LAY LEADER.

HAD TO AVOID GREASY FOOD

Boatman Suffered from Indigestion, But by Taking Black Draught, Says He Got So He "Could Eat Anything."

Stephensport, Ky.—"For some time I suffered with indigestion, or dyspepsia," says Mr. Henry Gross, of this place. "I couldn't eat the least thing greasy—if I did, I would spit it up. I suffered a great deal."

Since his work requires him to be on an Ohio river steamboat much of his time, Mr. Gross says that he "had to eat at different places and I suffered because I had to be so particular to get something that wouldn't hurt me. I had a hurting in my stomach, and a slick, bitter taste in my mouth. Some one said I needed a liver medicine. I began with Black-Draught and it has given perfect satisfaction. I took a pinch after meals and it regulated me. I got so I could eat about anything and enjoy it. Black-Draught is all right."

A pinch of Black-Draught, taken for a few days at a time, after meals, washed down with a swallow of water, has, in thousands of cases, relieved simple indigestion. As a result of the action of the medicinal roots and herbs of which it is composed, Black-Draught gently stimulates the flow of the digestive juices, and helps to relieve, or prevent constipation, in an easy, natural manner. Try It. 25c.

"LET CHRIST'S GOLDEN RULE RULE THE WORLD."

The following paragraphs are taken from a letter written by Mr. Peter Shih returning Chinese student from Nashville, Tenn., to Soochow, China, on board the steamship Tenyo Maru, July 14:

"We have been going westward ever since we left San Francisco, in order to reach the Far East. After all, why should there be an East and a West, standing as if opposed to each other? Tell me exactly where is East and where is West? These positions are but relative. But how futile it is to convince people of the folly of attaching so much importance to these illusionary differences. Ours is the job to bridge. Ours is the task to break. Ours is the duty to tolerate. We must reach deeper. We must be broader.

"For the past several days we have been seeing the most wonderful sunset. The fireball simply tumbles below the horizon and then sprays of mixed colors shoot up. The sea then looks silvery. Where the waves dash up we can see them lined with gold and trimmed with millions of pearls. Now a school of porpoises swim about playfully, doing that leaping frog stunt. Then a whale or two is seen spouting at a distance. Then the twilight and finally the darkness, always accompanied by these phosphorus lights darting here and there. They appear only to disappear.

"You know that it was hard for me to leave China two years ago and come to the States. But it was just as hard for me to leave America two weeks ago. Realizing that all meetings are followed by partings, I have learned to take my meetings and partings as a matter of fact. They are more or less incidental and accidental. Who knows that some day, somewhere, somehow or other we must meet again, for we are fundamentally and inseparably one in Him? Time and space limit us and apparently separate us only physically. Our spirit must and does transcend them all.

"Christ needs to be preached more than ever, not only to the so-called heathens and pagans, but to the so-called Christians. The world is ripe for a revival, following a reinterpretation of Christ. A two-by-four Christ is not enough for this day. We must let Christ shine, not Calvin, or Wesley. The world is crying for Christ, not for somebody else. Pulpits must preach Christ. Teachers must teach Christ. We must live the life of Christ. We should not wonder why the world is not as Christian as it ought to be, when we are certain of the fact that Christ has not been lifted up to the uttermost eminence. Let Christ's golden rule rule the world."

Rossville, Ga.—"About two years ago when I was recovering from the 'flu' I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it helped me so much I have been taking it at times ever since. I am eighty-two years of age and getting along very well on the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' It keeps me well and stout for one of my age."—J. M. Check.

Keep yourself in the pink of condition by obtaining Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in liquid or tablets from your neighborhood druggist, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pkg. of the tablets.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A LIFE OF POISE.

Anxious, troubled lives are not strong lives. Great strength is seen in that which is calm, quiet and composed. The loud voice and the irritable nature suggests a lack of composure. The great ocean, with its unfathomed depth, its regularity of tides, its unlimited power and its far-reaching, never-ending shores, is quiet and calm in its matchless strength. The tides are regular and sure. In its wild commotion and extreme fury it is not stronger than in its placid, regular, constant, unceasing ebb and flow.

The rugged, snow-covered mountains, with their solid granite sides and their vast, far-stretching forests, are serene and sublime in their stillness and strength. The stars and planets which illustrate infinity send their rays of light and twinkle on amid the darkness of the night without noise or confusion.

Solitude is truly "the mother country of the strong," and in "quietness and confidence" we are told to "possees our souls." To be known as calm and reliable is to reveal character and power. The source of this strength is a faith in the divine. It means permanence and stability, and these mean character. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee."

The one of whom we think is the one who controls our motives and purposes. If our minds are stayed upon God, if we trust him, we will ever be kept in perfect peace and have the power of control as well as the control of power.

Concentration of mental development means the development of the mind and growth in intellectual capacity. When this is coupled with a reality of faith in the unseen God, man becomes mighty because God enters into his very being and controls his motives. Kept by the power of God day by day and hour by hour means the development of that calm, deliberate strength and unvarying influence which mark the real giant of these times.

All kinds of irritabilities arise during the day, unexpected changes, conditions which have not been anticipated, errors of judgment on the part of others; quick words and hasty sentences, loss of temper, exasperating remarks, cynical looks, unfair and untruthful statements, wrong judgments —all these are bound to occur, but the one whose mind is stayed on Christ will be sustained, will be kept "in perfect peace." His mind and heart are centered on the unseen God, the Eternal Mind, the body justice of the loving heart of the Master. He is kept because he trusts in the Unseen, he is shielded from unseen foes by faith.

Abiding in Christ suggests mental harmony with him, the human heart and mind in touch and in sympathy with the divine life of the Master.—The Continent.

GOOD NEWS FOR CREDITORS.

The following story appeared in a recent bulletin of the Rochester Credit Men's Association:

"The doctor coughed gravely. 'I am sorry to tell you,' he said, looking down at the man in the bed, 'that there is no doubt you are suffering from smallpox.'

"The patient turned on his pillow and looked up at his wife.

"'Julia, he said in a faint voice, 'if any of my creditors call, tell them that at last I am in a position to give them something.'"—Exchange.

Don't Lose Sight of the Food Value of Your Bakings

Plain flour has a large amount of food value but it must be combined with good baking powder in order to retain this value.

Most self rising flours are not successful because they do not and cannot raise the bakings to the proper lightness. This means a certain loss of nutrition because they are heavy and hard to digest.

Every time you eat food that does not properly digest you do not get the full nutritional value—you are over-taxing your stomach. Nourishing and perfect bakings are what good health demands. The one sure way is—use pure flour and good baking powder.

If you want to find what thousands of housewives have learned—make some biscuits with self-rising flour—then make some with good plain flour and Calumet Baking Powder—notice the great difference. One trial will satisfy you. Your health demands that you make the experiment.

Those who know—millions of housewives, domestic science teachers, big hotels, restaurants, bakeries and railroads will not use anything but Calumet, the Economy Baking Powder.

Play safe—use Calumet and plain flour. It is the most economical and satisfactory, where light, wholesome and pure foods are desired.

R. S. AUSTIN—A TRIBUTE.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

Death has made serious inroads into the ranks of our church at Jackson, La., this year. It seems but a few months ago that it became my duty to write an obituary of a sainted lady in that town, Mrs. R. S. Austin. Now it falls to my lot, as a former pastor and friend, to record the death of her husband, ROBERT S. AUSTIN, known throughout the community as "Uncle Bob, Austin." One cannot allow, in justice to the memory of such a man and such an indefatigable worker in the church, to pass over the removal without notice. Scant recognition, tardy acknowledgment, is given to these "anonyma" (unknown) in their lifetime. If people only recognized, or knew how hungry our hearts are so often for one sincere word of encouragement, and how we prize it, such would not be withheld. We draw comfort from the revelation given to St. John on the island of Patmos, that when he saw those who stood before the throne, there were "some small as well as great."

We owe an incalculable debt to such men and women as Mr. and Mrs. Austin, who have "stood by the Ark," and "held the fort" in evil days as well as prosperous days. Many a time such stalwarts have saved the situation—

Men and women—"Who never turned back,
But marched breast forward;
Never doubted clouds would break;
Never dreamed the right were worsted,
Wrong would triumph."

Brother R. S. Austin was born March 1, 1846, near Port Hudson, La., in East Feliciana Parish. His parents moved to Jackson, La., when he was a small boy. He attended old Centenary College, but his education was interrupted by the Civil War. As a lad, he joined the "boys in gray" in its first year, and served the whole four years. In June, 1876, he married Anna Baker Holcombe, of Jackson, La, the daughter of Professor A. R. Holcombe, of Centenary College. He was in the mercantile business until about sixteen years ago. They were not blessed with children of their own, but, in their love for children, they reared six belonging to his brothers and sisters. They are: W. P. Holcombe and A. R. Holcombe, of New York; Everett A. Holcombe, of Bogalusa; R. A. Holcombe, of Jackson; Dr. H. M. Austin, of Laredo, Tex., and the honored wife of the present pastor of our church at Ruston, Rev. N. E. Joyner. If nothing else was said in praise of the devoted couple, this is a memorial lasting as eternity What self-denial, love, patience are compressed in this act, cannot be measured. Eternity only will reveal. And to know that these adopted children have made their mark in life, so honored and efficient in the ranks wherein they walk, is a living memorial, proving again the truth of the Holy Book that "they who rest from their labors, their works do follow them."

"Uncle Bob's" death was comparatively sudden. He had just returned from a three months' trip to New York, visiting the boys there and calling, on his way back, at Ruston, returning to Jackson apparently in the best of health and spirits, so much to tell and so happy, when he was struck down with a stroke of apoplexy. I said "happy" because it was a prominent trait in his character. He always had a smile, dearly loved a joke, so pleased to talk of experiences in the Civil War, and the days of Old Centenary; but his real source of happiness was the knowledge that he was one of God's children. I know personally of his deep attachment to and love for the church of his choice; yet he was most charitable in word and deed to other churches—he was no bigot.

He began very early to work in the church—was the Sunday school superintendent for many years, the chairman of the board of stewards, and deeply interested in our Orphanage. In fact, I know this was his pet scheme. His last act was collecting the church dues—he always wanted to pay the preacher.

After his attack, he lingered for sixteen days, and then passed to his reward on Sept. 24. "So, after having served his day and generation, he fell asleep." I do not know who will take his place, who "will be baptized for the dead." His children follow on and call him blessed.

"So, when the Great Scorer comes
To write against our names,
He'll write not if we won or lost,
But how we played the game."

Editorial

MAKING APPOINTMENTS.

Very soon now our Annual Conferences will be in session—the North Mississippi convening on Nov. 7, the Mississippi on Nov. 14, and the Louisiana on Nov. 21. A great many matters of interest and importance will be considered at these gatherings; but the outstanding item of business, from the standpoint of interest at least, will be "making the appointments." The bishops and their cabinets will spend many hours in the difficult, and oftentimes delicate, work of assigning the preachers to their various charges. In popular understanding, they will "make the appointments."

As a matter of fact, they will not be making the appointments—they have already been made. The congregations themselves have more to do with making an appointment than anybody else. We do not mean that they will exercise any undue influence in securing the removal of one preacher or the assignment of another, but that they, by their loyalty, interest, and liberality, have made the appointment which the bishops and their advisers will simply be called upon to fill.

The preachers themselves, too, have a large part in "making" appointments. We could never quite understand how a preacher could be satisfied to go from a "bad" appointment which he has had at least a year to make "good," to a "good" appointment that some other brother has labored in successfully for the preceding twelvemonth. We do not refer, of course, to the perfectly proper thing of a deserved promotion, but to the desire simply to get something "better." A preacher who has made a "good" appoinment is worthy of promotion; one who has made a "bad" appointment would hardly be in position to complain if he were given further opporunity to "make good."

The appointments are really "made" before we go to Conference.

HUMILIATING.

The Advocate is not concerned about partisan politics or about political affairs in general about which good men may conscientiously differ, and it has no disposition, as a religious newspaper, to take part in the discussion of such matters. But when the Governor of Louisiana deliberately bolts a meeting of the Governors of all the States of the Union simply because they propose and adopt a resolution pledging the support of their administrations to the President of the United States in the enforcement of the Prohibition Amendment to the Federal Constitution, we feel keenly the humiliation to which Louisiana is subjected, and we claim the right, in the interest of good morals and good citizenship, to utter an emphatic protest against such petty exhibition of temper on the part of the State's Chief Executive and to repudiate his action as a gross misrepresentation of the views of those thousands of citizens who place loyalty to the laws of the land above personal opinion.

One of the troubles with this country now is in the fact that a great many private citizens seem to think they are under no obligation to observe laws that run counter to their own notions of what the laws ought to be. It is an elementary principle of democratic government that the minority accept in good faith the action of the majority when that action is taken according to constitutional forms. If laws duly enacted are to be disregarded by those who did not favor their enactment, then the safeguards of society are broken down and a step toward anarchy has been taken. When the Governor of a State refuses to promise his support to the provisions of the Constitution which he has solemnly sworn to uphold, he has given aid and comfort to the enemies of good government everywhere.

The Governor of Louisiana has made a sad spectacle of himself which is his affair; but when he brings humiliation upon the State which has so highly honored him, it is not his affair alone, and we protest against his action and repudiate, in the name of the good people of this State, the implications of his position.

BISHOP WM. N. AINSWORTH,
Who Will Preside Over the Approaching Sessions of the North Mississippi and the Mississippi Annual Conferences.

EVANGELISM IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Since evangelism has always been a major part of the program of Methodism, it is strange that not yet has Methodism seemed to realize that its greatest evangelistic opportunity lies in the Sunday school. We have made great use of, and are thoroughly familiar with the revival campaigns carried on at set times for arousing the religious life of a community, especially the adult portion of it, and we would not underestimate the value of such campaigns. We would not even remotely suggest that such special periods of revival effort should be discontinued or lessened. But we maintain that the Sunday school, meeting regularly every Sunday in the year, enrolling in its membership the children and youth of the community, has an unsurpassed opportunity to do the evangelistic work without which the church cannot perform its full mission in establishing the Kingdom of God upon earth. The effort to save adults who have gone astray, or those who have reached maturity without giving their hearts to God, ought never to be relaxed; but it is the part of wisdom to work faithfully in the field that yields the richest returns. The Sunday school is that field.

As we heard a distinguished church leader put it not long ago, adult evangelism is like picking up the maimed bodies of those who have fallen over the precipice, while child evangelism is like building a wall along the edge of the precipice that will keep people from falling over. It is the old principle that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Within the next few months, a campaign of evangelism in the Sunday schools will be in progress throughout the church. Wise pastors, superintendents, teachers, and parents will enter into it with eager interest and intense enthusiasm.

THE REPORT OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The outstanding feature of the recent meeting of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate was the decision to present to the three patronizing Conferences the question of the advisability of changing the name of the paper to "The South Central Christian Advocate," and its headquarters from New Orleans to Jackson, Miss. This matter is to be laid before the Conferences at their approaching sessions.

We were not privileged to be present when this matter was discussed, hence we do not know what considerations were urged in favor of the proposed changes. These will probably be fully stated with the presentation of the proposals to the Conferences. The time is short, but we trust all the members of the Conferences will give careful thought to the proposition before they take formal action within the next few weeks.

It is not to be denied, we think, that a change of headquarters to Jackson would appeal very strongly to the Methodists of Mississippi, especially of North Mississippi, who feel perhaps that New Orleans is too far removed to make it the best location for their Conference organ. On the other hand, it would seem to be little short of a tragedy for Methodism to withdraw its official publication from the largest city in its distinctive territory, where it has maintained an uninterrupted existence, with the exception of a short period during the Civil War, for nearly three-quarters of a century.

We are sure the Conferences will give full consideration to all the issues involved in the proposed changes, and that whatever action they take will be based upon an earnest desire to serve the church in the best possible way.

A BRIEF SURVEY OF THE METHODIST MISSION IN THE CONGO.

By Ansil Lynn (at home on furlough).

Four regular stations are in operation at present. By stations I mean the centers where white missionaries are located and directing the mission affairs. The distances between Wemho Nyama and the other three stations range from forty to sixty miles. Minga, Tunda, and Kabengele are all newly established, but Minga is only three hours from the site of the old Lubefu concession, and of course will serve practically the same territory. The change was made because of the unfavorable location of Luhefu.

The work of the white missionaries at these several points is the supervision of the different departments. The evangelistic work at Wemho Nyama and Minga is of vast importance and deserves much time from the missionaries in charge, but the inadequate force on the field at present makes this impossible. The Bible Training School at Wembo Nyama is an essential factor and is directed by Superintendent H. P. Anker. This is the mill which we hope will turn out many efficient evangelists. Some of its products are already making good. Tunda and Kabengele are in new fields and construction work naturally receives, or rather demands, the first consideration. However, some churches are already being started around these points. The native evangelistic staff of the four stations numbers about forty-five, nearly all of whom are living in out-villages, preaching to the people on Sundays and teaching school and catechism on week days. Each year a few of these men are called in for further training at the Bible School, which is usually badly needed. The total active native membership probably goes beyond seven hundred, with several hundred probationers.

The average daily school attendance, including the workmen, who are given thirty minutes each day, is probably four hundred, while the attendance in the forty-five out-villages probably reaches a thousand. The school work at Wembo Nyama and Minga is especially encouraging, while that at Tunda and Kabengele is not to be despised.

Every place has an opportunity for performing deeds of mercy in the administration of medicines. Dispensing has reached considerable proportions at Wembo Nyama, Minga, and Tunda where we have nurses, and Dr. Sheffey has already performed a number of successful operations at Wemho Nyama hospital. It will be a great day for our Mission when we have a well equipped brick hospital. Some of us are having visions of a leper colony in those needy parts in the future when men and means become more plentiful.

Up to the present time almost every man on the Mission staff has had to devote a great deal of time to building and repairs. All of our structures are considered temporary, but one brick residence has recently been started at Wembo Nyama. We hope to erect a number of permanent houses within the coming five years.

The mission printing press reached the field a few months ago and we have promise of a commendable native literature before many years elapse.

Some of us think of our field as a human workshop, with a vast amount of raw material to be developed. The efforts of nine years on the part of the Congo missionaries have not been attended with phenomenal success, but character forming has played an important role. Some of the evangelists, as well as a number of laymen, are already a source of encouragement to us. Of course it will take a long time to turn out a great number of finished products, but we count it all joy to have a part in introducing the "Light which lighteth every man." Many of the native members of individuals furnish a promising outlook for the full grown ear.

REV. E. L. ALFORD—A MEMOIR. ✓

Rev. Earl Leslie Alford was born in Pike County, Miss., just fifty-four years, two months, and twenty days before he went to his reward. During the year 1892, when this writer was serving the Franklinton circuit, then of the Mississippi, now of the Louisiana Conference, he found a young man, who was a local preacher, engaged in teaching school, who would, in addition to his regular school work, teach a class at night who could not go to school during the day; and then he would spend Saturdays and Sundays teaching a singing class and doing religious work. During the summer, he worked on his father's farm, never unemployed or triflingly employed.

When the fourth quarterly conference was approaching in 1894, he came to his pastor and asked for a recommendation to the Annual Coference for admission on trial. He was given the recommendation, joined the Louisiana Conference in December, 1894, and entered upon his life work as a preacher of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and it is only of his work I wish to speak; another will write fully of the details connected with the useful life of this dear brother.

"Les," as we familiarly called him when this writer first met him, was a young man with a strong body, a warm heart, a magnanimous spirit; and there was never a year from the time he joined the Conference that I did not try to watch his work, for I loved him and was glad to see him succeed.

As a preacher, he was studious, carefully preparing his sermons before entering the pulpit, for he felt that to be honest he must give his people the best he could; and with his intellect, as we could expect, he developed into a strong preacher. I doubt if any man who had preached no longer than Les did, had a greater number of carefully prepared sermons than he had when he was forced to lay down his work. He was well informed on the teachings of all churches, and, while generous toward all, he loved and defended his own. He was indeed a Methodist preacher, true to the teachings of his church.

As a pastor, he was diligent. He felt that his work was of too much importance to spend time doing things for his own pleasure. He visited his flock. The poor, the sick, the distressed were never neglected if he knew of their needs.

Brother Alford was one of the best organizers I ever knew. He planned his work and then executed his plans if he could. His Sunday schools, his Epworth Leagues, were up to the standard if he could succeed in having them reach that goal.

Now as to the Christian life and religious experience of this faithful man—it was strong and clear. He had no doubts as to his acceptance with the Father and his fellowship with Jesus Christ, and he still lives in the hearts of many who knew him. His own soul would throb with joy when he would deliver the message of truth to his people. He was happy when they were rejoicing and prosperous in spiritual things. He lived an open, frank, Christian life. I was often impressed, when in his home, with the manner in which he openly expressed his ideals of the Christian life in his own home, and no doubt the impressions were indellibly fixed.

Brother Alford suffered. A number of times the reaper visited his home, but, with faith in God, he kept it all in his own heart and passed on, feeling that all would be well in the end. I will speak just a word of his last year's work. He never did a better work than during the year 1922. He organized the Logtown church in all departments as it had not been before. The records will show what he did. He was returned for the second year, but never preached, and it was a sad day for his church when it was made known he could not fill the place because of ill health. In many ways that congregation evidenced their love for him, several of them going in automobiles for one hundred miles to attend his funeral. As his sun was beginning to hide itself beyond the Western hills he sang, "Savior, more than life to me," and "In the Sweet by and by," and to his loved ones he said: "I will be with Jesus. I love you. I hate to leave you—meet me on the other shore. I love everybody. The way is clear." Mr. Wesley said: "Best of all, our people die well." Les, I miss you. God bless the loved ones.

"The cry at midnight came,
He started up to hear,
A mortal arrow pierced his frame,
He fell, but felt no fear."

HARDWARE FOR AFRICA.

On Board Steamship Thysville,
September 21, 1923.

To Our Friends in Mississippi:

Here we are on the Congo ship and have been sailing for ten days. I didn't keep my promise of writing from London, but will try to make this letter interesting to you all. We have had quite a lot of experience since writing our last letter, and if it had not been for the fact that we were trying to carry out the motto, "Africa or bust," I think we would have been back in the States by this time without ever seeing Africa.

We got off the Mongolia at Plymouth, England, on the 16th of June and went by rail to London. The scenery around Plymouth and in the country nearby was indeed beautiful. We arrived in London about 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning, and had it not been for wiring a hotel from Plymouth we would not have gotten rooms; as it was, we had no trouble getting a room and getting to bed, while some who were in our party on the ship and train had to go to about twenty different hotels before they found accommodations. Monday morning we visited Livingstone College, where we were to study Tropical Medicine a little later; here we found a wire from Dr. Sloan, our representative in Brussels, advising us to come on over to that place at once. Accordingly, we took train that evening for Harwich, England, where we arrived about 9:30 that night and took the ship for Antwerp.

Landing at Antwerp Tuesday morning, the 19th of June, we were met by Dr. W. H. Moore, of Kansas City, Mo., who went with us to Brussels.

The next ten days were spent shopping and getting ready for sailing to Congo on the 31st of July, after our course in London. Then we retraced our course to Livingstone College and spent the month of July studying Tropical Medicine. Mrs. Ware was ill when we reached the college, and the first week was one of deep anxiety. We had a doctor with her who said she had a floating kidney, and advised against our going to the tropics. Dr. Moore had been noticing her appearance for some time, and he didn't want us to go. After pleading with us for some time we gave our consent, rather reluctantly, for him to cable Nashville for permission to postpone our sailing to the Congo till the next ship, which sailed Aug. 21, and in the meantime we could communicate with Nashville by letter and let them know of Mrs. Ware's condition. The answer to the cable was: "Moore proceed Africa, Ware postpone." Mrs. Ware was improving some and we desired to go ahead, but as our friends pleaded with us to wait a while, we bade farewell to Dr. Moore and let him leave us on the 31st of July, and we returned to Brussels to await further instructions. Never did we know how badly we wanted to go to Africa till this time when it seemed forbidden. We tried, however, to make the best of our waiting, and, having the opportunity, we visited Paris. We found Paris a very beautiful and interesting city, and saw many wonderful paintings, works of art, and historical places and things.

The quiet rest in Brussels, with cool, pleasant weather and plenty of wholesome food, brought health and vigor to us all. Bishop Cannon, arriving in London, communicated with us and requested that we await the coming of Dr. W. B. Lewis and family, of Leland, Miss., and have Dr. Lewis give Mrs. Ware a thorough examination before he would advise us what to do. On the evening of the last day of August, I ran over to Antwerp and met the Lewis family. Shortly afterward Dr. Lewis gave Mrs. Ware a thorough examination, and pronounced her O. K. The Bishop visited us in Brussels and gave his consent for us to proceed. So it happened that on the 11th of September two Mississippi families boarded the steamship Thysville for Matadi on the Congo river.

The Lewis family consists of three, the same as ours. Their baby is about six months older than ours, but weighs four pounds less. As we predicted, little Margaret went walking while we were in London, and now we have a grand time trying to keep up with her. We are all well now and happy, too; we are really enjoying the ocean voyage. We have landed at three places already since we left Antwerp. The first was La Pallice, France; the second was Casa Blanca, Africa, on the coast of Morocco. Here we went ashore and spent two or three hours in the interesting little city. There are about fifty thousand Europeans in the city and numerous Arabs and a lot of blacks. The streets were narrow and dirty; palm rtees and fruit were abundant, and the donkeys reminded one of Bible pictures. The women wore their faces masked, and the men wore red caps like the Shriners wear at home. The next stop was Teneriffe, in the Canary Islands. This place belongs to Spain, and many Spaniards live here. The whole island appears to be nothing but great mountains. We hired an automobile, and went to the top of them. The most beautiful scenery we have ever seen. Mountains and ocean meet. From the mountain peaks we viewed the sea, and our ship appeared to be but a speck. Here we found a fairly clean city, with many fruits, camels, donkeys, etc., and of course we found "Canary birds." If there is any one in the States with plenty of money and time, who would like to spend a few weeks of pleasure and see beautiful sights, then we would advise them to visit Teneriffe.

To-morrow we land at Dakar, another African port, and the next day at Conakry; the 26th at Grand Bassam; the 30th at Banana and Boma, and on Oct. 2 we land at Matadi. From there we take a train to Kinshasa, which makes the trip in two days. From Kinshasa we go on the Texas, our mission boat, which is to meet us there. It takes about twenty days on this boat to cover the 1,200 miles to Lusambo, and from there we go a week or ten days by caravan overland to our station. I will not promise another letter at any definite time or from any particular place, but be assured that we are still "Hardware for Africa," and we mean to stick. We will let you hear from us later.

Yours in Christ,

W. N. WARE.

Blessed is he who has found his work; let him ask no other blessedness. He has a work, a life purpose; he has found it and will follow it.—Carlyle.

OUR NEW INSTITUTE IN HARBIN.

By George F. Erwin.

The Chinese plow in use on the truck farm just across the street would be interesting to you if you could sit in my window and watch it as I do. It is a crude, hand-made affair which two men hold in the ground while three others pull it. Man-power is much cheaper in this country than machinery. I can hire as many Chinese workmen as I want for any occasion for fifteen to thirty cents a day. They can live on five to ten cents a day, and most of them live in little mud huts. Many of the children go without clothes during the hot weather, and frequently I meet them on the streets in this state of nature, without a garment of any kind to hide their bodies.

About the only thing that brings light and encouragement to the lives of the Chinese is the gospel of Christ. Nearly all of them who count for anything here have come in contact with Christianity. Last Sunday I visited a church carried on by the Lutheran Mission. Their house seats five hundred, and it was filled to overflowing. Many were standing in the aisles and in the back of the building for the long service. They are building a new house now which will seat over fifteen hundred people. I noticed there was not a man in the room who wore a queue nor a woman with little feet (that is, bound feet). They were all neat and clean. I met one man who is a leading member of the church and a great merchant, whose business is worth more than a half million dollars. He, as do many leading business men, holds a Bible class and prayer meeting in his place of business every Sunday. Do you not think it pays to bring hope to these poor souls drifting in darkness? They are reaching out and crying for help. Will you respond, or will you let them die without a knowledge of our Christ?

Let me tell you something about my individual missionary work. On the first day of May this year, we opened the Methodist Institute in Harbin for Russians, and have registered to date over four hundred pupils. We find the Russian people desire a knowledge of the English language more than anything else. We are teaching English, bookkeeping, typewriting, shorthand and Bible, and our pupils take a lively interest in all these studies.

Our scholars range in age from ten years to fifty-five, and nearly all trades and professions are represented. We have one general, one judge, several professors, doctors, lawyers, engineers, good musicians, and others. Many different faiths may be found among them—Greek Orthodox (the State church of Russia), Roman Catholic Americans, Jews, Lutherans, Seventh Day Adventists, Baptists, and Methodists. Nationals from widely separated lands study together in the Institute—Russians, Germans, French, Finnish, Swedes, Armenians, Hungarians, Letts, Esthonians, Poles, and English. No more cosmopolitan school could be found in the whole world.

Mine is a full day from 6 o'clock in the morning until 10 at night. The first thing in the morning is my lesson in the Russian language. Four classes in English, covering more than five hours, and a class in theology for one and one-half hours, fill the balance of the time. Each Saturday I teach Bible to a class averaging more than fifty students and visitors. On Sunday morning we visit some neighboring church, and in the evening I preach for the public.

Much interest is being shown in the religious side of our work. Our Mission has a preaching service at two different points at the same time, and for the past two Sundays many have been turned away for lack of room. I have the finest choir that I have heard sing anywhere. The Russians are great musicians, and it would do you good to hear them sing the old Methodist hymns.

Many of these people are hungering for a spiritual religion. They have a form of Christianity, but the spirit of Christ is neither manifested in their religion nor their lives. A teacher of the Polytechnic Institute recently said to me that he was thankful for the Methodists because they had encouraged him to study the Bible and it was now bringing hope to his soul.

We are progressing nicely. We are happy and striving each day to point men and women to the "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." Pray for us that we may do all the good possible.

DEATH OF MRS. HOWARD McGEHEE.

Mrs. Howard B. McGehee died at her home in this town at 11 o'clock on the night of Oct. 22, 1923. The physician, who arrived just after the decease, stated that medical aid would have been powerless to prevent the fatality, and that the deceased had for months been fully aware that her end might come thus. She had during the day performed her usual work at the Agricultural High School, where she was a teacher, had in the afternoon called upon a friend, and until retiring at 10:30 seemed as well as usual.

Mrs. McGehee was a daughter of the late Bishop Charles B. Galloway, and at the time of her death was 51 years of age. She came to this place as a teacher of music in the Edward McGehee College when quite a young woman; three years afterward she was married to Mr. Howard McGehee, and ever since resided here. Besides her husband, there survive: the mother, Mrs. C. B. Galloway of Jackson, Miss.; one brother, Dr. E. H. Galloway of Jackson, Miss.; two sisters, Mrs. Geo. Jackson of Lenoir City, Tenn., and Mrs. A. M. Muckenfuss of New Jersey; three children, Miss Stella McGehee of Washington, D. C., Mrs. Davis Moore of Hammond, La., and Mr. Howard McGehee, Jr., of Jackson, Miss.

Mrs. McGehee was a woman of outstanding talents and character, and of far-reaching influence. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, the writer; and interment was in Evergreen Cemetery, Woodville, Miss. The crowds attending were unusually large.

ASSURANCE.

"And all people of the earth shall see that thou art called by the name of the Lord; and they shall be afraid of thee." (Deut. 28:10.)

Then we can have no reason to be afraid of them. This would show a mean spirit and be a token of unbelief rather than of faith. God can make us so like himself that men shall be forced to see that we rightly bear his name and truly belong to Jehovah. O that we may obtain this grace, which the Lord waits to bestow!

Be assured that ungodly men have a fear of true saints. They hate them, but they also fear them. Haman trembled because of Mordecai, even when he sought the good man's destruction. In fact, their hate often arises out of a dread which they are too proud to confess. Let us pursue the path of truth and uprightness without the slightest tremor. Fear is not for us, but for those who do ill and fight against the Lord of hosts. If, indeed, the name of the eternal God is named upon us, we are secure; for, as of old, a Roman had but to say, "Romanus sum" ("I am a Roman"), and he could claim the protection of all the legions of the vast empire, so every one who is a man of God has Omnipotence as his guardian, and God will sooner empty heaven of angels than leave a saint without defense. Be braver than lions for the right, for God is with you."—Spurgeon.

The worst part of martrydom is not the last agonizing moment: it is the wearing daily steadfastness. Men who can make up their minds to hold out against the torture of an hour have sunk under the weariness and that harass of small prolonged voxations. And there are many Christians who have the weight of some deep incommunicable grief pressing, cold as ice, upon their hearts. To bear that cheerfully and manfully is to be a martyr. There is many a Christian bereaved and stricken in the best hopes of life. For such a one to say quietly: "Father, not as I will, but as thou wilt," is to be a martyr.—F. W. Robertson.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT NOTES.

In the absence of Rev. D. B. Raulins at Southern Methodist University, the appointments of Bayou La Chute charge are being temporarily supplied by Centenary College professors. This work will, as usual, report all assessments in full. A good meeting was held at Elm Grove, resulting in seven accessions.

It has been definitely determined that a new parsonage will be built at Belcher in the near future. This will meet a real need and will greatly increase the comfort and happiness of the pastor's family.

* * *

Rev. B. C. Taylor is in good favor on the Grand Cane charge, which he has served as pastor since the middle of the year. He is the sole occupant of the commodious parsonage. He will present a good report to Conference.

At the fourth quarterly conference recently held in Logansport, the pastor, Brother Clegg, presented a report of three years' work which shows a notable advance. During the present year there have been thirty-one additions to the church. The new church building is very pleasing in both external and internal appearance.

Rev. J. W. Pearson left for his new charge in Springfield, Mo., in time to fill the pulpit on Oct. 7. Before his departure there were many and various manifestations of the esteem in which he is held by the citizens of Mansfield, and appreciation of the splendid work that has been accomplished during his pastorate. During the interval before Annual Conference the work is being supplied by various preachers, while the assistant pastor, Brother Baker, is looking after the mission churches and many details of the work in Mansfield.

The fourth quarterly conferences have just been held on the Pelican and Pleasant Hill charges. Brother Jeff Holladay received the sad news of the death of his brother just before time for reading his report.

A splendid revival meeting was reported to have been held in Pelican, with the assistance of Brother Dick, of Zwolle, and a good meeting at Mitchell with the assistance of Brother S. S. Holladay.

Work on the Pleasant Hill charge, of which Brother Lay is pastor, has been hindered considerably during the year by bad roads. The completion of the Jefferson Highway, now under construction, will make this charge very much easier to serve hereafter. An Epworth League has been organized at Pleasant Hill with ninety members.

R. H. WYNN, P. E.

RUSTON DISTRICT NOTES.

As the time approaches to meet at the Annual Conference, our thoughts, naturally, turn to the work which has been accomplished, and we sum up. So these notes will be largely a review.

First let us look at the progress in a material way: Haynesville, in the early part of the Conference year, opened and held their first service in the new church, which cost them about $60,000.

Homer, on Sept. 3, held their first preaching service in their new church, which they erected at a cost of $77,000.

Arcadia will have about completed a new church by the time Conference meets, at a cost of between $30,000 and $40,000.

Pine Grove, on the Sibley circuit, spent about $1,500 on improvements and Sunday school rooms, making it one of the very best country churches I have ever seen.

The parsonage in Ruston has been greatly improved, with a new roof and the building repainted. The interior has been greatly improved with new floors and French doors, and in many ways made very commodious.

The parsonage property at Minden has been added to and necessary changes made.

The Sibley parsonage has been re-covered, with other improvements added.

Dubach has added greatly to their parsonage, making for beauty and convenience.

The beautiful parsonage at Haynesville, which was built last year, has been added to greatly by the finishing of the grounds and sidewalks, etc.

Farmerville and Bernice parsonages and Athens church, which have been recently mentioned in the notes, have made substantial improvements.

The district parsonage has been beautified to some extent and made much more convenient by adding French doors between the living-room and dining-room, making both rooms much more pleasant, giving needed light and air to both. The rooms, too, were repapered and old-fashioned bric-a-brac woodwork removed

There are in the district about seventy-five churches and preaching places, and at almost every place there have been revivals held with good results.

Three young men are in Centenary College from this district, in whom the district is very much interested, and it manifests that interest in a substantial way.

So far, the financial reports have been very encouraging.

I have merely touched the work of the district in these notes, which has been accomplished by the heroic efforts of the pastors and the loyal cooperation of the people.

I have discussed with some of the pastors, who say they will try out the plan, of using "What We Believe," that splendid little book, by Dr. F. N. Parker, in their prayer meetings, using it as a class study. I am impressed that this would be a splendid thing for our people.

K. W. DODSON, P. E.

WHAT DOES THIS MEAN?

By Dr. C. M. Chapman.

On Oct. 21, an Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church, in an address in Memphis, Tenn., made the following claims for his church:

1. That through it the first act of religious toleration was passed in America—by Maryland through Lord Baltimore.

2. That the Roman Catholic Church stands for religious freedom—being the church that became an asylum for the persecuted of colonial days.

3. That the Roman Catholic Church was responsible for the first Amendment to the Constitution—which is that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof"—and thereby protected the Constitution from the enemies of religious freedom.

This is a fair interpretation of his address. I desire to discuss briefly his logic and statements from which he draws so large conclusion that the Roman Catholic Church is a friend of religious freedom and was the one church more responsible for its attainment than any other in the formation of our national life.

1. Lord Baltimore, otherwise known in history as George Calvert, was an Irish patriot whom King James granted a proprietorship of a tract of land which afterwards became Maryland, with one condition among others—that of religious freedom and toleration. This was not Catholic grace, but a Protestant king's contract condition. It might be further said that Maryland was from the beginning, by majority, a Protestant colony—ruled by a lord-proprietorship, whose officers were, in the main until 1700, Catholics. Then came the fourth Lord Baltimore, who was a Protestant—who was director of the Maryland Colony when the toleration act became a law by special enactment.

2. Not to discuss this fully—"The Catholic Church Standing for Freedom." We could hope this were true or that it was once true. We have no fight on the Catholics as such, but a hierarchy whose every living act as a system has been in opposition to any form of personal liberty shows bad grace or good propaganda in trying to make a plea for recognition by an intelligent American audience on the grounds of its history of bold deeds for religious freedom.

3. The Roman Catholic Church could not have influenced, through Lord Baltimore, as inferred by the Bishop, the first amendment to the Constitution, as there passed near 200 years between the grant from the Protestant king to a Catholic proprietor land conditional by charter that religion should be free as to mode and manner, etc.

It is further likely that the only Catholic that signed the Declaration of Independence was John Carroll, of Carrollton. It is too much to assume that he forced the amendment on so large a majority. Besides, the Amendment has nothing to do with religious toleration as an act, but is to guarantee our government from just such form of religion as then existed in Catholic France or Protestant England—both having an objectional union of church and State. He gave, as proof of Roman Catholic spirit of freedom, the forcing from King John of England, at Runnymede, the Magna Charta by "Catholic bishops and barons," but he didn't tell us that Pope Innocent absolved King John from his oath and punished the bishops and barons, denouncing them as "rebels." Rebels about what? or why? Just apostles of liberty in spite of the Hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church, which then, as now, denied liberty as far as possible except through the Pope as head of the church, with liberty only to serve his majesty, the Pope, no other.

There came to my desk this week a paper which made the claim of Catholic priority rights to this country because Columbus, its discoverer, was a Catholic. We might assume that he was a Knight of Columbus, but since he found Indians here—who were not Catholics—whom we recognize as having priority rights by our Government checks to them every month as an honest debt for taking their lands, we fail to take the Catholic priority very seriously. The writer takes himself too seriously when he also proves Catholic liberty by the Lord Baltimore route, and gives further proof by stating that the oldest republic in the world—San Marino—was a Catholic republic. He was not in haste to tell us that San Marino was only 2,200 feet high in the Apennine Mountains, about five miles square, not worth a Pope's notice; but when Savonarola, about the same time of the rebellion of San Marino, also headed the people of Florence for freedom in government, it cost him his life at the stake. Not long after this incident, and ever afterwards, the Roman Hierarchy has been fighting those forces known as the refomers—who, in fact, were just folks hunting for freedom that no Pope ever was willing to grant, if in his power to disregard. It is true that there are thirty republics in the world—and of these it is reputed that twenty-three have Catholic majorities—but we are sure that in most cases these are republics in spite of Catholes rather than by their help as a church. To be sure, there are some individual Catholics who love personal liberty—these we are not discussing, but the Catholic Church as a system of government and its antagonism to any form of free institutions outside of subjection to the Pope as head of both spiritual and temporal power and authority in the land. What does all this propaganda mean? I spent a month in Italy this summer—Catholicism is not the active force there. Why all this activity here? Why prate about "freedom," when no country ever prospered under its reign or the "freedom" that it was willing to give?

Shelby, Miss.

NEWS FROM EMORY UNIVERSITY.

Housing of Emory University's rapidly increasing student body, once a serious problem on account of limited dormitory facilities, has been fully taken care of by the unprecedented amount of building done recently in the vicinity of the campus.

Registration figures show that only 398, or 40 per cent of the students stay in the three dormitories on the campus. Twenty-five per cent of the students, or about 260, stay at private dwellings and fraternity houses within easy walking distance of the campus. A number of men live in tents near the University grounds.

"In the summer of 1919, it was with difficulty that we obtained accommodations for twenty or thirty men in private homes near the campus," said Prof. J. G. Stipe, registrar, in commenting on the figures. "This situation no longer exists to-day. All roads leading to the campus are lined with beautiful homes, and most of these residences house a number of Emory men. Many of the students prefer private accommodations so conveniently located."

Despite the fact that the total enrollment for 1923 is 1,720, or an increase of 15 per cent over 1922, virtually every one of these students who boards has been able to obtain a desirable room within a half-mile radius of the campus. The other students either live in Atlanta or come to school each morning from towns as far away as Redan, Covington, Marietta, College Park, East Point, Bolton, Hopeville, and Union City.

The large number of new dwellings being erected in the Druid Hills section is of far-reaching significance in the growth of Emory University. Heretofore many boys have hesitated in coming to Emory because no dormitory rooms were available. The university authorities now hope to be able to place every prospective student in a convenient and desirable room.

Registration this year by schools is as follows: College of Liberal Arts, 537; School of Business Administration, 124; Graduate School, 27; Medical School, 223; Law School, 58; Theological School, 69; Summer School, 583; Extension Classes, 99. Total, 1,720. This figure does not include 160 students in the Emory University Academy, at Oxford, Ga., nor the correspondence registrants.

Nineteen different States and seven foreign countries are represented in the student body this fall. Brazil, Japan, Korea, China, Poland, Belgium, and Porto Rico all have one or more students.

Quite a number of new men have been added to the faculty to take care of the increased enrollment.

THE CHURCH AND RELIGION.

That America would benefit by a return to the better aspects of Puritanism and that religion is essential to the preservation of society was the message given New York University students by Dean Marshall S. Brown at the opening chapel exercises of that institution this fall. Dean Brown, who took "Old Truths" as his subject, said in part:

"I am willing to run the risk of being accused of preaching for the privilege of calling your attention to another old truth which I believe our day and generation is particularly prone to neglect, if not forget. We need to restore to its old, or at least to a more prominent place in our philosophy of life, the connection of duty. The greatest teacher I ever had declared 'to do one's duty is the noblest thing in the world.'

"It is the fashion to-day to damn by asserting that a person or thing is puritanical. Few would desire a return to the harsher, more unlovely aspects of traditional puritanism, but I cannot but believe that if our lives were motivated more by the sense of duty which dominated the Puritan, we would stand a better chance of passing on to our children unimpaired the best that is in the civilization we have inherited from our forefathers. Lives actuated by moral purposes have a dynamic force which is lacking in those whose main end is pleasure. Pleasure as recreation, as relaxation from the sterner cares of life, has an entirely legitimate place, but pleasure exalted to the chief end of life is a certain precursor and cause of deterioration and decay in the individual or in society. This is another of the old truths which you who, as educated men will be called upon to assume positions of leadership, would do well to ponder.

"In bringing to your attention the last of the old truths which I am asking you to consider, I wish to be understood as speaking as a historian and student of the social sciences rather than as a moral preacher or teacher. Speaking as a student of history, I venture to assert that the Christian church has been the most important single agency in advancing civilization in the last two thousand years and that religion has been the most vital force in all civilization.

"It was my privilege a few months ago to hear that clear thinker and searching analyist of present-day conditions, the then Vice President of the United States, deliver an address before a body of several hundred professors and teachers of history in which he exalted religion as a social force and exhorted his hearers as molders of the future active citizenry of this country to acquire a realization of the part which religion has played in making our country and the role it must play to contemporary life if we are to develop along the lines of our history. An exalted conception of God and a belief in immortality are the two most potent forces making for progress in civilization.

"The individual who holds ever before himself an ideal or standard to which he should conform, a God who is the embodiment of perfection, of justice, mercy and love is more apt to approximate those virtues than one who does not constantly measure and judge his conduct by such a standard. A society which honors God, consciously or unconsciously, thereby determines for itself its moral and ethical standards which its laws and customs tend to approximate.

"The individual who denies the force of religion in his own life may still accept the moral standards and ethical concepts of the group to which he belongs, but if the whole society, or a controlling majority, deprive themselves of these benefits derived from allegiance to God, not only the individual but the whole group will tend to sink to lower and yet lower levels of conduct. The old truth which I would emphasize is that our present-day individual and our contemporary society need the elevating force of religion.

"A corollary of this fact is that the church as the chief agency in the support and advancement of religion should receive the support of all who realize its importance in our social and political system. Those who believe in its importance and necessity but who fail to support it are shirking responsibility and transferring to other shoulders a burden that they should help bear."—Bulletin, New York University.

HOLSTON CONFERENCE.

On Tuesday morning, October 2, I stepped from the N. & W. train to find myself in Bluefield, W. Va., the seat of the Holston Conference. Immediately a kindly hand grasped mine and a friendly voice spoke words of welcome. It was that loyal layman, J. R. Laird, who had come to the station to greet me. Mr. Laird has three obsessions, ranking in the order named: his lovely family, his city, and the "forgotten man." After visiting his home and seeing his town, I felt that he should be pardoned for thinking of them as well as of the cause which lies close to my heart.

Bluefield lies in the arms of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Its streets follow the valleys, its buildings back up to the hills, its business thrives, and its people are the finest of the fine. The scenery around this hustling little city is enchanting. I have seen nothing more beautiful in all of my travels throughout the church.

The Conference was called to order on Wednesday morning by Bishop E. D. Mouzon. After appropriate devotions, organization, and a few reports from the presiding elders, the Bishop called for me to explain the plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment. I think practically all of the preachers were in the room to hear what was to be said on the subject. They listened attentively and evidently with the intention to understand the method for doing a thing which they had already decided must be done. If any preacher had any fault to find with the plan, he did not make it known to me. Dozens of them said that they considered the plan ideal and that they would surely raise their quotas by using it. Bishop Mouzon followed me with an earnest and most helpful exhortation. He said that he found it difficult to speak on the subject for the reason that its truth was so apparent. He said it was like stating that 2 plus 2 equals 4 and then making a speech to prove it. I liked that statement immensely, and, coupled with the manner of the speaker's utterance, it was unique and powerful. However, I have thought since that there must be some reason for so much writing and speaking concerning the importance of superannuate endowment. I think it is due to the fact that the people concerning this matter are like children before they learn that 2 plus 2 equals 4. It takes a lot of talking to make the little tots understand that; but once they get it, my, how they make the chalk fly! And so it will be when by much writing and speaking the people understand the plight of the "forgotten man." Watch them meet the situation.

Bishop Mouzon heartily committed the Holston Conference to the movement and said it would be far up the list of Conferences when the returns were in. Many amens were heard as the preachers agreed to their leader's whole-hearted committal of them to the task. Rev. T. S. Hamilton said to me as we were seated at his hospitable table that he did not have the least doubt about the complete success of the superannuate special effort in the Holston Conference. Hamilton knows whereof he speaks, and his statement can be accepted as founded on facts to justify it.

One of our hustling publishing agents, Mr. John W. Barton, spoke briefly to the Conference. He looked so big and fine and handsome that he made us all very proud of him. He announced that the Publishing House is this year distributing $30,000 to the church's claimants, that the present outlook for business justified the expectancy of $50,000 annually for this purpose for the next two years, and that plans are being laid which ought to return $100,000 annually for the claimants during the next quadrennium. O, how his words thrilled me! I wanted to hug him. He will make good his statement, too, if our people will patronize our House as they should.

The night service on Wednesday was given to the Conference Board of Finance. As my train left at 8:20 and I had to take it in order to reach my own Conference, I had just fifteen minutes to speak to a crowd which taxed every available space where one could sit or stand. When I hurried out through that mighty host of people, something told me that truly the day of the veteran preachers had come. At the door I looked back to see Rev. W. A. Lambeth, of the Western North Carolina Conference, rising to begin the inspirational address. How I regretted having to miss it! Lambeth is one of the most interesting speakers in the church, and this talent, coupled with his passion for the superannuate cause, would make him irresistible on such an occasion.

As my train pulled out of Bluefield I felt that the day spent there had been one that would guarantee to the superannuate cause the heartfelt co-operation of the preachers and lay members in the special effort. Many of the church's most powerful leaders have issued from the Holston Conference, a prince among them being the sainted Bishop Hoss. If this Trojan of the cross were living among us to-day, how his facile pen and urgent speech would champion the cause of the "forgotten man"! In memory of him and others like him the Holston Conference will come through.

ST. LOUIS CONFERENCE.

"A prophet is not without honor save within his own country." At 3:45 Friday morning, October 5, after thirty hours' unbroken travel from Bluefield, I reached Sikeston, Mo., where my own Conference had been grinding away for two days. I have served the church in this Conference for twenty years, long enough for the boys not to get excited when I am announced to speak. Therefore I did not expect from them more than a brotherly disposition to be courteous to one of their own number.

Bishop McMurry called me to the platform about eleven o'clock and announced that I would explain the plan for raising the $10,000,000 for superannuate endowment. The brethren seemed suddenly to forget that I was only Todd and gave undivided attention to my message as the exponent of a greatly beloved cause. They sat there for forty minutes, eager not to miss a word of the explanation of the plan and in an attitude of those waiting for detail instructions on how to go forward with a task to which they were already whole-heartedly committed.

Bishop Ainsworth followed with a powerful inspirational address on the subject. He stirred the hearts of all present and created an enthusiasm for the work that left not the least doubt concerning the outcome. He was able to speak with authority, as his experience as a member of the Board of Finance had given him full information on the subject. The power of his burning words was proved by the unanimous testimony of the brethren, wherein they stated that they could not be indifferent to the call after hearing him. Bishop Ainsworth has been a great help to me in this work. He loves and believes in the cause with all of his great soul, and never once has he failed in his devotion to it. When the victory is fully won, and it will be, I shall forever be mindful of the debt of gratitude due to this hard-working and much-beloved Bishop.

Bishop McMurry closed the presentation with one of his characteristic exhortations. Like the great leader that he is, he touched upon those things which had been overlooked by the preceding speakers or those which needed special emphasis. This was the fourth Annual Conference held by him this fall, and at all of them he gave himself with abandon to the work of properly starting the special effort for superannuate endowment in his episcopal district. Having finished his own Conferences, he will now put in two months in helping to explain the movement to other Conferences.

The St. Louis Conference this year spent three days listening to speeches on various subjects. Thus the routine work was crowded out until Saturday. Of course this meant that all of us had to work very hard in order to finish in the usual time. However, it was very gratifying to note that the vast amount of other work which occupied our special attention did not break the spell of Friday, on which day we were led to acknowledge our unpaid debt to the "forgotten man."

Another week has passed. Two more Annual Conferences personally visited by me have unreservedly committed themselves to do their whole part in raising the $10,000,000 for superannuate endowment. Thus far the eight Conferences I have visited have been of one mind on the subject. And two others, the Northwest and the New Mexico, have expressed themselves in like manner to representatives. Surely there is reason to give thanks and take courage. The enthusiasm everywhere being manifested proves that the "forgotten man" will yet become the most remembered man of all. A tide of interest in him and loving appreciation for him is setting in. May it go on in a mighty sweep until it flushes every heart and mind of our great church with a spirit to do right by the veteran preachers.

THE SUGAR-PLUM TREE.

Have you ever heard of the sugar-plum tree?
'Tis a marvel of great renown!
It blooms on a shore of the Lollipop Sea
In the garden of Shut-Eye Town;
The fruit that it bears is so wondrously sweet
(As those who have tasted it say)
That good little children have only to eat
Of that fruit to be happy next day.

When you've got to the tree, you have a hard time
To capture the fruit of which I sing;
The tree is so tall that no person could climb
To the boughs where the sugar-plums swing!
But up in that tree sits a chocolate cat,
And a gingerbread dog prowls below—
And this is the way you contrive to get at
Those sugar-plums tempting you so:

You say but the word to that gingerbread dog
And he barks with such terrible zest
That the chocolate cat is at once all agog,
As her swelling proportions attest.
And the chocolate cat goes cavorting around
From this leafy limb unto that,
And the sugar-plums tumble, of course, to the ground—
Hurrah for that chocolate cat!

There are marshmallows, gum drops, and peppermint canes,
With stripings of scarlet or gold,
And you carry away of the treasure that rains
As much as your apron can hold!
So come, little child, cuddle closer to me
In your dainty white nightcap and gown,
And I'll rock you away to that sugar-plum tree
In the garden of Shut-Eye Town.

—Eugene Field.

ODD FACTS ABOUT WILD ANIMALS.

By James Edward Hungerford.

The lioness, in times of peril, will come to the assistance of her mate, but not so with the lion, who shows a decided "yellow streak," and, when in danger, will leave his mate to fight her own battles.

The lion does not chew its food, consisting of about twelve pounds of beef a day, when in captivity, but swallows it in chunks, except when it licks it off the bones with its tongue, which is like a sharp rasp, then the meat comes off in shreds. So sharp are the spines in its tongue that three playful licks on your hand will take the skin off.

In seeking safety from the attacks of the tiger, hunters have often found a small tree a safe refuge. The tiger is a powerful swimmer, but not a tree climber. Its whiskers are stiff quills, like those of the porcupine, and are so sensitive that it depends on them almost entirely for guidance, when prowling in the jungle at night.

An elephant's instinct tells him not to cross a bridge that will not hold his weight. This has often occurred against his keeper's judgment. No coaxing or threatening will cause him to cross it, until it has been strengthened, then he will go across it without any coaxing or force.

The elephant is provided with twenty-four enormous teeth, only eight of which, however, four in each jaw, are in action at one time. The other two sets, of eight each, are reserve teeth, coming into use as the others are worn out.

The stomach of a hippopotamus, or river horse, will hold about four bushels. Its food consists of roots and water plants in its native land, and hay, carrots and cabbage, in captivity. It has long been supposed that the hippo sweats blood. This mistake arises from the presence on its skin of reddish brown oil globules, which serve to keep the thick hide pliant.

The hyena has the strongest jaws in the animal kingdom, and secures the marrow in the bones, left by the lions, by cracking them with its teeth, then eating not only the marrow, but also the bone, which the powerful acids of its stomach readily dissolve. The hyena is considered a desirable citizen, because it is a thorough-going scavenger.

The jaguar catches fish by lying on a log over the water, and flipping them out with its claws. One of its favorite dishes is turtles and turtle eggs. It is the "el tigre" of South America, and the largest of the cats in the Western Hemisphere. It can be distinguished by a chain of black splotches along its back, which are wanting in the coat of the leopard.

The kangaroo at birth is scarcely the size of a mouse. It is placed by the mother in a pouch peculiar to the marsupials, where it stays for weeks, finally growing large enough to crawl out and hop around. The opossum is the only animal in the Western Hemisphere possessing a pouch like the kangaroo. The female kangaroo, when being pursued by hunters, will throw out her offspring and leave them to their fate.

The giraffe has very prominent eyes, and little depressions behind them so that it can see in every direction without turning its head. When a giraffe desires to feed on some tempting grass, it lies down, eats all within its reach, and then moves. Its hoofs are very dangerous weapons, but full as damaging is the use of its head, which it swings from side to side with sledge-hammer force.

The leopard seems to have a mania for destruction, often killing wantonly every sheep in a flock, where a lion would only kill one for food. Tree-tops are the favorite haunts of the leopard; its black rosettes blending so perfectly with its surroundings that it is almost invisible. For this reason, it would not change its spots, even if it could.

The large ape called the gibbon is perfectly formed to excel in gymnastics. Its arms and hands are long and powerful; its shoulders and chest are broad, to give exceptional lung power, and the lower part of its body and legs are small, so that there is no unnecessary weight to carry. By seizing a branch, and swinging itself once or twice to gain force, it launches itself through the air thirty or forty feet to another branch, which it never misses. The gibbon is of a very gentle nature, and is easily tamed.

The stripes on the zebra are a striking example of protective coloration, for when it lies down in the dry, dust covered grass of the African plains, the color of the grass matches the ground color of its coat, and grass shadows match its stripes, rendering it almost invisible. If domesticated, it would be valuable, because it is immune to the bite of the poisonous tsetse fly.

A poisonous snake can be distinguished by the fact that the pupil of its eye is elliptical, like the slit pupil of a common house cat. All non-poisonous snakes have a circular pupil. A snake's mouth can accommodate food ten times the size of its head, because its lower jaw, being in two parts, separates at the chin, and the skin of the throat stretches until there is room for the food to pass. After feeding, the snake sleeps for weeks, until digestion is complete.—Our Dumb Animals.

HORSE-SENSE.

The following boyhood experience was related to me by my father:

A few years ago I got the job of driving a grocery wagon around in a town that was unfamiliar to me. Consequently, I did not know the streets where I was to make deliveries.

"Oh, that's all right," said the boss; "you'll soon learn the route."

"But you are going with me the first time, aren't you?" I asked.

"Nope, you can depend upon the horse."

And so I went off, wondering whether this mysterious horse was really a man and the wagon a jinriksha. No, the horse was a horse, and a beautiful one. He started off, went on for a block or two, then drew up to the curb and stopped in front of a house.

"What is he stopping for?" I asked myself. Then I remembered, "You can depend upon the horse." I went into the house and found them waiting for their groceries.

We made about thirty deliveries that afternoon, and not once did I have to say "Whoa" or "Get-up." The horse said all that part to himself.

Horses are not only used as beasts of burden, but they also help a lot in the thinking.—Mark G. Brewer, in Dumb Animals.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts

THE COKESBURY HYMNAL.

Lamar & Barton, Publishing Agents, have just brought from the Cokesbury Press a new song book, the "Cokesbury Hymnal," which deserves special mention and commendation. The three hundred hymns it contains were chosen after consultation with more than 250 preachers, song leaders, and Christian workers; and they constitute, in our judgment, the best collection of songs that people really love to sing that has yet been made. The "frothy" songs, both words and music, have been excluded, and the collection is made up of hymns that really minister to the religious life.

The form of the book leaves nothing to be desired. The words are with the music—where they ought always to be—and the music and words are all printed from new plates on a good quality of paper, making the book a delight to the eye.

A group of responsive readings is included in the volume, which makes it available for use in all the services of the church. The price is reasonable. We unhesitatingly recommend it as the best all-purpose song book we know anything about. This notice is written, not at the request of the Publishing House, but because we feel that we are doing our readers a favor by calling their attention to such an excellent production.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Emory University will shortly open a large number of its courses to correspondence students.

The Rotary and the Kiwanis Clubs of Greenville, Miss., have passed resolutions welcoming the members of the North Mississippi Conference, which will convene in Greenville on Nov. 7.

Mr. Z. Z. Linton, for many years an influential member of our church at Fernwood, Miss., is now identified with a large lumber industry at Piave, Miss., where he continues his church activities.

The Methodist Sunday school at Durant, Miss., Rev. R. P. Neblett, pastor, observed Children's Week with splendid results. This school is about ready to qualify as a 100 per cent "B" type school.

Mrs. S. L. Riggs, wife of our pastor at Opelousas, La., underwent a serious operation on Oct. 21. She stood the ordeal well, and there is every prospect that she will soon be restored to normal health.

On Sunday, Oct. 21, the two hundred and fifty-third member was added to the Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., for this year. Rev. W. W. ("Billy") Holmes is the efficient and beloved pastor.

Dr. Briscoe Carter, Financial Secretary of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, and Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Louisiana Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, paid the Advocate office appreciated calls last week.

The student body of Southern Methodist University shows a net gain this year of 215 over last year, not including the extension work. Both the School of Theology and the Graduate Department are larger than ever before.

Professor C. A. Bowen, of Millsaps College, was the teacher of the book, "A Methodist Church and Its Work," at the recent session of the Searcy (Ark.) District Training School. The school was held ~~at~~ Galloway College, Searcy.

We regret to learn that Rev. T. A. Ferguson, pastor of the Kingston Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., has been painfully ill. His pulpit was filled last Sunday, morning and evening, by Rev. Lyman Carley, of Ellisville, Miss.

Rev. S. A. Neblett, of the Cuba Mission, honored the Advocate office with a call on Friday of last week. He was passing through the city en route to Cuba, after several months spent in the States. He was accompanied by his family.

The New Orleans District Standard Training School came to a successful close on Friday night of last week. Sixty-four school credits were awarded, and announcement was made that several office credits in addition would be taken.

Growing out of the great meeting recently held at Morgan City, La., in which the pastor, Rev. William Schuhle, was assisted by Rev. W. E. Thomas, a movement has been started looking to the erection of a suitable Sunday school building.

Rev. Claude P. Jones has recently held a two-weeks' revival meeting at Magnolia, Miss., where he is pastor. He did the preaching himself, while the music was conducted by Mrs. Alma G. Spaulding. The meeting was gracious in its results.

Rev. S. L. Riggs reports a good year at Opelousas, La., one of the historic churches of Louisiana Methodism. In spite of serious losses from the membership by death, steady growth has been made. There have been forty-five additions to the membership of the church thus far this year.

We record with keen sorrow the recent death of Mrs. Howard McGehee, at her home in Woodville, Miss. The daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Charles B. Galloway, she was a woman of unusual ability and splendid Christian character. We extend tender sympathy to the bereaved family and friends.

The students of Mansfield College presented Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Pearson a sterling silver bowl as a token of their appreciation, just before they left for their new field of labor at Springfield, Mo. The Mansfield Collegian for October pays high tribute to Brother Pearson and gives in full the farewell talk he made to the students of the college.

In the "Big Brother," the official organ of the Big Brothers' Class of Greenville, Miss., in its issue of Oct. 11, appears a tribute to the board of stewards by the pastor, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, which is as richly deserved as it is beautifully written. What would the church do if it were not for the faithful and loyal work of these good men and women everywhere?

The fourth quarterly conference of the First Methodist Church, Corinth, Miss., held recently, showed that a great work has been accomplished this year. About $11 000 has been raised for all purposes, and ninety-six members have been added to the church. Resolutions were adopted asking for the return of the pastor, Rev. E. R. Smoot, and the presiding elder, Rev. J. B. Randolph.

On last Sunday evening, a unique feature attended the service at the Algiers Methodist Church, this city. The pastor, Rev. C. C. Wier, who has served this congregation since Dec. 10, 1916, issued a special invitation to all the couples who had been married during his pastorate to attend the service and occupy reserved seats. The subject of the sermon was, "The Courtship and Marriage of Isaac and Rebekah."

The fourth quarterly conference at Franklinton, La., recently held, is said by the presiding elder, Rev. J. W. Lee, to be the "banner" conference of the Baton Rouge District thus far. The new church will soon be completed, and an era of great prosperity lies ahead. The pastor, Rev. L. W. Cain, has given wise and successful leadership during the three years he has served this fine congregation. He says he will be "sporting" a new suit of clothes at Conference, given him by the good people of the town.

The meeting of the Board of Directors of the Memorial Home for Young Women, this city, held last Friday, was attended by Rev. George H. Thompson, representing the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. B. P. Jaco and Mrs. Calla Wilburn, representing the North Mississippi Confernce. The affairs of the Home were found to be in a thoroughly satisfactory condition. The work of this great institution, of which Rev. J. G. Snelling is Superintendent, cannot be too highly commended. It deserves the unqualified support of the church in Louisiana and Mississippi. Great improvements have been made on the buildings this year, their comfort and efficiency being greatly increased. Brothers Thompson and Jaco honored the Advocate office with calls while in the city.

We take the following from the Oxford (Miss.) Eagle of Oct. 25: "The Annual Conference of the Methodist Church of North Mississippi convenes at Greenville in a couple of weeks, and as this is the time limit for Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, the popular pastor of the local church, we hear expressions of regret on every hand at his early departure, and many would have his time extended. Dr. Lipscomb has made a large place for himself among his people by his strong Christian bearing and his Gibraltar-like attitude toward right and justice and life in its truest sense. His sermons from time to time have been masterpieces of logical reasoning, his prayers, gems of comfort and inspiration, his social nature princely and brotherly, his talented wife and splendid family an honor to any community; we add our regrets to those of his hosts of friends at his removal, and congratulate the people who shall have the benefit of his rich ministry in the future."

A TELEGRAM FROM REV. WALDO W. MOORE.

Biloxi, Miss., October 29, 1923.—Seventy-five dollars will cancel all indebtedness on that splendid Ford car owned by Back Bay and Wesley Memorial Churches. Help us, brethren, to make a clear record at Conference.

CONFERENCE MEMOIR OF REV. EARL LESLIE ALFORD.

By Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.

Rev. Earl Leslie Alford, son of Raymond and Mary McLendon Alford, was born on his father's farm in Pike County, Miss., May 19, 1869. He received his elementary education in the rural schools of the county. He finished the equivalent of high school work. Then began the struggles of this brave and ambitious life, for, in order to go to college, he found it necessary to teach to procure funds. It was during this period that he was converted and joined the Methodist church at Mount Hermon, under the pastorate of Brother W. W. Simmons. Shortly afterwards, he felt his call to the ministry. He was licensed to preach in 1891, at Fisher's Chapel, on the Franklinton charge, then a part of the Mississippi Conference. Rev. J. Wesley Sandel was pastor and Rev. P. A. Johnson, presiding elder. He now entered Millsaps College, but on account of serious trouble with his eyes, was forced to give up his school work after two sessions. So, in 1893, he joined the Louisiana Conference, in session at New Orleans.

On December 23, 1895, Brother Alford was married to Miss Fannie Ball, of Tylertown. To them seven children were born, but the Lord saw fit to take five of them in their infancy. A fine, stalwart son and a gifted young daughter are now taking their part in the world's work.

During his ministry, Brother Alford served the following charges: 1894, Harrisonburg, Louisiana Conference, 1 year; 1895, Bonita, Louisiana Conference, 1 year; 1897, transferred to the Mississippi Conference and appointed as a student to Millsaps College for 1897, '98, '99. In 1900 he was sent to Topisaw and remained 2 years; 1903, Vicksburg (Washington Street), 2 years; 1905, Fernwood, 1 year; 1906, DeKalb, 2 years. From June to December, 1907, he had the typhoid fever. In 1908 he was superannuated. Elected that year to a high school principalship, he began this work in September and finished it in the spring of 1909. 1909, Osyka, 1 year; 1910, Scotland, 1 year; 1911, Pachuta, 2 years; 1913, Anguilla, 4 years; 1917, Centreville, 2 years. From Centreville he was moved to Montrose, where he became prinicipal of the Mississippi Conference Training School.

The work at Montrose was very heavy, and in the second year of it his health became completely wrecked. He then moved to Newton and spent eight months under the treatment of Dr. Gill, of the Newton Sanitarium.

In 1922 he was sent to Logtown and reappointed to that charge at the last meeting of Conference. But he was ill during the Crystal Springs Conference and went immediately afterwards to a specialist in New Orleans. A rest cure was prescribed—and this was the beginning of the end. He met his Sunday school class only once after this.

The people of Logtown were anxious for his recovery, and they saw that every need was supplied while he was at the parsonage home, but his sufferings grew so intense he was sent to Touro Infirmary, in the hope that the care of a heart specialist might relieve him. The disease had gained such a hold upon his system that the doctor thought there was nothing to do but to keep him comfortable.

He was a cheerful sufferer. The sermons he preached by his courage touched many lives. He knew when the end was approaching, and said he was going home. This is just what those who knew Brother Alford would have expected of him, for he had a positive religious experience and belief. His church was not to him merely a human organization—he believed in its divine origin.

His positive religious convictions found a counterpart in his positive views on politics and all social questions. One always knew where to find him, under any conditions, for the simple reason that he not only had positive opinions, but he was fearless in expressing them. Wise or otherwise, he did not care who knew where he stood. This element of strength in his nature made many admire him, and he was gifted with a sympathetic understanding which made others love him.

He was a good school man—a fine disciplinarian. He was always the ruler. When he had to use severe methods, he was always in the right, as was often recognized even by the offenders.

The people of his last charge, Logtown, showed every evidence of appreciation of him. No pastor in his last illness ever had more attention than he. The friends of Brother Alford will ever remember the people of Logtown for their kindness to him. Surely the Lord will bless them.

He was a good husband and father—one who emphasized the value of a Christian home. He leaves a wife, a son, a daughter, and hundreds of friends who will cherish the hope of seeing him in a better land.

To the Methodism he loved he has left the heritage of good and faithful service, and a name worthy to be added to our list of honored dead. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. They rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

ATTENTION, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE!

It is the desire of the citizens of Bogalusa to give the members of our Conference the best possible entertainment during their stay in our city. We shall be glad to have as many of the preachers as can do so to bring their wives. We have more room than we will have visitors, and shall consider it a privilege to make it pleasant for all who can come.

It will, of course, be necessary for you to notify the pastor at the earliest possible moment if you expect your wife to accompany you. Let me hear from you.

ELMER C. GUNN, Pastor.

Bogalusa, La.

NOTICE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE!

A special train has been arranged for in connection with the session of the Louisiana Conference, Bogalusa, La., Nov. 20 to Nov. 26. The special will leave New Orleans at 12 o'clock noon, Nov. 20, and reach Bogalusa about 2:30 o'clock p. m., same date. The fare for the round trip will be $3.45.

While this may not look attractive, it is to be remembered that Western Clergy Permits are not allowed on the New Orleans Great Northern Railroad, and this special rate is practically the same as the clergy fare would be. Returning, the tickets will be good on any regular train until and including Nov. 28. It is not necessary to run a special on the return trip, as delegates will, perhaps, be returning each day during the session.

The advantage of the special is in the fact that, first, it will be a Conference train, running through from New Orleans to Bogalusa without a stop; second, it will leave New Orleans soon after the arrival of the last of the morning trains from points in the State, and last but not least, it will get the delegates to Bogalusa in time for a rest and a look around before the banquet for the laymen at the Pine Tree Inn at 6 o'clock.

It is requested that we have as many as one hundred and twenty-five delegates on this train.

Members of the Conference coming from North Louisiana by the way of Jackson, Miss., can leave there about 9:15 a. m., Tuesday, Nov. 20, and reach Bogalusa at 2:40 p. m., same day.

The pastor would be glad if you will let him know which train you will use in getting to the seat of the Conference.

ELMER C. GUNN.

Bogalusa, La.

LAST CHANCE!

World War Oficers Must Apply for Commissions Before November 11, 1923.

On November 11, 1923, the granting of commissions in the Reserve Corps, without examination, will cease. All who were officers during the War may, if they get their application through to Corps Headquarters before November 11, 1923, be commissioned in the highest grade held by them during the war. There are now about 100,000 officers holding such commissions. After November 11, any one applying must stand an examination, which will be by no means easy. Those interested should write at once to Headquarters, Organized Reserves, 607 Commercial Bank Bldg., Alexandria, La., or Headquarters, 87th Division, Poland and Dauphine Streets, New Orleans, La., for application blanks. Applicants will be handled in the order in which they apply. After November 11 applicants will have to go to stations where examining boards can be convened to examine them. Reserve officers are not called to active duty in time of peace without their consent. In the Reserve Corps there are no privates, only officers and non-commissioned officers. These form the cadre which receive and train the draft.

A PARSON BROWNLOW STORY.

William Gannaway Brownlow, better known as the "Fighting Parson," Governor of Tennessee during the reconstruction period, tells this story in "Parson Brownlow's Book":

"While in attendance at an Annual Conference of the Methodist Church, in Abingdon, Va., in 1850, I suffered from an attack of fever; and, either from the influence of medicine or of fever on the brain, I became a little flighty. The opinion prevailed that I would die, and the venerable Bishop Capers, and other ministers, became anxious to know how the 'eccentric parson' felt in view of an exchange of worlds. Accordingly, they visited my room, and the Bishop read the Scriptures and sang and prayed for me. On taking his leave of me, holding me by the hand and looking me full in the face, he inquired what my prospects were beyond the grave. It is said—and I have no doubt of the truth of the statement—that I returned for an answer: "Well, Bishop, if I had my life to live over again, I could improve it in many respects, and would try to do so. However, if the books have been properly kept in the other world, there is a small balance in my favor!"—Exchange.

ON THE SCREEN IN INDIA.

The little outfit camped just outside the big village in India. As soon as the evening star appeared the sahib hung a white sheet between two trees, and set up his stereopticon.

"I know what it is," said little Garaviah to the other boys as they gathered around. "It's the Pictures. I saw them when I went to Ougole."

The sahib began to show pictures on the screen, and the people all came out under the starry, cloudless sky of India to see them. The men stood at the back; in front of them were the women. The children crowded still nearer the pictures, while in the very front row of all sat the tiny tots.

The missionary threw on the screen a picture of Christ blessing little children, holding them up in his arms. Suddenly a wee child got on her feet, toddled forward and tried to push into the picture, and to climb up into the Saviour's arms. She had never heard the sweet story, but when she saw Jesus in the picture, she wanted to go to him. Isn't that a beautiful picture of what missions are really for—to show everybody where Jesus stands, ready to welcome and bless all who come to him?—Everyland.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Admissions.

The Committee on Admissions for the Mississippi Conference will please meet in the Methodist church at Gulfport on Tuesday, November 13, at 2:30 p.m., for organization and work. Let those who are to be admitted on trial come before this committee as soon as they have passed the Examining Committee.

MRS. J. R. HARRISON (nee Elizabeth Hammett) was born near Macon, Ga., in 1859, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. B. Stall, Gibsland, La., Oct. 13, 1923. She was buried at the Gibsland cemetery, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The funeral rites were conducted at the Methodist church, in the presence of hundreds who came to do her honor and drop a tear with those that wept. Mrs. Harrison moved to Louisiana early in life, and was married to Mr. J. R. Harrison, July 12, 1876. In and near Gibsland has been their home for many years. Mrs. Harrison was the mother of twelve children, nine of whom still live and mourn, with their father, the loss of their mother. She was a most remarkable woman. She was converted and gave her heart and life to God and the church early in her teens, and throughout her mortal life of sixty-four years she was faithful in all her house, and was perfect in her day and generation. She accepted the full responsibility of motherhood, and her sense of duty and obligation was keen and appreciative. She was truly a great and wise mother. To her, her children were creatures of more than brawn and brain; to her, they were living souls made in the image of God, whose spirit, soul, and body belong to God by creation and redemption. She did what she could for the health, strength and beauty of their bodies and minds, but her most monumental work was in training and shaping their characters, by cultivating and developing the moral and spiritual side of their being. In these are represented nine really Christian homes, where God is recognized and honored and their children taught the way of life. Who would say this good woman's life was spent in vain? She built no great monument to herself in stone or brick or worldly fortune, but she laid up in heaven treasures. You will find the stamp and image of her godly life in men and women, not in things. Her name is as ointment poured forth, and her work abides. Truly she wrought well and for eternity, and by these, though she be dead, yet speaketh.

JOSEPH RANDAL PRICE was born in Wayne County, Miss., Oct. 13, 1850. When fourteen years of age he was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Shubuta, Miss., near which town he then lived, and until June 24, 1923, he was a faithful member of his church, which he loved very deeply. On Oct. 11, 1871, he married Miss Millicent Eldredge McGowan. To them eight children were born, five of whom lived to maturity, and survived both of their parents. His faithful wife preceded him to the heavenly land almost fifteen years, she having died Oct. 25, 1908. The five children who survive are: Effie (Mrs. L. P. May), of Jackson, Miss.; J. D. Price, and Robert B. Price, of Quitman, Miss.; Lillian (Mrs. Robert T. Pickett), of Sicily Island, La., and George A. Price, of Meridian, Miss. There are nineteen grandchildren living, to all of whom he was devoted. Brother Price was a faithful father, and a friend to everybody. He was a useful and dutiful member of the church. He laid up treasures in heaven, where moth and rust do not corrupt and where thieves do not break through and steal. His going is our loss, but his eternal gain. We expect to see him in the morning of the resurrection, clothed in white. May God's richest blessings be upon the sons, daughters, grandchildren and all the loved ones.

R. E. RUTLEDGE, Pastor.
Pachuta, Miss.

MRS. J. T. PEARCE, of Shreveport, La., died in the early morning of Sept. 10, 1923. She is survived by her husband, five children, three brothers and three sisters. The children are: W. C. Pearce, Arkadelphia, Ark.; T. J. Pearce, G. F. Pearce, Mrs. John McW. Ford, and Miss Susan Margaret Pearce, of Shreveport. Brothers: Hon. C. A. L. Sanford, Opelika, Ala.; Walter C. Sanford and R. L. Sanford, Wills Point, Tex. Sisters: Mrs. T. P. Fullilove, Shreveport, La.; Mrs. B. H. Myrick, and Miss Mary L. Sanford, Auburn, Ala. Mrs. Pearce was born near Oak Bowery, Ala., Aug. 25, 1848. She was the daughter of the Hon. W. F. Sanford. She was married to Mr. J. T. Pearce on Jan. 11, 1869. The family moved to Louisiana in 1905. Mrs. Pearce was converted when she was eleven years of age at the old Texas Camp Ground, near Auburn. She was a student at the Auburn Masonic College, where she later graduated with honor. She developed into a strong Christian character and a devout student of the Word of God. She read the Bible through more than seventy times. She loved it as she did no other book. It was her highest aim to model her life after its teachings. She was among the first women who conceived the idea of "woman's work for women," and was one of the founders of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in Alabama. This Society was first organized in Alabama in 1878. She was the first Secretary and Treasurer. Mrs. Pearce was a good woman. She was a confirmed invalid during the last years of her life, yet her very influence was a benediction to all who knew her. She loved the Noel Memorial Methodist Church, of which she and her husband were members, and was keenly interested in all its work up to the day of her going. We'll miss her prayers, her interest and the rich influence of her godly life.

Her pastor,
W. W. HOLMES.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, in the providence of God, REV. W. G. BURKS, pastor of the Kossuth circuit, North Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has been called from his earthly labors to his heavenly reward; and,

Whereas, in the death of Rev. W. G. Burks, Mr. Marcus L. Burks, a member of our student body, loses his father;

Therefore, be it resolved, That the faculty and student body of Millsaps College express their feeling of genuine sorrow over this heavy bereavement and extend to Mr. M. L. Burks and other members of his home their heartfelt sympathy, praying God's blessing upon them in this trying hour.

Signed by: C. A. Bowen, R. L. Hunt, O. B. Triplett, Committee.

IN MEMORIAM—MRS. R. E. SMITH.

MRS. HESTA T. SMITH, wife of Dr. R. E. Smith, Dean of Centenary College, died at her home in Shreveport, La., Saturday morning, Oct. 20, 1923, at 1:45 o'clock, after being confined to her bed for more than four months. Mrs. Smith was taken ill the early part of June while visiting in Dallas. She was immediately brought to Shreveport and the best medical attention possible given her, but to no avail. The physicians seemed to be powerless in trying to treat her case. Mrs. Smith was born at Ruskin, Tenn., Feb. 9, 1880, where she spent the greater part of her life. In 1920 Dr. and Mrs. Smith came to Shreveport from Sutherland, Fla., where Dr. Smith had been a professor in Southern College. Soon after coming to Shreveport, Mrs. Smith became active in social, civic, and religious affairs. She was President of the Woman's Missionary Society, teacher of the Smith-Wesley Bible Class at Noel Memorial Church, a member of the choir, and also a member of the Centenary College faculty. Mrs. Smith's influence was felt in the class room as well as in the religious organizations which she represented. She was interested in her students, and not

NEW LAMP HAS NO WICK OR CHIMNEY

A new lamp which has no wick or chimney, yet, according to experts, gives the most powerful home light in the world, is the latest achievement of W. C. Fowler, 421 Factory building, Kansas City, Mo. This remarkable new lamp beats gas or electricity—gives more light than 300 candles, 18 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights, and costs only one cent a night. A blessing to every home, especially on farm or in small town. It is absolutely safe, and gives universal satisfaction. No dirt, no smoke, no odor. A child can carry it. It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall or church enjoy the increased comfort of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light, and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial to any reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate who writes him. He wants one person to whom he can refer new customers. Take advantage of his free offer. Agents wanted. Write him to-day.—Advt.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Monroe District.

The district secretary of the Monroe District reports having visited the League at Bastrop, La., together with four other Leaguers, and found everything going on fine. They have 75 on roll and are going to put on a drive for new members. Miss Cook, state treasurer, explained the Loyalty Legion, and the entire sum was raised that same evening.

The Bastrop Leaguers are planning on conducting a devotional meeting for the Monroe Leaguers, and this joint meeting will, I am sure, be very beneficial to both Leaguers.

This tour by the Monroe Leaguers was made in the "Baby Overland" that we are all going to see at the Assembly.

Lake Charles District.

The reporter from the Lake Charles District reports things are going along fine in the Lake Charles League. They are 100 per cent on the Loyalty Legion. Some splendid socials were held recently and by special effort all present really enjoyed themselves and are eagerly looking forward to the Hallowe'en party, for which plans have been under way for some time. Their Mission Study Class will begin the first week in November. The new library recently opened for the Leaguers is working fine, and among the church papers the Christian Advocate and the Era can always be found. The Junior League is also holding its own, and some of them are eagerly looking forward to the time when they can join the Senior League. Another very interesting feature, and one I am afraid we could not all boast of, is the splendid co-operation between the church and the League. If it is announced that the League will have charge of the church service, wonderful co-operation on the part of the church membership is shown by their attendance. Also at the League meetings a great many church members delight in dropping in. This means a lot to a League, to know that the church people are backing them. Here's hoping that more and more our churches will do this.

New Orleans District.

At present a great many of our Leaguers from all over the city are busy in the New Orleans Standard Training School, preparing, in addition to their League work, to be of service to the Sunday school and church. On Saturday, the 27th, the New Orleans Leaguers have a wonderful treat in store for them. Mr. J. V. Thompson, of Chicago, who is the superintendent of young people for the M. E. Church, is an instructor in the Training School, and has consented to stay over Saturday night to [illegible] the young people. Those of us who know Mr. Thompson know that it will be a wonderful privilege and it is hoped our Leaguers will turn out 100 per cent.

Relieved of Catarrh Due to La Grippe

Thanks To PE-RU-NA

Mrs. Laura Berberick, over 7[illegible] years of age, 1205 Willow Ave., Hoboken, N. J., writes: "A severe attack of La Grippe left me with a hoarseness and slime in the head and throat. I had chronic catarrh. It grew worse. I could not lie down or sleep at night. I was always bothered by the slime, pain in the back and a terrible headache every morning.

Finally I bought a bottle of Pe-ru-na which was of great benefit. It gave me blood and strength. I have no pains in head or back, nor noises in the head. The slime has gone and I can sleep. My weight has increased. I am cheerful and happy, thanks to Pe-ru-na, which I shall always keep in the house and recommend to my friends."

For every form of catarrh Pe-ru-na meets the need. Coughs, Colds, Nasal Catarrh, Indigestion, Bowel disorders are all forms of catarrh.

Buy it any where in tablet or liquid form.

FROM FRANKLINTON, LA.

Another successful revival has gone into history. For fifteen years the battle went on, and when the firing ceased and the smoke was cleared away, it was found that many had been converted, twenty-six new members added to our church, and five young people volunteered for life service in the home and foreign fields. "General" W. M. McIntosh directed the fight, with his "Better Half" and "Lieutenant" J. O. Bryant close by his side. Brother McIntosh preached with power, Sister McIntosh rallied the young folk, and Brother Bryant kept the choir of the Welch-Simmons orchestra and more than an hundred voices "tuned" and "a-singing all the while." They are an evangelistic team you can bank on.

The meeting was conducted under a big tent, the weather was ideal, and people attended from towns and villages in the parish ten and twenty miles away. It was estimated that the night crowds throughout ranged from five to seven hundred people. In planning the campaign, the pastor had in mind to make its good effects more than local. Several offered themselves for membership in out-of-town churches. Our God is a great God, his program is a world program, and why not undertake big things for him? "Faith is the victory." Financing the meeting was easy, heard no criticisms, and the evangelists went on their way rejoicing.

CHILDLESS HOMES MADE HAPPY

Presence of Little Ones a Great Blessing

Four Interesting Letters

Cortland, N. Y.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was weak and wanted to become strong and have a child. My husband read about it in the 'Cortland Standard' and thought it might help me. It certainly did for I now have a lovely boy fifteen months old who weighs forty pounds. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to my friends and you can certainly use my testimonial in your little books and in the newspapers, as it might help to make some other childless home happy by the presence of little ones as it has done mine."—Mrs. CLAUDE P. CANFIELD, 10 Salisbury St., Cortland, N. Y.

A Message to Mothers

Hamilton, Ohio.—"I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound since girlhood, having taken it when I was younger and suffering from a weakness and backache. Lately I have taken it again to strengthen me before the birth of my child, as I was troubled with pains in my back and a lifeless, weak feeling. I think if mothers would only take your wonderful medicine they would not dread childbirth as they do. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to every woman."—Mrs. JOS. FALCOIN, JR., 552 S. 11th Street, Hamilton, Ohio.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me seven years ago. I was run down and had a weakness such as women often have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after being married sixteen years became the mother of a sweet little girl. I now have four lovely children—three fine boys and the little girl six years old. I had longed for children all the while and wept many a day and envied every woman with a child. I was 36 years old when my first baby was born. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is ailing with female weakness."—Mrs. J. NAUMANN, 1517 Benton St., St. Louis, Mo.

Was Weak and Run Down

St. Louis, Mo.—"My mother took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was a girl, and when I was troubled with cramps I took it, and later when I married I again took it to make me strong as the doctor said I was weak and run down and could not have children. I took it and got along fine and now I have three girls. So you know why I keep the Compound in the house. I am a well woman and do my work and sewing too."—Mrs. JULIUS HARTMAN, 2501 W. Dodier St., St. Louis, Mo.

The churches are large and beautiful but still not large enough to meet the situation. With 2,4[illegible] members in First Church and a Sunday school attendance of 1,[illegible], there is much reason for the agitation of a new building for religious education. The Noel Memorial Church is a live congregation with a splendid, forward-looking pastor, and it was our privilege to speak to this good people on Sunday evening.

THE CHURCH AND THE PRESS

[illegible] Recorder from London tells me through the pen of a Mr. Hamilton Fyfe, that the Church of England has established a Press Bureau, is ready to spend money to keep it alive, and equip it for work. That is to say, this new organization is to watch over the interests of the Church of England as they are handled or mishandled—in the daily papers, is to inform writers for the press, to use such opportunities as come its way, in order to inform all and sundry through the columns of the daily press, touching the current problems, controversies and endeavors of the English Church. The Romanish Church has long had some such organization, though, very wisely I think, it says nothing about it.

I have sometimes wondered why the church is so keen to have the newspaper on its side. There are those among the English Methodists who would set up a "new department" akin to that of the Establishment and the Romanists. Of course, a good deal is to be said for this line and policy. The press is powerful, and its power does not always belong unto the Lord. The press gets everywhere and is read by everybody; and it is quite natural that those who really do care for the interests of religion should wish to go where the press goes—to make every morning and evening paper, in some sort, a Gospel missionary.

Wanted! Ambitious Men and Women

We are [illegible] daily for men and women of [illegible] ambition and [illegible] business training, men and women who [illegible] accept and efficiently fill responsible positions, positions that give [illegible] opportunity for advancement; positions [illegible] business positions in [illegible] law offices, insurance, real estate brokers offices, [illegible] with manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, in every [illegible] type of business in the [illegible].

Many of them we can [illegible] fill, others are yet to [illegible]. The men and women [illegible] fill them need not be wealthy, nor even moderately well-to-do. They need not be young nor need they be college or even high school graduates. All that is necessary is that they possess character, ambition and a business training.

The character and ambition they must possess, the business training we will furnish under the direction of the South's most efficient training corps and in one of the South's most efficient and best equipped business colleges. A training with unique courses in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, accounting, banking, business administration or our secretarial course. Such a training we will furnish in a few months' time at little cost to you, and at terms to meet your own financial condition.

Thousands of Southern men and women have taken advantage of the opportunity and trained themselves for a higher calling, a better salary and a greater opportunity for advancement. Many who have accepted the positions we offer have risen to the top of the ladder, and are numbered among America's foremost and wealthiest business and professional men and women.

An institution with such standing and reputation as the Georgia-Alabama Business College does more to advance the business interests of its graduates than can be done by any amount of family or personal influence.

Consider your present status—would you not like to improve your station in life, increase your income, attain financial independence and success? An opportunity awaits you, for positions are being constantly offered us that must be filled.

Write for our inspiring book, "Your Future—What Does It Hold in Store?" It is sent free on request, explains our offer in detail and points the way to a brighter future.

THE CHURCH AND THE PRESS.

suaded that Christ's attitude needs to be studied where there is a movement on foot to "utilize the press"—his aversion to crowds, and the vehemence with which, on more than one occasion, he demanded that not one word of all that had been done should be made public.

His strict charge was to keep silence. He was very careful upon the matter of those who confessed his power—extraordinarily so. And he was much more anxious to escape a crowd than ever he was to get one. Now what does all that mean? It certainly DOES mean Jesus saw embarrassments in partnership; and he saw in multitudes, not instruments of power, but objects of compassion. It is difficult to draw out the meaning of the attitude without giving offense. For all and sundry may rest well assured the press will NOT be utilized. It is the business of the press to utilize everybody; and it is quite within the possibility of things, if the churches begin to utilize the press, the press will get the better of the bargain, and take far more out of the church than the church takes out of the press. When you come to think of it, the greater is seldom made either stronger or wiser by urging supplications, or doing obeisance before the lesser. The king does not keep his kingliness by making it part of his business to stand well with the newspapers. The king takes care to be kingly; and the newspapers—they wonder and lisp in numbers, for the numbers come. The church of the living God needs only to be what it claims to be, and the newspapers will not need to be fussed and cajoled. I know, we all know, the little things newspapers can do for the church; but they really are little things if the newspapers do them because they are asked to do them. There is far more attention given to the churches in the newspapers of to-day than ever there has been. Is that quite satisfactory? It is impossible for a newspaper to get the focus or select the salient items and be either just or accurate. Besides, the churches might be tempted to urge their own interests, like candidates of various sorts.

What I really should like to see—and what really would serve the best interests, whether of the church or State—would be the press interested in Religion. Religion is far and away more vital than the churches. As far as the church is above the press, so far is religion above the churches. For instance, every day the Times-Picayune publishes a short sermon by Van Dyke. Now a policy along that line will lead us along a better and safer road. I am sure if more editors adopted that policy, it would not be the worse for their circulation. For all that, I would not have the parsons "on the job." The men who handle religion in the newspapers should be newspaper men pure and simple. It is a stupid libel to say they couldn't do it. No other class of men could do it as well. Preaching is one thing, and writing is another. A preacher trips in the pulpit if he rides his pen there, and a pulpit in a newspaper is worse than an elephant wandering in a factory.

So churches are pettyfogging when they are going about little jobs and asking small mercies for themselves. They ought to strive at higher fame, and with no grave concern upon their trivialities, urge the loftiest plea and push it. Why, there is hardly a church that has not its own newspaper. Why in the world does not that church make its own newspaper so mighty and reputable an organ that it is able to speak in the gate with every enemy? This running off to make solicitations at the office of big or little newspapers is a kind of back-hander. Connectional editors may very well take with all the meekness they have at their disposal—and find they have not quite enough—scarcely. Connectional newspapers are like many other folk; they have too many false friends and not enough open enemies. Their worst enemies are those who "believe in the power of the press" but not their own press, like a man who had very, very high sentiments for all women, and beat his own wife. Every church member should be a faithful subscriber to his own church paper.

THE MORGAN CITY AND BERWICK HARVEST.

Dear Dr. Carley: What was sadly needed in this part of the Conference has actually come to pass—a revival. The meeting lasted four weeks at Morgan City and one week at Berwick. There were 220 accessions to our church. About 75 of them came to us from a non-Protestant church. At Morgan City 75 men were added to our church roll; also 77 women and girls over 16 years of age, also many children.

An Epworth League was organized again, with a membership of 35.

The Sunday school had 177 in attendance last Sunday. The Men's Bible class, now taught by Mrs. E. A. Pharr, has a large membership.

The Berwick Sunday school had 72 on hand last Sunday.

Last Sunday morning we had the largest attendance in two years for a morning service.

The marvel to many people was the ready response to the gospel call by so many people in different sections of the town.

A Bible was presented to every convert or at least one to every home. About 150 copies were thus given out, also two dozen New Testaments.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, of Kentucky, did all the preaching, and he did it well. It was the story of Jesus saving sinners.

Mr. V. P. Cassady, also of Kentucky, led and directed the singing. He, too, won many friends by the splendid help he rendered in this great revival.

For ten days we had Mrs. Laura White, of our French Mission work of Houma, to help us with the extra work as it piled up. Her services were greatly appreciated.

Unto Him who alone can save and does save, we give the praise and glory.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

THE BELLE H. BENNETT PRAYER LEAGUE.

Ye that are Jehovah's remembrances, take ye no rest, and give him no rest till he establish and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth.

"But me in remembrance; let us plead together, set forth the cause."

Membership—The Bennett Prayer League is composed of those persons who desire to help promote the Belle Bennett Memorial but whose physical limitations prevent active work in the campaign. This inability to join personally in the campaign is a special call to larger fields of intercession. Invalids, "shut-ins," blind, deaf and infirm people and those who are inactive because of age or remoteness from an Auxiliary who will pledge to give themselves at set times each day in special prayer for this work are called to become members and enlist as the Lord's "Remembrancers."

Object—The League has for its object special and continuous prayer for the establishment of the Belle Bennett Memorial Fund to be used for the training of missionaries, deaconesses and other Christian workers of the church. Its members will make continuous supplication for guidance and blessing on the Council, Conference and Auxiliary Campaign Committees; for the presence and power of the Holy Spirit in every meeting in the interest of the Memorial, and for large gifts of money for the prosecution of the work. Its members are to become "Watchmen, that shall never hold their peace day nor night, and will take no rest and give Jehovah no rest till he make this Memorial 'a praise in the earth.'"

Organization—Names and addresses of those seeking membership will be listed with the Leader of the Prayer League. Auxiliaries will endeavor to interest persons in their communities who are eligible for membership. In those Conference Societies where there are organizations for utilizing such groups for the ministry of intercession the work will function through the Conference officer in charge. All members are urged to list the period of the day which they set for intercession, with the Leader of the League, that there may be assurance that the work of the Memorial is kept before the Lord twenty-four hours of the day.

Program of Work—The Council Memorial Committee and other persons seeking to promote the work of the Memorial will notify the Leader of the Prayer League when special effort is to be made or when special intercession is needed, giving time for her to transmit requests to the members.

The Leader will keep a record of all members, to whom she will send notices of special requests for prayer, suggesting passages of Scripture or verses of promise upon which supplication will be based, that there may be unity throughout the church as they "strive together in prayer."

It is suggested, for encouragement, that members of the League keep a register for listing special prayers, with date of same and verse furnishing foundation of faith. Space after each entry should be left for recording the date when answer is given.

Love in the heart, consciousness of personal impotency, faith in the power of prayer, courage to persevere and assurance of abundant reward are the marks of a true intercessor.

Address—Leader of Prayer League:

Order from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.

NEW WORKERS IN THE LITERATURE DEPARTMENT.

Miss Ellasue Wagner, returned missionary from Korea, who has been serving so efficiently in the Literature Department for the past two years, sails in September to resume her work in Korea. Her many friends who learned to love her dearly as they came in contact with her in the Lambuth Building, regret to see her leave, but since the way has been opened for her to return to her beloved school work they follow her with their prayers. Mrs. A. B. Smith, of Nashville, President of the Tennessee Conference, is Miss Wagner's successor. She is a woman of splendid executive ability. Through her work in the missionary societies and the Council she has gained a knowledge of the work that makes her eminently fitted for the position she now holds.

Mrs. S. G. Barnett, business manager of the Young Christian Worker for the past five years, will leave the first of October for North Carolina, where she will make her home with her son. Mrs. Barnett has been a valuable worker in the Literature Department, doing her work most satisfactorily and endearing herself to many. Miss Elizabeth Olmstead, who recently resigned her position at the Scarrit Bible and Training School to make her home with her sister, Emily Olmstead, has been secured to take the work that Mrs. Barnett is leaving. With this new force of splendidly equipped workers, together with Mrs. W. K. Simpson, who is proving a valuable assistant, the Literature Department hopes to serve its constituency more acceptably than ever before.

ANOTHER NICODEMUS.

By Mrs. Roy Smith.

I want to tell you about the baptism of a principal under whom I have been teaching now for two years. His case is a good illustration of the truth that "My word shall not return unto me void." Twenty-four years ago, while still a high school boy, this man was taught by a Presbyterian missionary. During all the years since he has been favorable to Christianity, but his Buddhist mother made him promise that as long as she lived he would not be a Christian. Because of his promise and since it took much courage to stand out as a Christian teacher some years ago, he has been content to keep his belief hidden.

Even as a boy, though, he exhibited the marks of Christian teaching. Once he was struck very rudely by a farmer as he was walking along the road. This farmer was a friend of the family and had become so angry with him for attending a Bible class that he could not control himself when he saw the boy, but hit him with the spade he was carrying. When taken to the police station, the boy refused to prosecute him, and quoted the Bible, to the amazement of all.

Not long ago the daughter of this man was taken to the hospital. A few visits to a neighborhood Sunday school had taught her all she knew of the Savior, yet three hours before she died she commenced to pray. At her request the father sent for a Christian preacher, and the child died in all the triumphs of faith. The father was so greatly touched that he defied the old grandmother and had a Christian funeral.

The next day I had a long talk with him and urged him, since he had taken this great step, to go still further and be baptized himself. He paused and thought earnestly, but at last said: "Yes, I will." Then it was that he told me of his experience twenty-four years ago in the Bible class, and of his desire even then to become a Christian. Gratefully he remembered the old missionary who had given him his first vision of the Christ, and when Dr. McAlpine visited Kobe shortly afterward he was baptized.

How many different missionaries have watered the gospel seed planted a quarter of a century ago, I do not know, but it was our happy privilege to see it bloom in our own home. He says he will tell his teachers why he has taken this step and will stand for Christ before the thousands of girls he comes in contact with. He has even promised to go to the country to do some evangelistic speaking.

IN MEMORIAM—MRS. R. E. SMITH.

only hers, but in every student in Centenary College. She was thoughtful, patient and sympathetic with all who came to her for counsel and advice. Mrs. Smith was truly a boy's friend. She was never too tired to give a word of cheer or encouragement to any one who came to her for help. When we talked to her, we came away better men. Her life was characterized by a great love for humanity. She saw something good in every one, no matter how much they had missed the right path. It may be truly said of her, "She lived for others." Centenary College and the city of Shreveport have suffered a great loss, but it has the influence of a life that shall never be forgotten. The light of such a life will illumine the pathway of many way-worn travelers and bid them fight on until the Great King says, "Come up higher—your work has been finished below." Mrs. Smith was a true and faithful companion and a devoted mother. She loved her family, often sacrificing herself for their success. Mrs. Smith is survived by her husband, Dr. R. E. Smith, Dean of Centenary College; a son, Garland G. Smith, and two daughters, Christine and Hazel Smith, and three brothers, W. O. Thompson, of McEwin, Tenn.; J. W. Thompson, of Ruskin, and H. Grady Thompson, of Sherman, Tex., and a host of relatives and friends. Funeral services were conducted from Noel Memorial Church, Sunday afternoon, Oct. 21, 1923, at 3 o'clock. Ministers participating in the services were: Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Noel Memorial Church; Dr. George Sexton, President of Centenary College, and Rev. D. B. Raulins, student in Southern Methodist University, and long time friend of the family. Interment was at Forest Park Cemetery.

Your children's food

The foods your children eat today, determine their strength and health in later years.

Remember this; they must have well balanced meals. Their food should contain the right amount of mineral salts. These salts act as bone building material. They furnish the different fluids and juices that help keep the tissues young—the body strong and active.

Bakings that are made of good plain white flour and baking powder contain a large amount of mineral salts. Allow your children to eat hardy of these bakings together with fruits and dairy products. This forms an ideal food balance.

When making quick rising breads and pastries such as: biscuits, muffins, cakes, waffles, etc., don't fail to use Calumet—the economy Baking Powder. It contains more than the ordinary leavening strength—it's the purest and surest leavener made. That's why it helps make your flour foods light and easily digested.

Millions of mothers use Calumet daily because they are interested in their children's welfare—their present and future health.

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY.

By Rev. S. D. Howard

What I have to say is based upon Gal. 6:5—"For every man shall bear his own burden."

This text teaches that each man must stand or fall for himself; that however mighty environment may be, it is never almighty, notwithstanding this is the teaching of the social gospel.

To illustrate, take the story of Lucifer, who fell from heaven and original purity. He was in the best environment—heaven itself—and still this heavenly environment could not prevent him from going astray. The story of Adam and Eve is another illustration that environment, however good and wholesome, is not sufficient to keep men and women from going wrong if they choose to do so. The environment of Eden was charming, and there was but one possible way of transgression, and that was to eat of the forbidden fruit; this they did in spite of the environment.

Let us look at the other side of this question of environment. You remember the story of Jezebel and her court in the ninth century before Christ, and that her court was one of the most corrupt that ever existed. There were four hundred Baal prophets, and corruption of every kind on every hand. Oh, what a corrupt and gigantic environment! Yet God's prophet, Elijah, stood out against it like a wall of granite. He thought that he was the only one that was for God, and the Lord had to remind him that he had seven thousand that had not bowed the knee to Baal. Here was a terrible environment, and yet there were thousands that were true and holding on to their integrity.

The court of King Herod is another example. Herod was one of the wickedest and foulest kings that ever occupied a throne. In Herod's court was John the Baptist, one of the most daring preachers that ever lived, rebuking the king to his face for his adulterous living. And while John the Baptist lost his life, he retained his purity of heart and life.

Again, take the court of Mary, Queen of Scots, as another example. Mary, Queen of Scots, was one of the most fascinating women that ever lived, and in spite of her beauty and fascination, and political and social influence, which made a strong environment, John Knox stood his ground and rebuked her to her face, and prayed her off her throne, and liberated Scotland from Romanism.

That environment is a very great power for good or evil, I am willing to admit; but I contend that, however great and powerful environment may be, it is never able to make good those that want to be bad, or bad those that want to be good. Take the temptation of Jesus. What preserved his integrity? You say, "He was divine." Yes, he was divine, but very man as well. You say he believed in God; no doubt of that; but that does not answer the question of his retaining his integrity. You ask what was it that kept him? It was the right exercise of his will. The whole thing is lodged in the will. Jesus said of the Jews, "You will not come unto me that you might have life."

In conclusion, let me say, no parent can make his or her son or daughter good against the will of that son or daughter. They may be surrounded by the best environment possible, and in spite of that blessed environment and holy influence, override it, and go down to hell. No father, no mother, no teacher, no preacher, can make a man or woman good against his or her will. "For every man shall bear his own burden."

Individual responsibility does not end with death, but must be accounted for at the eternal judgment. Individual responsibility is threefold: Responsibility for our conduct; responsibility for the motive that prompted our conduct; responsibility for the influence emanating from our conduct. "For every man shall bear his own burden."

A BRAND NEW IDEA

Helps Mothers—Pleases Children

Heretofore mothers have oftimes been at a loss about arranging these parties.

"The Children's Party Book" by Marion Jane Parker, just off the press, will save mothers any further worry about planning children's parties. The book is a 40 page affair, 4 pages devoted to each occasion, with 10 full color pages of illustrations by Frances Tipton Hunter, telling just how to plan the party, from sending out the invitations, clear through — what games to play, how to play them, what cakes to bake, what refreshments to serve, and everything necessary to relieve mothers of the usual attendant worries.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a special offer to those interested in church activities, to help distribute the book.

The plan, like the book, is a worthy one, and should receive the consideration of our church women, as a ready means of raising funds.—Adv.

FROM THE JOINT COMMISSION ON UNIFICATION.

At the last session of the Joint Commission on Unification of American Methodism, it was agreed that an address should be sent to the Methodist press throughout America in explanation of the principles involved in the plan agreed upon by the Joint Commission and recommended to the two churches for favorable action.

The Bishops of the Joint Commission were authorized and requested to prepare this address and send it out in the name of the Commission and for the Commission.

I am herewith transmitting to you for publication at the earliest practicable date the address which we were appointed to prepare. You will observed that it is signed by the five Bishops repsenting the Methodist Episcopal Church and by four of the five Bishops representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. As you already know, Bishop Denny does not favor the plan we have adopted, and therefore does not attach his signature to this address.

EDWIN D. MOUZON.

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Greetings:

Grace, Mercy and Peace from God our Father and Jesus Christ our Lord.

Your Commissioners on Unification, appointed by the General Conferences of the two churches, believe that the present is an opportune time for the two great Episcopal Methodisms to give serious thought and prayer to the question of Unification. Much of the trouble of our present day world grows out of the spirit of divisiveness. The solidarity of the human family and the oneness of human interests and welfare are not sufficiently emphasized. A saner spirit of co-operation and fellowship will assist in making a better world. World conditions impose upon Christian groups of men and women who are one in the essential moral and spiritual phases of their life the obligation of closer unity for the general welfare.

As Episcopal Methodists, certainly we have reason for devout thanksgiving to Almighty God. God has honored us in a very peculiar manner. That was an eventful day in Aldersgate Street, London, when John Wesley felt his heart strangely warmed. The result has been the kindling of a fire which has changed the religious climate of Christendom. There can be no question, however, that the full strength of Methodism would be greatly augmented if these two great branches of the church were one in fact as we are one by inheritance. The united effort of Christian forces seems to us to be the only offset to the spirit of divisiveness and hatred which has wrought such ruin in our generation. As representatives of the forces of righteousness in the world; who pray every day for the coming of the Kingdom, surely there is an obligation upon us to set that example of Christian unity and co-operation which will contribute to the well being of mankind.

"Therefore, we, the Commissioners on Unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, holding that these two churches are essentially one church, one in origin, in belief, in spirit, in purpose and in polity, and desiring that this essential unity may be made actual in organization and administration throughout the world," wish to commend the plan adopted by the Joint Commission on Unification for careful study to the ministers and members of both churches.

The salient features of the plan seem to us to be the following:

I.

The plan which our Commission recommends safeguards all local interests and traditions which are held dear in the two Jurisdictions. "Every vote in the General Conference shall be by Jurisdictions, and shall require the accepted majority vote of each Jurisdiction to be effective." Which is to say that we are to enter upon an arrangement in which no measure can be passed touching the work within the bounds of either Jurisdiction without the accepted majority vote of the Jurisdiction concerned.

BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER,
Who Will Preside Over the Approaching Session of the Louisiana Annual Conference

II.

This plan gives due regard to the rights and preferences of church members living on the border where the two Jurisdictions work side by side. Church membership is a sacred thing, and we recognize it as such. Arrangements are to be made for the transfer of members, preachers, churches, pastoral charges, districts, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences and Missions from one Jurisdiction to the other; but "no transfer shall be made without the consent of the member, preacher, church, pastoral charge, district, Annual Conference, Mission Conference, or Mission that it is proposed to transfer." It is understood that in case of such transfer, the initial movement shall be made by the party or parties chiefly concerned. That is to say, we do not believe that union can be forced. We, therefore, give our people and our organizations time and opportunity to grow together, and we believe that under this plan such growing together will immediately begin to take place. This provision amply protects minorities in each Jurisdiction, and is an example of that trust in each other without which real union cannot exist and increase.

III.

It removes at once the cause of competition and overlapping on the border, and it does this for the following reasons:

1. While we enter upon this plan of co-operation and union with the two Jurisdictions standing just as they are in the United States of America, nevertheless the two churches are "united in one church," having one name, one General Conference, and one connectional "organization and administration throughout the world." This fact alone will silently work in the minds of our people, taking away the impulse and desire for the continuation of churches which overlap, and the establishing of new organizations which conflict one with the other.

2. The proposed plan gives to the General Conference the power "to govern any and all enterprises and activities which may be agreed upon as being of a connectional character." While the determination of what enterprises and activities are, as a matter of fact, of a connectional character is left to the decision of the General Conference, it will be immediately evident that the evangelization of needy fields here in America, both in our cities and in our rural districts, does constitute an enterprise which is connectional in character. The suggested plan, then, will give to each Jurisdiction the opportunity of studying in association with the other the entire field. Together the two Jurisdictions will address themselves to the one task of giving the gospel to the lost in the Home Field.

3. The plan which we recommend associates together for counsel and co-operation the administrative officers of the two Jurisdictions. "Immediately after the union shall have been consummated, the Bishops shall meet and organize as one body and shall arrange for the superintendence of the work of the church." And not only so, but the plan draws together all other administrative officers for counsel and co-operation.

IV.

One of the most important features of our plan of Unification is that it looks to the immediate organization of the work of the united church outside the United States, so as to consummate the unity of Episcopal Methodism in foreign lands. Nothing is more to be desired than that a united Methodism, without competition the one Jurisdiction with the other, and without waste of men and money, should be able to deliver its full strength upon the world in the interest of human salvation. This important aspect of our proposed plan must immediately commend itself to all who love our Lord Jesus Christ and [illegible] for the coming of His Kingdom.

And now we wish to add [illegible] suggestion touching the wisest course of [illegible] ing the consummation of these negotiations.

AMERICAN PROHIBITION THROUGH FOREIGN EYES.

By William C. Allen.

During a recent eighteen months' tour around the world I discovered that interest in things American was largely centered in our Eighteenth Amendment. Day by day the newspapers of the British Empire have been discussing Prohibition. There has been an underlying anxiety as to if a drinking Empire could compete with a sober America. Would long-established personal habits have to be abandoned in order to counter American efficiency and minimize the extension of American commerce abroad?

It consequently has been with great joy that most of the newspapers of the Empire have hailed "information" which seemed to them adverse to the success of prohibition. When one sees in these periodicals the big ads of whisky and beer concerns, he can understand at least one reason for their position. The English-speaking peoples generally are fed on delusive prohibition headlines, endless gibes, inaccurate statements. Much of this anti-prohibition propaganda is silly beyond words.

The Argus, of Melbourne, Australia, whilst I was there, had a communication including within it the expression: "A nation that swills its drink like pigs should obviously be deprived of it." This seems to be a general opinion, although the drinking usages of America for years have been far less furious than those in British lands. Many newspapers of the Empire declare that prohibition is "a complete failure," or "the tide of liquor swamps prohibition," or "the rich flout the law," or "intoxicating beverages are now flowing in torrents over all the borders of the United States."

The gullibility of the English public is, in some instances, severely taxed. The London Daily Mail, Aug. 31, 1922, had this extraordinary bit of "news": "A water shortage has caused concern at Frostbery, Maryland. Consulting engineers report that the dearth of water in the reservoirs is due to the excessive consumption of water by the illicit liquor stills in the town. There are more than 100, the engineers say, and they use water at the rate of 200,000 gallons an hour." Comment seems unnecessary!

The confederation of some disloyal Americans with unfriendly newspapers abroad may carry with it reproaches on the country we honor and love. In a widely-read Australian newspaper there not long ago appeared a good-sized picture of a strikingly ugly, hatchet-faced, narrow-chested, thin-limbed girl with her finger in her mouth, a leer in her eye, with a bottle fastened to her garter, whilst under it were the words: "Prohibition dodge—Some perfect young ladies in the U. S. A. have more use for their garters than mere ornamentation." I made personal investigation into the origin of this slur on my countrywomen and discovered that the picture had been sent abroad by a pictorial bureau in one of the great cities of the United States. For a little gain that business concern was willing to bring contempt upon the girls of America. I brought this subject to the attention of the government of the U. S. A.

Questions associated with liquor on ships and the diplomatic negotiations between London and Washington are intently followed. The London Daily News of July 31, 1923, and two subsequent issues, contained full information regarding a "Get-Rich Scheme" of a whisky-selling baronet, Sir Brodrick Hartwell, who issued a circular regarding "the shipping of whisky to a place on the high seas within fifteen miles of America, and there selling it to rum-runners." Sir Brodrick said: "I am shipping 5,000 cases of whisky abroad within the next four weeks, and the vessel can carry at least another 5,000 cases." He also stated: "I can offer you an opportunity of making 20 per cent profit on your capital every sixty days. The cargo will be fully insured against all marine risks at Lloyd's." I have in my possession one of the circulars issued by this aristocratic rum-runner.

Dr. Chappie, in Parliament, asked Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, McNeill, about this enterprise. The latter, who is expected to represent the views of the British Government, is reported as replying that "the whole subject was engaging the attention of His Majesty's Government," and that he was "not in a position to say at the present moment what steps should be taken. It was a very difficult matter to decide." Why should it be difficult to decide whether or no it is right to temporize, even for money's sake, on a question of assisting the law-breakers of a friendly power?

As nearly as I can sense the attitude of most educated Britishers, they are pleased because their nationals make huge money out of assisting American law-breakers, whilst in many instances they really are ashamed of doing so. They are often glad because the illicit business, participated in by Englishmen, enables them to say: "I told you so—American prohibition can't succeed," and to point to us as a law-despising, boot-legging people. But not a few of them seem apprehensive lest America's predicament, which is largely the creation of British business interests, may jeopardize their efforts to secure American sympathy in the "next war." They recognize that the entrance of America into the great war resulted in a vast territorial expansion of the Empire, and are naturally apprehensive that a hoped-for support of their imperialism may be neutralized by American resentment toward British rum-running.

Some Americans traveling in foreign lands apparently discredit the observance of their laws at home. In the Natal Mercury, of South Africa, May 23, 1923, appeared a dispatch alleging an interview with George Holden Tinkham, of the Appropriaton Committee of the American House of Representatives, then traveling in South Africa. He was quoted as saying among other things: "Murders and major crimes have increased greatly." "Arrests for drunkenness in the large cities have reached the figures of normal years before prohibition was adopted." "The American people are coming to the knowledge at last that prohibition was imposed upon them by the expenditure of vast sums of money, much of which was raised by sectarian churches, who in this action have violated the first principles of the American social compact," etc. He is stated to have predicted "a return to saneness"!

I have spoken of the attitude of the majority of English-speaking people in various countries. Let us consider the position of a minority in the same far-flung lands. This minority is largely composed of church people, and the success of prohibition in America is to them a burning question.

Visitors to America from England or the colonies have, upon returning home, frequently declared in letters to the newspapers that prohibition is successful. Some few have denied that such was the case. Temperance Alliances have been busy. The S. A. T. A. of South Africa reports that it requested the Prime Minister of that country to ascertain "what effect prohibition has had on the grape-growing industry of California." They report that he applied to the British Ambassador at Washington for information. Space does not permit a copy of his guarded reply. It certainly, as quoted, could not discourage the wine growers of South Africa. The secretary of the S. A. T. A. a few months ago took up allegations made in the Star, of Johannesburg, based on a cable from London, and appearing under the headline, "Prohibition Fails in America." He cabled the Secretary of State, U. S. A., for facts. In due course he received a reply through the American consul at Johannesburg, denying that President Harding had made the statement adverse to prohibition attributed to him and including these words: "Prohibition and the enforcement thereof is not a failure, and the President of the United States has made no such statement." From this it will be seen that our Federal Administration is sincere in its prohibition posture abroad.

Whilst I was in Australia the editor of the Patriot, a prohibition paper of Adelaide, Australia, when alluding to an incident connected with rum-running, in an editorial declared: "The crowning humiliation of it all is that the protection of the Union Jack is claimed for this traffic." He adds, "This is trailing our flag in the mire." The Society of Friends of England, which for nearly 300 years has so often taken the unpopular side when protesting against wrong, under date, May 4, 1923, sent a memorial to the Prime Minister of England expressing its deep concern because of a reply made by Under-Secretary of State Gore in the House of Commons regarding rum-running from the Bahamas, in which speech that official was reported as stating that he would "certainly do nothing to interfere with British trade." The Friends added, "We believe that much harm will come from such actions, and that the good relations between the United States of America and this country are bound to be imperiled thereby." Are the Friends right? Is it not also very important that the prohibition backers of America see to it that they do not let the present situation create within America a spirit of antagonism toward our Motherland?

There are two sides to the story. America must retain the position she has assumed not only on her own behalf, but on behalf of her brethren abroad. We fight the prohibition battle not only for ourselves, but on behalf of millions beyond the seas.

London, 1923.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Back in the Pelican Pines! How welcome the long-drawn forest-aisles, the stately trees with their tossing emerald plumes, the mystic silence of the fragrant woods, the crimson flash of the Cardinal's wing in the radiant glooms of the undergrowth! Yes, I like the plains of Texas; the far-sweeping horizon, the awesome sense of space, the robes of golden sunlight that adorn the rolling landscape; but I miss the trees. They have, like Tennyson's "old Yew," grown "incorporate" with me! I think when God made the world, and his thought shaped itself into the first tree, he looked upon it with joy, and exclaimed that it was "very good!" I am sorry we are so cruel to our trees. Let us take better care of them.

Advised by the physician that Sister Steel's health needed a higher climate, we returned, for a while at least, to Brownwood, Texas. It is near the geographic center of the Empire State, and is about 1400 feet above the sea, giving it a high and dry climate. It is a lovely little city of 15,000 population, most of them Southerners of the best type, intelligent, hospitable, and enterprising. They have lovely homes, fine schools, two colleges, beautiful churches, and all the advantages of a modern city. I had served the church there as pastor two years, so it was like going home, and it was beautiful to see the welcome extended to Sister Steel. She has already responded to the bracing climate, and we hope will soon be entirely well again.

After preaching a week at Stephenville for

Rev. J. U. McAfee, I accepted the unanimous invitation of the Fort Worth Methodist Ministers' Association to visit Fort Worth, and give them my message on "Genesis in the Light of Modern Science." Notwithstanding the heavy rain, the hall was filled with a picked audience, including many cultured ladies. Our former Pelican brother, Rev. W. H. Coleman, presided. He is doing a great work in Fort Worth as pastor of Central Church. As we went into the hall a brother whispered in my ear that we had some of the rankest Fundamentalists in the land present, so I started off by saying that they knew when they invited me that I am a man who speaks what he thinks, and who is a bungler when it comes to adapting his views to harmonize with somebody else's opinions. I spoke for nearly two hours and had perfect attention. The object of my message is to stabilize the faith of my hearers by showing that there is no conflict between the Bible and Science; but, on the contrary, that they mutually support each other. I do not flatter myself that all who heard me agreed with me in every point, for there were men there who are accustomed to think for themselves on this subject. I was told that Rev. Mr. Norris, the noted Baptist leader of the Fundamentalists, was in the audience. But at least one man told me that my argument is unanswerable, and that the message should be heard in every schoolhouse in the land. Good for him! I have given it in many schools, had given it a few days before to 600 young men and young women in Tarleton Agricultural College in Stephenville.

From there I went to Gainesville where I spent the Sabbath preaching for Rev. E. V. Cole, and enjoying the hospitality of his "Den." Cole is a bachelor gentleman, a scholar, an all-around clever fellow; and yet he lives in that large parsonage with no companion but a cat. It is a sociable cat, a good mouser, and seemed to enjoy our company, as she would not stay out. Bishop DuBose was a fellow guest. There isn't a bit of put on about Bishop DuBose. He is unaffected, simple, brotherly, and a delightful companion in a bachelor's den. He is chuck full of good stories, and I added some good ones to my stock. As a bishop told them, of course, they are all right. I spoke twice before the North Texas Conference, once on "Asbury, the Leader of the Circuit Riders," and then on Genesis. I was to give "The Circuit Riders, the Men Asbury Led," but Bishop Moore decided to hold an all-day session of the Conference, and that cut out everything. I heard a fine speech on Sunday school work from Dr. Percy Knickerbocker, and a fine explanation of the Superannuate campaign by Dr. Seleeman, President of S. M. U. If I can hold out awhile, I believe the hearse won't have to go to the poorhouse for my remains when it is all over. The heart of the church is in sympathy with the appeal for a decent support of the aged preachers. I met many friends and made a number of new ones at Gainesville. The Lord bless them all. Comrades, some of them, like dear old George Gibson, and John Allen, and many others, whom to meet refreshed my heart. Gib will pardon me for calling him "old." He ain't.

From Gainesville, I went to Vinita, Oklahoma, where I gave five or six messages in the beautiful new church, whose pastor, Dr. M. F. Butler, is an old friend. I was especially glad to meet my dear old friend, Dr. Brewer. Brewer is verging on eighty, yet he is hale and active, and has charge of the hospital activities of his Conference. From Vinita I came to my beloved "Den" in the Pelican Pines for a few days of rest at "HOME". The charmer is away, but the girls, who have inherited their mother's graces, make the place redolent with the perfume of a beautiful affection. From here I expect to go to the Memphis Conference to give some messages; and from there to Atlanta to preach every day at the session of the North Georgia Conference. As this Conference meets at the same time of the meeting of the Louisiana Conference, I will not get to Bogalusa. I regret this, for I feel a strong attachment for my brethren of this Conference, some of whom have been very kind to me; but I must do my work. I have travelled almost incessantly this year. It has been one of the busiest of the whole fifty-six years of my ministry, and one of the happiest. I am learning to love everybody, some a little bit more than others. I have grown in grace, and in deep conviction that "Unification" is the synonym of "Ruin" for Southern Methodism; but thank God the danger is receding. We are further from it now than ever. I think that even Bishop Mouzon is getting his eyes open. Fraternal alliance, not organic union, is the true policy for Methodism to pursue. Yankees are Yankees and Southern folks are Southern folks, and Cuffy lies between. Let us have peace but with honor. No terms with the Higher Criticism, Modernism, Blandism, or whatever the creed of destructive thought may call itself. Hurrah for Bennett and Cannon, or Cannon and Bennett, as you please! Let us rally on the Virginians, and stand by the faith of our fathers. Every one of these tall Pelican Pines whispers, "Be steadfast!" Every gurgling stream among the hills murmurs, "Be steadfast!" The eternal stars, shedding on us the mild radiance they shed on Abraham as he journeyed to the land of promise, bid us "Be steadfast!" And by the grace of God we will.

THE DEATH AND THE RESURRECTION OF A COUNTRY CHURCH.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

In the reverse order, it is not always true that "all that goes up has to come down," when applied to the going up or down of the country church, for many of them die never to be resurrected again, and when resurrected at all the efforts by which they are made to live are harder than the neglect and mismanagement by which they are allowed to die was easy. But of the better type of those that have died and then have been made to live, perhaps the Bethel church on the Indian Bayou charge is a good example of how the death comes about, and then as to how the life of reconstruction begins.

Bethel is one of the old churches of the Conference, on the half-way line—about nine and a half miles each—between Indian Bayou and Lafayette, and about as far from Rayne, and is the home church of Rev. J. F. McCoy and of Revs. Lastie and Aladdan Hoffpauir, of our Conference, and perhaps of other preachers, but has been abandoned as a preaching place for several years, the old leaders having died or moved away, and the membership having been transferred to the Indian Bayou church, practically every foot of the intervening territory being Methodistic, and no line of separation being between the membership of the two churches, some holding membership in one church, and some in the other, and some attending the services of both. Since the present pastor's superintendency, we have hoped to solve the problem by the use of auto transfers, but failing to get the missionary appropriation for this, and becoming convinced after a fuller acquaintance with the territory that there should be a Methodist church at some point in this territory, and that the old church with its graveyard and its disorganized membership, with various absent friends and kinsfolk of those who lived there, or were buried there, was the best nucleus to build to, we borrowed lumber for temporary seats, took the organ, lights and hymn books from Indian Bayou, and, with the assistance of Rev. A. A. Bernard and his Ford, we called a revival and get-together meeting, which from the first was well attended, and mostly by people whom we scarcely ever got to the other church; notably was the attendance of French of the community better than we have ever known at any Protestant church. At one service, when Rev. Kye Hebert, a missionary of the Disciples church, preached to them, it was estimated that there were more French-speaking people present than could have gotten into the house, and during the meeting two families of French joined the church on profession, and one family by letter. After this first meeting we had Brother Thibodeaux, our pastor at Lydia, preach a series of sermons in French, and he being one of the converts of Rev. E. N. Parrish, whom we had led into the Methodist ministry and encouraged and helped in his work on Bayou Lafourche, below Donaldsonville, we claimed him as a second degree son in the gospel. Like the other helpers, he did us good and appreciated service.

As an outcome of these efforts we have at Bethel a Sunday school of over a hundred, and have had as many as ninety-six present on some Sundays, the organization and grading, with curtained rooms, being practically up to the standard of a one-room house school. A full supply of literature and song books is supplied. Windows have already been put into the dilapidated house, the roof repaired, and other needed improvements, including toilets and cistern, are in the process of being added, as funds and time allow. The Hoffpauir brothers of Estherwood, former members here, are contributing liberally to these repairs, and one neighbor, Roman Catholic Frenchman, who says that a dilapidated church is a reproach to any community, and that this community needs this church, volunteered an offer of $50 to the repair fund. When the present work is completed and an active officiary can be developed, Bethel will rank among our best country churches again, and from its location will serve a needed community.

Our primary aim in this report, however, is to make some observations as to how country churches die, and then to suggest how they may be kept alive, and this special case will illustrate the history of many a church of the same type. To begin with, when the church suspended, bad roads had a lot to do with hindering attendance and efficient pastoral oversight; the church now being on a lateral gravel road just three miles off the "Old Spanish Trail," this difficulty has been largely overcome. And the roads—or rather the lack of roads—have a lot to do with the regular attendance of, and consequent death of, many country churches, both the attendance of the pastor and the attendance of the congregation being involved. And then, the lack of equipment adds a second obstacle, and Bethel illustrates this hindrance, there being neither rooms for teaching or social programs, nor any of the sanitary conveniences of a public assembly. The church is the only institution existing among civilized peoples that presumes to call folks together from distant homes, in whole families, from infants to the aged and enfeebled, with no kind of a comfort station, affording water to drink and places of privacy, and, as in this case, many of them have no arrangements whatever for fire or warmth in cold weather. We once had a board of trustees to protest against letting a member put a flue and heater into a country church because the house was insured for $500! It wouldn't be right to risk causing an insurance company to lose $500 by putting a fire in the house, and so these members would close up shop, even for weddings and funerals, for five of the twelve months in the year! But while most of our country churches have some kind of an arrangement for making a fire, we do not remember to have ever seen a good load of cut up wood or coal on the yard of a country church in our lives, except what we ourselves put there, or had put there. At another—not the one mentioned above—country church, when we were insisting on a flue being built as winter approached, the leading steward set himself positively against it on the ground that when it got cold enough to need a fire in church it was understood that they would all stay at home. The trouble with these "going into winter quarters" is not that they suspend, and then after four or five months have an opening, like the public schools, for instance, but that they just frazzle out, and nobody ever knows when they will suspend, or when they will open again, and often the preacher is as much to blame as are the members, and Bethel, according to the reports illustrates this fact, too; for at times he took the position that since it was cold, or threatening, or the roads were bad, that "there would be nobody out, much," and let the faithful few bear the weather to be disappointed in the service. On the next preaching day that "faithful few" played safe and stayed at home, and let the preacher himself take the medicine that he had given them on the last preaching day. After a few passes of this kind, everything was dead and buried without even the pretence of a decent funeral. And then, when lonesome to go somewhere, both the preacher and the people venture out again about next Easter and make an effort at organizing a Sunday school or a prayer meeting, to close soon after the "big meeting" of the summer, nothing can be efficiently organized before the next winter's suspension date. Thus the country church, like a dog chasing its tail, follows a certain round of getting nowhere, because, for one reason at least, it does not run long enough to do anything.

Another reason for the weakness of the country church is the lack of efficient leadership. There being the fewest of educated and trained leaders among the members makes it doubly necessary that the pastors themselves should have the highest type of efficiency, since they as a rule have to lead in everything, from being sexton to administering the Lord's Supper. As at Bethel, so at many if not most of our country churches, practically every teacher and officer in the Sunday school is brand-new, with everything to learn, and but little educational foundation, in most cases, to build on. So it devolves upon the pastor and his family, as a rule, or often, to furnish the music, make the programs, do the classifying, and carry the greater part of the responsibility of the whole work. It is no wonder then, when, in addition to this bearing strain on him, it is remembered that he, as a rule, gets but a mere pittance of a stipend on which to support his family, and generally to carry a liberal part of the church's incidentals, that he is seeking the first offer of a well organized church, where trained workers lead in the several departments of activity, and be as adequately supported financially, and that with educated preachers the country church is under ban.

To offset this lack of trained leadership, we think that our plan would be a good one for any country church. We give one night in the week—Thursday—to this training and teaching work, the first period being for choir practice and teaching music, the second being to a brief map and introductory study to the next Sunday's Sunday school lesson, and the third in two divisions—the adults studying a teacher training book (here "The Worker and His Bible"), and the young people a mission study book ("In Wembo Nyama's Land"). In this way—with the pastor's wife teaching a class of instrumental music at the home church—we propose to have leaders ready to take the places of those who leave the country church for the towns and cities, to make stronger the churches where they are not much needed. The only way to "run" a church in the country is to "run" it, like a railroad train, or a store, or a school—hold every service according to appointment, and not let the people be guessing whether or not "there will be any church."

METHODISM IN GULFPORT, MISS.

By Hon. T. M. Evans.

I give the following information from memory:

Early in the year 1887, either in April or May, the G. & S. I. R. R. Company had established a convict camp with two hundred or more convicts on the west side of the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad, opposite where the shops are now situated in Gulfport, and my father, Rev. W. G. Evans, began preaching to the convicts and guards, and those employed in the railroad work, either in April or May 1887. There were no residents in Gulfport at that time. The Union Investment Company surveyed and platted the original City of Gulfport during the year 1887-88. A few people built homes in Gulfport, and what was known as the Thornton Hotel was built on Twenty-seventh Avenue, south of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, during the year 1888. The Railroad Company failed in 1889, and all work ceased until 1896, but during this time old Dr. J. J. Thornton lived in the Thornton Hotel, a few families had moved into Gulfport, and my father continued to hold services occasionally in the Thoruton Hotel during this period from 1887 to 1896. I remember attending services at the Thornton Hotel either in 1890 or 1891. No church property was secured for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, until 1896. In the summer of 1896, Brother Nolan B. Harmon, who was the preacher of the Bay St. Louis charge, which included Long Beach and Pass Christian, came to my house in Mississippi City, and I brought him to Gulfport and pointed out the four corners at the crossing of Twenty-fifth Avenue and Fourteenth Street, and advised him to secure a church lot on one of the four corners, which he did, but did not secure a deed to this property until some time after the Seashore Camp meeting in 1897. The company required that a certain amount of money be raised for a church building before the deed would be executed, and Brother R. L. Bennett, then of Yazoo City, while attending the Seashore Camp meeting in 1897, donated the required amount of money and placed it on deposit in the bank in Yazoo City, and the company then executed the deed to two lots, situated at the southwest corner, block 160, at the crossing of Fourteenth Street and Twenty-fifth Avenue.

The Conference held in the fall of 1896 appointed Rev. Thomas W. Brown in charge of the Gulfport Mission, as I remember it now; Rev. C. A. Powell was presiding elder. It embraced Gulfport, Mississippi City, and other points on the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad, as far north as McHenry. Brother Brown resided at Mississippi City during the year 1897, and began preaching in the small schoolhouse that had been erected in Gulfport that year; however, my father had continued preaching in Gulfport in such places as could be found to hold services, and early in 1896 two passenger cars had been brought to Gulfport by the railroad company, and were kept on the sidetrack on the Sabbath, and were used for holding religious services on the Sabbath, and a small Sunday school was organized in these cars some time during the year 1896 or 1897, and Brother S. A. Tomlinson, who was then a young man, was the first Sunday school superintendent that I knew of. This was a union Sunday school.

At the Conference in 1897, Rev. J. H. Holland was assigned to the Gulfport Mission, which then embraced Gulfport and points along the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad to McHenry. Some time about April, 1898, Brother Holland secured the services of Rev. I. L. Peebles to assist him in holding a protracted meeting in the little schoolhouse, then used for school purposes, and organized a church with a small membership. I do not know the number of members at that time of organization. I moved to Gulfport on the first day of September, 1898, and the membership at that time was fifty-eight.

At the district conference in Hattiesburg in 1898, a resolution was passed, requesting the Methodists of the Seashore District to assist in building a good church in the City of Gulfport; also, the quarterly conference appointed a building committee, with instructions to erect the church building. Nothing more was done until 1899.

The Mississippi Annual Conference, held in Hattiesburg in January, 1899, appointed Rev. J. P. Drake as preacher in charge of the Bay St. Louis charge, which included Gulfport, Long Beach, and Pass Christian. Brother Drake resided at Bay St. Louis during the year 1899. We raised some subscriptions and laid the foundation of the first church building erected in Gulfport, and, also, put up a portion of the frame of the building. We also secured an appropriation from the Conference Board of Church Extension and from the General Board of Church Extension.

At the Annual Conference held in Vicksburg in December, 1899, Rev. J. S. Parker was appointed to the Gulfport Mission, which embraced the Long Beach Church, Handsboro, and Mississippi City; Brother W. W. Simmons was presiding elder. At the first quarterly conference held in 1900, the building committee was authorized to proceed with the church building, and, having no money with which to proceed, the building committee, or members of the building committee, bought the necessary material on their individual account and proceeded to finish the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, building in Gulfport.

The building of this church was made possible by the assistance of S. S. Bullis, who was then the superintendent of the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad Company, and by the First National Bank of Commerce of Hattiesburg, Miss., which loaned us twelve hundred dollars on our individual account, and by the Camp & Hinton Company, of Lumberton, Miss., which sold us the lumber on account. We succeeded in getting this church sufficiently completed to organize our Sunday school and hold our church services in the building on the first Sunday of July, 1900; but owing to a very hard rain and weather, there were only four laymen who attended; but on the following Sabbath we completed the organization of the first Methodist Sunday school ever organized in Gulfport, which, as I now remember, consisted of ten classes and teachers and one hundred and fifty members. We did not finish paying for this church building until about the last of the year of 1903, when all was paid for except three hundred dollars to the General Church Extension Board.

Brother J. S. Parker served this church during the year of 1900-01, and reported about one hundred and fifty members at the close of the year 1901. The church assessed and paid that year four hundred and fifty dollars to the preacher in charge.

At the Annual Conference held in McComb City in 1901, Rev. W. D. Dominick was appointed to the Gulfport charge, with an appropriation of two hundred dollars; the charge consisted of Gulfport, Mississippi City, and Handsboro. At the first quarterly conference, the asssessment for this church was made for the preacher at one thousand dollars, provided he gave four Sundays of the month to this church, and a local preacher was secured for Handsboro and Mississippi City. Just before the close of the year, Rev. J. B. Culpepper and his sons held a tent meeting under the direction of our church, for which we raised six hundred dollars, and paid off in full, with nearly two hundred dollars in addition, and with the church membership increased from one hundred and fifty to three hundred.

At the Annual Conference at Natchez in 1902, Rev. George H. Galloway was appointed to Gulfport station, the salary was fixed at twelve hundred dollars the first year, and he remained four years.

At the Annual Conference in 1906, Rev. J. M. Morse was assigned to the First Church of Gulfport, and served the church four years. The church continued to grow during his administration.

At the Annual Conference of 1910, Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., was assigned to the First Church of Gulfport, but was transferred to Shreveport, La., before the end of the year, and Rev. M. L. Burton was appointed to this church in his stead, and served the church until the Annual Conference in 1914. During Brother Burton's administration the First Church building caught on fire and was partly destroyed. Afterwards the present location of the church building was secured and the first lots were sold, and the present building was erected, and sufficiently furnished to be occupied

At the Annual Conference in 1914, Rev. Nolan B. Harmon was assigned to this church and served during the years 1916-17.

The Annual Conference held in 1915 assigned Rev. W. H. LaPrade, D.D., to this church, who served during the year 1916-17.

At the Annual Conference in 1917, Rev. H. M.

Ellis was assigned to this church, and served during the years 1918-19.

At the Annual Conference in 1919, Rev. W. L Linfield, present pastor, was assigned to this church, and has served until the present time.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

I have recently spent the morning hours of several days in one of our sanitariums. The surgeons were busy; the nurses and assistants were gliding rapidly to and fro along the corridors, then in and out the wards; anxious relatives were seen on the porch speaking in subdued tones, or, with tear-filled eyes, standing by the couch of some sufferer. Human suffering, pain and agony, death on all sides, yet how indifferent most of these attendants seemed, even laughing as they wheeled an unconscious patient from the operating table or bore one away to a lethal sleep! The tragedy of human life is the drama of the ages. The greatest genius has never been born who may or can sound its profound depths or scale its heights. It is so tremendous, so vast in its scope and range that finite thought can not compass it. Its mystery and greatness overwhelm us.

Job wrestled with this problem of human suffering, and left it just about where he found it, in the hands of God. Pain, the physician says, is a warning—a ringing of the fire bell—that something is wrong within the habitation of flesh, bone, nerve, blood and muscle, and it is about the only thing that will bring careless people to their senses. Yet the ministry of suffering has its reward in showing men how frail they are and how sure is the compensation in working out an exceeding glory. It is a weary path to tread, but to some it is the only one that leads home. Thorns and flints bestrew the desert road of suffering, but, hand in hand with Him who trod the via dolorosa, the saints press onward, and, like the two that journeyed to Emmaus, their hearts are as kindled flames. Men in battle die to win, in life they suffer to learn, and not infrequently the lesson conned over pages bedewed with tears belongs to the things of infinite value. In Christ the soul is unconquerable.

Our imagination has often been stirred by the advent of the three wise men from the far-off East who brought the rich offerings to the manger cradle in Bethlehem. The mists of history envelop them and they are lost to all further record. What message these bore homeward to those distant lands whence they came none may know. Tradition has woven about them fanciful stories and romance has thrown halos of splendor about them. Poets and painters have enrolled them among the blessed, and the masters of literature penned pages in their praise. Matthew, faithful historian, leaves them as they mount their camels, "returning by another way," for the greater figure and matchless form of the Christ from the nearer country engages his facile stylus.

A friend ushered me into the birth chamber the other day to see the new-born. As the baby lay in its crib, draped in snowy white, I looked upon it; took its little hand in mine, noting its shape and contour, the exquisite finish of the tiny fingers, then said to the father. "This is a perfect baby." I would like to have heard what the wise men said when they saw the Christ child, and to have heard Mary and Joseph speak of the visit and the gifts. Childhood, child worth, child life, has a new glory—is even a thing of surpassing beauty since that tiny form enshrined the child of God and of Mary. Never was there a man like him, none so perfect, harmless, undefiled, and so it must be—never a child like him. The glory of that crystal pure life had its sunburst here, and only the shadows of sympathy and suffering for others were ever flung over it. The miracle of his conception and birth, to my mind, was no greater than the miracle of his life and work. All life, from embryo to maturity, is undoubtedly from a source external the material vessel that contains it, and is superphysical. We believe this source is God, Creator of all things. That He may for a supreme purpose act directly upon matter or man without the intervention of other agency is fully in accord with His almighty power. So we teach and so we believe that Christ "was conceived of the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin Mary," and so will we continue to believe just so long as we recognize the supernatural in our holy faith.

LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE—ATTENTION!

The train over the Atlanta and Vicksburg Railroad leaving Shreveport and [illegible] before noon, reaches Jackson, Miss., at [illegible] p. m. The train for Bogalusa on the New Orleans Great Northern leaves Jackson, Miss., at 3.15 p. m., reaching Bogalusa at 8:20 p. m.

Those desiring to reach Bogalusa in time for the Laymen's banquet, Tuesday evening, Nov. 20, will need either to come on Monday, reaching Bogalusa Monday night at 8:20, or stay over in Jackson, Miss., Monday night and take the New Orleans Great Northern train which leaves there about 9 o'clock a. m., and reaches Bogalusa at 2:10 p. m. All delegates coming from the direction of Jackson, Miss., will please notify the pastor what train they expect to take, and what date.

The committee is trying now to arrange for the use of the Clergy Permits from Shreveport to Bogalusa all along the route. If this arrangement is made, we will know in time to publish details in the Advocate of next week.

Delegates coming from points south of the Atlanta and Vicksburg Railroad and as far west as Shreveport, will find it better to come by way of New Orleans and take the special train out at 12 noon, Tuesday, Nov. 20. They will reach Bogalusa about 2:30 p. m. The fare will be $3.45 for the round trip, and the return tickets will be good on all trains to New Orleans from Bogalusa between dates Nov. 21 Nov. 28.

ELMER C. GUNN, P. C.

Bogalusa, La.

LAY ACTIVITIES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Board of Lay Activities is called to meet at Bogalusa at 3 p. m., Tuesday, Nov. 20. This board consists of the Conference Lay Leader and of all the District and Associate District Lay Leaders.

The laymen's annual banquet will take place at the Pine Tree Inn at Bogalusa at 6 o'clock, and at 7:30 there will be what we hope will be a great laymen's meeting at the Methodist church. Our General Secretary, Prof. G. L. Morelock, will be the speaker of the hour. This meeting is open to all, and I hope that we will have present the lay leader from each charge and church and many other laymen and ministers.

All those getting to New Orleans before 12 o'clock can go out to Bogalusa on a special train leaving New Orleans at 12 and reaching Bogalusa at 2:30. The North Louisiana people who go to Jackson, Miss., can leave Jackson at 6 a. m., and get to Bogalusa at 2:40 p. m.

There are great possibilities in the laymen's work if all the laymen will get under it. I feel sure that Prof. Morelock's address will be inspiring and helpful.

T. W. HOLLOMAN,
Conference Lay Leader.

P. S.—All, both laymen and ministers, who will go on the special are urged to notify Brother Gunn at once. If the special does not run, the regular train leaves New Orleans at 4:30 p. m.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Tennessee Annual Conference.—After personally visiting nine other Annual Conferences, it was with pleasure and anticipation that I turned toward the "Old Jerusalem," which convened at Clarksville, Tenn., on Oct. 11. By previous arrangement, Thursday was appointed as the day on which the cause of the "forgotten man" would be presented, and Bishop McMurry and I arrived that morning in good time for the program.

At 11:20 Bishop Mouzon requested the Conference to stand and sing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." Immediately following the hymn he announced that the time had come for the presentation of the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment. He called me to the platform and gave me full liberty to explain the plan. I think practically all of the preachers were in their places, quite a number coming in just as our program started. As I moved along through the analysis of the movement there was not a single indication of weariness or any lack of attention. This fact was very pleasing and indicated, I think, a heartfelt interest in the cause. I finished the explanation of the plan in about thirty minutes and sat down with the conviction that the method of procedure had been graciously received and fully approved by those present.

Bishop McMurry followed with an inspirational address of thirty minutes. In well chosen words he reviewed the development of the Board of Finance from the time of its creation at the General Conference held at Atlanta in May, 1918, and revealed the remarkable progress that had been made since that time in the work of the Board. The Conference responded heartily to his statement of this progress, and there was abundant evidence of appreciation.

In the course of his remarks Bishop McMurry emphasized the fact that the total minimum quota requested for superannuate endowment in this movement is approximately the same amount that the whole church is now assessed for the presiding elders and the pastors for one year. He said that we should respond with enthusiasm to an effort which looks to raise in five years, for the benefit of the church's worn-out ministry, the amount that is assessed for one year for the support of the church's active ministry. He also stated that his observations of the progress of the movement in his Annual Conferences led him to believe that a really great thing was about to be accomplished for the superannuates. He said he had just received a letter from one of his presiding elders stating as follows: "Bishop, you would be amazed to see how enthusiastically the twelve first quarterly conferences I have held to date have accepted their quotas and pledged themselves to raise them. I believe the movement for superannuate endowment is destined not only to meet with glorious success, but also to thrill the church with a holy joy as she does the work."

Bishop McMurry rendered very valuable assistance at this Conference, as he has been doing for several weeks at his own Conferences. The "forgotten man" owes him a real debt for his willingness to serve their welfare at any cost to his personal comfort.

Bishop Mouzon, President of the Conference, closed our program with a few words very much to the point. He told the brethren that he had said the Holston Conference would be second to none in the returns on this movement, and now stated that the same was true of the Tennessee Conference. He stirred my blood when he told how these two Conferences had outdistanced the St. Louis Conference in other movements of the church, and challenged the St. Louis Conference to a contest for position in the matter of returns for superannuate endowment. I am a member of the St. Louis Conference, and I have never been able to feel comfortable while being licked doing anything. Bishop Mouzon put the case squarely up to Bishop McMurry, President of the St. Louis Conference, and to me, and we must meet the issue or take a lickin'. Come on, boys of the St. Louis; the "Old Jerusalem" is after us! Let us make them know that we have iron in our blood.

After the completion of our program, I spent several hours in Clarksville, talking with the brethren on the subject that lies so near to my heart. My meeting with the Conference Board of Finance was a benediction to me. The brethren were exceedingly cordial, and every one expressed a confidence in the success of our movement, which was heartening. In the hotel rotunda I talked with numerous connectional officers, and they without exception spoke encouragingly of the work in behalf of the "forgotten man." I said to one of them, "We are going to get a lot of money," and he replied: "You are going to get that ten million dollars and more." It was very pleasing to have such statements from men whose minds are so thoroughly centered on other financial movements, and I wish in every way possible to reciprocate their broadmindedness by assisting the program which they have for doing the things committed to them.

A great many preachers of the Tennessee Conference sought me out personally and stated emphatically that they would do everything in their power to have their respective charges pay their quotas. A number of laymen expressed themselves to me as being heartily in favor of the movement to take care of our superannuates, and said they would see to it that the charges which they represent would not fail to do their part.

I left Clarksville with the same positive conviction that has been mine when leaving nine other Annual Conferences personally visited by me this fall—namely, that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is rallying to the cause of the "forgotten man" with a fixed purpose to meet the issue squarely and fully.

The Last Thought of Bishop Francis Asbury.—According to the Adult Student, issue of September, 1923, the last Annual Conference held by Bishop Asbury was the Tennessee Conference, which convened at Bethlehem Church, near Lebanon, Tenn., in October, 1815. That was one hundred and eight years ago. The Bishop was so feeble that it was necessary for him to call on Bishop McKendree to preside in his stead; but Bishop Asbury did participate in the ordination of deacons and preached to the Conference on Sunday morning. At the close of the Conference he made this pathetic record in his journal: "My eyes fail; I resign the stations to Bishop McKendree; I will take away my feet."

It was the purpose of Bishop Asbury to be at the General Conference which met at Baltimore in May, 1816, and he left the Tennessee Conference with this in mind. The weather was stormy, the Bishop was feeble, and progress was exceedingly slow. It took more than three months to reach Richmond, Va., where he arrived on March 18, 1816. He immediately announced that he would preach on the following Sabbath at the old First Methodist Church, now Trinity. His friends endeavored to dissuade him, but he refused to listen to them, saying he had a special call to give testimony in that place. He was so feeble in body that it was necessary to carry him to the church, and he remained seated while speaking, but his voice was sustained while he spoke for nearly an hour. The Bishop's condition and his message so impressed his hearers that many times the audience was brought to tears. This message, delivered on March 24, 1816, was his last sermon, and was from the text in Romans ix. 28: "For he will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness, because a short work the Lord will make upon the earth."

On Tuesday morning, March 26, the Bishop continued his journey toward Baltimore, traveling with his companion, John Wesley Bond. They moved in stages in a coach, making slow progress. On Friday they reached the home of George Arnold, a few miles southwest of Fredericksburg. The Bishop was so weak and so ill that they were compelled to stop. Everything possible was done for him, but the brave old soldier was fighting his last battle. At 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, March 31, 1816, he claimed the victory and went forth to receive his crown.

Just as the last thoughts of the Lord on the cross were for others, so were the last thoughts of Bishop Asbury not for himself. He had started some time before an offering for the worn-out preachers and their dependents. From place to place he solicited contributions to this fund. The last request he made was that this sum might be counted. He then raised his feeble arms and gave expression to his feeling of triumph and victory.

Out of the difficult beginnings of a hundred years ago, in which Bishop Asbury had such a prominent part, Methodism has come to her present potency of many millions of members, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has 2,500,000 of them. It is unthinkable that Southern Methodists, remembering the power and persistence of one so great as Bishop Asbury and under the thrill of his concern for the superannuated preachers expressed almost with his dying words, will fail to do her whole duty for the cause of the "forgotten man."

A DREAM OF SUMMER.

Bland as the morning breath of June,
The southwest breezes play;
And, through its haze, the winter noon
Seems warm as summer day.
The snow-plumed angel of the North
Has dropped his icy spear;
Again the mossy earth looks forth,
Again the streams gush clear.

The fox his hillside cell forsakes,
The muskrat leaves his nook,
The bluebird in the meadow brakes
Is singing with the brook.
"Bear up, O Mother Nature!" cry
Bird, breeze, and streamlet free;
"Our winter voices prophesy
Of summer days to thee!"

So, in these winters of the soul,
By bitter blasts and drear
O'erswept from Memory's frozen pole,
Will sunny days appear.
Reviving Hope and Faith, they show
The soul its living powers,
And how beneath the winter's snow
Lie germs of summer flowers.

The Night is mother of the Day,
The Winter of the Spring,
And ever upon old Decay
The greenest mosses cling.
Behind the cloud the starlight lurks,
Through showers the sunbeams fall;
For God, who loveth all His works,
Has left His Hope with all.

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

A BOX FROM HOME.

Julia stopped to look over the mail on the hall table. There rarely was a letter for her, but she always looked. No, of course there was nothing. And of course there were two letters for Linda Fellows—two letters and a box. Julia's face darkened. She hated those boxes that Linda Fellows was always getting, boxes of cookies and cake and doughnuts, and once even a roast chicken with all the "fixings." On that great occasion Linda had invited half a dozen girls up to her room, and every one had pretended to have such a wonderful time, but all the while Julia had felt as if she should choke over every mouthful.

A knock at the door made her start. "Wait a minute till I get a light," she called.

She found her matches and lighted the gas; then she threw open the door. Linda was standing there with her box in her hands and with the look in her eyes that always came when she had a box from home. "What do you suppose I've got?" she cried. "My littlest sister has made her very first gingersnaps, and they are delicious. She's only eight, you know. Everybody's got to sample them!"

"No, thank you," Julia said thickly.

Linda looked startled, then hurt. "But you've got to—just one anyway even if you don't care much for gingersnaps. They're a little sister's first ones!"

"You don't seem to realize"—Julia's voice was harsh—"what it means, offering home things to people who have no homes!"

Linda shut her box. Her face flamed. "Maybe you think it's being a good sport to spoil other people's good times!" she cried hotly. "No, I don't know; but if I did, I'd play the game. I'd realize that I wasn't the only lonely person in the world; and if I wanted things I couldn't have, I'd try at least to make a good time for somebody else before I sat down and cried." And then she was gone.

Julia dropped on her bed. At first she was stunned; then she was angry. But through her anger something kept saying to her: "You know it's the truth. It wouldn't hurt so if it hadn't been the truth." Faces came before her, forlorn Miss Briggs, Phoebe Mather's and a dozen others. She was so absorbed that she did not hear the door open again.

The first she knew Linda's arms were round her. "I was a beast," Linda was crying, "just a plain beast, Julia!"

And then to her amazement Julia heard her own voice saying, "It was the truth!"

"That doesn't change my beastliness," Linda responded. "O, Julia, I've just thought of something. I'm going home next month for a week. Can't you come with me? And one day we'll go out in the kitchen and make things for half a dozen boxes for every one we can think of who doesn't get any. Will you, Julia?"

"If you'll take me," Julia answered humbly.—The Companion.

S. O. S. AND C. Q. D.

It is the truth that both groups of letters were adopted as a matter of expediency and not because of their peculiar susceptibility to dramatic interpretatian. The original CQD was arrived at by the ordinary process of evolution in the detail work of communication, while SOS was an arbitrary adoption of the first international radio telegraph convention.

Most of these operating symbols were adopted by Marconi's new company when it began commercial operation at sea in the year 1902. The call CQ particularly adapted itself to wireless use, because any ship hearing the call would answer and thus establish communication with the ship making the call.

"As the system gradually developed there were a number of minor emergency calls made, and it was quickly observed that the call CQ was not of sufficient distinction for emergency purposes. As a result of these experiences, the following general order, known as 'Circular No. 57,' was issued by the Marconi Company on Jan. 7, 1904:

"'It has been brought to our notice that the call "CQ" (all stations), while being satisfactory for general purposes, does not sufficiently express the urgency required in a signal of distress.

"'Therefore, on and after Feb. 1, 1904, the call to be given by ships in distress or in any way requiring assistance, shall be "CQD."

"'This signal must on no account be used except by order of the captain of the ship in distress or other vessels or stations transmitting the signal on account of the ship in distress.

"'All stations must recognize the urgency of this call and make every effort to establish satisfactory communication with the least possible delay.

"'Any misuse of the call will result in instant dismissal of the person improperly employing it.'

"The call SOS is purely arbitrary in its grouping of letters and was chosen because of the unusual combination of dots and dashes which make it distinctive above all other calls. It consists of three dots, space, three dashes, space and three more dots."—Mr. Binns, as quoted in The Radio World (New York).

HOW MARIE HELPED.

Unselfish mothers too often make or permit their daughters to be selfish, more's the pity. One such mother, according to a story that Mr. Booth Tarkington, the novelist, likes to tell, was bending industriously over the washtub when a neighbor said to her: "Hard at it as usual, ain't ye?"

"Yes," replied the mother cheerfully. "Yes, this is wash day, Mrs. O'Hoolihan, and washin' for eleven don't leave you with much spare time on your hands."

"Is that Marie I hear singin' to the ukulele in the parlor?"

Marie, by the way, was in infancy christened Mary, and in early youth was always known as Mollie.

"Yes, Mrs. O'Hoolihan, that's her. The help she is to me! O dear! O dear! I don't know how I'd get along without that girl! Every Monday morning she gets out the ukulele or opens up the piano, and while I'm scrubbin' the clothes she sings the nicest, cheerin'est pieces, like 'Mother's Day,' or 'Dear Mother, in Dreams I See You,' or 'Lighten Mother's Tasks With Love,' and the work just rolls off like play. I tell you, Mrs O'Hoolihan, there isn't many girls like our Marie."—California Christian Advocate.

THE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

The Christian Advocate should not be moved to Jackson, Miss. I have been told that the Alabama Advocate has twenty thousand subscribers, and is self-sustaining. Mississippi could easily give to that paper fifteen thousand subscribers, thus making it a paying proposition, enlarging its usefulness, improving its quality. The Texas Advocate also is self-sustaining, I have been told. It can easily and adequately meet all the needs of Louisiana Methodism. Our territory has fallen upon evil times. The New Orleans Advocate was established and for many years was maintained with a constituency less than one-fourth of what it now has. And yet, with its constituency increased fourfold, it is now subsidized.

The Centenary resulted in grievous disappointment; the Educational Campaign even more so; our crops are a woeful failure; our people virtually bankrupt; the superannuate endowment for ten millions is upon us and must be put over. Manifestly this is no time for needless subsidies. If the Conferences refuse to act with sound business judgment, then the people should refuse longer to subsidize and subscribe for a paper already a business failure, or one foredoomed to such failure, when we have at hand excellent papers suited to meet all our requirements at great saving of worry and dollars.

J. R. BINGHAM.

Carrollton, Miss.

Brother Bingham was so anxious to have the above communication appear in the Advocate that he requested us to insert it and bill him at regular advertising rates if we were not willing to publish it otherwise. If we were not willing for it to appear as a regular communication, we certainly would not use it for pay. The editor uses his best judgment as to what shall go into the paper, and such communications appear upon their own merits—or they do not appear at all.

We cheerfully give space to Brother Bingham's article, because he has a right to be heard, and because it suggests a different plan from the one proposed by the Publishing Committee for the disposition of the Advocate.

The suggestion of the Publishing Committee is that the name of the Advocate be changed and that its headquarters be moved to Jackson, Miss.; the suggestion of Brother Bingham, if we understand it, is that the New Orleans Christian Advocate be discontinued altogether, and that the two Mississippi Conferences adopt the Alabama Christian Advocate as their official organ, and that the Louisiana Conference adopt the Texas Christian Advocate as its official organ. In support of his suggestion, Brother Bingham makes several statements that we should like to notice briefly.

In the first place, he says that he has been told that the Alabama Advocate has 20.000 subscribers, is self-sustaining, and that Mississippi Methodism could easily give that paper 15.000 subscribers. So far as the circulation of the Alabama Christian Advocate is concerned, we are glad to believe that it has 20,000 subscribers—probably more than that; as to its being self-sustaining, it is self-sustaining only in the same sense that the New Orleans Christian Advocate is self-sustaining—that is, its patronizing Conferences carry assessments for its benefit, which yield about $4,000 per year, which is more than the New Orleans Christian Advocate realizes from the assessments carried for its benefit by its three patronizing Conferences; that Mississippi could easily give 15,000 subscribers to its Conference organ, we do not doubt—but the fact remains that it has never given half that number to its official organ under any administration.

In the second place, Brother Bingham states that, according to his information, the Texas Christian Advocate is self-sustaining, and that it could easily and adequately meet all the needs of Louisiana Methodism. The Texas Christian Advocate, as we understand it, is privately owned; it has a constituency of more than 350,000 Methodists, and its subscription price is $2.50 a year—it ought to be self-sustaining. As to the statement that the Texas could "easily and adequately meet all the needs of Louisiana Methodism," we simply remark that while Brother Bingham may be authorized to speak for Mississippi, he is hardly qualified to say what the needs of Louisiana Methodism are, much less, how they are to be met.

In the third place, Brother Bingham advises the people to refuse longer to subsidize and subscribe for a paper "already a business failure, or one foredoomed to such failure," if the Conferences refuse to act "with sound business judgment"—such "sound judgment" presumably being the adoption of his suggestion that the New Orleans Christian Advocate be discontinued and the Alabama and the Texas Christian Advocates be adopted in its place. The New Orleans Christian Advocate has maintained its existence continuously, with the exception of a short period during the Civil War, since 1850—certainly it cannot be said to be "already a business failure;" and the report of the business manager at the recent meeting of the Publishing Committee showed that the paper "is now in better financial shape than in years past"—hardly the mark of a paper "foredoomed" to failure.

The main point of Brother Bingham's article seems to be a protest against the carrying of assessments by the Conferences for the benefit of the Conference organ. The facts in the case would seem to indicate that the church at large is of the opinion that the Conference asssessment is the best plan yet devised for sustaining the Conference organ. There are sixteen Conference organs throughout the church; of these, ten are now being aided by Conference assessments (the Pacific Methodist Advocate being subsidized by the General Conference); two of the remaining six will ask for assessments at the approaching sessions of their Conferences, leaving only four that do not receive such assistance. If Brother Bingham wants to throw his support to a paper that is not receiving help from Conference assessments, or that is not longing so to do, he will have to adopt the Texas Christian Advocate, the Wesleyan Christian Advocate (Georgia), the North Carolina Christian Advocate, or the Methodist Advocate (West Virginia).

Brother Bingham says: "The Centenary resulted in grievous disappointment, the educational campaign even more so;" (We did not know it.) "Our crops are a woeful failure, our people virtually bankrupt;" (Still automobiles and other luxuries seem to be in demand.); "the superannuate endowment for ten millions is upon us and must be put over." (We agree with him in this statement, and we predict that it will be put over, gloriously, in spite of the fact (?) that the Centenary and the Christian Education Movements are "grievous disappointments," that our crops are a "woeful failure," and that our people are "virtually bankrupt.")

We have every confidence that our Patronizing Conferences will give serious consideration to the matter of their official organ and that they will act with "sound business judgment" in reaching their conclusions.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. H. Saunders is winding up a successful year's work at Hazlehurst, Miss., and will be ready with a good report when the Mississippi Conference convenes at Gulfport on Nov. 14.

At the recent session of the Virginia Conference, the transfer of Rev. J. B. Peters to the Louisiana Conference was announced. Brother Peters was pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Salisbury.

Rev. J. M. Lewis, pastor of the Hawkins Memorial Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., expects to be able to report "level columns" at the approaching session of the Mississippi Annual Conference.

Rev. Claude P. Jones, our popular and efficient pastor at Magnolia, Miss., underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Jackson Infirmary on Nov. 1. His many friends will remember him in their prayers, that he may soon be restored to health.

Dr. John T. Crebbin, of this city, has announced the marriage of his daughter, Elise, to Mr. William Daniel Kellogg, on Tuesday, Oct. 23. The happy young couple, to whom we extend all good wishes, will make their home at Keokuk, Iowa.

The Methodist church and Sunday school of the Marvin community recently passed resolutions highly commending the labors of their pastor, Rev. M. L. White, among them. Copies of the resolutions were ordered sent to Brother White, to the county paper, and to the Advocate.

The Ruleville Record, published at Ruleville, Miss., in its issue of Nov. 1, has an editorial highly commending the work of the Methodist pastor, Rev. R. O. Brown, and expressing the hope that he will be returned to that charge. The editorial is all the more complimentary because the editor of the Record is not himself a Methodist.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, our faithful pastor at Belzoni, Miss., will report the proceedings of the North Mississippi Annual Conference for the Advocate. Brother Lewis has graciously performed this service for other sessions of the Conference, and we feel that we are doing our readers a favor by securing him to report the proceedings this year.

We learn with great sorrow of the sudden death of Mr. J. B. Atkins, of Shreveport, La., on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 28. He was a steward in the First Methodist Church, a great friend of Centenary College, and one of the most progressive and influential citizens of Shreveport and of the State. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to his sorrowing family and friends.

Rev. J. H. Jordan, a local Methodist preacher, passed away at his home in Shreveport, La., on Tuesday, Oct. 30, at the ripe age of ninety years. He is survived by his widow, eighty-seven years of age; seven children, twenty-five grandchildren, sixteen great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandchildren. Had Brother Jordan lived until Nov. 11, he and his wife would have celebrated their seventy-first wedding anniversary. Brother Jordan was a good man. We extend sympathy to those who are in sorrow because of his going away.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth was the principal speaker on the program of services commemorating the one hundred and fifty-seventh anniversary of the "Old John Street Church," New York City, Oct. 28-Nov. 1. Bishop Ainsworth preached at 11 o'clock on Sunday, Oct. 28, delivered an address on the afternoon of the same day, and preached on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. Dr. George E. Pickard, Dr. Francis B. Upham, Dr. A. B. Sanford, and Bishop Luther B. Wilson were other speakers. "Old John Street" is known as the "Mother Church of American Methodism." It is open for public worship every day in the week.

FROM THE JOINT COMMISSION ON UNIFICATION.

We advise that the work of the two churches go on just as usual. It would be unwise for either church to change its general policy of procedure in any important particular. We recommend that while we pray constantly each for the other, the two Methodisms continue with unabated zeal in the development of plans upon which they have already entered. So shall the two churches be larger and stronger when they do come together as one. And we suggest also that it would be a capital blunder for local churches in any particular Conference or community to endeavor to hasten union by precipitate action. We advise, therefore, that everywhere the work of the church go forward in normal channels, and that Conferences and communities take no action looking to union until the constituted authorities advise that the time for such action has come.

Meanwhile, let us be much in prayer. If we continue steadfastly in prayer to the God of our fathers, we shall make no serious blunder. Wisdom and brotherly love and quiet confidence come to those who pray in self surrender and faith. We, therefore, beseech you: "That ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of us all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." "For this cause we bow our knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, that he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints, what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye may be filled with all the fullness of God."

TO THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

Notice has been published that a Special Train will run from New Orleans to Bogalusa, Tuesday, Nov. 20, for the session of the Louisiana Annual Conference. We have been informed that it will be necessary to guarantee 125 fares for this train. That is to say, the train will run with the understanding that some one will pay the difference between the number riding and 125 fares, if that difference is on the minus side. The committee is placed under the necessity of asking that all those wishing to ride on this train will so announce AT ONCE by writing me concerning their intention. Brethren, please do this NOW.

In the event of our not securing the required number, please note that the Special Fare will still hold good. The fare for delegates to the Conference will be $3.45 for the round trip from New Orleans, and returning, will be good on any regular train on or before the 28th of November. The only difference in the Special and the regular trip will be that the Special is supposed to leave New Orleans at 12 o'clock noon, Tuesday, the 20th. The regular daily leaves there at 4:30 p.m. The delegates will arrive in time for the Laymen's Banquet at the Y. W. C. A., Tuesday night, even though they take the regular train.

On the morning of Oct. 18, 1923, the Death Angel came to the home of Mrs. Taylor and took her saintly mother to heaven. Sister FEARS was born Aug. 31, 1841, in the vicinity of Oak Ridge, and here she lived her girlhood days, leaving an influence which continues to speak words that should inspire others to a higher and nobler life. On Dec. 14, 1858, she was happily married to Mr. Robert L. Fears, and they lived happily together until God saw fit to deprive her of that companionship. In 1868, Brother Fears died, and left her to fight the difficult battles alone. In 1870 she moved to the Mount Olivet community, and during that year she was gloriously converted and united with the Methodist church at Mount Olivet, and lived a noble Christian until she died. Mount Olivet sustains an irreparable loss. She was devoted and loyal to the church. Sister Fears had great faith in prayer, and was a great advocate of Bible reading. When her pastor went to see her and asked her what Scripture she wanted him to read, she said: "It is all good, but you may read the one hundred and third Psalm." Sister Fears enjoyed talking about going to heaven, and would always say, as she closed: "I don't know what God is letting me live for, but I am patiently awaiting for the call." The pastor has had his experience brightened by associating with her. Sister Fears leaves two children, ten grandchildren, and eleven great-grandchildren to mourn her departure. May our Heavenly Father have mercy on those whose hearts are sad beyond expression.

Her pastor,
B. H. WILLIAMS.

ROBERT ALEXANDER MURRY, son of Dr. Charley M. and Hattie Neblett Murry, was born March 10, 1913, and died Oct. 15, 1923. The death of Robert was a crushing blow, not only to his fond parents, but to all the people of Ripley. It was said of him by one of his playmates, "Robert was a boy that all the boys liked." He was a manly little fellow, with all the promise of a manly man that could be looked for in a boy of his age. In August, 1921, when Brother I. D. Borders was conducting a revival in Ripley, he joined the Methodist church, and often expressed his love for the song, "There is a Fountain Filled With Blood," because it was sung when he was taken into the church. He was a member of our Junior congregation, and is the first to quit the ranks here to join the happy throng around God's throne in Heaven, where "thousands of children sing." It must have been a happy meeting when the loved ones who have gone before greeted him on that blissful shore. His going has saddened our hearts, but let us hope it has made us all more sympathetic for those who weep, and more faithful in the discharge of life's duties. We miss him at home, in school, and in the Sunday school and church services; we would love to see and hear him sing again in our services, but we shall see and hear him sing some happy day in that better land. May the comfort of the Holy Spirit sustain the bereaved ones.

His pastor,
S. A. BROWN.

Some months before his death, Brother B. G. Sellers wrote the following:

"B. G. Sellers was born in Barker County, Alabama, Jan. 11, 1834, near old Clayton, at a time when the Creek Indians were hostile.

"While I was an infant in my mother's arms, she and some other women were hid out in the swamp to escape the torch and tomahawk while my father fought the red men.

"In 1840 my father moved to another place in the same county, near Five Points, lived there six years and moved to Macon County, Alabama; lived there four years and came to Mississippi in 1850 and settled in Clark County, near Quitman. We moved from Clark to Copiah County in 1866; I joined the Methodist Church in 1848; was converted in a camp meeting in Clark County, 1855; served in the Civil War from beginning to the end."

Brother Sellers was married to Miss Mamie Martin, Oct. 30, 1867, and they lived together fifty-four years. She preceded him in death, December 26, 1921.

To this union nine children were born, of whom five are now living. He was a staunch believer in Methodism, an humble leader, a faithful worker. Although in his ninetieth year, he attended church regularly, took an active part in the revival, and remained in harness to the end, which was Aug. 21, 1923.

His pastor,
S. B. WATKINS.

"There are three words that sweetly blend,
That on the heart are graven,
A precious soothing balm they lend—
They're Mother, Home, and Heaven."

After some months of declining health, Mrs. Lizzie Vaughn Holliday passed from the old family home to her reward, August 24, 1923.

She became the wife of J. A. Holliday, Jan. 20, 1885. To this union were born three daughters and one son. She showed her love for her home by the most beautiful devotion. When the minister and others visited her in her last days, she gave beautiful testimony, saying she was not afraid to die. We believed it, because she had lived in such a way as not to fear death. Those who knew her esteemed her highly. She was a consistent member of the Methodist Church for many years. Loving hearts and willing hands did all they could, hoping that she might be well again. The call, "Come up," was heard, and she went with her Savior, who had promised, "If I go and prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

Her pastor,
S. B. WATKINS.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God, in his infinite wisdom, has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved friend and co-worker, MRS. DR. A. M. RICHARDSON, who was born Nov. 11, 1845, and departed this life Oct, 2, 1923; and,

Whereas, her death has brought sorrow upon our church, our society and our community; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the members of Poplar Springs Missionary Society, Meridian Miss., record their gratitude to God for such a member, so useful, so faithful, so worthy and so sincere.

2. That in her death the church has lost one of its most faithful members, the community a good neighbor, the family a kind mother and grandmother; that we cherish her memory and strive to emulate her virtues.

3. That while we deplore her departure, we are cheered with the thought that our loss was her gain, and the memory of her glorious Christian life will yield an influence that is never-dying; therefore we submit all things to Him who doeth all things well.

4. That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved family, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, that they be recorded on the minutes of the Society, and also a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed by: Mrs. E. B. Key, Mrs. Hampton Gartin, Mrs. J. V. McCoy, committee.

EPWORTH LEAGUE POLICY FOR NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

At the session of the Epworth League Conference which met in Grenada, at the College, in June, the policy presented by the special committee appointed to bring in a report on this matter was adopted as follows:

"1. That we hold a three or four night Assembly next year.

"2. That we hold one or more district institutes in each district of the Conference, the Conference off[illegible] co-operating with the di[illegible] secretaries and the presiding el[illegible] holding these institutes.

"3. That we set as a goal [illegible] increase of 25 chapters in the Con[illegible]ence. In order to bri[illegible] we urge the strong ch[illegible] ize new chapters and [illegible] up work as needed.

"4. That we will or[illegible] teams in each district [illegible] district secretaries in [illegible] maintaining the work.

FROM MT. PLEASANT, MISS.

[illegible]

FROM OIL CITY, LA.

[illegible] Mr. [illegible]: As the year i[illegible] [illegible] I wish to say a few [illegible] through the Advocate.

This is my first year in the Conference, and I find things very pleasant in every way, although I have felt the "pull" in another direction many times as I would read of the "revival fires" that were being kindled among the evangelistic brethern. However there are many things in the pastorate that are delightful, and I find abundance of labors of various kind. [illegible] my time.

This is a very trying field, but the Lord has been with us from the beginning. Oil City has been cursed with as many vices, I suppose, as any town in the world. Being one of the first oil fields in this country, it has been a veritable "den of iniquity" for these many years, but during the past year there have been signs of better things. Notwithstanding the war that was made a few years ago that drove the redlight district from practically every municipality in our land, still there was allowed to remain in Oil City a restricted district, with all the usual form of gambling, bootlegging and other forms of vice that usually go with it; and it has seemed almost an insurmountable difficulty to have the law enforced. But in the last few months the good people of this town have been able to have slot machines removed from places of business; all the houses of prostitution we hope have been recently closed and heavy fines imposed on those operating them; a number of bootleggers have been given heavy sentences; and if we can have a tightening up on law enforcement all around this place will begin to look like civilization.

A new $75,000 high school building is going up in our town, and it was through the earnest co-operation of the religious element that this was made possible.

But in all these matters, which are signs of a better day, we have insisted and tried to make clear to the people that our efforts would be vain without a revival of spiritual religion. We have preached that the Gospel is the only effective agency for the regeneration of society and the amelioration of social conditions, and we believe the revival has been going on. We made preparation in the winter for a revival by every means possible. It is our humble opinion that conditions don't get too hard for the God of Heaven to send a revival, and it was more than demonstrated with us.

Our meeting began the 26th of

FROM CAMPTI, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: As we are so near the close of the Conference year, I thought it might be well to give a small report of the progress we have made during the second year of our ministry on the Campti charge. We have received 52 members, almost all of them on profession of faith and baptism, this year. We were assisted in our revival meetings by the brethren as follows:

At Davis Springs, by Brother J. L. Cady, who did some splendid preaching, to the edification of our people, and inspiring the people of the community generally in the essential doctrines of the gospel. We had ten accessions to the church.

At St. Maurice we were assisted by our most efficient and proficient presiding elder, W. L. Doss., Jr. We had a crowded house most of the services, and his preaching didn't fail to stir the people. The good that was accomplished in the meeting will be lasting in that community. We had three accessions to the church by baptism.

We were assisted in the meeting at Campti by Dr. A. S. Lutz. our Educational Secretary, who did the preaching of his life. While he had a hard pull to get the people generally to take interest, with the exception of our faithful few, who were interested from the start and who were greatly blessed, we closed with great interest. Men saw, when they did get interested, what they had missed. We received twelve on profession of faith and by baptism. I also desire to mention Mrs. Olive Millsaps, of Shreveport, First Church, who rendered great service as song leader and as a worker among our women and the children. Mrs. Millsaps is taking special training at Moody Institute for Christian service. I do not hesitate to recommend her to any who, at any time she is available, need a worker. In revival meetings I understand she has open dates now until some time in January, at which time she will return to Moody for some months.

We undertook a meeting at Clarence with Brother D. L., Griffin, who did some great preaching when he had a chance. The sickness in the community and bad weather forced us to give up the battle, but not without some good accomplished, I trust.

We held our quarterly conference at Davis Springs church Sunday, Oct. 28, with a fine representation from each church on the charge. The finances are gradually accumulating—a good deal behind at this writing, but the pastor has hopes that we are going to pull out by the skin of our teeth. Some of the smaller churches are out already on the support of the ministry. We are hoping to make a creditable showing at Conference in our report by the help of the good Lord. With love to all the brethren and to all who love the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ,

JOY OF HEALTH WOMAN'S RIGHT

Mrs. Evans Freed from Female Weakness by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan.—"I had female weakness with pains in my back, and I could not stand on my feet for any length of time. I was working in a factory but had to quit as I was too much on my feet. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me, and I can hardly believe it myself that I am well. Oh, it is a grand thing to have your health! I feel well all the time and can go out like other women and not feel that awful torture. When I took your medicine first I thought it should cure after the first bottle, but I am glad my husband kept me at it. I have had nine bottles and now I am well."—Mrs. JENNY EVANS, 1604 Lafayette Blvd., Detroit, Michigan.

If you are suffering from displacements, irregularities, backache, nervousness or other forms of female weakness, you should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The reason is given in letters like these, and we have published thousands of them. You may expect that a medicine that has helped other women will help you. Try it.

ON BEING SINCERE.

A man may be sincere and yet very seriously mistaken and wrong, but he can be nothing at all that really counts unless he is sincere. Sincerity is the one inevitable and necessary virtue, for without it no other virtue has any foundation to rest upon. Insincerity is the unpardonable sin, and there is no other. Insincerity may express itself in many ways, but in every one of them it is a deadly and blasting thing. The preacher who thinks mostly of what his audience will say of his effort is insincere, and that insincerity will rob his preaching of all vitality quicker and more completely than anything else can. Professing a piety one does not possess, and does not wish to possess, is a hideous form of insincerity and one of the things most fatal to character that can be thought of. And insincerity is always thus so disintegrating to a man's soul for that very reason, that the insincere man is always playing a part; covering himself with virtues that are not his; pretending to excellencies of which he really knows nothing. Genuine goodness may live and flourish in the heart and life of an ignorant, narrow, mistaken man, but it cannot have anything but a precarious existence, and will soon wither away to its death, in the heart and life of an insincere man. Whatever virtues and excellencies we have or have not, let us at least practice sincerity. But it isn't an easy virtue to bring to perfection.—Christian Guardian.

THE GREAT ENEMIES.

The explanation of this revolt against Christianity is not due to any fault in the gospel of Jesus, but solely to the failure of so-called Christian nations to practice this gospel in their relations to other people. "Christians" in their dealings with non-Christians have too often proceeded on the assumption that the latter had no rights which the former were bound to respect. Militarism, ruthless industrialism, unscrupulous commercialism, praticed by Christian nations, are the great enemies of Christian missions.

A writer, recently, in the Atlantic Monthly, quoted Mohammed Ali, the leader of nationalist Moslems of India, as saying to a bishop: "I have nothing against Christian missionaries; I have nothing against Christian preaching; it is only to the 'amen' to which I object." The bishop asked what he meant, and the Mohammedan replied: "I mean the gunboat that points its cannon ashore while the missionary is preaching, and at the end says, 'Boom! Amen.'" Tyler Dennett declares that no nation has escaped the valid charge of bad faith in dealing with Oriental peoples. It appears that the further propagation of Christinity must wait not merely to find individual missionaries who will preach the gospel of Jesus, but to find a whole nation so completely enamored of Jesus as to be willing to apply his ideal of life to all relationships and express his spirit in its dealings with all peoples.—Dr. J. A. Beebe.

TITHING.

The importance of Christian stewardship and the instruction of all Christian men and women in the principles of stewardship and tithing is having a prominent place in the discussions of all church conferences and among men who are our leaders in the work and charged with the responsibility of raising the promotional funds of the church. Few people of their own accord begin systematic giving or the practice of tithing. Paul speaks of Christian giving as a "grace." More than the gift is the spirit of the giving. To hand out a sum of money or to pay a certain portion of church expenses because one has been asked or assessed has a place in Christian service, but instruction for the reason of the giving and the spirit and measure of Christian giving are much needed.—St. Louis Advocate.

REMEMBER IT.

We have learned one thing, among others, about a church paper. It can't be circulated at long distance. The pastors and friends of the local churches have been responsible for this fine increase in our circulation during the past year, and to them we express our heartiest thanks.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

Wanted! Ambitious Men and Women

We are receiving calls daily for men and women of character, ambition and business training, men and women who can accept and efficiently fill responsible positions, positions that give every opportunity for advancement; positions of high salaries, positions in banks, law offices, insurance, real estate, brokers' offices; positions with manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, in every imaginable type of business in the South.

Many of them we capably fill, others are yet vacant. The men and women who fill them need not be wealthy, nor even moderately well-to-do. They need not be young, nor need they be college or even high school graduates. All that is necessary is that they possess character, ambition and a business training.

The character and ambition they must possess, the business training we will furnish under the direction of the South's most efficient training corps and in one of the South's most efficient and best equipped business colleges. A training with unique courses in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, accounting, banking, business administration or our secretarial course. Such a training we will furnish in a few months' time at little cost to you, and at terms to meet your own financial condition.

Thousands of Southern men and women have taken advantage of the opportunity and trained themselves for a higher calling, a better salary and a greater opportunity for advancement. Many who have accepted the positions we offer have risen to the top of the ladder, and are numbered among America's foremost and wealthiest business and professional men and women.

An institution with such standing and reputation as the Georgia-Alabama Business College does more to advance the business interests of its graduates than can be done by any amount of family or personal influence.

Consider your present status—would you not like to improve your station in life, increase your income, attain financial independence and success? An opportunity awaits you, for positions are being constantly offered us that must be filled.

Write for our inspiring book, "Your Future—What Does It Hold in Store?" It is sent free on request, explains our offer in detail and points the way to a brighter future.

THE BOARD OF STEWARDS.

We have long had to do with Boards of Stewards—Methodist stewards are God's own noblemen. We have found them always men of deep religious conviction and determined in the work of the Lord. They are capable men—they are zealous men—they are faithful men. They give freely of time, talent and money—for spiritual benefit. They are men who have a high sense of spiritual values and an ample sense of material values. Their philosophy of life accords with Bible teachings. For their conduct they have the Bible standards.

The church has depended upon these men in matters of large responsibility and found them true. The congregation esteems them entirely worthy and well qualified for the duties of stewards. This is a compliment to the stewards which we hardly think of, because they have so well earned it.

In times past we have seen the stewards worried over the finances of the church—never have we seen them unfaithful. We have seen them fail of the co-operation expected from the congregation, but we have never seen them let the interests of the church suffer.

Help the Board of Stewards—make their job easy as possible—it will be hard enough at best.

Facilitate their efforts—respond to their call—give them the joy of a completed work.

The stewards take the offerings for foreign missions—our mission fields are dependent upon the success of their work. They take the offerings for home missions—all mission work in this country is dependent upon the success of their efforts. They take the offerings for the Conference claimants—the very living of the widows and orphans of deceased preachers is dependent upon the success of their efforts. They take the offerings for the old preachers, now retired—the daily sustenance of the superannuates is dependent upon the success of their efforts. They take the offerings for local work—everything pertaining to the local church proper is dependent upon the success of their efforts. In short, the church in all of its intensive and extensive activities leans very heavily upon the Board of Stewards—its work would be impossible were it not for the faithful endeavors of the stewards.—"The Big Brother."

FROM CANTON, MISS.

A short report from Canton Church may be of interest to many, especially so to some of the former pastors.

I am closing my third year as pastor, and can truly say, the Lord has greatly blessed and prospered the three years' work. When I came to the work, the congregation was worshiping in an old, one-room frame building, in bad repair, and absolutely inadequate to do modern church work—especially Sunday school work. I immediately began to attempt to show the people the great need of a modern church building. Of course, we met with some opposition, but am thankful to say we overcame all opposition, and now have one of the most magnificent church buildings in the Conference, valued at $75,000. This building is modern in every respect—equipped for an "A" grade Sunday school.

There has been a great growth in our Sunday school, which is well organized in all the various departments. Our Senior Epworth League is one of the best in the Conference, having a membership of one hundred. We have had two fine revivals in the church during the three years; we have added 237 members—144 on profession of faith and 93 by certificate.

We have recently closed a great revival, conducted by Rev. Albert C Fisher and wife, of Fort Worth, Tex. The spiritual life of the church was greatly revived and there were fifty additions to the church. Brother Fisher is a great preacher and knows how to conduct an evangelistic campaign Mrs. Fisher rendered great service with the music, children, and young people.

We will be able to make a splendid report to the Annual Conference—all finances will be paid in full. The stewards, by unanimous vote, have agreed to raise the pastor's salary for another year to $3,000.

From this report you can readily see we have had three years of hard work.

H. A. GATLIN.

THE JUBILATION OF THE JUST.

Joy seems a natural mood of man, and yet there are many who miss it. Even some good people "go mourning all their days." As for worldly-minded persons, their pursuit after pleasure is a very haphazard chase, a sort of romp after a will-o'-the-wisp. Many individuals fall at last into pessimism because they do not understand the conditions of well-being. "God," it has been sagely said, "has a monopoly of happiness." He gives it to those who deserve it. The just man shall live, and leap for joy, by reason of his faith. The primal condition of happiness is to get right with God. Some persons have only enough religion to make them miserable, and not enough to make them radiantly happy. But in all strong natures, particularly those who are actively at work in the kingdom, the note of joy is pronounced. Paul of old said that he gloried in his tribulations. He and Silas—we do not know which of them started the tune—sang hymns in the Philippian dungeon. The keynote of his troubled yet glorious life was, "Rejoicing in tribulation."

Some time ago we heard Dr. Howard Taylor, son of the noble Hudson Taylor (founder of the China Inland Mission, which now has eleven hundred missionaries), tell the story of his distressing and perilous experience for five and a half weeks in the hands of Chinese brigands. He started off in his address with the passage that contains the ringing exhortation, "Serve the Lord with gladness!" He took that as a kind of challenge to us all to make the best of circumstances, and to be jubilant even in the time of persecution, or other trial. Then he went on to tell how in dark times on the mountains of China, nearly frozen half starved, or in dire peril from wild men, he and his equally heroic wife had tried to be glad, if not gay, and optimistic when all things seemed to be going against them.

What the Lord desires is, in every land and time, this service by gladness—for it is a positive contribution to Christian character, and not just a dispensable or ornamental trait. Perhaps we may say that this is the highest or severest test of a godly nature. Almost anybody can feel amiable toward his Maker when all things go well, but it takes vision, imagination, knowledge of Scripture, firm faith in the promises, and much prayer, too, to enable us to praise Providence when Providence appears to have forgotten us. And yet the desire of God is that our faith shall be of this vibrant, triumphant, jubilant sort, which will glory in tribulations for one distinct purpose that the power of Christ may rest upon us. Praise is power, joy is a mood of mastery. Let us be glad while we serve the Lord; let us laugh not cry, our way into heaven!—Zion's Herald.

A NOTICE TO ALL.

The South is, of course, Democratic. Other things equal, it will support the Democratic national ticket cordially. But it doesn't belong to anybody, neither may it be bargained away in advance. For many long years the South has been the backbone of prohibition. Without its support the Eighteenth Amendment would hardly have been introduced in Congress. It has not changed its mind about the lawless traffice except to become more confirmed. Those who assume that it would swallow the high priest of nullification have a disillusionment coming to them.—Chattanooga News.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

"THE APOSTLES OF LIGHT."

In compliance with numerous requests coming from many parts of the church as to what the Centenary funds had accomplished in the various mission fields at home and abroad, the Centenary Commission decided to put on an elaborate pageant-drama showing some of the achievements of the Centenary in all our mission fields and stressing the fact that the people of Southern Methodism should complete the unfinished task in order that the work so splendidly begun should be carried on.

After much investigation as to the proper person to write this pageant, Miss Ethel Theodora Rockwell, of Virginia, a graduate of the Pageantry Department of the University of Wisconsin, was chosen for the work. After weeks of study and preparation, Miss Rockwell presented the pageant in its complete form to the Centenary Commission. It was then decided by the Commission to stage it in Nashville before it was sent out into the large cities throughout Southern Methodism, Miss Rockwell directing it.

On Thursday and Friday nights, September 27 and 28, "The Apostles of Light" was given in Nashville, approximately six thousand people witnessing it. It was interpreted by a cast of nearly six hundred men, women, and children, the majority being local Methodists. The twenty-four-piece orchestra and the large chorus were composed of the various church choirs of the city.

The first half of the pageant was largely historical, showing outstanding events in the progress of the civilization of the world, which formed a background for the new impetus that the missionary movement has taken in the Centenary. The remainder showed something of the work of the Methodist Church in the various fields. The entire spectacle was most impressive, not only from the standpoint of its sacredness, but from the standpoint of its cosmopolitan assemblage of color and historical beauty and scope.

As guests of the Centenary Commission at the pageant, representatives from twenty-four of the Woman's Missionary Conferences were in attendance. While in Nashville these representatives met at the Lambuth Building in a "set-up" meeting, in which Dr. W. G. Cram, Director of the Centenary Movement, outlined a plan by which the Woman's Missionary Societies could sponsor the pageant to be given in their home cities and to co-operate in enlisting the young people to take part.

The future of our missionary work is bound up largely in the successful culmination of the Centenary, and we must not fail to do our part in helping to bring this to pass. December and January are the months set aside by the Centenary Commission in which the elaborate pageant, "The Apostles of Light," and the eight smaller demonstrations are to be given in the churches throughout the connection. A certain time in January will be set aside to be known as "Pay-out Week," at which time it is hoped that all Centenary pledges will be paid in full that the work of the church may not suffer.

HARVEST DAY.

You will recall that the Woman's Council, several years ago, instituted the Harvest Day service to be held some time early in December each year, for the purpose of bringing to a satisfactory close the financial part of the year's work. Every auxiliary is urged to observe this day and to use the program material prepared for this service. If your auxiliary did not use "The Missionary Society Listens In" last December, it would be well to use it this year; for those who have used it, new program material set forth in a little demonstration, "The Missionary Auxiliary That Couldn't Pay Out," is available for use. By using one of these attractive programs at your Harvest Day service, it will be an easy matter to wipe out any deficit in your collections, and come to the close of the year with all pledges paid in full.

"The Auxiliary That Couldn't Pay Out" and "Listening In" available for use—Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEMONSTRATION NOW READY.

Remember the beautiful pageant, "A Life Transcendent," written by Mrs. Bessie Houser Nunn for use by the young people in presenting the Belle H. Bennett Memorial. It is now ready for those who wish to use it. Order from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn. [illegible] free of charge.

But it remains in his great mercy only for a workman of God to touch the silent chord of this spent life and throw into vibration the chords of his shriveled, selfish soul and bring out a clear conception of the harmonies of God.

MARRIED.

In the pastor's study of the Methodist church, Tylertown, Miss., by Rev. F. B. Ormond, Sunday evening, Oct. 21, 1923, MR. DAVID HOBBS, of Brookhaven, Miss., and MISS VIVIAN PACKWOOD, of Tylertown, Miss.

Willie: "I guess my dad must have been a pretty bad boy."

Tommie: "What makes you think that?"

Willie: "Because he knows exactly what question to ask me when he wants to know what I have been doing."—Puck.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Brookhaven Dist.—Fourth Round.

Please note readjustments found necessary for greater efficiency and make the most of the fourth quarterly conference.

McComb, La Branch Street, Nov. 7, 7 p.m.
Scotland, at Bethel, Nov. 8, 11 a.m.; Q. C., 2 p.m.
Brookhaven, Nov. 8, 7 p.m.
McComb, Pearl River Avenue, Nov. 9, 7 p.m.
Pleasant Grove, at Tilton, Nov. 11, 11 a.m.; Q. C., 2 p.m.

Let there be written reports from (1) pastor, (2) Sunday school superintendents, (3) Epworth League presidents, (4) lay leaders, (5) Woman's Missionary Society presidents, and (6) the board of trustees.

Let us pay every financial claim in full, for love of Christ. No shortage anywhere. We can do it—if we will. And we will.

Make the election of officers a matter of prayer and conviction. Drop drifters, deadheads and obstructionists. Forward, for our Christ!

FROM OIL CITY, LA.

March and lasted ten days. Rev. Earl B. Moll, a young man whom we have known and labored with several years, came and preached for us. Brother Moll was given perfect liberty by the pastor to preach his message as God put it on his heart. We have seen great opportunities murdered and the kingdom of God hindered by some dictatorial "wiseacre" posing as the Supreme Intelligence and interfering when the evangelist didn't do to suit him. If our Gospel is "not of men," then men ought not to meddle; if it is of men, then it is not the Gospel.

One traveling Methodist preacher paid our revival a visit, and he stated that it was the nearest thing to an old-fashioned Methodist revival of anything he had witnessed in many days.

Brother Lowrey would have enjoyed this meeting—one Campbellite and four or five stewards took Brown's mule by the tail and dumped him over the fence. Stay with 'em, Brother Lowrey!

We have had about sixty accessions to the church this year; the pastor's salary has been doubled from last year; we have organized three Epworth Leagues, which are doing fine; one mission Sunday school has been organized, with about fifty pupils; our Sunday school has more than doubled being considerably larger now than our church membership, and the whole life of our church seems to be toning up.

The evangelistic hunger, as already indicated, has been too great to be passed up, so we took in three meetings, which we enjoyed immensely. Time and space will not allow mention of these except very briefly. We were with Brother E. J. Buck at Castor; Brother Carey, at Trees City, and we held a tabernacle meeting in Huntington, Tex. There were about forty accessions in these meetings, and a great many bright conversions.

But I must digress. It may be a sin, but I like to hunt and fish. On my way fishing the other day a serious saint accosted me with this statement: "You haven't got time for that—you ought to be fishing for men." So they still complain because we "came eating and drinking." I started to tell you, Mr. Editor, that I fell in with a crowd of jolly fellows a few days ago, and went to Tensas River, where I killed the biggest deer I ever killed in my life (it happened to be my first); and I also live within three miles of Caddo Lake, where the "quack, quack" of the ducks and the "pow, pow" of my gun will soon be heard.

I love to read Dr. Steel's letters, but I don't care about his gardening. We will have squirrel for dinner. "Come and dine."

Cordially yours,

R. A. BOZEMAN, P. C

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL.

An enrollment of 250,000 members is the goal set for the annual Red Cross Roll Call in the eight Southern States of the Southern Division to be held beginning Armistice Day, Nov. 11, through Thanksgiving, according to a statement received to-day from Southern Division Headquarters, Atlanta, Ga.

The States comprising the division are North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, and Mississippi.

Messages received at Atlanta from cities and towns all over the South indicate a generous response to the yearly enrollment of members.

Joseph C. Logan, Division Manager, in commenting on the approaching campaign, stated: "The American Red Cross has been tested in the last year as perhaps few organizations ever have, by repeated calls for assistance and service which required quick and efficient response. Especially is this true of the Disaster Relief work. In fifteen serious disasters in the South in the last twelve months the organization has exerted itself to its capacity in succoring thousands of people deprived in a day of home, food, and shelter. It is highly gratifying to those who have worked so diligently to vindicate the trust placed in them by the American people to note the indications apparent on every hand of a great and enthusiastic enrollment this year."

Campaigns for membership will be conducted in almost every community in the South by the 719 local Red Cross chapters in the eight States.

For every membership taken in the Red Cross, fifty cents is sent to National Headquarters, Washington, D. C. This money, the aggregate of many small sums from all over the country, is pooled into one big fund and used for extending services to chapters that it would be impracticable for them to undertake locally, including Disaster Relief work. Without the nurses, doctors, hospital supplies, food, clothing, provisions for shelter, and trained disaster workers, which the Red Cross was able to pour into the many communities of the South stricken by serious natural calamities in the last year, the situation would have been even more critical, and human suffering would have been augmented many times.

Fire, flood, and disease give no warning before they strike, and it is through membership in the Red Cross that an organization is perpetuated capable of coping with any emergency.

Health is Wealth

Health is one of the greatest things your family can possess. It brings happiness and success. But health must be safe-guarded by good wholesome foods that are prepared from the purest ingredients. This is especially true of bakings. If they are not properly raised, we all know that they are not easily digested. Many times when self-rising flour is used in place of good plain flour and dependable baking powder—the results are flat, soggy and heavy foods.

Don't take chances! Use a reliable brand of baking powder and plain flour. Then you will be sure of healthful bakings that are easily digested.

Remember, science has never found anything to take the place of the tried and tested method of using plain flour and good baking powder in preparing bakings. Millions of housewives now know by actual experience that many preparations that are claimed to take their place are worthless and dangerous to health. There is no comparison.

Calumet, the Economy Baking Powder, is known to be one sure and positive aid to successful bakings that are always pure, sweet and wholesome.

That's the reason its sales are 2½ times as much as any other brand.

FROM BASTROP, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: There are some items concerning the Bastrop charge that might be of interest to the readers of the Advocate. This has been a good year with us. The Sunday school has outgrown its present quarters. We have one of the best Senior Epworth Leagues I have ever had the pleasure of working with. The membership is now eighty-seven. We also have the Junior and Intermediate Leagues. The Woman's Missionary Society is doing a splendid work. In addition to their regular work, the ladies have raised a nice sum of money for the new church. The stewards advise that the finances are in a healthy condition; every claim will be paid in full. A building committee has been appointed and plans for a new church are now being worked out. We have had to abandon the old church and are now worshiping in the Jewish synagogue. We have had ninety-nine additions to the church this year—forty-seven on profession of faith and fifty-two by certificate. Billy Pomeroy, a son of Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Pomeroy, has been licensed to preach. Billy is a student in Centenary College.

The church has been greatly revived. Rev. E. C. Gunn, of Bogalusa, was with us in a meeting for a week in June, and for three weeks in August the Methodists and Baptists co-operated in a revival of unusual interest and power. This meeting was conducted by the Cleveland-Culpepper evangelistic party. Rev. Grover Cleveland was the preacher, and Rev. John B. Culpepper, Jr., was the singer. The whole town and adjoining communities were reached by these two meetings. There were many conversions and reclamations. Over a hundred applied for membership in the two churches, sixty-one coming to the Methodist church.

G. A. MORGAN, Pastor.

TO THE WIVES OF MINISTERS.

Just a word: This beautiful autumn weather suggests to every good housekeeper—"CLEAN UP."

Now, since the year's work is about completed, and you have spent part of the time in community visiting, part in Sunday school and Woman's Missionary Society work, together with the various other duties devolving upon a real pastor's wife, let us all spend the week that the "dearly beloved" pastor is away at Conference in a real "clean-up week."

See that the house is fumigated, that the floors, windows and walls are well cleaned, that the curtains are laundered, that the clothes and bedding be aired and cleaned, and that the furniture is freshened with paint. See that all trash, such as papers, old shoes, tin cans, etc., be hauled away.

No matter how desolate or inconvenient the place, if we try, we can accomplish wonders by the time Conference is over. Then if you remain in your present home, it will make your work all the easier and more pleasant for you; and should you move to some other locality, it will make it so much easier for the lady who does occupy the parsonage.

If for any reason you are not able to do this try asking some of the faithful ones to assist you, and see how quickly they will respond.

Our parsonages should be the model home in the community. Let us make them so.

WOMANLY WEAKNESS

Birmingham Lady Took Cardui for Relief of Change of Life Troubles and Says It Helped Her "So Much."

Birmingham, Ala.—"I first took Cardui for that tired, worn-out feeling that comes from being dreadfully run down," says Mrs. Catherine [illegible]. Smith of 2106 Stout Street. "Twenty-five years ago, I was suffering from womanly weakness. * * * I read of Cardui in an almanac, and thought I would try it. I got a bottle and it helped me from the first. After that, during the whole of my married life, I took Cardui when I needed it.

"About four years ago, change of life came on me. * * * I grew weaker and weaker, and was confined to my bed where I laid on my back for days. I was told that only a severe operation could do me any good and this depressed me very much for I dreaded such an ordeal.

"I remembered that Cardui had helped me for female trouble in the past and I had read of how it had helped other women during change of life, so one night I told my husband to go to the drug store and get me a bottle. I began taking it at once. From the first dose I could feel myself getting stronger. * * * I continued to take Cardui until I was entirely through this very trying period of a woman's life. * * * Cardui is a wonderful medicine for women. It helped me so much that I gladly recommend it to other women suffering as I did." At druggists.

Proceedings of the North Mississippi Annual Conference.

Reported by Rev. H. P. Lewis.

First Day, November 7.

The Fifty-fourth Session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference was called to order by Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, Ga., President of the Conference, at 9 a. m., announcing and the members of the Conference singing hymn 222. The Bishop led in prayer, and afterwards read I Pet., first chapter, as a Scripture lesson.

W. M. Young and W. S. Shipman were called to join the Bishop in consecrating the elements for the Sacramental service, which was served in "cafeteria" style, which was a new way to most of us preachers.

After this, J. R. Countiss, former secretary, called the roll, and the Bishop organized the Conference. J. R. Countiss was elected secretary; J. E. Stephens, assistant secretary; N. J. Golding, S. H.. Caffey, R. G. Lord, and G. M. Guinn, Statistical secretaries.

The bars were fixed to include the main auditorium of the church. The Bishop remarked that all the business of the Conference would be conducted within the bars.

The hours for meeting and adjourning were fixed to include from 9 a. m. to 12:15 p. m.

At this juncture, Judge Percy Bell, a layman of Greenville, known and loved by all the preachers, spoke some words of welcome to the Conference. Bishop Ainsworth responded in a happy maner.

The annual committees were announced as follows:

Public Worship—J. H. Felts, E. Nash Broyles, Waddy West.

Spiritual Interest—Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, R. I. Collins, W. R. Goudelock, B. F. Hammond, J. A. Patterson, A. R. Beasley, M. E. Scott, W. J. Wood, Mrs. Bessie Whitehead, E. C. Cochran, Mrs. Jeff Wlson, Miss Corinne Rogers, Dr. T. L. Wilborn, Dr. L. L. Minor.

Sabbath Observance—R. G. Moore, R. M. Evans, A. L. Davenport, J. W. York, J. H. Smith, C. A. Northington, J. A. Goad, J. Lem Seawright, Judge T. E. Pegram, Mrs. M. E. Dakin, Mrs. S. C. Yates, F. A. Howell, Warren Stewart.

Orphanage—Del Longgrear, W. D. Babb, C. W. Baley, Preston Toler, J. S. Duncan, W. L. Graves, M. A. Burns, C. A. Lamb, Mrs. T. J. Lee, Dr. L. W. Warsham, Mrs. R. L. Beavers, W. D. Bennett, Mrs. R. P. Neblett, J. W. Kyle.

Conference Relations—W. L. Storment, W. B. Baker, S. A. Brown, L. M. Lipscomb, W. S. Selman, W. W. Mitchell, W. S. Shipman.

District Conference Records—S. G. Yates, J. G. Johnson, R. S. Lawson, W. I. White, W. N. Dodds, W. W. Bruner, W. O. Hunt, Dr. C. B. Baker, F. S. Jackson, S. S. Finger, J. T. Mathis, L. R. F. Featherstone, Dr. A. W. Milden, H. G. Johnson.

Vacancies on Quadrennial Boards.

Missions—T. H. Dorsey.

Church Extension—W. M. Campbell.

Lay Activities—R. H. Furr, J. H. McKinnon, Judge J. G. McGowen.

Admission—E. B. Sharp.

Budget—J. S. Duncan.

First Year Committee—S. A. Brown.

Question 21 was called: Are the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? and the characters of the presiding elders, T. H. Dorsey, A. T. McElwain, J. B. Randolph, J. H. Felts, S. L. Pope, R. A. Tucker, and J. T. Lewis, were all passed without objection.

The Bishop here called the brethren on the retired list to take the front seat and make such remarks as they desired after their characters were passed. As the list of superannuates was called, it was reported that one, W. C. Harris, had died during the year, and his name was referred to the Committee on Memoirs. Only five of these brethren were present. J. W. Bell, H. E. Carter, B. P. Fullilove, H. G. Roberts, and W. D. Wendel. They all spoke a few words of greeting to the Conference. The characters of all were passed and their names referred for the same relation, save those of H. E. Carter and W. D. Wendel, who may return to the active ranks. Besides those named above, the following is a list of our superannuates: R. I. Allen, J. W. Anderson, W. J. Burt, D. L. Cogdell, J. M. Huggin, E. Johnson, A. W. Langley, W. J. O'Bryant, B. P. Patterson, James Porter, E. H. Rook, O. Savage, and C. N. Terry.

Dr. T. D. Ellis, the secretary of the Board of Church Extension, was introduced to the Conference and spoke a few words concerning the work of the Board. He said the Board handled four separate funds: (1) Centenary Fund, $2,000,000 of which was assigned to the Board and immediately appropriated; (2) War Work Fund, of about $1,500,000, which is being used to establish our work at church and State institutions; (3) Donation Fund, about $112,000 per year, and the Loan Fund that now amounts to about $2,225,000.

Dr. J. W. Perry, secretary of the General Board of Missions of the Home Base, was also introduced, and spoke concerning his work.

Dr. A. J. Lamar, who was called by Bishop Ainsworth the most influential and loved man of the entire connection, was introduced and spoke a few words about our publishing interest.

The following visiting brethren were introduced to the Conference: Dr. H. T. Carley, Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; C. O. Chalmers, Business Manager of the Advocate; Brother Walker, pastor of the First Baptist Church; Dr. Sherman, of the Board of Education; Dr. Rowe, Book Editor; Brother Patterson, a returned missionary from China, here in the interest of the Centenary, and who gave a stirring address at 3 p. m. to the Conference, concerning which I heard one say that if all the laymen of the church could have heard it, every cent of the Centenary pledge would be paid; Brother Young, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, and Dr. L. H. Estes, representing the Methodist Hospital at Memphis.

At this time, Rev. Arthur J. Moore, of San Antonio, Tex., was introduced, and delivered a stirring message on the promise, power and influence of the Holy Spirit. After his address, the Conference adjourned for the first day, with the benediction pronounced by the Bishop.

Second Day.

The session was called to order by Bishop Ainsworth, who announced hymn 137, "How Sweet the Name of Jesus Sounds," after the singing of which, Brother J. M. Wyatt led the Conference in prayer.

The Conference had the great pleasure of hearing the Wisdom Sisters of Macon, Mo., the famed sweet singers of Southern Methodism, sing with soul-stirring melody, "Jesus, the Name High Over All." It was a benediction to hear them bring the gospel message thus in song. Hearty "Amens" were heard all over the Conference room at the close of the song.

After reading and approving the minutes of the preceding day, and calling the names of yesterday's absentees, Secretary Countiss announced that the Statistical Minutes will have the names of all churches on circuits that pay up their entire budget, when the entire charge fails, listed so as to give these particular churches credit for their success. This is a worthy recognition for the smaller churches.

The Class of the First Year was called, and the following were passed in character and advanced to the Class of the Second Year: G. W. Robertson, Green C. Gregory, William L. Atkins, and Robert E. Woodfin. The character of W. A. Langley, a missionary to Poland, was passed. The character of Chester M. Ray was passed, and he remains in the Class of the First Year.

Green C. Gregory, who has been a local preacher for four years and met all requirements, was elected to Deacon's Orders.

The Class of the Second Year was called, and the following were passed in examination of character and acted on as indicated: Casper W. Avery, Tinsley B. Thrower, Robert T. Hollingsworth, and Henry H. Wallace were advanced to the Class of the Third Year, and elected to Deacon's Orders. Ovid A. Clark, Robert C. Nanney, in Deacon's Orders, were advanced to the Class of the Third Year. John R. Murff, and William T. Phillips, Deacons for four years, were advanced to the Class of the Third Year, and elected to Elder's Orders.

Newton B. Guerry, attending Drew Seminary, was advanced to the Class of the Third Year, and elected to Deacon's Orders.

Luther H. Floyd's character was passed, and on his own request he was discontinued.

The Class of the Third Year was called, and the following had their characters passed, and were advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year: Guy Dean Burt, William Obed Hunt, Albert Jackson Henry, Jales Stanford Maxey, Rufus G. Moore, and John Wesley York. The characters of R. G. A. Carlisle and Robert C. Mayo were passed, and they were continued in the Class of the Third Year.

The Class of the Fourth Year was called, and W. A. Wilson and W. R. Liming were passed in examination of character, and having finished the required course of study, were elected to Elder's Orders. A. F. Moore, was passed in character, and his name was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for superannuation. He remains in the Class of the Fourth Year. W. W. Bruner had his character passed and was retained in the Class of the Fourth Year.

John Wesley York, having met all requirements, was elected to Elder's Orders.

The Conference heard report No. No. 1 from the Board of Education, which was adopted.

Question No. 1, "Who are admitted on trial?" was called, and the largest class in the history of the Conference was presented. The Conference heard each case carefully represented, and each one of those presented, 19 in all, was unanimously admitted into the Conference on trial. They are: Wiley Clifton Newman, William C. Maddox, James E. Lawhon, A. M. West, Walter M. Hester, W. W. Milligan, Samuel E. Ashmore, Wade Heath, William L. Robinson, L. B. Wimberley, L. W. Summers, H. D. Suydan, J. J. Baird, Albert Y. Brown, W. H. Weed, A. W. Bailey, W. P. Bailey, B. G. Whitehurst, and G. H. Boyles.

During the absence of the Bishop from the chair for a few minutes, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, our pastor at West Point, was called to take the chair and keep the order of the Conference, while Dr. Sherman, of the General Board of Education, addressed the Conference. Brother Lipscomb had no trouble whatever in keeping excellent order in the Conference room.

Dr. L. H. Estes read a report of the Board of Trustees of the Methodist Hospital in Memphis, which was referred to the Committee on Hospitals.

R. M. Weaver read report No. 1 from the Sunday School Board, which was adopted.

The Committee on Orphans' Home recommended to the Conference the appointment of S. A. Brown as a field man to assist the Board of Managers within the bounds of our Conference in financing the erection of the new main building at the Home in Jackson, Miss. The Conference voted to endorse his appointment to that field.

A. S. Raper and J. S. Duncan were announced to act as chalk secretaries in preparing the blackboard reports of the charges and districts.

The following visiting brethren were introduced to the Conference: Rev. J. W. Roger, of the Little Rock Conference; Dr. D. M. Key, of Millsaps College; Dr. Oneal, of the Rock River Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Rev. B. F. Lewis, manager of the Orphans' Home; Rev. J. L. Sutton, of Jackson, Miss.

It was announced that the Board of Education would hold its anniversary at 2:30 p. m., at which time Dr. Sherman made an address.

After singing the doxology, the second day's session was brought to a close with the benediction pronounced by Brother J. M. Wyatt.

Third Day.

The Conference opened at 9 a. m., by singing "Rock of Ages." The Bishop called on the members to read with him the ninety-first Psalm, and Brother D. W. Babb led in prayer. We sang one stanza of "On Jordan's Stormy Banks I Stand," with the chorus, "I Am Bound for the Promised Land."

BOGALUSA: THE CITY OF FAMILIES AND FACTORIES.

By Rev. Elmer C. Gunn.

When the Louisiana Annual Conference assembles in the Elizabeth Sullivan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Bogalusa, La., November 21, 1923, the members will find themselves in what is perhaps the most progressive city of our great State. Seventeen years ago Bogalusa was founded. It was the intention of the founders that there should be located here the greatest sawmill in the world. This ambition has been accomplished. While it is true that there are lumber plants in the world which have a larger average cut in twenty-four hours than this, it remains a fact that this is the largest mill operating under a single roof in the world. It has a capacity for cutting one million feet every twenty-four hours.

The founders did not stop when one of their aims had been realized. They immediately set out to make this the greatest paper manufacturing center in the South. Seven years ago the first paper mill began operation. Manufacturing seventy tons of carton paper every time the clock goes round, it is no small concern in itself. In July of this year there was begun the construction of another, and a slightly different, paper mill. This new mill will manufacture wrapping and bag paper exclusively. Recently there was signed a contract with a paper bag manufacturing concern to take sixty per cent of the output of the new mill, and this concern will make paper bags here, being ready to operate by the time the new mill is completed. There are other industries coming in all the time.

The church is bravely attempting to keep pace with commerce in development. It is not an easy matter to keep spiritual interests abreast with commercial when men of wealth and vision are pouring millions into new enterprises; but the church has not lost heart. Recently we have completed one of the most modern and best equipped church plants our land affords. We are ready for the emergencies as they come. Our auditorium, while not so large as some in the Conference, is entirely adequate for ordinary occasions, and will be for years to come.

It was in 1907, during the pastorate of Rev. E. N. Evans, that the first Methodist church was erected here under the splendid leadership of Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan. With tireless energy, she worked until a suitable house of worship was built. This building was added to from time to time, but was never really the property of our church, as the deed contained a reverting clause.

When the writer was appointed to this charge in 1921, he found literally a homeless congregation. The interest in the old property had been exchanged for a lot in another section of the city, and, as in all previous years, the Board of Stewards included the rent of the parsonage in the expense budget. In the summer of 1922, our Mayor, Mr. Sullivan, proposed to the building committee an exchange which would give us the property we hold at present for the lot mentioned before, and the Company would sell us the parsonage at cost. This exchange was agreed to, and the committee asked the privilege of calling the new plant "The Elizabeth Sullivan Memorial Church," in memory of her whose life had meant so much to the church in past years.

Our membership at present is nearly eight hundred. Our Sunday school has reached the "B" grade standard of efficiency. It is not as large as it might be, but is a splendid character-building institution. In every way the church is prospering.

We welcome heartily the members of the Louisiana Conference to our city, and our homes. Bogalusa boasts a fine record in entertaining conventions, and Bogalusa wants this Conference to be the best entertained body that ever visited our borders. The mayor and his helpers, the pastors and members of the various churches of the city, and all the citizens of our community, join in extending to you a cordial welcome. May your visit be a benediction to us, and may you carry away with you memories that will be a blessing to you as the days go by. Such is the hope and prayer of us all.

Bogalusa, La.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

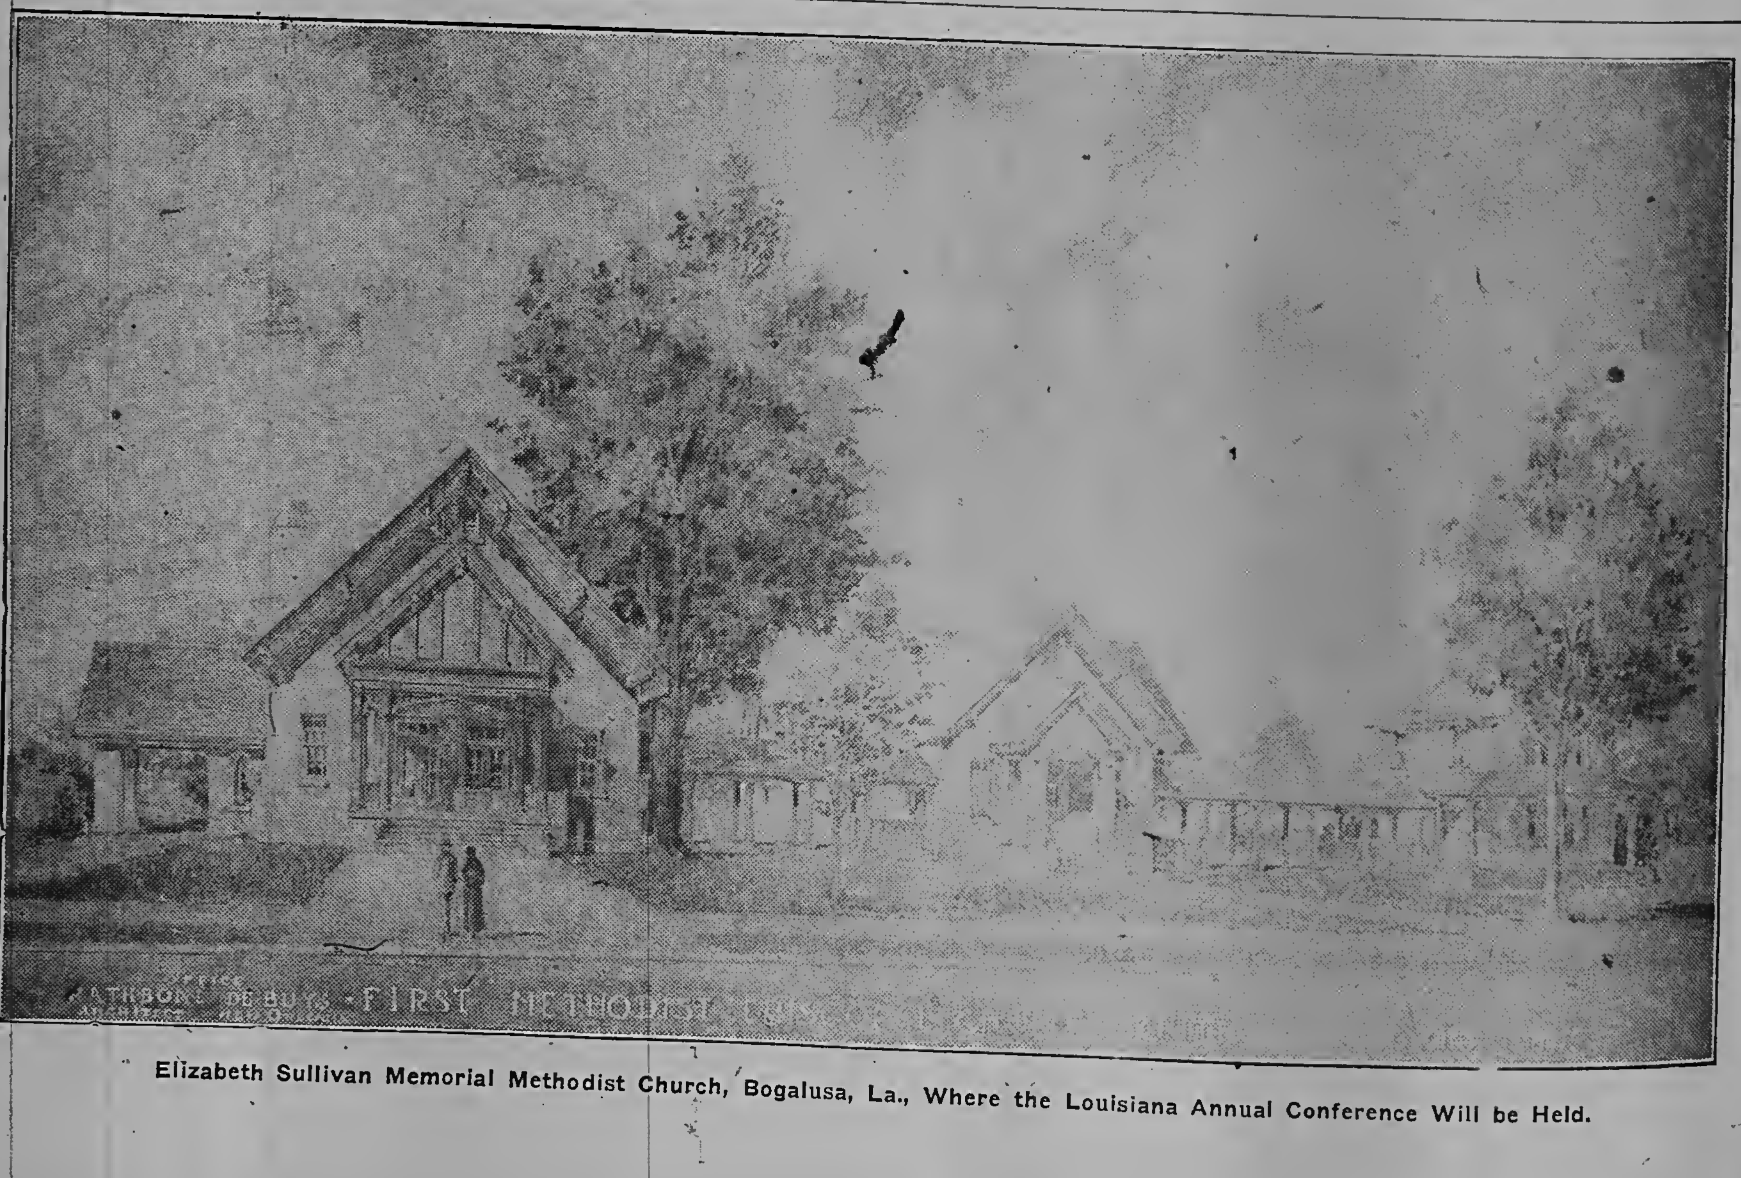
By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Reading Homer in the Den in the Pelican Pines! Can you beat it! I never tire reading Homer's Iliad, in spite of the fact that it is a tale of horrid war, of warriors clashing in combat, of heroes dying, of gods and goddesses plunging through the battle storm. But the grandeur of the conceptions, the beauty of the figures, the spirit of the action, the whole atmosphere of the poem is uplifting and inspiring. To read a book of Homer's Iliad re-charges all of my intellectual batteries, and I feel like one who has been up on a high mountain and breathed the ozone of the heights. What splendid horses they had in Homer's time! When Diomed knew that Aeneas was preparing to meet him in battle, and told Sthenelus, his driver, to get his chariot ready, Sthenelus tried to persuade him not to risk a conflict with the renowned hero of the Trojan host; but Diomed fiercely scorned the idea, and told Sthenelus if he fell in the fight to be sure and secure the horses of Aeneas, and there were only four of that breed in the world; and he captured the two Aeneas drove!

The Trojans were driving the Greeks, and Juno, who was on their side, begged old Jove, who tried to be impartial, to let her help her beloved "Argives," and he consented.



RATHBONE DE BUYS - FIRST METHODIST

Elizabeth Sullivan Memorial Methodist Church, Bogalusa, La., Where the Louisiana Annual Conference Will be Held.

"He said: Saturuia, ardent to obey,
Lashed her white steeds along the aerial way.
Swift down the steep heaven the chariot rolls,
Between the expanded earth and starry poles.
Far as a shepherd from some point on high,
O'er the wide main extends his boundless eye:
Through such a space of air, with thundering sound,
At every leap the immortal coursers bound!"

Some jump, that! My, how I would have loved to see those horses with their flowing manes and tails, and Juno, with her hair, like streaming sunbeams, flowing behind. Those Olympian ladies did not bob their hair. It would have scandalized a court none too scrupulous anyhow; but old Jove would not stand everything, and knew how to read the law to the women when it became necessary. But the horses of Homer! When I pay my debts, and get Sister Steel a Buick Sedan, and catch up with the benevolences, if I have anything left, I intend to buy me a horse, a sure enough horse, like "Bob Lee," the thoroughbred I rode from Emory to Saltville, back and forth, while a student in college! Bob Lee used to walk like he knew he carried an aristocrat on his back, and I sat erect because I knew I rode an equine aristocrat! By the way, I was recently in the neighborhood of where General Lee's famous horse, "Traveler," was bred in Greenbriar County, Va.; and they raise fine horses in that region still. Give me a horse—"my kingdom for a horse!"

I enjoyed an evening recently at Mansfield College, still the crown-jewel of our little city. I met President Bratton, his charming wife, and sweet little children, and was glad to see the college has a President whose private home-life is a model for his pupils. That is very important as an accessory of education, especially in a school for girls. In taking charge of a college for young ladies once, as President, I insisted on the President's apartments being furnished in a manner such as not only became the dignity of his office, but would show the young ladies under his care what sort of a home they ought to aim to have themselves. The chaste simplicity and refined elegance of President Bratton's quiet apartments, and the presence of his cultured wife in them, are a very fine influence in the educational work done by the college. The girls will carry away with them a pleasant memory of that President's home life. I see, and address, a large number of student bodies, but I think our Pelican maidens will show up well with any of them. They are a splendid looking lot of young women. It was a pleasure to mingle briefly with them. I hope they appreciate the opportunity which they enjoy in such a school; and I hope the Methodists of Louisiana will appreciate the thorough work done in this noble historic college. I know of no town of the size of Mansfield where one will find more cultured people, especially ladies, or a finer social atmosphere; and it must be credited chiefly to Mansfield College.

I noticed some attractive improvements made recently on the college grounds in the form of wide cement walks, with handsome entrances. I understand we are indebted for these to our townsmen, Mr. Barney Wemple and Mr. Bogle, and friends who co-operated. They have done well. All honor to them. Hand 'em a stick of candy or a bouquet of flowers, or both. I understand the entrances are to have a memorial character. That is a pretty and very appropriate idea. I preached at Vassar College, in New York, once, and the senior class gave me a reception. It was the dead of winter, but the room was a perfect bower of roses and flowers of every kind, as was the spacious dining-room. I asked where the flowers came from, and the question brought out a pretty story. Some years before a beautiful girl died just as she was to have graduated. Her father was a wealthy man, and was planning to erect a costly monument in her memory. Some one suggested to him that few who knew her would see the monument, and that instead he put something at the college that would keep her memory fragrant. So he built a beautiful conservatory, and the year round the college was blessed with the beauty and fragrance of the flowers. It was a lovely way of commemorating the young woman who passed away just as she was to take the honors of the institution. I want to see something up there at the college that will honor the memory of "Old Brother Shepard." The college never had a better friend, I have been told. Let us see to it that a memorial urn, filled with flowers, or a drinking fountain, or something simple but artistic, is placed in the college in honor of the memory of this loyal friend. The hermit from his Den in the Pelican Pines salutes Mansfield College!

Mansfield, La.

TRUE HEROISM.

I have wondered if there is any virtue the lack of which is more to be observed among Christian ministers and laymen than moral courage, the courage of one's convictions. To perform one's duty fearlessly, to say and do the things that he knows to be right, regardless of conditions, is very far from pursuing the way of least resistance. So often it requires not only the surrender of one's own will and preference in matters of duty, but it tests the quality of his moral being, and becomes a proof of the genuineness of his Christian profession.

The question to be decided is this: Do I hold more sacredly my own obligations to do and say things that duty demands, and the consequent approval of the Author of right, or the friendship of those who disregard obligation and would have me disregard my obligation?

What if a Christian must sacrifice his reputation, and incur the displeasure of a few men, and even suffer material loss as a result of faithfulness to certain known duties? Surely he can better afford that than know that he is a moral coward in the sight of God and man.

Whether he is true to his obligations under conditions like those mentioned above or not, depends absolutely upon whether he knows and loves the Lord and respects his own Christian manhood more than he does his own reputation, public opinion and his material welfare.

While the agencies of Satan are active in the world (and they will ever be), and while we have to deal with designing men, if we maintain allegiance to Christ and the approval of a good conscience, moral courage, and no lack of it, is our only hope. To lay oneself liable to criticism and the malice and slander of one's neighbors and acquaintances for duty's sake, requires great moral strength, the absence of which is by no means confined to men of ordinary rank, but men of higher intellectual rating are often found among those who weaken and yield. To dare to do and speak the right things every time, is not only heroic, but it is the one hundred per cent mark in Christian manhood and womanhood.

The morally courageous is not always the popular man—quite to the contrary as a rule; nor is he the man that is apt to be chosen for high places, particularly if conditions exist in high places that are liable to be disturbed, and ought to be disturbed.

By certain shrinking, compromising leaders, a man who is not afraid to attack sin in high places is regarded as an unsafe man, a man who, without sound judgment, would take hold of situations and as a result, instead of improving conditions, the cause would suffer more or less injury, when, in very truth, conditions have long been, and may still be, utterly deplorable, all because some one had not the moral courage to set himself steadfastly against the wrong, and determine to establish the right.

But the Lord can risk, and count on such a man anywhere. One of the crying needs of the church at this period of its history is for more men of great moral courage.

A METHODIST.

LETTER FROM DR. S. H. WAINWRIGHT.

"We are still in Karuizawa and the earthquake shocks continue. We live as soldiers ready for a summons to battle. We sleep with our garments and a lighted lantern by the bed. Up to this time the death of only one Protestant missionary has been ascertained. Sixteen thousand refugees are passing through Karuizawa every day. The trunk line from Tokyo to the west is broken, and the traffic comes around by Karuizawa. There are missionaries at the station handing out food. People seem very appreciative of what is done for their comfort.

"Reports from Tokyo and Yokohama show that the tragedy was greater, if anything, than at first reported. The editor of one of the leading newspapers said to me yesterday that five million people were homeless. The killed in Tokyo, once reported at 100,000, is now placed at about half that number. Very few succumbed in Tokyo to the earthquake, but in Yokohama the fatalities from the earthquake were very great."

So writes S. H. Wainwright, missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Mr. Wainwright is connected with the Language School for Missionaries at Tokyo, maintained jointly by several Protestant boards. Together with other missionaries, Mr. and Mrs. Wainwright had gone from Tokyo to Karuizawa, a mountain resort much frequented by missionaries during the hot summer of Japan.

"The remakable thing about the earthquake," continues Dr. Wainwright, "was the suddenness of the destruction in Yokohama. No one had time to escape. There were no preliminary shocks. The ships from the harbor saw a great cloud of dust rise as the buildings fell in Yokohama. No sooner had those who escaped from the buildings congratulated themselves, when they saw that peril was again upon them, through the fires started in different parts of the city. Some lay down in the water in the park which had come from the bursting of the water mains; some stood in the sea for hours to protect themselves from the flames. One aged missionary lady in Yokohama was caught between two chairs on the top of which a beam fell, and in that little nook, left by a kindly providence, she sat for four or five hours and was rescued. A pathetic event was the calling of a parrot incessantly for four hours, for 'Boy San' from beneath one of the wrecked buildings until help came.

"We climbed to a hilltop about 11 o'clock on the evening following the earthquake at noon, to witness what was thought to be a new volcano in eruption in the direction of Tokyo. We saw the lurid light on the sky and occasionally the tips of flames leaping into the air, and we wondered whether we were viewing a new volcano or the burning of Tokyo. We learned afterward that our own house burned about the time we stood on the hilltop, and contributed its part to the reddening of the midnight sky.

"Our material losses have been more than replaced by spiritual gains," declared Dr. Wainwright. "The kindness of people on every hand has touched us deeply. Many homes have been opened to us. One of the letters which touched us most was that from a well known Japanese in Tokyo and his wife, who was converted during the first year we were in Japan. 'We learn that your house was burned in Tokyo. If you return to Tokyo, please come to our home and occupy that part of the house as your home which is next to the grove nearby. We will occupy some other part of the house. Please do this and have no more anxiety.'"

Dr. and Mrs. Wainwright lost their home, library, clothing, and all personal belongings. They have been engaged in missionary work in Japan since 1888, going to their field under the Mission Board from the St. Louis Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

Secretary Countiss read the minutes of the preceding day's session, which were approved.

William B. Maddox, L. B. Wimberly, and B. E. Crowson were elected to Local Deacon's Orders. Mark L. Ward was elected local elder. John D. Humphreys was admitted on trial.

Dr. L. D. Patterson, of Menlo, Ga., gave a great address in the interest of the Centenary Movement. For a few moments, while Dr. Patterson was giving his address, Brother T. M. Brownlee acted as Chairman of the Conference, in the absence of the Bishop.

After the address of Dr. Patterson, a pleasant diversion was given the members of the Conference as Brother J. J. Brooks called Brother S. L. Pope, the efficient presiding elder of the Greenwood District, to the front, and in feeling words presented him with a fine Oxford Bible as a token of appreciation from the preachers of the district. Brother Pope spoke from a tender heart his words of acceptance of the gift.

The name of R. L. Ellis, an elder in the Class of the Third Year, was called, his character passed, and he remains in the same class.

Under question 11, "Who are located?" A. S. Brisco requested a location, and it was granted him.

At 10 o'clock, the order of the day was to consider the needs of Grenada College. Judge J. G. McGowen opened up the subject, followed by J. H. Felts and J. R. Countiss, in which it was shown that in order for Grenada College to remain in the field of Christian education provision would have to be made immediately for raising it to the class of an A-grade college. In connection with the discussion, Dr. D. M. Key, of Millsaps, spoke of the high class of work being done at Grenada, as judged by the students coming to Millsaps from Grenada, and the Bishop added words of counsel to the task in hand. By a unanimous vote, the following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, That the Trustees and President of Grenada College be authorized to conduct a campaign for the endowment of the college that it may be ranked as an institution of A-grade.

"Resolved (2), That our changes and pulpits be open for the presentation of this cause.

"Resolved (3), That we as preachers and laymen give this cause our most cordial sympathy and support."

Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, editor of the Methodist Quarterly Review, addressed the Conference concerning the Review.

The class for admission into full connection was called, and the following young preachers were unanimously received into full connection of the Conference: Jasper W. Avery, Ovid A. Clark, R. T. Hollingsworth, John R. Murff, Robert C. Nanney, William T. Phillips, Tinsley B. Thrower, and Henry Hawkins Wallace.

The names of W. R. Williams and J. W. Dorman were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relationship.

After announcements, the Conference was dismissed by the benediction pronounced by Dr. Rowe.

Fourth Day—Morning Session.

The Bishop announced hymn No. 388, "A Charge to Keep I Have," after the singing of which the 23rd Psalm was read in concert, and the Conference was led in prayer by Dr. R. S. Satterfield, Assistant Editor of the Christian Advocate.

After the reading of the minutes of the preceding session, question 8 was called, "Who are readmitted?" Brother N. Maxie, a deacon in the third year, was re-admitted.

Report was made of the Grenada District, and we gleaned the following facts concerning the success of the year's work in the district: 475 were received on profession; 14 charges paid 100 per cent on ministerial support and 10 paid 100 per cent on the benevolences; 465 copies of the Conference organ are taken; $19,608 has been paid on Christian Education pledges, and $67,033 on Centenary pledges.

The characters of all the preachers in this district were passed.

The report from the Aberdeen District showed the following progress: 699 additions on profession; 20 charges show 100 per cent paid on ministerial support, and 11 show 100 per cent paid on benevolences; 346 copies of the Advocate are taken; $9,201 has been paid on Christian Education pledges, and $71,892 on Centenary. Two circuits in this district, Algoma and Toccopola, brought up level columns for the first time in their history, so far as is known to the Conference.

E. H. Cunningham asked the privilege of the floor, called the presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, T. H. Dorsey, to the front, and presented him with a gift from the preachers of the district, which Brother Dorsey received graciously and with a courteous bow. The brethren of the Conference let their curiosity get the better of them and clamored to know what the gift was. One said it looked like a walking cane, and Dorsey must be getting old. Another said it looked like an air gun. The Bishop suggested it might be a golf stick, and still another suggested a fishing rod. No one guessed right, as it proved to be an umbrella.

J. E. Cunningham reported as one feature of growth and development at Aberdeen that he had baptized "Jim Vardaman" and taken into the church "Warren A. Candler."

T. H. Lipscomb read the resolution the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate passed to be submitted to the patronizing Conferences a few weeks ago concerning changing the location of the Editor's office at least from New Orleans to Jackson, Miss., and some other changes in the management of the organ, and spoke in favor of the change. Dr. H. T. Carley, W. H. Mounger, T. M. Brownlee and J. H. Felts spoke pro and con on the subject, and after some lively discussion the Conference voted in favor of having the change made.

The hour for presenting the cause of the Superannuate Endowment Fund to the Conference having arrived, Bishop Ainsworth presented Dr. Luther E. Todd, who carefully entered into the details of the plan the Board of Finance had adopted. Dr. G. L. Morelock, Secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities, and Bishop Ainsworth addressed the Conference in favor of the movement.

The names of W. D. Wendel and H. E. Carter were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relationship.

Question 10, "Who are received from other churches as traveling preachers?" was called. Clark C. Alexander, from the Presbyterian Church, in elder's orders, was received and assigned to the Class of the First Year.

West Point and Columbus were nominated as places inviting the Conference for the session of 1924. West Point was chosen.

Dr. R. S. Satterfield, Assistant Editor of the Christian Advocate (Nashville), was introduced, and spoke a few words about the Advocates.

It was voted to meet in afternoon session at 2:30 o'clock,

Rev. Mr. Davidson, rector of the local Episcopal church, was introduced and spoke a few words of welcome and of warm feeling he has toward our church. After announcements, the Conference adjourned.

Fourth Day—Afternoon Session.

The Conference was called to order promptly at 2:30 p.m. The Bishop announced and we sang hymn No. 317, "More Love to Thee, O Christ." B. P. Jaco led the Conference in prayer. The secretary read the minutes of the morning session, which, after some corrections, were approved.

The work of the Greenwood District was reviewed, which showed the following progress: 455 were added on profession; 17 charges paid 100 per cent on ministerial support, and 10 charges paid 100 per cent on the benevolences; $40,651 has been paid on Centenary pledges, and $8,360 has been paid on Christian Education pledges; 218 Advocates are taken.

The credentials of J. J. Baird were unanimously restored to him.

The Corinth District was reviewed. It showed that 662 were added on profession; 11 charges paid 100 per cent on ministerial support, and 5 paid 100 per cent on the benevolences; a total of $67,000 has been paid on Centenary pledges, and $23,820 paid on Education pledges; 280 copies of the Advocate are taken.

Various reports of boards and committees were read and adopted. Pending the adoption of the report of the Committee on Hospitals, Dr. L. H. Estes addressed the Conference.

The statistical secretary made a report, which showed a net increase of 1300 members, making the present membership 67,139, and that $827,598 was raised for all purposes—a net gain over last year of about $30,000.

The Greenville District was reviewed, and showed that 420 new members were added on profession; all the charges paid 100 per cent on ministerial support, and all but 2 charges paid 100 per cent on benevolences; $49,674 has been paid on Centenary pledges, and $15,193 on Education pledges; 306 copies of the Conference organ are taken.

The work in the Columbus District showed: 594 additions on profession; 17 of the charges have paid 100 per cent on ministerial support, and 12 of the charges paid 100 per cent on the benevolences; for Centenary, $46,513 has been paid on pledges, and for Christian Education $9,379 has been paid on pledges; 311 copies of the Advocate are taken.

Pending the adoption of the report of the Board of Education, Dr. J. R. Countiss addressed the Conference. J. T. McCafferty offered an amendment to the report, that J. T. Lewis be made a trustee of Millsaps College in place of T. H. Dorsey, nominated by the Board, which amendment was adopted.

D. H. Hall was elected Conference Lay Leader in connection with the adoption of the report on Lay Activities.

Pending the adoption of the report on our Orphanage, B. F. Lewis, manager of the Home, addressed the Conference.

The work in the Sardis District was reviewed and showed progress as follows: 350 additions on profession; 12 charges paid 100 per cent on salaries; 5 charges paid 100 per cent on benevolences; $37,947 has been paid on Centenary pledges, and $7,206 has been paid on Education pledges; 159 copies of the Conference organ are taken.

The characters of all the preachers were passed as the work of the districts was reviewed.

Rev. J. H. Holder made an address concerning the Christian Education Movement.

Rev. D. W. Babb, who has rounded out 50 years of service in the Conference, was asked by the Conference to preach on Tuesday evening preceding our next Conference, a sermon celebrating this 50 years of service.

J. A. Randolph acted as chairman of the Conference while the Bishop excused himself for rest and refreshment for a few minutes.

Reports from all boards and committees, except Sabbath Observance and Spiritual State of the Church, were read and adopted.

After the reading of the minutes and adoption of same, the Conference adjourned to meet in Memorial Service, Sunday, at 2:30 p.m.

Fifth Day—Sunday.

Memorial Service, 2:30 P. M.

The Bishop called the Conference to order; the congregation sang, "Thou, My Everlasting Portion," and Brother J. J. Brooks led in prayer. Brother L. M. Lipscomb assisted the Bishop by reading one of the lessons in the ordination of the following to the office of deacon:

Traveling Deacons—Casper W. Avery, Tinsley B. Thrower, Henry H. Wallace, Robert T. Hollingsworth.

Local Deacons—William C. Mattox, Looney B. Wimberly, Green C. Gregory, Benjamin E. Crowson.

The Bishop resigned the chair to Brother L. A. McKeown, who presided over the Memorial Service.

R. A. Tucker made some announcements concerning the Conference Brotherhood.

The following brethren, during the year, have answered the last roll call:

W. C. Harris, whose memoir was read by J. H. Smith; J. A. Hall, whose memoir was read by V. C. Curtis; W. C. Carlisle, whose memoir was read by W. M. Young; W. G. Burks, whose memoir was read by W. W. Hartsfield.

The following brethren spoke to the memory of the departed brethren: B. P. Jaco, D. W. Babb, E. S. Lewis, L. M. Lipscomb, R. T. Hollingsworth, A. A. Alexander, J. T. Gullett, V. C. Curtis, S. L. Pope.

The report of the Committee on Memoirs was adopted. "Nearer, My God, to Thee" was sung, and V. C. Curtis pronounced the benediction.

Fifth Day—Evening Session.

The Conference convened in final session at 7 p.m. The orchestra of the Big Brothers' Class rendered some fine music while the congregation was assembling.

Dr. J. H. Oneal, a member of the Rock River Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, preached to the Conference from the text Acts 1:8.

Following the sermon, the Bishop, assisted by S. A. Brown and E. R. Smoot, ordained to the office of elders: W. R. Liming, W. A. Wilson, John W. York, William T. Phillips, John R. Murff, and C. C. Alexander, Brother Alexander assuming only the ordination vows, being an elder coming to us from the Presbyterian Church.

J. A. Randolph, J. B. Randolph, T. H. Dorsey, and A. T. McIlwain assisted the Bishop in the laying on of hands in the ordination service.

The reports of the Committees on the Spiritual State of the Church and on Sabbath Observance were adopted, resolutions of appreciation and thanks passed, the minutes were read and adopted, the Bishop made a few "scattering remarks," and read the appointments, we sang the Doxology, the benediction was pronounced, and the fifty-fourth session of the North Mississippi Conference was brought to a close.

Following are the appointments for the year 1923-1924:

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

Just a Little Personal.

Your reporter could not make as full a report of the side issues of the Conference as he desired. Having to attend the meetings of the Epworth League Board each afternoon, he was not able to attend and report on the anniversary meetings of the various Boards held in the afternoon.

Besides, an all-important event in his family life took place at the Belzoni Methodist parsonage on Sunday morning, at 8:30 o'clock, when Rev. S. E. Ashmore claimed his only daughter to be his bride, and your reporter, the bride's father, said the words that made them husband and wife. My emotions were stirred to the depths when the crucial hour came.

In order to attend this event, I had to return to Belzoni Saturday night, and thus missed the service of that evening, and the Love Feast of Sunday morning. This is the first Love Feast I recall ever missing at a Conference. I love these meetings, though I seldom get a chance to add my testimony to them. I love the brethren and all the varied experiences of a Methodist preacher.

One of the amusing things that happened at the Conference was on Wednesday evening, during the service conducted by Rev. Arthur J. Moore. Greenville Methodism has a fine choir, and they rendered for us some excellent music. "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" was announced. The choir led off in fine spirit, but the brethren of the Conference were not so rapid. So, with a mighty volume of voices, they drowned out the organ and choir with a little slower gait. The choir smiled, caught the slower time of the preachers, and, together, we did sing that grand old hymn.

---

Rev. Arthur J. Moore, of Texas, who preached to us for three evenings of the Conference, frequently had many of us on the border of shouting grounds. He is a great preacher, and both the Conference and Greenville citizenship were blessed by his messages.

---

Two of the clubhouses of the city were thrown open to the members and visitors of the Conference, and many courtesies extended us—the Elks Club house to the women and the Elysian Club house to the men.

H. P. LEWIS.

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

By Rev. R. P. Neblett.

Rev. J. W. Bell, whose name appears fifth on the chronological roll of the Conference, preached his semi-centennial sermon at this session. He takes as active an interest in all of the workings of the proceedings as any of the younger men.

Rev. Jarome J. Baird, who lives in Greenville, was re-admitted into the Conference, and, with his wife, rendered valuable assistance in the choir during the sessions.

Captain F. A. Howell, who was present at the organization of the North Mississippi Conference at Water Valley, in 1870, is attending this session as a delegate from the Grenada District. His home is in Durant, where he is a member of the Board of Stewards. He is 83 years of age.

Judge Lester G. Fant, of Holly Springs, is among the laymen in attendance on the Conference. He takes an active interest in all the proceedings of the work of the church, at home, in the Annual and General Conferences, and is always loyal to every interest of the kingdom.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, who for a number of years has been the reporter for the Commercial Appeal and other daily papers throughout the territory, is not only interested in gathering the news, but careful in seeing that his personal attention is given to every interest of the church in his hands.

Hon. J. H. Sherard, of Sherard, a valuable layman from the bounds of the Greenville District, was on hand to look after the Orphans' Home at Jackson, and the Methodist Hospital at Memphis. He is president of the Board of Directors for both institutions.

Rev. J. J. Brooks, admitted on trial into the itinerant ministry in 1869, is the oldest effective minister on the roster of the Conference. He is active and greatly beloved by all the preachers and laymen.

The music rendered by the choir of the First Methodist Church is splendid and greatly appreciated by those fortunate enough to hear them. And the reason many do not have this opportunity is that the house is crowded before the time for the preaching services at the evening hour, and they can not gain admission into the auditorium.

The ladies of the church have had fresh cut flowers on the chancel and about the platform during the entire sessions of the Conference. This attention is not only thoughtful, but shows a deep interest in the work of the church by them.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church entertained the visiting ladies of the Conference Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the residence of Mrs. W. P. Kretchsmar, especially complimenting Mrs. W. N. Ainsworth, who is here with Bishop Ainsworth as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Bell. The beautiful home was tastefully decorated with vases and baskets of gorgeous chrysanthemums, the tea table being unusually lovely with its center floral piece of yellow chrysanthemums and four silver candlesticks bearing yellow tapers. Mrs. Geo. Archer poured coffee while Mrs. T. C. Montgomery served the salad course. One hundred and fifty guests enjoyed the hospitality of the gathering, among whom were about fifty guests from out of town.

"HOW BEAUTIFUL UPON THE MOUNTAINS ARE THE FEET OF HIM THAT BRINGETH GOOD TIDINGS!"

Homeward bound after seven days of hard travel visiting two of the greatest Annual Conferences in the church to tell them about the special effort for superannuate endowment. I have written so much concerning the hopeful prospect for the movement in every Conference personally visited that I determined on this trip to dig up the things not encouraging. But with all my effort I must now confess that not a single unfavorable expression could be drawn from any man or woman. The concensus of opinion everywhere and expressed with enthusiasm is that the time has come for the church to make ample provision for the needs of her worn-out preachers and the widows of preachers.

Western North Carolina Conference.—It was held at Winston-Salem, N. C., the land of pure water, clear skies, and everlasting hills. In this thriving business center of a great State everybody works. There are no drones. The one thing that they are willing to consider worth a pause in their activities is hospitality. How beautifully kind and courteous are the North Carolinians to strangers in their midst! They will love one a plenty as long as one is lovable, but they have a righteous contempt for shams. When deceived they are just as quick to fight as they are to be kind and brotherly when treated on the square.

When I entered the Conference room on Thursday morning, Bishop Collins Denny was busily engaged disposing of several pressing matters, so that the superannuate cause could have the right of way according to schedule. In due time he called for me to explain the plan for raising the $10,000,000 for superannuate endowment. The same fixed attention was given by all present to the analysis of the movement that has been given to it in every Conference. This eagerness to hear the details of the plan, so manifest everywhere, caused a prominent connectional Secretary to say this to me: "Todd, I have watched the attitude of the Annual Conferences when other financial programs were being presented to them, and I am sure nothing has ever gripped them more thoroughly than the plan for adequate superannuate endowment." How it warmed my heart to hear such words! Surely underlying all else in the church's busy life of to-day there is a mighty tide of passion setting in which has for its objective the payment of an honest debt to the Lord's disabled prophets.

Dr. C. W. Tadlock, of Centenary Church, St. Louis, delivered the inspirational address. The Doctor was at his best, which explains the pressing crowd around him afterwards, all eager to grasp his hand and express their determination to do the work. Dr. Tadlock had opportunity to discuss the outlook for the cause with many individuals at the church and in the hotel, and he told me that every word spoken to him on the subject was glowing with optimism. He said that one of the presiding elders told him there was not the slightest doubt about the Western North Carolina Conference raising its quota. Blessings on the elder! How I love to hear them talk when they speak like that! By the way, the size of the success of the effort for superannuate endowment can be measured by the dimensions of the presiding elders multiplied by the size of the pastors.

At the hotel many pastors talked with me about the work, and all of them made use of these words: "This is going to be the easiest thing we ever had to do." I hope they are right, but we should not be overconfident. Games are usually lost when there is overconfidence before they are played. Furthermore, people never fall over each other crowding to the place to give away money. It is not an easy task to raise $10,000,000, and the quicker we realize it the better off the superannuates will be. It will take patient, painstaking work to do this thing. Therefore may I urge the pastors to prepare for a persistent struggle in which every resource they have will be needed?

Several laymen expressed an eagerness to get at it. One of them told me that I could go away assured that the charge he represented would pay every dollar of its quota and much more. All of them were heartily in favor of the movement.

When Bishop Denny addressed the Conference concerning the special effort, he used a figure that deeply impressed everybody. He said a grand old ship would soon stop at the port, that she would not tarry long, and that whoever had freight to put on her should not fail to be timely in the act of loading. He referred to the opportunity about to be given to the church for making contributions to superannuate endowment. The Bishop is deeply interested in the cause, and the church can expect his episcopal district to support it loyally.

Virginia Conference.—After a very pleasant and profitable day at Winston-Salem, Dr. Tadlock and I entrained for Richmond. We arrived early Friday, the day on which the great Virginia Conference had agreed to hear the representatives of the special effort for superannuate endowment. The hotels were crowded with preachers, and many groups of them were talking about the wonderful address on the "forgotten man" delivered to an overflowing crowd the night before by Dr. Clovis Chappell, of Washington, D. C. Everywhere they were saying: "It was great! It hit the spot! It will get results!" Well, done, Clovis. The old boys will not forget.

The inimitable Bishop Candler was in the chair. He played on the emotions of the brethren as Ole Bull on his sweet-toned violin. Part of the time the boys laughed and part of it they cried, but every moment they listened. Into such an atmosphere the superannuate program was projected. The plan was explained, Dr. Tadlock followed with his inspiring address, and Bishop Candler exhorted as only he can do. The response was all that could be desired. It is useless to try to stampede Virginians, for they are not susceptible to that sort of thing. They are, however, open to conviction, and when any speaker can convince them, there is no need to worry about their actions. Undoubtedly they have decided that the superannuate cause is worthy. That is enough. The end of the story will be told in the returns from the special effort.

It was inspiring to hear Bishop Candler's ringing words to the laymen. He told them that they could not transact any sort of business with safety except by virtue of the work done by preachers of the gospel. How true! Take away the influence and work of the preachers for the past hundred years in this country, and where would be the opportunity for dependable business operations to-day? The preachers, more than any other class, have created the conditions for successful business. Generation after generation of them have spent all of soul and body for the sake of the common good. Eventually they wore out, and then in feebleness and age they were put aside to spend their last days in abject poverty. And all over the land business men live in palatial residences, having great fortunes, all of which was made possible by preachers who were willing to be the mudsills of such success. What a time is this for business men everywhere to remember the men who served them so well.

At 5:30 Friday evening I was given the opportunity to have dinner with the Pastors' Association and to address them in behalf of the superannuates. This organization each year selects some cause prominent before the church at the time and gives it careful study and diligent support. Very naturally they have selected the superannuate movement for the ensuing Conference year. The dinner was at the Y. W. C. A. building. I expected to find twenty-five or thirty preachers in attendance. Imagine my surprise when entering the dining room to find one hundred and thirty of them seated at the tables. It was a rare opportunity to boost the effort for the "forgotten man," and my readers can be assured that I did my best to meet the situation. And yet it almost seemed a waste of time to stand there for thirty minutes urging those splendid fellows to support a cause to which they have been heartily committed for months. There was not a single one of them lukewarm on the subject. By a unanimous standing vote and with much enthusiasm they assured me: "It shall be done." As I looked into their faces and felt the warmth of their sympathetic hearts I thought: What a splendid thing it would be if preachers all over the church would solemnly covenant together to make the special effort for superannuate endowment successful in abundant measure! If this were done, I verily believe that nothing on earth could prevent our grand old veterans from realizing the thing that all of us are so devoutly wishing for them.

Before leaving Richmond I had the opportunity to discuss with Bishop James Cannon, Jr., how best to project the special effort for superannuate endowment in the Mission Conferences which he has charge of, the same being the Texas Mexican Mission, the Western Mexican Mission, the Mexico Conference, and the Cuba Coference. The Bishop was greatly interested, and he readily consented to carry on the movement according to a plan which we agreed was practical. The Board of Finance is wholly dependent on the Bishops in charge of foreign Annual Conferences and Mission Conferences to do whatever can be done in these situations for superannuate endowment. The readers of this page will be pleased to know that even in these fields, so difficult to reach with such a program, the special effort for superannuate endowment will be made by whatever method seems best.

Thus ended another week of hard work for the great cause. May the God of the worn-out preachers give me strength to carry on during the next week, which is even now about to begin! And may I urge all my readers whose souls yearn for the success of the movement to be daily in earnest prayer for the blessings of heaven upon this work which appeals so forcibly to every loving heart.

WHAT A BOOK CAN DO.

This is what a book can do:
Take you where the skies are blue,
Take you where the laughter's ringing,
And the eyes with love aglow,
Take you out of care and trouble
And the griefs which seem to double,
Take you far from wintry weather
And the fields of drifted snow.

This is what a book can do:
Dreams you thought were lost, renew;
It can set you bravely sailing
All the salty seven seas,
It can bear you on its pages
Back to long-forgotten ages,
Back to minuets of beauty
And to silver-buckled knees.

This is what a book can do:
Make a boy again of you;
To the prairies of adventure
It can take you in an hour;
It can chill your blood with danger
To which long you've been a stranger,
And cure all the ache of failure
By the magic of its power.

This is what a book can do:
Build and strengthen you anew,
Give you fortitude and courage
When above a storm appears;
It can fashion and remake you
So that fate can never break you,
It can comfort and console you
When your eyes are wet with tears.

—Edgar A. Guest.

WHAT A DREAM DID FOR DOLLIE.

Dollie Donall hid her face in the pillow case on the couch on which she lay and blinked back a few stray tears. Sister Maudie was going to a party that afternoon and she couldn't go because a horrid rain had fallen and made the world about her too damp for her .to venture out. Dollie didn't give up the thought of going gracefully—no, indeed. And the main reason for her burying her face in the pillow was simply because she didn't want to speak to anybody.

Presently Dollie was surprised beyond expression. The old stuffed owl that had been sitting on a certain post in the hallway ever since she could remember began to stretch his wings and turn his head as only an owl can; then he tried his feet, and when he seemed quite sure that they would work properly he flew down to the floor and began prancing around in a queer manner.

"I want to get out of this house," he said to the white china cat that had sat throughout two whole seasons on one side of the hearth.

The cat began to stretch her legs and turn her head just as the owl had done, and presently she was walking around also. "I want to get out of here, too," said the cat. "There is too much grumpiness about this place to suit me."

"That's my reason for leaving," answered the owl. "I don't like pouty people, and that little girl Dollie doesn't do anything else but pout."

"You're wrong, you're wrong," chimed in Polly, the parrot. "Dollie isn't cross all the time. Don't you remember that she saved one of your wing feathers the other day when the maid would have swept it out into the yard?"

"Yes, I remember that," said the owl, "but, nevertheless, she is pouty; and I don't like pouty people."

"Neither do I," declared the white china cat.

"Dollie, O Dollie!" came a shrill voice, and Dollie jumped up from the couch and began to rub her sleepy eyes.

"I didn't mean to frighten you, Dollie," laughed the voice, which the little girl recognized as Billy's, "but Sis and I were so unhappy at the party without you that I ran by and asked Uncle Ben to come and take you over in his car, so hurry into your clothes. He's waiting at the gate for us." And before the little girl could answer, Billy was gone.

For a moment she sat staring in silence at the white china cat on the hearth, and then she raised her eyes to the ornamental owl that sat perched on the pole at the far end of the hall, then she turned her eyes upon Polly, who sat serenely playing with a piece of bright string on her pole by the window.

"Sleepy Dollie, sleepy Dollie," murmured the parrot.

"Yes," admitted the little girl, "I am sleepy all right, but don't you ever get it into your mind that I am going to be naughty any more, for I am not." And, though the whole family was delighted with the change, nobody but the little girl knew for a long time that it was due to a peculiar dream she had when she dropped off to sleep in a pouty frame of mind.—Christian Observer.

FACTS ABOUT PRESIDENTS.

We are indebted to the Lonisville Courier-Journal for citation of the following interesting facts about our Presidents:

Of the twenty-nine men who have been President of the United States, nineteen have been "college bred."

Washington, Jackson, Van Buren, Taylor, Fillmore, Lincoln, Johnson, Cleveland, McKinley, and Harding never suffered from what Bismarck, in speaking of Paul Kruger, once characterized "the debilitating influence of a college education."

Though not a college graduate, Mr. Harding was for a brief period a student at a now defunct college in Ohio.

Grant, who was a graduate of the United States Military Academy, is assigned to the group of Presidents who were "formally educated."

If a list of the country's greatest seven Presidents should be made, it would likely consist of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Cleveland, Roosevelt, and Wilson.

Of these seven, only three were college-bred or "university-bred" men.

Jefferson, like Monroe and Tyler, was graduated at William and Mary College; Roosevelt, like the Adamses, father and son, was a graduate of Harvard; Wilson, like Madison, was a son of "Old Hassau."

Mr. Coolidge is one of "the nineteen," a graduate of Amherst College.

The average age of Presidents when taking the oath of office for the first time is fifty-four years.

Both Harrison and Taylor died while in office.

Of the men above sixty only two, John Adams and Andrew Jackson, were successful Presidents.

Below sixty and above fifty-four years were Washington (fifty-seven), Jefferson (fifty-seven), Madison (fifty-seven), John Quincy Adams (fifty-seven), Johnson (fifty-six), Harrison (fifty-five), Wilson (fifty-six), and Harding (fifty-six).

Above fifty but below fifty-four were Tyler (fifty-one), Lincoln (fifty-two), Fillmore (fifty), Arthur (fifty), Taft (fifty-one), and Coolidge (fifty-two).

Below fifty and above forty-five were Pierce (forty-nine), Grant (forty-six), Garfield (forty-nine), and Cleveland (forty-seven).

Only one man under forty-five years of age has become President. Theodore Roosevelt was only forty-two when he succeeded McKinley.

Van Buren and Hayes were fifty-four—the average Presidential age—when sworn in.

President Coolidge takes up the gravest responsibilities at an age two years under "the Presidential average."

Only one other American President was fifty-two when entering office—Abraham Lincoln.—Knoxville Sentinel.

It is the easiest thing in the world to obey God when he commands us to do what we like and trust him when the path is all sunshine. The real victory of faith is to trust God in the dark and through the dark. Let us be assured of this, that if the lesson and the rod are of his appointing and his all-wise love has engineered the tunnels of trial on the heavenward road he will never desert us during the discipline. The vital thing for us is not to deny and desert him.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

To get, we must give; to accumlate, we must scatter; to make ourselves happy, we must make others happy; and in order to become spiritually vigorous, we must seek the spiritual good of others.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. O. S. Lewis will carry to Conference one of the best reports the First Methodist Church of Laurel, Miss., has ever made.

The First Methodist Church of Gulfport, Miss., where the Mississippi Annual Conference is in session this week, has a membership of 1,075.

The quarterly conference of the Methodist church at Franklinton, La., unanimously requested the return of the pastor, Rev. L. W. Cain, for another year.

Brother W. M. Hunt, the efficient church lay leader of the West Monroe Methodist Church, has been a reader of the Advocate for more than a quarter of a Century.

Rev. H. S. Johns, chaplain of the Louisiana State Penitentiary, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call one day last week while in the city on a business mission.

Rev. William Schuhle, our pastor at Morgan City, La., was in New Orleans last Monday to hear Dr. John. R Mott speak. He favored the Advocate office with a call while in the city.

Rev. and Mrs. H. P. Lewis, of Belzoni, Miss., announce the marriage of their daughter, Annie Marion, to Rev. Samuel E. Ashmore, on Sunday, Nov. 11. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to the happy young couple.

Mr. and Mrs. John Siebe Johnston announce the marriage of their daughter, Clara Baur, to Mr. Millard Mundell Bush, at Meridian, Miss., on Saturday, Oct. 20. The young couple will make their home at Boyle, Miss. The Advocate extends to them all good wishes.

On account of the cancellation of his engagements in Japan and Korea, made necessary by the earthquake, Evangelist Walt Holcomb has some open dates for the next six months. Brother Holcomb has just closed a successful meeting at Newnan, Ga.

We regret to learn that Bishop W. B. Murrah has suffered an attack of illness which made it necessary for him to cancel his schedule for the Alabama Conferences, Bishop Warren A. Candler presiding in his place. Our latest news is to the effect that Bishop Murrah is regaining his health.

We renew our expression of the appreciation of the kindness of Rev. H. P. Lewis in reporting the proceedings of the North Mississippi Conference for the Advocate. As our readers will see, he has done the work admirably. We appreciate, also, the kindness of Rev. R. P. Neblett in assisting Brother Lewis with the "personals."

The fourth quarterly conference of the Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., unanimously adopted resolutions of appreciation of the services of Rev. J. R. Jones as presiding elder of the Vicksburg District for the past four years. Brother and Sister Jones have a warm place in the hearts of the good people of Vicksburg.

Rev. W. M. Williams has served a highly successful quadrennium at Purvis, Miss., where he has gained the respect and love of all the people. The fourth quarterly conference passed highly commendatory resolutions concerning his ministry, and at the close of the service on last Sunday evening various members of the congregation, including several Baptists, made complimentary remarks.

Dr. John R. Mott, the world-famous General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, spent last Monday in New Orleans, speaking to the Protestant ministers of the city at 11 o'clock in the morning, and being the guest of honor and principal speaker at a dinner at the Roosevelt Hotel in the evening. Dr. Mott is generally recognized as one of the leaders of the religious thought of the world to-day.

The Bookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, will present three applications for admission on trial at this session of the Conference—F. J. Jones and Frederick Sartin, both splendid men and now serving as supplies, and Eugene William Hope, a Baptist preacher from within the bounds of the Osyka charge. Three fine young men have been licensed to preach during the year—George Hawkins Jones, son of Rev. W. B. Jones, and Ernest Watkins Brown, both of Crystal Springs, and William Warren Morrow, of the La Branch Street Church, McComb.

The pastors of the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference, presented, on Nov. 6, Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Jones with a very fine chest of silver as an expression of their appreciation of them, as they leave the Vicksburg District at the close of a quadrennium of service. Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Huntley, Rev. and Mrs. Robert Selby, and Rev. T. B. Cottrell made the presentation at the district parsonage. The presiding elder, the pastors, and the laymen of the Vicksburg District, have wrought a great work together,, and a beautiful spirit of harmony and co-operation prevails.

Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Cooper, of Brookhaven, Miss., have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Mildred, to Mr. John C. Cosby, of Greensboro, N. C., at their home on Whitworth College campus, on Nov. 27. Miss Cooper is the fourth daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Cooper, and is a highly accomplished Christian young woman, holding three diplomas—one from Whitworth College, one from Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex., and one from Simmons College, Boston. Mr. Cosby is a graduate of North Carolina State College, and is successfully engaged in the textile business. The Advocate extends all good wishes in advance of the happy event.

More than 500,000 volumes of the Gospels have been printed in New York by photographic process to supply the unusual needs caused by the recent earthquake in Tokyo and Yokohama. Practically all the Bible plates for twenty-five or more languages and dialects of the Far East were totally destroyed, together with the printing plant at which Bibles for Japan, China, Siam, and the Philippine Islands were printed. The American Bible Society has just shipped five truck loads of the Gospels printed in Japanese to its representatives in Japan.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Mrs. A. R. Bynum, Booneville, Miss., 2; Rev. E. C. Driskell, Buena Vista, Miss., 2; Rev. M. W. Porter, Avera, Miss., 3; Rev. T. A. Ferguson, Laurel, Miss., 3.

"SUBSIDIES," "CIRCULATION," "DISAPPOINTMENT."

Dear Doctor Carley: Your courtesy in printing my communication, and the spirit of your comments thereon, are duly appreciated. Please permit a word by way of emendation. My language was, " * * * the people should refuse longer to subsidize or subscribe for a paper already a business failure, or one foredoomed to such failure, when we have excellent papers at hand suited to meet all our requirements at great saving of dollars and worry." That is not a protest against "subsidies," but a protest against "needless" subsidies, which protest I repeat with emphasis. An Advocate published at Birmingham "can easily meet, and adequately, all the needs of Mississippi Methodism," and the Texas Advocate "can easily meet, and adequately, all the needs of Louisiana Methodism"; though they might not contribute to State or Conference pride. I claimed no "authority" to speak for either Mississippi or Louisiana, but expressed my own opinion. A paper that must needs have a subsidy to keep going is a "business failure," in my opinion. "One foredoomed to such failure" referred not to the Advocate, but to the proposed one at Jackson, Miss, in my opinion.

The small per cent paid on Centenary subscriptions is a "grievous disappointment," the smaller per cent paid on educational subscriptions "even more so," in my opinion, and, I am persuaded, in the opinion of all who expected anything like full payments of pledges. The per cents paid may not be "grievous disappointments" to those who did not have such expectations—as it is written in the Chronicles, "Blessed am dey who expect nothing, for verily dey shall not be disappointed; and blessed am dey who do not expect anything like full payments, for verily dey shall not be 'grievously disappointed.' "

PATRIARCHS.

Those who diligently read church papers occasionally find reference made to some superannuated brother as the oldest living Methodist preacher. It is the desire of the writer to publish in the forthcoming number of the combined General Minutes and Yearbook of the Church as complete and accurate a list of the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who are eighty or more years old as it is possible to obtain. I will, therefore, be greatly obliged if such veterans, their relatives or friends, will assist me in this matter by forwarding at once the full names of any ministers born during or before the year 1841, giving additional information as follows: Date and place of birth and present address.

WEEK OF PRAYER FOR THE CHURCHES,

Sunday, Jan. 6, to Saturday, Jan. 12, 1923.

To the Churches of Christ in America:

Before the new year takes for nations and churches a character of its own, it is our privilege to invite all Christian people to fellowship in prayer.

It is not demanded of us that we should devise a formal unity before we can come together at the Throne of Grace. There is a unity which is already ours. We are one body in Christ. We have not to create, but to enter into the unity which comes from our common relationship in grateful and adoring faith, to the one Lord. We come by many ways to him, but it is to him that we all come: and in him we meet with one another. We need not wait for other sanction.

There is another unity in the needs which we must bring with us into his presence. We live in the same age of the world's history. We share the same anxieties and perils, the same fears and the same wonderful hopes. It is the same world and the same nations, which we seek to behold in the light of Christ. It is the same world which we long to offer to him for his inheritance.

But we shall remember that in our prayers we do not begin with our needs, but with the Divine Grace. Our prayers will be our answer to his call, and to his redeeming love, and we shall turn away from ourselves, even from our desperate needs first of all, and open up all our life to the Holy God that he may enter and possess us by his Spirit. This is the way to unity in prayer. Other concerns in which we differ there will be in our life and service, and they are important, but when we dwell upon the Redeemer, and all that we owe to him, these concerns take their true proportions.

We shall hope to see the needs which we share, more clearly when we together bring them into the light of the One Divine Purpose. We know something of our shame and failure. "We are men of unclean lips and we dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips." We shall know more, when we have lifted this our world into the pure and holy light. We know something of our need of God, but we shall learn more in fellowship: we shall see with cleansed vision what it is that can fill human life with the joy of a great purpose and the certainty of an eternal destiny. Everywhere we see men seeking to fill their days with excitement in order to escape from thinking. In the failure of their merely formal religion they hope to fill the void with new superstitions. They dream that they are eating, and they will awake to find their souls empty. This we know in part; but when we strengthen each other in the fellowship of prayer and come with boldness to God, we know still more surely that nothing but faith in the living God can satisfy the soul of man.

But we shall not see with purified eyes; we shall open new ways through our offering of ourselves, whereby the Spirit of God may enter into the human scene. There is a way open whenever a solitary soul turns in faith to its Lord; but we have the assurance of the Saviour himself that through fellowship the souls of men open another road. "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them * * * If two of you shall agree * * * It shall be done." It will make a difference whether we unite in prayer or not. Such a fellowship in prayer means ways thrown open, powers released, re-enforcements of courage and hope for the faithful servants of God.

We cannot limit the range of believing prayer; the world has still to learn what may follow upon the fellowship in prayer of all the people of God. To the discovery of that secret in experience we call the churches for their own sake, for the sake of the world, and for the sake of him who waits and has waited long for us to offer him this road.

We are,

Yours in the fellowship of Christ Jesus,
THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA.

OUR CHURCH IN THE NORTHWEST.

By Dr. R. L. Russell, Secretary, Home Department, Board of Missions.

Many have said—no doubt many are still saying—that our church is not needed in the Northwest. This statement is usually made by people who do not know the needs of that great territory. By the Northwest, so far as our church is concerned, we mean the States of Montana, Idaho, Washington, and Oregon. Let us look at some figures which tell a story concerning the religious conditions of these States.

Montana has a population of 472,935, and a Protestant church membership of 49,414, or 11.1%.

Oregon has a population of 861,992, with a Protestant church membership of 148,262, or 17.2%.

Washington has a population of 1,597,400, with a Protestant church membership of 297,096, or 18.6%.

About 75% of the people within these States are not affiliated with some religious organization, and 24% are members of some Protestant church. The Northwest country is composed of neither Southern nor Northern people. They are Westerners. They form a distinct type. They are of the West and for the West. They do not care about the traditions of the North or the South, but they do believe strongly in the greatness and future of that part of this Republic. The destiny of our country is wrapped up in a big way with the character of the citizenship of the Northwest. They are virile, prosperous and educated people. We of the East could easily learn many helpful lessons from these stalwarts of the Northwest. These States stand among the first in their schools and other public institutions. One wonders, as he travels over the country, where they found the money to erect such great public school buildings, hospitals, and State buildings, and how they ever built so many good roads across the great plains and through the many mountains. But it is a region of vast natural resources, and these resources are being developed by the skill and genius of its vigorous citizenship. The whole Northwest is rapidly filling with people, and will soon be a vast empire within itself. Surely it should be more Christian than it is now. Where is there a better opportunity for Christian service? To deliver the full influence of the church upon a needy field like this would not be asking too much. We cannot free ourselves from this responsibility because it is not south of the Mason and Dixon line. There was no Northwest when the Mason and Dixon line was established, and it is too late to establish one now.

The great and supreme need of that country is not gold—but GOD; not the necessities of life, but to know the real essentials of life. The obstacles in the way of Christianity there are to be found:

1. In a strong Intellectualism minus a knowledge of God. One of the glories of the Northwest is its splendid universities, colleges and secondary schools. They believe in an educated citizenship. The church must put Christianity into their intellectual civilizatoin.

2. In their material prosperity. To be sure, they have their lean years, but their fat years are far more numerous. Some of the largest and most fruitful grain fields to be found in the world are in the Northwest, and many of the greatest and most productive fruit orchards are there. Cattle, sheep and hogs abound. Timber, mining and oil are found in these parts as scarcely at any other point in our country. They think so much to be prosperous that God and religion are left out of their program.

3. In religious fanaticism and undenominational loyalty. Almost every religious sect or cult is to be found there, and many of them are very prosperous. In many cases the organized church is opposed and disrupted. There is that lack of denominational appreciation which is found back East. The federated church idea, which has been exploded with us, is finding a fertile field there because of the many denominations represented in a small community. The lack of denominational loyalty makes difficult the establishment of permanent church organizations, while the federated church usually thrives awhile and ceases to be, often leaving the community in a worse fix than when the federation began.

4. In the lack of a permanent and well established ministry. If unprepared men cannot succeed back East, few of them will succeed in the West. If we need our best equipped men for China, Korea and Africa, how much more do we need them in the proud, intellectual and prosperous West! Let not Conferences of the East ship their failures to the West; for they will be worse failures there. This has been one of the greatest embarrassments to our church in that great country. Give us some of your choicest men for the next ten years, and the church of the West will not need to call on the church of the East for ministerial recruits. Already they are recruiting from their own people, and some of the most promising ministers in the Conference are natives. Others are in colleges preparing to enter the Conference at an early day.

The church of the Northwest takes her stand by the church of the Southeast in her effort to make this country Christian, that a Christian America may do her full share in making a Christian world. The struggling church of the Northwest needs a little longer the support and sympathy of the well-established church of the Southwest, that she may grow strong enough to do a full man's share in the program of Christ.

Says the New York Christian Advocate: "The first one hundred ministerial delegates elected to the coming General Conference are made up of fifty-two pastors, twenty-five district superintendents, and twenty-three others. Four years ago these same Conferences elected thirty-seven pastors, forty district superintendents, and twenty-two others. Leaving out the foreign Conferences, which rarely put a pastor on the delegation, the exhibit is even more impressive, for it shows that the United States Conferences have this year elected fifty-one pastors and eighteen district superintendents, as compared with thirty-five pastors and thirty-four district superintendents four years ago. Should the ratio of the first one hundred hold throughout the balloting, there will be one hundred more pastors in the Springfield Conference than there were at Des Moines, giving them a clear majority of their order."

THE REVIVAL AT WEMBO NYAMA

By Mrs. Thomas E. Reeve.

This year we held at Wembo Nyama what we consider the best revival campaign that we have had in our Mission. Some months previous to the beginning of the campaign, it was talked about and prayed for among the missionaries. Preparation included five weeks of special prayer throughout the native village, accompanied by careful personal work by both missionaries and native leaders.

The missionaries were divided into five groups, to correspond to the number of sections into which the native village had previously been divided on account of facilitating the religious work, and better reaching the entire native population of the Mission village. Five prayer meetings were held simultaneously in the five sections on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays of each of the five weeks. Each group of missionaries had charge of each section for one week at a time. This gave all of the missionaries an opportunity to touch the entire village during the weeks of preparation.

Besides the prayer services in the village, the missionaries set aside a certain time each day for private prayer for the meeting. Many of the native Christians did the same thing, and a good number of them, as well as the missionaries, did earnest personal work among the unconverted throughout the preparation. When the special services actually began in the church, every unconverted person and all the back-sliding ones of our village had been visited from one to five times, talked with about their souls, some prayed with and otherwise entreated to give their hearts to God.

The campaign proper included eight days, from one Sunday through the following one. All the evangelists of the Wembo Nyama district were called in for these eight days, divided into five groups, and assigned to the different sections of the village for personal work during that time. The preaching was done by two of the missionaries, alternating in turns. Two services a day were held. The interest of the natives was noticeable and the attendance unusually large, almost the entire village turning out en masse each service. Only a very few remained indifferent and unmoved.

Because of the prevailing ignorance of Christian truth and its acceptance, we could not proceed with the "ingathering" as is generally done in our American revivals. Earnest pleas were made to give Christ their hearts and turn away from heathenism and sin. Serious warnings of the inevitable penalty for wrongdoing were constantly sounded. The great fundamentals of Christianity were set forth as simply and clearly as those preaching were able to do. Then, for the native's part, he was asked through groups of friends in personal visitation to make certain promises, if he really desired Christ to come into his life. First, he promised the ones visiting him, and God, then he promised the missionaries in quiet conference, and finally in public confession on the last day of the service he promised the church assembled. The promise was to pray in private daily, to attend regularly for the rest of the year the daily sunrise services and catechism classes, to go to school as regularly as his work would permit in order to learn to read God's Word, to strive earnestly to give up all sin and wrongdoing, and carefully and faithfully to tithe. Ninety-four made this promise.

Before any of these are baptized they must show their sincerity in making the promise by trying to meet the conditions laid down for baptism, among which is a period of six month's probation under the observance of native pastor or local church official, and the missionary in charge of the evangelistic department. In the first few weeks following these services, very noticeable results were seen in our church members. Some paid up back tithes of long standing and others cleared up bad "palavers" preparatory to taking communion at the regular quarterly communion. One other result which we believe will prove of inestimable worth to our whole district was the practical lesson in and demonstration of personal work for the Master.

CHURCH SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

By D. L. Mumpower.

Pastors are continually, and rightly, searching for means to simplify the complexity into which our church machinery tends to multiply itself. In some of our charges the pastor must have a mastery of detail almost as great as that of a chess expert who can play blindfolded several games simultaneously, and win them all. It is not an evidence of laziness or of a desire to shun responsibility that we try to unify the co-ordinate agencies that we find engaged in similar kinds of work. My professor of mathematics in Central College, Fayette, Mo., used to advise his students to work a day to find an easier way of solving a problem that would likely recur in the solution of other problems. The wise pastor tries, first of all, to determine what his people need; and, having done this, to find out the ways and means of meeting these needs in the simplest and most effective fashion.

The missionary education of his people is admittedly one of the great needs that confront the busy pastor. He finds upon inspection several agencies in his church more or less engaged in doing something in mission study. Some of his people, especially his men, are not being reached at all. Any plan that will unite these agencies, and, in addition, provide a way for the men to study missions should be heartily welcomed.

The Church School of Missions is being suggested for this purpose. It is a plan worked out after much investigation and gathering of opinion from many widely-separated sources. It provides for a six weeks' study of missions under the guidance of the pastor and the local missionary leaders. The plan is fully explained in a pamphlet already sent out to all pastors and presiding elders; the many favorable responses received indicate a hearty desire on the part of the pastorate in general to make use of the school.

Some of our pastors have already begun a school in their charges; others prefer to wait until their Annual Conferences are over. The months of January, February, and March seem to be most in favor as missionary education months by those pastors who have made suggestions; and, inasmuch as a study of missions could not possibly interfere with any other work that the church might want to do during these three months, I am suggesting them for the Church School of Missions. This does not mean that other months are not so good; in many cases they are better. The big thing is that some time during the year all the forces of the local church get together and put on the school.

A list of suggested textbooks has been prepared and is ready for distribution; write for it, asking for "Mission Study Textbooks, 1923-24." The pamphlet "The Church School of Missions: What Is It?" is also yours for the asking.

A BRAND NEW IDEA

Helps Mothers—Pleases Children

Heretofore mothers have oftimes been at a loss about arranging these parties.

"The Children's Party Book" by Marion Jane Parker, just off the press, will save mothers any further worry about planning children's parties. The book is a 40 page affair, 4 pages devoted to each occasion, with 10 full color pages of illustrations by Frances Tipton Hunter, telling just how to plan the party, from sending out the invitations, clear through — what games to play, how to play them, what cakes to bake, what refreshments to serve, and everything necessary to relieve mothers of the usual attendant worries.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a special offer to those interested in church activities, to help distribute the book.

The plan, like the book, is a worthy one, and should receive the consideration of our church women, as a ready means of raising funds.—Adv.

Loyalty League Reports.

Below will be found two lists. It is hoped that each League and each Leaguer will carefully study these lists and see just where your League stands on the Loyalty Legion. The first list represents those who have paid their pledges, or very little on it, over 100%, and we are very proud of these Leagues. The second list represents those Leagues who have not paid their pledge, or very little of it. It may be that your treasurer has not remitted the Loyalty Legion money. Please have him do so at once in order, first, that the State may get the money which is badly needed at this time, and, second, to get your League Chapter on the first named list.

FROM ALEXANDRIA SENIOR EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Since it is so seldom that we see anything in the Advocate from Alexandria Chapter, or Alexandria District, I have concluded to let you know a few of the things which we are doing.

Our district secretary, Miss Marguerite White, is very enthusiastic over her work. She has organized one sub-district, that I have heard of, and know to be doing very good work, of which Mr. Perry Bond, of Oakdale, La., is president. Mr. Bond sent me a copy of the sub-district policy and budget for the year, which I forwarded to Dr. Parker for publication in the Era.

A number of the Alexandria Leaguers went to Tioga on Sunday evening, October 14, and rendered a very interesting program for the Tioga Leaguers, under the leadership of Miss Marguerite White. Tioga has wonderful opportunities for a 100 per cent League. I am informed that they are now connected with the State organization, and expect to operate on a 100 per cent basis, or as nearly as possible. We expect to go to Boyce within the next few Sundays, and give the same program.

We are now putting on a very interesting contest, which started on Sunday, October 21. The League membership is divided into two teams, namely, "Whites," and "Golds." The captain of the Whites is Mr. Claude Copenhaver, Second Department Superintendent. He has as his lieutenant Miss Ruth Bryan, Third Department Superintendent. The captain of the Golds is Miss Ruth Lunean, and she has as her lieutenant Mr. Howard McCurdy, First Department Superintendent. The contest will run for ten weeks, and the losing team will give the winners a banquet. Below I give a list of the requirements for attaining points in this contest:

Attendance at devotional meetings, 5; bringing visitor, 5; getting new member, 10; offering, 5; leading devotional program, 25; serving on devotional program, 10; attending monthly business meeting, 10; observing Quiet Hour Covenant, 10; observing Fellow-worker Covenant, 10; helping with and attending jail services, 20; visiting sick, 10; attending literary social, 10; taking part in literary social, 5; being member of Epworth League Study Class, 15; observing Christian Stewardship Covenant, 10; member Loyalty Legion, 50; Epworth Era subscriber, 50; attending other Leagues, 5; serving on program at other Leagues, 10; attending mid-week prayer meeting, 5.

Miss Mary Brown is umpire. She keeps the record, and each Leaguer reports the points they have made during the week as they enter the League room for the devotional meeting each Sunday. Of course, it is understood that the Whites are to lead the devotional one Sunday, and the Golds the next, as naturally when one team has charge of the program they will put all on their team on the program in order to get the points.

With all good wishes, and praying God's blessings upon each chapter in the State, I remain, yours for better Epworth Leagues,

CHAS. N. WHITE,
President.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Brought Relief When Other Medicines Failed

Winston-Salem, N. C.—"I was weak and run-down and had trouble with my side. I had been taking medicine for a long time and nothing seemed to do me any good. My husband went to the drug store and he said to the clerk, 'I want the best medicine you have for women's troubles.' He gave him a bottle of Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me In a short time I was able to do my housework, and now I am not only able to do every bit of that and washing and ironing, but I help my husband at the store and feel good all the time."—Mrs. L. # Sunday School

CAMPTI CHARGE INSTITUTE.

The four-times-a-year circuit Sunday School Institute of the Campti circuit was held at Clarence Church, Sept. 30, 1923.

The morning session consisted of devotional services conducted by the pastor, Rev. L. E. Crooks.

Talks were given by Mr. Frank Harrison, of St. Maurice, and Mrs. Z. T. Gallion, of Natchitoches.

Mr. Harrison talked on the two best lessons of the past quarter. The ones chosen by him were, "The Conversion of Saul" and "The Organization of the Church of the Living God."

Mrs. Gallion spoke on "The Sunday School Teacher and the Preparation of the Lesson."

These talks, alone, were well worth the time put forth for the day. We all felt it was good to be there and hear them. This concluded the morning session; and after the benediction we adjourned to the school building, where we partook of a bountiful dinner, served by the Clarence church and community.

The afternoon session was opened with devotionals, led by Brother Crooks.

Our president being absent, Brother Crooks was asked to take the chair. Minutes of last meeting were read. Reports from the following schools were read: St. Maurice, Clarence, and Davis Springs. Davis Springs was chosen as the place of next meeting. Mrs. J. C. Boyd, Mrs. J. J. Barr, and Miss Deady Grilleitte were appointed to prepare the next program.

Mrs. Fulton talked on "Home Missionaries and Missions in the Sunday School." There were round table talks on "Discords and How to Avoid Them," and "The Main Object and Purpose of the Sunday School."

A rising vote of thanks was given to the people of Clarence for their royal hospitality. The meeting was dismissed with prayer by Mr. J. O. Boyd.

MRS. J. B. FULTON, Secretary.

OUR GENERAL SUNDAY SCHOOL COUNCIL.

By Rev. A. L. Dietrich.

Perhaps in no one department of the work of our church has more progress been made during the last eight or ten years than in the Sunday school department. Among the things that may be cited as contributing to this advance are the comprehensive and high-grade leadership training plans, including the whole system, from the teacher-training classes in the local schools to the central school at Lake Junaluska; the standardizing of the organization and work in the local school; the emphasis on organized class work; the better financing of both the General and the Conference Boards, and the employment by the Conference Boards of whole-time paid workers (Conference Superintendents, Elementary Superintendents, and others).

Very concrete results are seen in the large increase in our Sunday school enrollment, in an increased number of Sunday school pupils joining the church, and in a very much better grade of work in the local school everywhere.

Growing out of the employment by the Conference Boards of full-time workers has come the General Sunday School Council of our church, a modest organization that has not said much about itself, but which has nevertheless contributed not a little to the great Sunday school advance Southern Methodism has made in recent years. This organization is composed of members of the General Board Staff, Chairmen of the Conference Sunday School Boards, Conference Superintendents of Sunday School Work, Conference Elementary Superintendents, Directors of Religious Education in local churches, Professors of religious Education in Colleges, Training School Instructors, and others. The officers of the Council at present are: President, Rev. J. H. Montgomery, Richmond, Va.; Vice President, Miss Lucy Foreman, Nashville, Tenn.; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. C. M. Dannelly, Montgomery, Ala.

The Council meets once a year at Nashville, Tenn.—the next meeting to be Dec. 11-18, 1923. The program for this meeting is based on the development of our rural work, and most of the discussion will have to do with plans and purposes related to that work. Each day at noon Dr. Andrew Sledd, of Emory University, will deliver an address.

In addition to meetings of the General Council itself, there will be during the same period meetings of separate sections, such as the Elementary Council, Conference Board Chairmen, Conference Superintendents, etc., at which special phases of the work will be handlde.

Altogether the Council meeting serves a most excellent purpose as a clearing house for ideas and plans, and as a unifying agency for methods of work and objectives.

It is strange that laboring men do not think more of the vast usefulness of their tools, and take a benevolent pleasure in them on this account. One would think that a carpenter or mason, on passing a house which he had reared, would say to himself, "This work of mine is giving comfort and enjoyment every day and every hour to a family, and will continue to be a kindly shelter, a domestic gathering place, an abode of affection for a century or more after I sleep in the dust"; and ought not a generous satisfaction to spring up at the thought?—Channing.

FROM REV. W. S. SELMAN.

Dear Mr. Editor: We wish to speak through the Advocate to thank our many friends over the Conference for the love and sympathy they have shown us; for their letters so full of Christian love and of tender pity for us as we sorrow over the death of our little Evelyn.

From our hearts we thank each one. We want also to thank the good people of Black Hawk for their help and sympathy during her sickness and at her going.

May our Father bless and reward each one.

W. S. SELMAN AND FAMILY.
Black Hawk, Miss.

FROM WEST MONROE, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: As the Conference year draws to a close I am reminded that our West Monroe Methodist church has kept pace with the spirit of progress that pervades every corner of this part of Louisiana.

At a recent meeting of the board of stewards the preacher's salary was fixed at $3,000. This puts us second, in point of salary, in the Monroe District.

We now have a membership of about three hundred and fifty, fifty of this number having been added during the recent revival held in September. Rev. George Tucker preached for us two weeks, and nearly every night dozens and sometimes a hundred or more were unable to get seats. With his gospel messages and the sweet singing of Brother Tubberville great and lasting good resulted.

Every department of the work shows gains. The Woman's Missionary Society, Leagues, Sunday school and all seem deeply interested in the service of the Lord.

We, of course, give God the praise for what this church is achieving, but we do feel that in a great measure our beloved pastor, Brother J. L. Evans, is responsible for the advancement.

The co-operation of the membership, coupled with the help of friends of the church, encourages the pastor and enables us to grow in spite of the close proximity to city churches of our sister city of Monroe.

We are glad, however, that only a bridge separates us from the thriving city of Monroe, for the reason that we are privileged to associate with our godly presiding elder, Brother W. D. Kleinschmidt.

In this meager report I have, as it were, just skimmed over the top. I could write a whole column, or possibly a page, by going into detail as to our methods of financing, etc., but we'll let it go at this. WE ARE ON THE MAP.

Sincerely yours,
W. M. HUNT,
Church Lay Leader.

'Tis better for us to remain where we are
In the lowly valley of duty and care,
Than lonely to stray to the heights above,
Where there's nothing to do and nothing to love.

—H. Coleridge.

THIS GIRL IS A WONDER.

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You can start by investing $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started with less and made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. NOW is the psychological time to make big money, as fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write to-day, Isabelle Inez, 328 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Adv.

My impression is that a beneficial economic effect has been produced by prohibition. Bankers generally over the State are testifying to increased savings deposits. This has been quite marked here in our own city of Rochester. The general effect upon the entire community has been increased sobriety, families now seem to take their outings together, and while in many ways we are as much of a spendthrift nation as ever, the expenditures for pleasure are spread over the entire community and no social or an economic harm is resulting.—C. A. Chapman, president Minnesota Bankers' Association.

Wanted! Ambitious Men and Women

We are receiving calls daily for men and women of character, ambition and business training, men and women who can accept and efficiently fill responsible positions, positions that give every opportunity for advancement; positions of high salaries, positions in banks, law offices, insurance, real estate, brokers' offices; positions with manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, in every imaginable type of business in the South.

Many of them we capably fill, others are yet vacant. The men and women who fill them need not be wealthy, nor even moderately well-to-do. They need not be young, nor need they be college or even high school graduates. All that is necessary is that they possess character, ambition and a business training.

The character and ambition they must possess, the business training we will furnish under the direction of the South's most efficient training corps and in one of the South's most efficient and best equipped business colleges. A training with unique courses in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, accounting, banking, business administration or our secretarial course. Such a training we will furnish in a few months' time at little cost to you, and at terms to meet your own financial condition.

Thousands of Southern men and women have taken advantage of the opportunity and trained themselves for a higher calling, a better salary and a greater opportunity for advancement. Many who have accepted the positions we offer have risen to the top of the ladder, and are numbered among America's foremost and wealthiest business and professional men and women.

An institution with such standing and reputation as the Georgia-Alabama Business College does more to advance the business interests of its graduates than can be done by any amount of family or personal influence.

Consider your present status—would you not like to improve your station in life, increase your income, attain financial independence and success? An opportunity awaits you, for positions are being constantly offered us that must be filled.

Write for our inspiring book, "Your Future—What Does it Hold In Store?" It is sent free on request, explains our offer in detail and points the way to a brighter future.

COMMITTEE OF 100 FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT.

A national committee of one hundred women, representing various organizations numbering millions of women, has been formed to promote an active plan of publicity which will be educational, aiming to correct the wide and serious misunderstanding of the present situation regarding the enforcement of the prohibition law, as well as to inform women generally of the dangers in the movement to permit the sale of light wines and beer.

The prohibition amendment, which depends upon the Volstead Act for enforcement, was passed by a greater majority than any other amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and was the result of fighting for fifty years against a deadly evil. The only way to preserve the amendment is to enforce the law. Since women in many ways are being used in an insidious propaganda to undermine the power of prohibition, other women who understand the facts and are alive to the danger must be alert to work on the side of righteousness and to do it through their organizations. This committee of one hundred is non-partisan, non-political, not subsidized by any other organization, and is organized to present the truth and secure enforcement of law.

The Committee of One Hundred is composed of representatives of the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions, the Council of Women for Home Missions, the International Order of King's Daughters, the National Council of Women, the W. C. T. U., the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Y. W. C. A., the Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers' Association, the D. A. R., the American Legion Auxiliary, and other organizations eager to be allied in this great patriotic effort. The Woman's Missionary Council is represented on the Committee of One Hundred by Mrs. F. F. Stephens, Mrs. J. W. Perry (alternate), and Mrs. Luke G. Johnson.

The chairman of the committee is Mrs. Edward Franklin White, of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs. The chairman of the Executive Committee is Mrs. Hy. W. Peabody, president of the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions. The creed of the committee is "Allegiance to the Constitution. Observance of all law."

RESOLUTION BY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

Whereas, the women of Southern Methodism, aware that definite attacks are now being made in various sections of our country on both Federal and State laws, which attacks tend to encourage violent outbreaks against all law and contempt for all governmental authority, thus undermining our Christian civilization, do earnestly desire to co-operate with all righteous agencies that seek to secure more effective law enforcement; and, whereas, the women of Southern Methodism as standing for the best influences for Christian homes, as workers in a great church, and as citizens of this nation, are deeply concerned for the influence of such condition upon the life and morals of the young people of our day; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the organized women of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, hereby record ourselves in hearty sympathy with the purposes of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement and pledge ourselves to hearty co-operative efforts with the committee in bringing to pass wider and more accurate information on the danger now threatening the nation in the breaking down of our prohibition laws; and that we call upon our women everywhere to stand steadfastly for the laws enacted, without modification, and to guard against the abrogation of these laws by the election of men who will uphold them.

Unanimously passed in executive session, Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 13, 1923.

MRS. F. S. PARKER, Secretary.

SOCIAL SERVICE AND CHILD LABOR.

Child labor is not dead. The 1920 census showed that 1,060,858 children between the ages of ten and fifteen were at work in the United States. This does not include those engaged in farm work. As soon as the Supreme Court decision set aside the Federal Child Labor Law that had been in force since 1919 there was a rush for working permits for children.

Twenty-eight States have child labor laws that are lower in standard than this law declared unconstitutional. They do not prevent the evil. Child labor is wasteful of the spiritual as well as the economic resources of our nation. Children who spend the major part of their time during their growing years in toil of any monotonous kind are stunted in mind and body. It has been shown by physicians, teachers, and business men that these children lack mental and moral vigor, initiative, and resourcefulness. They swell the class that have to be carried by the stronger elements in any community in which they live. They need their school life and their play life if they are to grow into effective citizens.

What should church women do about it?

Shall we leave it to the secular press to carry on a movement to support the pending Child Labor Amendment?

Let all those who wish to lift the burdens from small shoulders speak where it will do the most good. Put this matter before your auxiliary:

1. Will you pass a suitable resolution endorsing the Federal Amendment given below?

2. Will you send signed copies of the endorsement to your Congressmen and Senators?

"Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each house concurring therein), that the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution:

"The Congress shall have power, concurrent with that of the several States, to limit or prohibit the labor of persons under the age of eighteen years."

If mothers, Christians, do not defend the rights of children, who will? Now is the time for us as Christian citizenship to [illegible]fill our responsibilities.

Council Superintendent of Social Service.

HOW HE HATES IT.

By Junius Channing Quincy.

Every time I read any of the utterances of our statesmen or publicists declaring that we cannot expect to get along without war in the future, I am reminded of that story of one of our old New Englanders—a farmer in Maine, who, on his way to town, was accosted by a friend with the inquiry: "Where you goin', Eb?"

"I'm goin' to Bangor, to get drunk. And oh, how I hate it!"

That's the war situation. A lot of these people talk as if they had to go to war, but oh, how they hate it!

If Eb didn't like to go to Bangor to get drunk, all he had to do was to stay at home.

And if we don't like to go to war, our statesmen and publicists can stay on the job making peace for humanity.

For forty years we have laughed in New England at the story of Eb who was going to Bangor to get drunk, and of how he hated it.

But you may take that illustration and apply it widely. It is no more ridiculous in Eb's case to go to Bangor and get drunk against his own desire than it is sinfully ridiculous for the world to go to war when the world hates it.—Christian Statesman.

Read the Book, by all means! but the Book will not reveal Him. He is not in the Book; he is in the heaven, which is as near you and me as the air we breathe, and out of that he must reveal himself . . . He is bringing you out of your first mistake and idolatry, aye, and through it and through all wild wanderings since, to know him himself, and speak face to face with him as a man speaks with his friend.—Charles Kingsley.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

PSALMS IN THE MODERN CHURCH.

The superior character of the Psalms as voicing poetically the universal religious experience of the race appears in the fact that they remain yet the fittest means for expressing congregational faith and aspiration. Practically every Protestant church reads them responsively. And it is only a little while since congregational singing in all churches was limited to metrical versions of the Psalms. Even now certain Presbyterian bodies will sing nothing else. This projection of the Psalms down to our time in public worship is an interesting story.

Congregational singing in the language of the people antedates the Reformation. Both Luther and Calvin exalted this element of worship. But the influence of the German reformer was very different from that of the Frenchman. The former cherished a great affection for the German folksongs and the old Latin hymns of the church, and at once began to write German hymns based without prejudice upon the Scriptures, the old Latin and Bohemian hymns, and his own religious experience. Calvin, however, had no taste either for the popular songs of the people or for the hymns of the Latin Church. He approved of no congregational songs except those based upon Scripture, and practically limited himself to metrical versions of the Psalms. Thus it came about that wherever Calvin's influence predominated in the spread of the Reformation, psalm-singing, as distinguished from hymn-singing, characterized Protestant worship. Because of this, English-speaking people became psalm-singers and remained so for almost two centuries after the Reformation.—Dr. J. A. Beebe.

BIBLES AS CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Very soon all over the land the question, "What shall I buy for Christmas?" will be demanding a solution. Among the many articles which you may be considering, may we suggest the peculiar suitability of the Bible? Holding as it does so important a place in the Christian experience, surely nothing could be more suitable as a gift to a member of the Christian fellowship.

It is true that the Bible is already very extensively used for Christmas gift purposes, but it is remarkable to find, however, how many Sunday school children are still without a Bible of their own. There are multitudes of older folks who are still trying to read Bibles with fine print they had purchased, or had given to them years ago when their eyes were younger and keener. To such, a larger print edition would certainly be a comfort and a most appreciated gift.

There are many Sunday school teachers who are trying to get along with a Bible that is altogether inadequate to their needs. How much they would enjoy an edition which has teachers' helps that would make their Sunday school work a joy instead of a drudgery!

Just as a reminder, therefore, we suggest that you include the Bible on your Christmas gift list.—Exchange.

CHRIST'S PRESENCE WITHIN.

Our immediate obligation is that of being witnesses for Jesus Christ. How many of us know him? How many of us have had a talk with him to-day? How many of us dare trust our future in his hands? How many are willing to take that pierced hand and walk by his side until he calls you up higher, going where he sends you, speaking what he gives you to speak, carrying the burden that he lays upon your shoulders, enduring the ache of heart, if need be, that should come, taking the providences of God as they come? "You are to be witnesses for me," he says. How many of us can certify in the presence of a congregation that there is such a person as Jesus Christ? When did he talk with you last? When did you realize, as the two disciples did who are spoken of in this story, that as you walk in the pathway of life you find a silent person walking by your side, and discover the Man of Sorrows, the Man of Galilee, with you.—Bishop Thoburn.

NOVEMBER.

By Frances Wright Turner.

November, month of dreams!
Dreams lying far beyond
Gray skies, and barren trees,
Stark, fallen leaves, and
Sunless, wind-blown seas;

Dreams that bring back
Sun-gold and daffodils,
The kiss of many springs,
Breezes full-fraught with June
In which the scent of roses clings.

The deep, warm blue,
That cobalt of the hills,
Casts a blue shadow on the violets,
And on the winter sea, a blue
Deeper than morning sits.

Though the first swirling snow
Covers the world, it seems
November with a magic wand
Brings summer back, and spring.
November, month of dreams!

—Zion's Herald.

DON'T WORRY.

People, as well as seeds, get too crowded. One thing chokes out another in our lives, and too often it is the best that gets choked out. We are living so fast, we have so much to do, so many interests. As some one, feeling the disadvantage of this hurry, said: "I am in danger of being jostled out of my spirituality." It is a real danger, and one that threatens us all in our rushing life. Cares, worries, distractions, seem to grow in our hearts as naturally as weeds in a garden. Some people think worries quite harmless, but Christ spoke very strongly against them as most potent for evil in our lives, in the way of crowding out the good. He warned us strongly against all anxiety. He said plainly that it can add nothing to our stature, possessions or success, but instead does us harm and grieves our heavenly Father, who all the while is caring for us. There are two things, at least, about which we should never worry. First, the things we can't help. If we can't help them, worrying is certainly most foolish and useless. Secondly, the things we can help. If we can help them, let us set about it, and not weaken our powers by worry. Pluck up the smallest roots of worry at their first appearance, or they will crowd out all beautiful things that ought to grow in our hearts.—Hallock.

THERE IS GLORY HERE.

What inexpressible joy for me to look up through the apple trees and the fluttering leaves, and to see God's love there; to listen to the thrush that has built his nest among them, and to feel God's love, who cares for the birds, in every note that swells his little throat; to look beyond to the bright blue depths of the sky, and feel they are a canopy of blessing—the roof of the house of my Father!—Elizabeth Charles.

How one exhales, and feels his childhood coming back to him, when, emerging from the hard and hateful city streets, he sees orchards and gardens in sheeted bloom—plum, cherry, pear, peach, and apple, waves and billows of blossoms rolling over the hillsides, and down through the levels! My heart runs riot. This is the kingdom of glory.—Beecher.

"If on a cold, dark night you see a man picking his way up a rickety pair of stairs where one of God's poor children lives, with a heavy basket on his arm, you need not stop him to ask if he loves the Lord; whether he is an orthodox, a Catholic, or a heathen."—Golden Rule.

WITH THE NEW CONFERENCE YEAR.

This new year "Better than the Best."

Remember, people not only give to the strong, but they give way to them.

Many of our best thoughts are written with the pen of personal sacrifice.

Consider the ministers in other denominations who have no appointment at all.

Who does not want to rise, to surpass and achieve? You do? Then pay the price.

It's up to you to show who you are. Power, genius, vitality, victory, are born in endeavor.

Let your sermons show that you study both books and life, that you think, and that you feel.

You feel you were not appreciated at Conference. What of it? There are fifty-one weeks in which to earn it next time.

Neglect not the word of God. Read it. Read it on your knees sometimes, but in any event as God's words to you, and through you to his other children.

You are discouraged. Why? Have those who have succeeded started any more propitiously? Hard luck comes to every man; you are no exception. Be the exceptional one that makes hard luck a stepping stone.—Central Christian Advocate.

ASCENSION OR DESCENSION.

What is the matter with Christian believers to-day? Too many of them are standing witnessing the ascension of our Lord, while others are looking and hoping for his descension. Those who have been looking for his exaltation have found that a cloud has received him out of their sight. He has departed into obscurity. They do not feel his presence as they once did. Their hopes in him and the power he once manifested over humanity has been decreased. They cannot see him as they once did. A cloud has intervened. Some of them wonder if he ever was among them as the very God of very God. Others are mystified by the thought that he was a creation of the human mind. Others contend that he was nothing more than the highest expression of human genius. They have sought to exalt him. They would not place him on the level with the great average of humanity. They have watched his ascension and he has disappeared from their sight by a cloud intervening.

There are those who are looking for the descension of Jesus our Lord. To them this is not the day of ascension. They are not looking upward as he recedes from them. This is not a day of departure; it is a time of arrival. They are looking for him to come down from the heavens. He is due to come again. There are signs in the heavens. There are indications on the earth. They are looking for him to come. They do not see him. He is all about them. Humanity is crying out for him. The great heart of the world is bleeding and breaking. He is calling upon men in the name of God for love, for sacrifice, for ministry, for kindness, for forgetfulness, for forgiveness, for good will. The hosts of evil that recently swarmed the earth are being driven out into the depths. The reign of love and generosity is being established. Jesus Christ is come. He is not yet to come. Men are responding to his spirit, to his call, to his gospel, to his presence. He is establishing his throne that he may reign where'er the sun does his successive journey run.—Western Christian Advocate.

UNTO ME.

"God bless and help you," falling from the lips of poverty, while the trembling voice, the glistening tears, and kindly cares attest the sincerity of one who has naught else on earth to give, falls like a benediction from heaven upon the recipient, and is at once a prayer that will reach the heart of God, and a deed that will be written in golden letters within the book of the recording angel.

Where the power to extend substantial aid exists, empty expressions of good will alone are of no account; they are "words, mere words," barren, inert, and lifeless.—R. T. Watson.

Wheat is the Fuel of Life

You can get the most food value out of wheat by eating bakings that are made from good plain flour. A dependable baking powder must be employed or you do not get the full nutritious value of the wheat—nor will your bakings be as palatable and easily digested.

The same results cannot be had if you use Self Rising Flours, or any so called ready-to-use substitute for plain flour and good baking powder. Food authorities and physicians agree that bakings that do not raise properly are bad for the health. Such foods are hard to digest and in time cause stomach trouble.

Mothers who are interested in the proper growth and health of their children (and all mothers are) should never use anything but a good brand of plain flour and a time-tested leavener such as Calumet—the economy Baking Powder.

Calumet has more than the ordinary leavening strength. It raises every baking to its height of nutritious value. It is pure and dependable—do not look for a substitute—there is none.

Use Calumet and be positive of wholesome nutritious and economical foods.

FROM REV. M. W. PORTER.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a few lines to the Advocate from the Avera charge before we leave for Conference.

We have spent four very pleasant and we hope profitable years with these good people, and to say good people only slightly expresses it. This, our fourth and last year, has been in every respect the best one.

We have had two good revivals on the work this year, which has meant much to the spiritual uplift of our churches. We did not have as many additions as at some former time, but can truthfully say that our churches have been wonderfully revived; a number of family altars were erected. We have more people attending our midweek prayer meeting and that will pray in public, lead the service, or do any kind of work called to to do by the pastor, than at any former time.

There is a great future for our church at Piave. There is being built one of the best mills at that place that you will find anywhere in this section of the country. Brother Z. Z. Linton, of Fernwood, Miss., has been made general manager of this business, which is going to mean much to our church at this place, and to the town. His Christian light has already begun to shine in the place.

These good people certainly believe in taking care of their pastor. Many times during our stay here have they filled our pantry with groceries, and our front room bed with dry goods, shoes, etc. On the eve of the 5th inst., we chanced to look out of the window and saw an army coming. Soon they had our bed looking like a dry goods store; then the ladies of the Missionary Society presented Mrs. Porter with a purse to buy her a nice suit. I guess you see now they are very thoughtful of their pastor and family.

We are going to Conference with level columns on finance. Brother Carley, would you blame me for envying my successor this good place? I only hope that they will be better to their new preacher than they have been to me. May God richly bless them, and the man that takes my place, is my prayer.

Yours sincerely,

M. W. PORTER.

Avera, Miss.

FROM RICHTON, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: This brings us to the close of the Conference year, and we thought it might be of interest to others to know what has been done on the Richton circuit this year.

We have had good revivals in all the churches, with good ingatherings; Sunday schools are all in good shape, good prayer meetings, Epworth Leagues, etc.

One new church has been built and furnished on the charge without a penny's indebtedness or any assistance from the Church Extension Board. A debt of $455 was paid on another church. Plans are in hand and money is being collected to add eight Sunday school rooms to the Richton church.

We found the work in a run-down condition two years ago. Much has been done in the way of improvements, but there remains yet a lot to be done; especially is this true as regards the parsonage. Our parsonage property is in bad repair; but an estimate has been made, and in the near future this will be repaired; this will give us one of the best parsonages in the Conference.

In some respects this is a very delightful charge, and the man who follows us will find some of the best people to be found anywhere, in the bounds of the Richton circuit.

The Centenary collections have been better this year than any previous year. The Conference claims, while not in full, will exceed any year that we can find any record of. We have at Richton the second best Woman's Missionary Society in the Conference.

I hope that we may have the pleasure of seeing you at Gulfport next week. Our budget will be something like $9,000 this year.

A. W. O'BRYANT.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interferance with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.—Adv.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1923. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

Proceedings of the Mississippi Annual Conference.

First Day.

The one hundred and tenth session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, Miss., at 9 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, Nov. 14, 1923, Bishop William N. Ainsworth, presiding. Hymn No. 222 was sung. Bishop Ainsworth led the Conference in prayer and read a Scripture lesson from the first chapter of Colossians.

The Bishop conducted the Annual Conference sacramental service, assisted by H. W. Featherstun, L. A. Darsey, W. H. Huntley, and J. L. Decell, and the Conference partook of the Lord's Supper.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, the Secretary of the last session, called the roll, and a large number of members of the Conference answered to their names.

A. F. Watkins was elected Secretary; G. S. Harmon and J. L. Decell were elected Assistant Secretaries; C. E. Downer, John D. Ellis, S. F. Harkey, and G. P. McKeown were elected statistical Secetaries. It was stated that C. F. Emery will serve as Railroad Secretary for the quadrennium.

The bar of the Conference was fixed to include the main auditorium of the church. The hours for meeting and adjournment were fixed at 8:45 o'clock a. m. to 12:15 o'clock p. m.

The following standing committees, nominated by the presiding elders, were elected by the Conference:

State of the Church—W. H. Lewis. W. W. Nelson. C. M. Crossley, F. L. Applewhite, J. W. Ramsey, M. B. Sharbrough, T. B. Cottrell, L. P. Brown, A. D. Breland, J. M. Sartin, S. C. Newman, W. A. Davenport, C. H. Wood, Rolfe Hunt.

Conference Relations—J. T. Leggett, H. L. Norton, Percy Vaughn, W. A. Hays, H. J. Moore, W. L. Blackwell, W. H. Huntley.

Sabbath Observance—O. S. Lewis, J. E. J. Ferguson, H. S. Westbrook, W. D. Barrett, D. W. Ulmer, E. J. Coker, C. Y. Higginbotham, W. H. Jones, Dr. H. Flowers, John A. McLeod, W. H. Bradley, S. J. Creekmore, C. B. Gates, John L. Ash.

District Conference Records—W. H. Lane, J. H. Jolly, C. E. Downer, C. P. Jones, J. F. McClellan, J. H. Moore, M. K. Miller, S. M. Graham, L. C. Thompson, Dr. J. T. B. Berry, Mrs. H. M. Ellis, W. C. Mabry, H. B. Rush, E. E. Richardson.

Orphans' Home—T. H. King, W. B. Alsworth, C. H. Strait, J. M. Lewis, A. A. Sims, A. J. Boyles, W. B. Jones, Mrs. C. M. Fairley, Mrs. Z. D. Clarke, N. H. Holifield, Mrs. P. D. Hardin, C. B. Hilton, W. S. F. Tatum, Mrs. Mamie Meyer.

Memoirs—H. W. Featherstun, L. J. Snelgrove, N. B. Harmon, H. G. Hawkins, J. A. Wells, L. Carley, L. A. Darsey.

Hon. Charles Haydon, mayor of the city of Gulfport, was introduced and delivered an address of welcome to the Conference on behalf of the city, and Colonel J. C. Hardy extended a cordial welcome from the local church. Bishop Ainsworth made an appropriate response.

The Districts were called for substitutions of alternate lay delegates, and upon nomination of the presiding elders the following substitutions were made: In the Brookhaven District, W. W. Godbold in place of R. E. Bennett: in the Jackson District, Mrs. J. C. Wood in place of I. O. Brown; in the Meridian District, D. W. Heidelberg in place of Dr. H. F. Tatum: in the Newton District, J. E. Oakey in place of W. H. Jones, and in the Vicksburg District, Mrs. W. H. Huntley in place of Mrs. T. B. Cottrell.

Question No. 1, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called, and the following were passed in examination of character: H. M. Ellis, W. W. Graves, M. L. Burton, P. D. Hardin, J. A. Moore, W. M. Sullivan, and J. R. Jones.

The following were passed in examination of character, and several of them spoke words of faith and hope to the brethren of the Conference, and their names were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the Superannuate Relation: R. Bradley, W. W. Simmons, L. Carley, W. W. Cammack, J. T. Nicholson, C. M. Martin, E. D. Phillips, R. F. Witt, J. W. Brown, G. R. Ellis, G. W. Huff, C. T. Noble, J. B. King, B. H, Rawls, C. H. Ellis, I. L. Peebles, H. B. Perritt, J. C. Ellis, and H. W. Featherstun. Bishop Ainsworth spoke comforting words of good cheer to the members of the "Honor Roll Class," and the members of the Conference gathered about them with affectionate greeting.

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, was presented to the Conference.

The name of W. B. Waldrop was called and his character was passed and his name was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the Supernumerary Relation.

The names of Ira B. Robertson, W. D. Dominick, and E. L. Alford were called and, they having died during the year, their names were referred to the Committee on Memoirs.

Dr. T. D. Ellis, Secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, was introduced, and addressed the Conference on the work of the Board.

On motion of Robert Selby, the Conference voted to observe the anniversary of the Board of Education on Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

M. W. Brabham, representing the General Sunday School Board; Rev. P. A. Sowell, of the Tennessee Conference; Rev. H. T. Carley, Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; Rev. H. H. Sherman, representing the General Board of Education; Rev. H. E. Carter, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Mr. C. O. Chalmers, Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, were introduced to the Conference.

The Committee on Public Worship, W. L. Linfield. and W. M. Sullivan, announced that Rev. Walter Anthony would preach this evening at 7:30 o'clock, and that twenty minutes prior to the preaching service would be devoted to the Sunday School Board.

Rev. Walter Anthony was introduced to the Conference, and gave an exposition of a portion of the sixth chapter of Isaiah.

The Doxology was sung, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction, which was pronounced by Dr. Anthony.

Second Day.

The Conference was called to order by Bishop Ainsworth at 8:45 o'clock a. m. The Bishop announced Hymn No. 317, which was sung. Bishop Ainsworth read a Scripture lesson from the second chapter of Colossians, and followed the reading with a word of personal testimony as to his present satisfying faith in a living Christ, and called for testimonies from the brethren; many responded with glowing testimony. F. S. Onderdonk led the Conference in prayer.

The minutes of the first day's session were read and approved.

The roll was called of absentees from the previous session, and several members of the Conference, not present on yesterday, answered to their names. On motion, the calling of the roll at future sessions was dispensed with.

Various communications were referred to appropriate boards and committees without reading.

Bishop Ainsworth read extracts from a personal letter from G. R. Ellis, an honored superannuate, conveying his love and prayers to the brethren of the Conference.

A. F. Watkins read the report from Millsaps College and, on motion, it was referred to the Board of Education.

The report of the Seashore Divinity School was read and referred to the Board of Education.

The report of the special committee on the location of the Mississippi Conference Training School was read and referred to the Board of Education.

Question three, "Who remain on Trial," was called, and the following, having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Second Year: Rolfe Hunt, Van Renselar Landrum, Obed Birch Matheny, Charles Warren Wesley, and Harvey Judson Oakley.

Question two, "Who else is in the Class of the First Year?" was called, and Nicholas Smuts Loftus, not having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, was passed in examination of character and continued in the Class of the First Year.

Question five, "Who are discontinued?" was called, and, on motion, at his own request, Emmett Jackson Rutledge, was, by vote of the Conference, discontinued.

Question seventeen, "What traveling preachers and what local preachers have been elected deacons?" was called, and Brunner Marion Hunt, Daniel Parker Yeager, and Enoch Alexander King, having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were elected to Deacon's Orders and advanced to the Class of the Third Year. Andrew Jackson Boyles, already in local deacon's orders, having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, was passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Third Year.

Charles Warren Wesley, duly recommended by the Jackson District Conference, and Van Renselar Landrum, duly recommended by the Seashore District Conference, were elected to Local Deacon's Orders.

Question four, "Who else is in the Class of the Second Year?" was called, and George Leonard McNeese, William Calvin Monroe Baggett, and Warren Nathaniel Ware, not having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were passed in examination of character and continued in the Class of the Second Year.

Question fifteen, "Who are the deacons of one year?" was called, and John Carl Jackson, John Lemuel Snelgrove, Martin Luther McCormick, Bertram Hamilton Williams, Thomas Commander Cooper, Otto Porter, Enoch Marvin Allen, and Marvin Kavanaugh Miller, having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year.

When the name of Stennis Wood Johnson was called, W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder of the Seashore District, moved the passage of his character and that he be granted an honorable location. Pending the discussion of the question a substitute motion was adopted that a committee be appointed, under the provisions of paragraph 276 of the Discipline, to investigate the case, and the Bishop named the following to serve on the committee: M. B. Sharbrough, J. M. Morse, O. S. Lewis, L. E. Alford, and W. A. Hays.

Question seven, "Who else is in the Class of the Third Year?" was called, and Lonnie Marvin Sharp, and Jesse F. Watson were passed in examination of character, but not having stood an examination, as they are taking full Senior Year work at Millsaps College, were continued in the Class of the Third Year.

Question nineteen, "What traveling preachers and what local preachers have been elected elders?" was called, and John Lovett Carter, Irl Hendrix Sells, and Otto Porter, having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were passed in examination of character and elected to Elders' Orders. John Lambuth Ferguson, Jr., already in Elders' Orders, having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, was passed in examination of character.

None was elected Local Deacon.

Question sixteen, "Who else is in the Class of the Fourth Year?" was called, and Thomas Marvin Ainsworth, not having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, was passed in examination of character and continued in the Class of the Fourth Year.

Question one, "Who are admitted on trial?" was called, and the following, duly recommended by their several District Conferences, and having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, and having been approved by the Committee on Admissions, were admitted on trial: Frederick Sartin, from the Brookhaven District; Earl Buford Moll, in Deacon's Orders, from the Meridian District, and James Hilman Sharp, from the Vicksburg District.

Question eight, "Who are re-admitted?" was called. The answer was: None.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Education was presented. Pending the adoption of the report,

ROADS.

Answer, soul of mine—which way
Hast thou made a road to-day?
Hast thou followed love's sure chain
Over hill and over plain?
Whichsoever choice thou'st made,
There another road is laid—
Not a transient, fading trail,
But a path that shall not fail.
Evermore some foot shall stray
O'er the road thou mad'st to-day.
Ah, let each of us beware
How his thoughts and motives bear!
Every road that we shall choose,
Other pilgrim feet will use.
Some will follow where we lead
Long as life shapes life, indeed.
Have a brother's care, and pray
God to mark thy road each day.

THE REIGN OF FORCE OR THE REIGN OF LAW.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The world must make choice between the reign of force and the reign of law. There is no other alternative.

The reign of force means tyranny and oppression by the strong over the weak.

The reign of law signifies justice and liberty and security to men of all classes, whether weak or strong. Embodied in a representative democracy, with constitutional limitations, it is the best form of government, assuring both the freedom of the individual and the authority of the State. Opposed to such a democracy is oppressive anarchy on the one hand and dictatorial monarchy on the other hand, both of which rely on irresponsible force to accomplish their ends.

During the world-war, mankind seemed to be moving towards representative democracy, and the cry was raised, "Let us make the world safe for democracy." That was a popular slogan which aroused enthusiastic support and raised high hopes.

But nothing was proposed to make democracy safe for the world, and democracy is never safe, nor long favored by men, unless it rests on the firm foundations of inviolable justice and unfailing righteousness. It cannot endure in the absence of morality and intelligence among the people who adopt it. The people themselves discard and destroy democracy when it ceases to afford protection for the right and tranquillity and safety for the social system. Indeed, it is the worst form of government, and does not deserve perpetuation, when it ceases to serve these high ends. A mob may be, and always is, more oppressive than a monarch, and its tyranny is both more cruel and more difficult of correction. When a democracy turns to the reign of a mob, it terrifies the people, and they turn to some powerful personality for protection. Dictators arise when democracies become impotent or immoral, and the reign of law is supplanted by the reign of force. Such was the outcome of "the Reign of Terror" in France.

Notwithstanding the enthusiastic response to the slogan, "make the world safe for democracy," which arose in all lands some five years ago, the people of Europe seem now to be drifting towards the reign of dictators, who rule both kings and kingdoms by the rule of force. Mussolini, not the Italian king, governs Italy. Turkey and the Sultan are in the hands of a military dictator. So are Spain and the Spanish king. Distracted Germany has been placed under a dictator, and the political units which since the days of Bismarck have composed the German Empire are falling apart and appealing to force. Russia suffers under the dictatorial domination of the dual tyranny of Lenine and Trotzky. On all sides on the continent of Europe the people appear to be turning to the reign of force. "The man on horseback" is everywhere in sight. In him the reign of force always and inevitably reaches its incarnation and culmination.

And if Continental Europe reverts to the reign of force, the regnant forces will be in such form as was never known before in all the history of mankind. To "the man on horseback" will be committed instruments of coercion and subjugation never before wielded by men of his class. He and his militaristic followers will be armed with the most powerful guns and the most destructive explosives. They will use tanks and machine guns on land and aeroplanes in the air, raining on helpless opponents below death-dealing missiles, annihilating chemicals, and desolating gases. Thus were deterred and dispersed revolutionists of Greece recently. With such terrifying possibilities the Turk virtually defied the representatives of the Allied Powers at Lausanne, and Mussolini enforced his unreasonable demands on Greece, notwithstanding the League of Nations, to which Italy was solemnly pledged.

It is too obvious for doubt or discussion that the reign of force in Europe will not be the rule of righteousness. In the end it must culminate in the subjection of the people to the most unscrupulous militarism which will treat the laws of both God and man with contempt and set at nought the most sacred treaties as "mere scraps of paper." The Mussolinis will be no better than the Kaiser Williams. Nothing but a heaven-born morality, enthroned in the hearts of men, can arrest the enslaving militarism which now threatens the nations. The law of love and the love of law must save them from social disorder and economic destruction.

The American Bankers' Association, at its meeting in Atlantic City, made a strong deliverance which points in the right direction, and the note which it sounded should be heard and heeded round the world. If an assembly of Christian ministers had spoken as has this association of financiers, many people would have given little attention to the wise utterance, but surely the most godless men will pause to consider what these strong leaders of the commercial world have to say. The closing paragraphs of this declaration of the bankers are as follows:

"In the midst of the many puzzling economic problems which the world faces to-day, largely resulting from the political differences and ambitions of rival nations, the conclusion is inevitably forced on the impartial observer that the primary need of the world is moral and spiritual regeneration as the essential basis for economic recovery.

"Until the nations of the world are willing to liquidate their hates, they can make slight progress toward liquidating their debts.

"Until the dominating forces of greed and selfishness are mitigated by a higher regard for the rights of others, until a larger degree of international good-will supplants racial animosities, until a higher regard for moral obligations and human welfare characterizes the practices of men, the many economic problems incident to the operation of these evil forces will await solution.

"While the purposes which dominate the councils of the nations are political, rather than economic, are selfish rather than fraternal, are following the forces of expediency and opportunism rather than the ends of justice and righteousness, there can be little hope for improvement in the existing order.

"Until ideals of human welfare, of a just distribution of earth's bounties and a righteous observance of the common good are more firmly implanted in the minds of men, we must expect the constant conflict of interest and its expression in political, social and economic disorder.

"To the ends of a better understanding, not only of the purposes of business, but of life, that a better order may be established among men, the bankers of America dedicate themselves in united effort to attain and maintain those ideals of civilization upon which alone human society can soundly rest."

Commenting upon this lofty utterance of the American Bankers' Association, the Manufacturers Record of Baltimore utters these true and timely words:

"The world does indeed need moral and spiritual regeneration. Without it there will be no permanent peace in the world. The hatreds of Europe running through thousands of years, inbred in races, cannot be wiped out in one generation or in many generations, unless there be a complete spiritual regeneration of Europe and of the world.

"Nations are as the individuals in the nation—good or evil. The problems which the bankers had expressly in mind regarding the conditions in Europe apply with equal force to this country.

"America needs a spiritual awakening. America needs a revival nation-wide, and the world needs it world-wide, a revival of a genuine, unadulterated character, making religion, the religion of Christ.

"There can be no safety for business, for peace, for world harmony, except it be founded on a spiritual regeneration of mankind."

The whole world needs a revival of religion in order to maintain the reign of law and avert the reign of force. Law in its last analysis is the transcript of the ehtical nature of God, and, therefore, draws its life and derives its authority from faith in God. To God the nations must return, or they must perish.

A revival of religion in the United States of America would speedily spread throughout the world.

In a time of war our country helped to save the nations of the earth by the force of its arms. Now in a time of peace, scarcely less dangerous than the perilous period of the war, let it come to the rescue of mankind by the force of its faith. In this way, and in this way alone, can it make the world safe for democracy and democracy safe for the world; for by a revival of religion the reign of law can be established and the reign of brutal force be averted.

If the American people will turn to God with hearty repentance and true faith, they will save both themselves and others.

THE REAL TEST.

By Dr. H. N. Snyder.

More than two years ago Southern Methodism undertook to save and strengthen her institutions of learning by adequately endowing and supporting them. In a remarkable campaign over $18,000,000 was pledged. Though the full amount of what was asked for and needed was not secured, we feel that we did reasonably well, considering the unfavorable financial conditions, in securing so large a sum. It seems to us that this amount, short as it was of what the Annual Conferences had agreed to raise, was a fine expression of the loyalty of the church to General Conference instructions and also a sign of its understanding of the great significance of the program it has been set to carry out. It was felt that the preachers and people had met their duty and had done a supremely important piece of work.

But this is only a "feeling." The reality of how the duty was met is measured by another performance, that of turning the subscriptions into cash. This is the performance that is the real test of what we did. It is one thing to put a name to a pledge and quite another to make it good in terms of money. It is one sort of achievement to pile up millions of dollars in subscriptions and quite a different achievement to transform promises to pay into dollars paid. The really vital matter for Southern Methodists to think about, therefore, is the relation between promise and fulfillment, whether pledges to Christian Education have become money to serve the cause of Christian Education by the better endowment and equipment of our institutions.

Let us see how we Methodists have met this kind of test, which is after all the real test. Oct. 25, 1923, the subscriptions due amounted to approximately $6,000,000, and the amount paid nearly $4,000,000, leaving a balance due and unpaid of more than $2,000,000. Nov. 1, 1923, the third payment became due, amounting to about $4,000,000, making the immediate task before us the collection of approximately $6,000,000 already due and unpaid.

These unpaid subscriptions suggest that the time has come for us to face up squarely to the financial side of our obligations to the Christian Education Movement, to determine what we are going to do about it and how we are going to do it. In the first place, we should remind ourselves that of the 2,500,000 Methodists in the South, hardly more than 375,000, or 15% of them, subscribed at all to the Movement. This means that each of the subscribers averaged a little less than $50—$10 a year for five years.

The significant thing about the figures is that both the number subscribing and the average amount of the subscriptions are relatively small. An average of $10 a year for five years on about one-seventh of the membership of the church could hardly be called a heavy financial burden, even under "boll-weevil" conditions. The fact is, we have gotten so used to the habit of thinking how "badly we have been hit" that we are in danger of both exaggerating the size of our financial obligations and resenting even a suggestion of the payment of them, our church obligations as well as our commercial obligations. In this attitude such obligations are apt to bulk larger than they really are, and there is a sort of self-pity that makes it seem cruel for anybody to expect us to meet them.

Such an attitude, if indulged in long, can easily lead to a sort of repudiation, and nothing could be more of a calamity, both to the individual subscriber and to the church at large. Here are pledges made in good faith, not scraps of paper, but moral obligations to a great cause to be redeemed in cash, promises to pay a certain amount for advancing a fundamental interest of the kingdom of God, expressions of loyalty to the church and its institutions; to permit them to lapse for any reason would be discreditable to the church and infect with the poison of failure any future enterprise in its very beginning.

All this is obvious enough, but what are we going to do about it? The first thing to do is not to let much time pass before renewing in the minds of our people the vital reality of these Christian Education obligations, not only for the purpose of supplying the needs of our institutions, but also for the sake of the moral effect upon our people themselves, the depressing effect of financial obligations allowed to grow cold and die on the conscience. The colleges could possibly struggle along without the money being paid that has been subscribed. They have done this so often before that to do it now would be to learn no new habit. But the church itself would probably suffer such a loss of self-respect and of conscious power as would make its leadership hesitate before attempting any new movement of progress.

But nobody wants, or really expects, Southern Methodism to put itself in any such position or be hampered by memories of failure upon such a large scale. Nevertheless, if this is not to happen, the time has about come to put the whole machinery of the church to work, with faith and courage, upon the vital matter of redeeming the Christian Education pledges. It will not be done until we do. Our business now is not so much preaching Christian education as it is in collecting and paying what is due Christian education. This is the Real Test.

FROM CHITAMBO'S VILLAGE TO THE SEA—THE STRANGE STORY OF DAVID LIVINGSTONE'S FUNERAL CORTEGE.

By R. B. Eleazer.

"Brought by faithful hands over land and sea, here rests
David Livingstone,
Missionary, Traveler, Philanthropist."

This inscription on a black marble slab in Westminster Abbey suggests but faintly the story of heroic devotion that lies back of it. Little has the world heard of that strange funeral procession of black men which for nine months braved the terrors of the African jungle as they bore the body of Livingstone to the sea, to be sent back to his home by ship. It is a story so significant and so surprising in its revelation of loyalty, of courage, and determination, of thoughtfulness and delicacy of feeling on the part of the great explorer's untutored followers, that it deserves to be recorded among the world's golden deeds.

When in May, 1873, after years of missionary exploration in Central and South Africa, David Livingstone's worn body was able to go no further, his native attendants hurriedly built for him a hut in the village of Chief Chitambo, near the shores of Lake Bangweolo, in the heart of Central Africa. There at dawn a few days later they found him kneeling in death.

One might have expected that these simple children of nature would speedily inter the body and hurry away to their distant homes. Their great friend and leader was dead, his work was ended, his home was ten thousand miles away, all hope for them of further employment and gain was gone—why should they remain longer than was necessary to give his body decent burial? At most they might have been expected to mark his last resting place and await opportunity to send word to the outside world, that his friends might come for the body if they chose. What, as a matter of fact, did these black "boys" do, these jungle people whose only contact with civilization had been their brief acquaintance with Livingstone?

They held a council. They decided that every effort should be made to carry their master's body to the coast, that it might be sent back to England. The perils of the undertaking they fully realized. It was 1,300 miles to the sea. There was no means of transport save their own broad backs and willing limbs. Between them and the distant goal were trackless jungles, ferocious wild beasts, fever-laden swamps, wide rivers and hostile tribes, rendered more menacing by the horror of the dead that everywhere prevailed. Yet the little band never questioned or hesitated. Their beloved leader had kinsmen and friends across the seas; they would want his body. He was a great man; he belonged to the world. His remains should sleep among the honored dead of his race. Thus they reasoned and thus they proceeded to act.

They collected all his personal belongings, his instruments and his notes, and carefully packed them for transit. They removed the heart and other viscera and buried them, erecting a marker over the spot. They cautioned the chief to keep the grass cut about the marker, that it might not be destroyed by fire. For fourteen days the body was dried in the sun. Then it was carefully wrapped in calico and inclosed in a large, cylindrical piece of bark. Over the whole a sheet of sailcloth was sewed and the package was lashed to a pole.

When all was in readiness, two men shouldered the burden and the little band set out on the long, perilous journey. Already weakened by exposure, it was not long till they were stricken with jungle fever and compelled to lay down their load. When the disease abated and strength returned, they went on again. They crossed the Luapula River where it was four miles wide. They fought their way through a hostile village. Their progress was disputed by a tribe that refused to permit the passage of a dead body, but by a ruse they were able to proceed.

Some hundreds of miles from the coast they met a party of Englishmen who had come out in search of Livingstone. "Give us his things," said the Englishmen, "but bury the body here, and go home." Accustomed as they were to obey the white man without question, and exhausted by their long, hard journey, one might have expected that they would eagerly embrace the offered opportunity. But not so. Without objection they turned over the instruments and notes, but with regard to the body they were inflexible. They would not bury it. They would not surrender it to others. It must go on to the sea. And go on it did.

At last in February, 1874, the little cortege reached the coast, and the sacred burden, which for nine months they had borne on their shoulders and guarded with their lives, was put on board a ship bound for England. Then back into the jungle the brave band went, without other reward than the memory of their great and good friend, and the knowledge that they had been faithful to the last.

Thinking upon that story I am constrained to hold in deeper respect and confidence a race which, even in its savage and untutored state, was capable of sentiments so fine and of a deed so heroic.

IN HIS DRAWING-ROOM.

There was a young man in the Middle West who had been more or less interested about his soul's salvation. One afternoon, in his office, he said: "I will accept Jesus Christ as my Lord and Savior."

He went home and told his wife, who was a nominal professor of religion, that he had made up his mind to serve Christ, and he added: "After supper to-night I am going to take the company into the drawing-room and erect the family altar."

"Well," said his wife, "you know some of the gentlemen who are coming to tea are skeptics, and they are older than you are, and don't you think you had better wait until after they have gone, or else go out into the kitchen and have your first prayer with the servants?"

The young man thought for a few moments, and then he said: "I have asked Jesus Christ into my house for the first time, and I shall take him into the best room, and not into the kitchen."

So he called his friends into the drawing-room. There was a little sneering, but he read and prayed. That man afterwards became Chief Justice of the United States Court.

WHY NOT AN INFIDEL?

"I once met a thoughtful scholar," said Bishop Whittle, "who told me that he had read every book he could which assailed the religion of Jesus Christ, and he said he should have become an infidel but for three things:

"1. I am a man. I am going somewhere. To-night I am a day nearer the grave than I was last night. I have read all such books can tell me. They shed not one solitary ray of light or hope upon the darkness. They shall not take away the guide and leave me stone blind.

"2. I had a mother. I saw her go down into the dark valley where I am going, and she leaned on an unseen arm as calmly as a child goes to sleep on its mother's breast. I knew that was not a dream.

"3. I have three motherless daughters. They have no protection but myself. I would rather kill them than leave them in this sinful world, if you blot from it all the teachings of the gospel."—Anonymous.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

I. W. Cooper addressed the Conference. The report was adopted by a rising vote.

A resolution endorsing a proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution to prohibit the appropriation of money by any branch of the National or State Government to any sectarian institution, was read and adopted.

A resolution concerning a bond issue by the trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground was read and referred to the Board of Education.

Question ten, "Who are received from other churches as traveling preachers?" was called. The following, having signified their willingness to assume the vows of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, without the re-imposition of hands, were received: Carl Henry Williams, from the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America; Eugene William Hope and Abner Charleston Johnson, from the Baptist Church, and Walter Preston George, from the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

On motion of J. L. Decell, the Secretary was requested to send telegrams of greetings and brotherly love of the Mississippi Annual Conference to the State Baptist Association, now in session at Corinth, and to the Presbyterian Synod of Mississippi, in session at Jackson.

On motion, the Secretary was requested to send a message of love and sympathy from the Conference to Rev. R. Bradley, an honored superannuate member of the Conference.

Upon the request of Bishop Ainsworth for the services of two "Chalk Secretaries," W. B. Jones and J. G. Galloway were nominated and elected to serve in that capacity.

Dr. H. H. Sherman, one of the Secretaries of the General Board of Education, addressed the Conference.

Bishop Ainsworth addressed the Conference concerning the evangelistic work for the coming year, and urged both evangelists and pastors to give particular attention to a dynamic evangelistic effort, and to offer their services gratuitously for some of the needy fields.

Bishop Ainsworth announced that the class for full connection into the Annual Conference would be received at 11 o'clock Friday morning, at which time he would address the class and the Conference.

Introduced—Prof. D. M. Key, Acting President of Millsaps College; F. S. Onderdonk, Superintendent of the Mexican Missionary Work, with headquarters at San Antonio, Tex.; J. A. Smith, of the Pacific Conference; Rev. W. W. Drake, of the Louisiana Conference; Prof. R. E. Bobbitt, Vice President of Whitworth College; Mr. H. H. Ahrens, representative of the Times-Picayune; Mrs. Alma Riley, Field Agent of the Methodist Orphanage, and Professor Hogg, President of Port Gibson Female College, were presented to the Conference.

Adjournment—The Doxology was sung and the Conference adjourned with the benediction, which was pronounced by Rev, W. W. Drake.

Third Day.

The Conference met at 8:45 o'clock a. m., Bishop Ainsworth presiding.

Bishop Ainsworth addressed some words of encouragement to the Conference based upon the statement,"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the age," and called for testimonies. A number of the brethren responded. Hymn No. 183 was sung, and Dr. R. L. Russell led the Conference in prayer. Bishop Ainsworth read the Scripture lesson from the third chapter of the Epistle to the Colossians.

The minutes of the second day's session were read, corrected and approved.

A letter from H. B. Perritt was read conveying his love and greetings to the Conference.

A resolution commending the movement to build a chapel at the Mississippi School and Colony for the Feeble-minded, located at Ellisville, Miss., was read and adopted.

The report of the editors of the Conference Journal was read and adopted.

Question one, "Who are admitted on trial?" was called, and Fleet Joseph Jones, duly recommended by the Brookhaven District Conference, and having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, and having been approved by the Committee on Admissions, was admitted on trial.

The report of the Port Gibson Female College was referred, without reading, to the Board of Education.

Question twenty-one, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called. The reports of the preachers of the Seashore District were presented on the blackboard, information given by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one and they were passed in examination of character, as follows: J. G. Galloway, M. B. Sharbrough, W. L. Blackwell, E. J. Coker, L. L. Roberts, J. B. Stringer, W. L. Linfield, H. C. Castles, J. M. Corley, J. E. Gray, J. H. Grice, L. F. Alford, L. A. Darsey, J. H. Moore, J. E. Williams, T. H. King, W. W. Moore, J. F. Campbell, H. W. Van Hook, G. S. Harmon, J. M. Smith.

The name of W. J. Maddox was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation.

Question twenty-one was resumed. The reports of the preachers of the Hattiesburg District were presented on the blackboard, information was given by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one and they were passed in examination of character, as follows: M. W. Porter, J. W. Thompson., J. B. Cain, A. J. Davis, C. M. Crossley, J. T. Leggett, W. G. Forsyth, J. H. Jolly, B. E. Meigs, J. L. Greenway, H. S. Westbrook, C. C. Griffin, S. C. Moody, H. R. McKee, W. M. Williams, A. W. O'Bryant, H. J. Maddox, P. H. Howse, H. Mellard, A. J. Leggett, W. J. Walters, D. E. Kelly.

Question eleven, "Who are located this year?" was called. The special committee in the case of S. W. Johnson reported and advised that he be located; the report was adopted, and S. W. Johnson was granted an honorable location. On motion, the presiding elders were granted permission to employ S. W. Johnson as a supply. On motion, an offering was taken for Brother Johnson, which amounted to $58. 50.

The resolutin of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate concerning the removal of the paper to Jackson, Miss., was presented by E. K. Means. After considerable discussion, a motion was adopted referring the matter to a committee of five, with instructions to consider the matter and report back to the Conference its recommendation.

A motion was adopted instructing the Secretary to send a telegram of greeting to the A. M. E. Conference in session at Jackson.

Dr. R. L. Russell, one of the Secretaries of the Home Department of the Board of Missions, was introduced and addressed the Conference.

The Bishop named the following to serve on the special committee on the matter of changing the name and location of the New Orleans Christian-Advocate: Robert Selby, J. S. Purcell, J. E. Gray, L. P. Brown. D. W. Heidelberg.

Question six, "Who are admitted into full connection?" was called, and Brunner Marion Hunt, Daniel Parker Yeager, Enoch Alexander King, and Andrew Jackson Boyles were called to the bar of the Conference, charged by the Bishop, and, having answered the Disciplinary questions, and having been recommended by the Committee on Admissions, were, by vote of the Conference, admitted into full connection.

On motion, the time of the Conference was extended to complete unfinished business.

Report No. 2 of the Board of Education was read, discussed and, on motion; laid on the table subject to call.

Announcements were made by the several boards and committees.

The Commtitee on Public Worship announced that Rev. Walter Anthony would preach at the evening hour, and Rev. F. S. Onderdonk would speak for twenty minutes prior to the sermon, services to begin at 7 o'clock.

Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, President of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Conference; Miss Fail, one of the deaconesses of the church; Dr. C. C. Jarrell, Secretary of the General Hospital Board; Mr. J. M. Way, of the General Board of Lay Activities, and Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of the North Mississippi Conference and correspondent of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, were introduced to the Conference.

The Conference adjourned with the benediction, which was pronounced by Dr. C. C. Jarrell.

Fourth Day—Morning Session.

The Conference met at 8:45 o'clock a. m., Bishop Ainsworth, presiding. Hymn No. 45 was sung, Bishop Ainsworth read a Scripture lesson from Ezk. 33:7-20, and Dr. Franklin N. Parker led in prayer.

The minutes of the third day's session were read and approved.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Missions was read and adopted.

Question twenty-one, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called. The reports of the preachers of the Jackson District were presented on the blackboard, interpreted by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character as follows: H. M. Johnson, W. J. Dawson, H. A. Gatlin, B. W. Lewis, B. F. Jones, W. D. Barrett, J. H. Foreman, A. A. Sims, H. F. Tolle, E. K. Means, F. L. Applewhite, Percy Vaughn, J. O. Ware, L. M. Sharp, B. H. Williams, C. E. Downer, A. S. Byrd, W. J. Ferguson, A. F. Watkins, C. A. Bowen, M. M. Black, J. M. Morse, J. C. Chambers, B. F. Lewis, J. L. Sutton, J. L. Neill, J. V. Bennett, Rolfe Hunt.

A comunication from Rev. J. L. Neill, Superintendent of Missions in Czecho-Slovakia, was read to the Conference.

The reports of the Newton District were presented on the blackboard, interpreted by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character as follows: E. H. Cooley, T. B. Winstead, S. E. Flurry, C. H. Strait, H. J. Moore, W. W. Murray, J. F. McClellan, S. N. Young, O. S. Lewis, T. A. Ferguson, J. W. Ramsey, M. R. Jones, T. C. Cooper, N. B. Harmon, L. E. Alford, R. H. Clegg, G. G. Yeager, P. H. Grice, W. F. Baggett, C. H. Herring.

Report No. 1 of the Sunday School Board was read and adopted.

Report No. 2, of the Board of Education, was called from the table. The report was discussed and not adopted.

Bishop Ainsworth announced that the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment would be the order of the day at this time, and introduced Dr. Luther E. Todd, Seceretary of the General Board of Finance, who addressed the Conference on the "Working Guide." Bishop Ainsworth addressed the Conference on the cause for Superannuate Endowment.

The report of the special committee to consider the advisability of changing the name and location of the New Orleans Christian Advocate was presented. The report recommended nonconcurrence in the proposition to make the changes, and the report was adopted.

A motion was adopted that when the Conference adjourn, it adjourn to meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

A motion was adopted that the Conference hold a memorial session at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

On motion, the Secretary was instructed to send a telegram of greeting from the Conference to the C. M. E. Conference now in session at Crystal Springs.

Question forty-two, "Where shall the next session of the Conference be held?" was called. Canton was nominated and unanimously selected.

Question twenty-one was resumed. The reports of the preachers of the Meridian District were presented on the blackboard, interpreted by the presiding elder, their names called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character, as follows: W. E. Dickens, M. L. White, M. A. Massey, W. H. Lane, J. L. Decell, W. H. Lewis, J. L. Sells, J. M. Lewis, W. A. Hays, D. E. Vickers, R. E. Rutledge, J. D. Ellis, D. W. Ulmer, W. A. Terry, O. B. Matheny, H. A. Wood, R. A. Sibley.

When the name of M. A. Massey was called his presiding elder stated that a committee of investigation had been appointed during the year who found a trial necessary; that the Trial Committee was appointed by the Bishop, and he was found guilty and suspended until this session of the Annual Conference; that the conditions of the sentence had been fulfilled. The papers in the case were deposited with the Secretary. His chraracter was passed.

Question twenty-one was resumed. The reports of the preachers of the Vicksburg District were presented on the blackboard, interpreted by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character, as follows: C. A. Schultz, V. G. Clifford, C. F. Emery, J. L. Smith, C. Y. Higginbotham, C. C. Evans, E. D. Simpson, W. H. Huntley, T. J. O'Neill, G. P. McKeown, W. B. Alsworth, Robert Selby, T. B. Cottrell, A. J. Beasley, H. G. Hawkins.

Dr. Franklin N. Parker, Dean of the Candler School of Theology, Emory University; Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, Sec'y of the General Epworth League Board; Prof. L. W. Summers, of the North Mississippi Conference and professor in Millsaps College; Dr. C. S. Newman, pastor of the Gulfport Presbyterian Church; Dr. W. L. Duren, of the Louisiana Conference, and Adj. W. H. Bending, of the Salvation Army, were introduced to the Conference.

The Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate spoke to the Conference.

The Doxology was sung, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction, pronounced by Rev. C. S. Newman.

Fourth Day—Afternoon Session.

The Conference met at 3 o'clock p. m., Bishop Ainsworth presiding. A hymn was sung and, at the request of Bishop Ainsworth, W. J. Ferguson led the Conference in prayer. The minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, asked that the name of C. F. Emery, at his own request, be referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation.

Question twenty-one, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called. The reports of the preachers of the Brookhaven District were made on the blackboard, interpreted by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character, as follows: W. W. Nelson, S. B. Watkins, J. T. Weems, A. M. Broadfoot, W. B. Jones, H. L. Norton, J. W. Price, J. T. Abney, W. H. Saunders, C. P. Jones, G. H. Thompson, A. S. Oliver, J. A. Wells, S. F. Harkey, R. A. Allums, H. E. Raley, J. L. Carter,

J. E. J. Ferguson, F. B. Ormond, J. S. Purcell, I. W. Cooper, W. N. Thomas, W. T. Griffin.

Question forty-one, "Who is elected Conference Lay Leader, and what is the report of the Board of Lay Activities?" was called. J. M. Sullivan was elected Conference Lay Leader, and the report of the Board of Lay Activities was read and adopted.

A telegram was received bearing the greetings of the C. M. E. Conference, replying to one from this Conference.

Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, president of the Woman's Missionary Society, was presented and addressed the Conference on the work of the Society.

Bishop Ainsworth requested H. G. Hawkins to take the chair, and called the presiding elders to meet him in an ante-room.

The reports of the various boards and committees were read and adopted.

The Bishop resumed the chair.

A motion was adopted that the Conference adjourn to meet at 7 o'clock this evening. The benediction was pronounced by W. B. Jones.

Fourth Day—Evening Session.

An evening session was held on the fourth day, Saturday, but was devoted almost exclusively to hearing and adopting the reports of the various boards and committees, and the passage of sundry resolutions.

When the Epworth League Board reported, Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Board, addressed the Conference.

Resolutions were adopted urging the repeal of the State mortmain laws; one suggesting group insurance for the Conference; another offering adherence to the Standards of Doctrine and condemning destructive criticism, publication of which was voted upon, and the Advocate requested to publish. A resolution was adopted authorizing the Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Grounds to issue bonds to the amount of $50,000 to improve the plant.

The report of the Statistical Secretary showed an increase in payments for ministerial support and for all the various claims.

Sunday Afternoon—Memorial Session.

At the memorial session Sunday afternoon, it was reported that three preachers have died during the year—Ira B. Robertson, W. D. Dominick, and E. L. Alford. Suitable memoirs were read and tender tributes were paid the memory of the deceased brethren.

At the close of the 11 o'clock service on Sunday morning, at which the Bishop preached, the following were ordained deacons by Bishop Ainsworth: B. M. Hunt, D. P. Yeager, E. A. King, C. W. Wesley, Van R. Landrum.

At the close of the sermon on Sunday evening, preached by Dr. F. N. Parker, the following were ordained elders by Bishop Ainsworth: John Lovett Carter, Irl Hendrix Sells, Otto Porter, Robert B. McGehee (elected last year), Mac Land Wood (of the North Mississippi Conference).

The following were recognized as in orders: Walter P. George, Carl H. Williams, Eugene W. Hope, Abner Johnson.

The minutes were read and approved, the Bishop made appropriate remarks, the appointments were read, the benediction was pronounced, and the Conference stood adjourned.

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

The Conference was greatly pleased to see Dr. A. F. Watkins restored to perfect health and active in the work of the church. He was, of course, elected Secretary, in which position he is without a superior in the connection.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of Okolona, Miss., a member of the North Mississippi Conference, reported the proceedings of the Conference for the Memphis Commecial-Appeal. Brother Cunningham is an expert newspaper man as well as a highly efficient and successful pastor. He has many friends in the Mississippi Conference.

Mr. H. H. Ahrens, widely known throughout the church because of his fine work in connection with the Centenary and as a member of the Publishing House staff, now religious editor of the Times-Picayune, reported the proceedings of the Conference for his paper. The Mississippi brethren feel that he is almost one of them.

Mrs. Ainsworth was with the Bishop in attendance upon the Conference. She made many friends, and the Conference felt honored to have her as a distinguished visitor.

Every provision was made for the comfort of the members of the Conference. The pastor, Rev. W. L. Linfield, gave constant attention to the needs of the Conference, and the entertainment committee, consisting of W. H. Wainwright, Mrs. T. F. Evans, Mrs. W. H. Wainwright, and S. A. Tomlinson, was always "on the job."

The connectional interests of the church were ably represented by the following: M. W. Brabham, Sunday School Board; Dr. H. H. Sherman, Board of Education; Dr. T. D. Ellis, Board of

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

ON THE EVE OF BEGINNING ANOTHER LONG JOURNEY.

Returning from a ten days' trip, during which time the Western North Carolina and Virginia Conferences were visited, I have spent three very busy days in the St. Louis office. By hard work it has been possible to arrange things at the home base so that I can leave for another journey of two weeks. This time I shall attend the West Texas, the Upper South Carolina, and the North Alabama Conferences before my return. My readers shall have the privilege of reading on this page concerning the fortunes of the "forgotten man" at these Conferences as soon as the facts are available.

North Texas Conference.—It was not possible for me personally to attend the North Texas Conference, because one cannot be in two places at the same time when they are 1,500 miles apart. However, the special effort for superannuate endowment was ably represented at Gainesville, Tex., by Bishop W. F. McMurry, President of the Board, Dr. C. C. Selecman, and Bishop John M. Moore, President of the Conference. Bishop McMurry was very enthusiastic in his report concerning the response of the brethren in Texas to the movement. He told me that he had not found any Conference more interested in the cause or more determined to give themselves wholeheartedly to it. He said that the attitude of Bishop Moore in dealing with this matter on the day when the plan was presented was such that guaranteed the success of the movement in this Conference. He said that Bishop Moore had at the appointed time turned aside from everything else and with emphatic words directed the attention of the Conference to this one thing.

I also have a letter from Dr. Selecman giving his observations, in which he is just as enthusiastic in his report of what happened at Gainesville in behalf of superannuate endowment as Bishop McMurry. He writes that a number of preachers of that great Conference expressed themselves as convinced beyond doubt of the success of this movement. Dr. Selecman has done considerable work for the Board of Finance during the last two or three years, and he invariably expresses himself after every service rendered as believing that the preachers and lay members whom he addressed are wholly committed to this sacred work.

The North Texas Conference is the first one of the Lone Star State to consider the special effort for superannuate endowment. If the reports coming from it can be taken as an index of the Texas atmosphere on this subject, it can be safely stated that this very important section of the church will not lag in the work before us.

European Missions.—I have just received a letter from Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, who has charge of our Missions in Europe. He writes that the Zzecho-Slovak Mission recently passed the following resolutions:

"Whereas, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in America has recognized the necessity of raising a sum sufficient to give adequate support to our ministers who are forced because of ill health, old age, or other disabilities to retire from the active ministry; therefore, be it

"Resolved: 1. That we pledge ourselves in hearty accord with this effort.

"2. That an offering from this fund will be taken in all of our congregations every year for the next five years."

Bishop Beauchamp states further that the same plan will be followed in all three of the Missions under his superintendency. He says that we must not expect a large sum from these fields, but that it is most desirable to have co-operation in the work to secure adequate superannuate endowment wherever our church operates.

Surely it should be pleasing to our people in the United States to know that the effect in behalf of the "forgotten man" is not only being projected throughout the church at home, but that we are also reaching out our hands across the seas and into every point of the world where the flag of Southern Methodism waves, looking to give everybody everywhere a real opportunity to help the movement for the relief of God's worn-out preachers and the widows of preachers. I do not know of anything that has thrilled me quite so much as the letter from Bishop Beauchamp on this subject. I believe this good news will affect others as it has me.

It may be added that Bishop Beauchamp, being an expert in movements of the character now projected, is an authority worth considering. Out of his rich experience as the Director General of the Centenary he now tells us that these Missions of our church, brought into being as a result of the Centenary, shall be encouraged to take part in a movement which proposes to make provision for the worn-out preachers. Here is something good enough for our pastors to take as a text in preaching on the power of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

It Is Raining Pinks Now.—Under the plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment the first quarterly conference of the year 1923-24 is requested to approve the quota and apportion it to the churches of the charge, decide upon the plan to be used by the charge in raising its quota, appoint the charge committee which will direct the movement locally, and to report what is done concerning all these matters as quickly as possible to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.. For making this report a pink leaf having blanks to be filled in is provided in the Workers' Guide, which is placed in the hands of the first quarterly conference.

To date fifteen of the Annual Conferences have been held. Therefore it is not surprising that the pink reports are daily being received by the office. While the number of these reports coming in is very gratifying, yet it is noticeable that some of the first quarterly conferences which have now been held have not made the report. I trust that any presiding elder or pastor who has been derelict in his duty with reference to this matter may be moved to prompt action by these words. It should be remembered that in the plan being followed for superannuate endowment the Board of Finance is utterly dependent upon the regular forces of the church. Our slogan is: Every man in his place and every man doing his bit. Please remember, my dear brethren, if you do not promptly send in the report blank, which is pink, your failure will be very depressing to the Secretary of the Board of Finance, who is blue on account of your neglect. Furthermore, your failure at this point will jeopardize the success of the movement for the benefit of the superannuates. Bear in mind that these grand old men in their physical weakness are leaning heavily on you. To fail them in this emergency is like snatching a crutch from the armpit of a cripple.

Did you ever go up, up, up many steps at night until you came to the highest floor of the house? And did you lie down there to sleep? Do you remember the pattering of rain upon the roof? Can you imagine anything more delightfully pleasing to one utterly weary from the day's busy toil? Well, my brethren, this is exactly the feeling I have when I return from long journeys over the church, tired from the heavy going, and enter the office and behold the pink reports falling from their places in envelopes that have been sent from every section of our great church. Keep the pinks a-comin', boys; I like to see them; I like to read them; I like to feel them; I like to know they are in.

Sleep on This Every Night.—Yes, and work with it in mind every day. What do I mean? Just this: If the special effort for superannuate endowment succeeds, it will be because the bishops, presiding elders, pastors, and lay members shall pay the price in service for its success. If this movement fails, those of us to whom has been committed its leadership, as stated in the foregoing, will have no one to blame for its failure but ourselves.

At the morning family worship the day before he died Robert Louis Stevenson offered the following prayer: "The day returns and brings with it the petty round of irritating concerns. Help us to play the man. Help us to perform our duties with laughter and kind faces. Let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely on our business each day, and bring us to our resting place weary but undishonored, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep."

---

Andrew Carnegie on one occasion was asked which he considered the most important factor in industry—labor, capital, or brains. Carnegie quickly replied, with a merry twinkle in his eye: "Which is the most important leg of a three-legged stool?"—Judge.

THE BOY WHO HELPS HIS MOTHER.

As I went down the street to-day,
  I saw a little lad
Whose face was just the kind of face
  To make a person glad.
I saw him busily at work,
  While blithe as a blackbird's song
His merry, mellow whistle rang
  The pleasant street along.

Just then a playmate came along,
  And leaned across the gate,
A plan that promised lots of fun
  And frolic to relate.
"The boys are waiting for us now,
  So hurry up," he cried.
My little whistler shook his head,
  And "Can't come," he replied.

"Can't come? Why not, I'd like to know?
  What hinders?" asked the other.
"Why, don't you see," came the reply,
  "I'm busy helping mother.
She's lots to do, and I so like
  To help her all I can,
So I've no time for fun just now,"
  Said this dear little man.

"I like to hear you talk like that,"
  I told the little lad;
"Help mother all you can and make
  Her kind heart light and glad."
It does me good to think of him,
  And know that there are others
Who like this manly little boy,
  Take hold and help their mothers."

UNGRACIOUS HELP.

"Mend my glove, Alice, won't you? That's a good girl," said Harold, coming into the sitting room where Alice was reading.

"What, again?" said Alice fretfully. "It does seem as if you do nothing but rip them. Here, give it to me!" and in a few minutes the neatly mended glove was returned to its owner.

"Alice," called mother, later in the afternoon, "will you set the table for me now?"

"O dear!" sighed Alice, getting up and taking the tablecloth out of the drawer, "I wish tables didn't have to be set three times a day, and always when there is something else I want to do." But in a few minutes the table was set with the shining silver and pretty china, and Alice went back to her book.

"Will you try to find my handkerchief, Alice girl?" asked grandma. "I'm sure it must be in the room."

"O dear!' grumbled Alice, "I wish people would hold on to their things, and not lose them. Here it is grandma," and she picked up the handkerchief from behind the chair and gave it to her grandmother.

Father was just coming in the door, and, handing Alice a plate, he said: "Run down cellar, little daughter, and get some apples. After supper we will roast some over the open fire."

Alice took the plate. "I do wish people would not always expect me to do things because I'm the youngest," she sighed.

Her father looked after her with a half smile, half sigh. "What shall we do with Alice?" he asked. "She does errands for us all day long, willingly with her feet and hands, but unwillingly with her tongue. I have it! Until we can make her realize her fault all of us who love her must meet her requests as she does ours. It will be hard for us to do so, but we all love her too much to see this fault grow larger. Hush, she is coming. Remember we are to begin at once and all treat her as she treats us."

"Agreed," said all the family softly, for they all loved Alice dearly and had grieved to see the ungracious habit growing stronger day by day.

They were soon seated at the table, and it was not long before Alice turned to her oldest brother. "Pass the salt, Rob, please," she said.

"I do wish that once you would put the salt in front of you," said Rob, passing it. "You set the table, don't you?"

Alice looked up in surprise, but Rob looked so entirely unconscious of what he had said that she thought to herself: "Poor Rob. He is tired and doesn't realize how cross he sounds."

"Please give me some more pudding, mother," she said a few minutes later, passing her plate.

"Certainly," said mother, helping her generously, "but I do wish you would know in the beginning how much you can eat, so I could give it to you all at once."

Alice's eyes opened wide, but she said nothing.

After supper they all gathered around the fireplace to roast apples over the fire. Alice sat on the hearth rug holding the plate for those that were done, while father carefully put them one by one on a long, pointed stick and turned them slowly around over the open fire.

"Harold," Alice said, "won't you get the plates and spoons ready? This plate has all the apples on it it will hold now."

Harold rose. "I do wish," he said crossly, "you would sometimes think and get things before you sit down. You are the youngest, and you should wait on all of us," he added as he brought the plate.

"What is the matter with them all to-night?" thought poor Alice. "I never knew them to be so cross to me before," and her eyes filled with tears.

To hide them she got up slowly and turned to where Fluffy, the big Angora, lay in a chair just outside the family circle. "I am going to sit in your chair now," she said, lifting her. "Fluffy, let me have your seat and you shall lie in my lap."

"Certainly," replied Fluffy, looking gravely into Alice's face, "but I do wish you would make up your mind where you wish to sit before I get settled, and not make me move when I am so comfortable."

Poor Alice! She dropped Fluffy on the floor and burst into tears.

"Why, don't be frightened, dear," said mother, putting a comforting arm around her. "You know that was only Rob practicing his ventriloquism. Fluffy has often talked to you that way, you know."

"I know," sobbed Alice, "but that isn't it. It is because you are all so cross to me. Every single thing I ask you to do you are cross and don't want to, and—"

Suddenly she raised her head. "Oh, mother," she sobbed, "is that what I do? Is that why you all did it, even Fluffy?"

Mother patted the head, not hidden again in her shoulder. "Dear little daughter," she said, "it hurt us all to speak so crossly to you, and we are glad Fluffy betrayed us so soon. Perhaps this little bit of a lesson will be all that you need."

"It will make me try to remember," said Alice, thoughtfully. "I really like to do things for you all; it is just a way of speaking. I will make myself remember some way. "Oh," she cried, her face lighting up, "I'll fine myself a cent every time I do it and pay it out of my allowance, and with the money I will buy Fluffy a new collar to thank her for helping me, through Rob, to see how it sounds."

"A good plan," said father, smiling. "I hope Fluffy will never get the collar that way, though. If in six weeks there are so few pennies in the box that there is no hope of her getting it, I will buy her one myself as a reward of merit."

"Oh, Fluffy," cried Alice, catching up her pet and burying her face in the soft fur, "I hope you get the collar the last way, but either way you shall have it."

"Thank you," purred Fluffy, "I trust I have earned it. It will be a very suitable reward for a good action."

Then, curling up in Alice's lap, she went to sleep.—Emma Florence Bush, in Zion's Herald.

An exchange refers to the significant fact that but three hundred years ago some Romish priests made a fire in London and burned every Bible that could be found, and then congratulated themselves that at last the Bible was destroyed. To-day, on the very spot, stands the great building of the British and Foreign Bible Society, where the Bible is printed in one hundred and seventy different languages, and it may almost be said that a copy comes from the press at every tick of the clock.—Selected.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Brother J. M. Wilson, of Hazlehurst, Miss., has been a subscriber to the Advocate for nearly forty years. He is one of the "Old Guard."

Rev. John H. Williams, of Farmerville, La., writes that he has been transferred by Bishop Candler to the North Alabama Conference and appointed to Oneonta, Ala.

We learn from an exchange that Rev. Carl C. Gregory, of the Settle Memorial Church, Owensboro, Ky., has been appointed pastor of the First Methodist Church, Dallas, Tex.

We regret not being in the office a few days ago when Mr. Robert B. Eleazer, Educational Director of the Commission of Inter-racial Co-operation, with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., called.

Revs. J. W. Brown, J. A. Wells and M. M. Black, of the Mississippi Conference, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Monday of this week. They were en route home after the session of the Mississippi Conference at Gulfport.

Rev. S. A. Brown, who was appointed financial agent of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage at the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, will make his home at Winona, Miss., where his correspondents should address him.

The old parsonage at Shuqualak, Miss., has been sold and a new one erected on a lot adjoining the church, donated by Brother W. C. Futvoye. The kodak picture sent us shows it to be a beautiful house. Rev. Seamon Rhea is the pastor.

So far as we know, Rev. R. M. Evans, of Verona, Miss., North Mississippi Conference, has broken all records for "doing it now." On his first pastoral call after Conference, he received a payment on quarterage, a payment on the benevolent claims, and a subscription to the Advocate. Who can beat it?

Rev. C. C. Wier has had a remarkable pastorate at the Algiers Methodist Church, this city, completing this year his seventh consecutive year in that important charge. He will carry to Conference one of the best reports the church has ever made. At the close of the service on last Sunday evening the board of stewards presented him with a purse of $375 as a token of appreciation on the part of the congregation and friends.

The church at Arcadia, La., has closed a good year. The new church is more than adequate for present needs, having a large auditorium and twice the Sunday school capacity of the old church. The building is modern in plan and is constructed of the best materials. It will be completed within a few weeks, and will be about half paid for when completed. The church has unanimously asked for the return of the pastor, Rev. H. W. Ledbetter.

Rev. J. E. Selfe, our pastor at Hammond, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Tuesday of last week. He gave an encouraging report of the work on his charge. He has received 106 members into the church during the year, thirty-six of them as a result of the meeting conducted by Rev. W. Hardy Neal. The Standard Training School at Hammond a few weeks ago was highly successful, twenty-eight credits being awarded to workers in the Hammond church. Miss Cora Perkins, who was instrumental in the success of the school, was one of the most popular instructors.

SOME CAUSES OF BOLSHEVISM.

By George F. Erwin.

I wish to express a few thoughts on the above subject as they have entered my mind from personal observation in Russia. I have been closely associated with Russian people of all classes, and since I am not ashamed to ask questions, I have been able to get an insight to Russia as it used to be, and I have seen it as it is now. I shall discuss this subject under several different heads.

Some one has said that all society is built around the following institutions: 1. The Home. 2. The Church. 3. The School. 4. The State. 5. The Shop. As long as justice to all is practiced in these institutions, a nation will progress, and her people will be content and happy.

If I have been rightly informed, the home life of Russia was and is rotten to the core. Very few men and women ever live up to their marriage vows. Immorality is looked on with little or no disgrace. Many men and women just take up together and are never married. Oftimes after they have lived together many years, they then marry. I knew of some cases of this sort while I was living in Vladivostok. The church is responsible for this to a great extent. Nobody could be married except by an Orthodox priest, and they were not willing to perform a marriage without a large fee and a great ceremony, after which, in many cases, they all got drunk, including the priest. Many of the better people were not willing to put up with such, consequently they did not have a wedding ceremony. The higher class women never learned how to do practical housekeeping. This was all turned over to servants, and the women lived in idleness. With the peasants the wife and daughters were mere slaves. Very few peasants ever divorced their wives. If they found that they were untrue, in place of a divorce they would whip them like a slave. The women do most of the work that is done in the fields. It is very common in the summer to see them out cutting and raking hay. The peasant class did the work for the highest class, and they received about thirty to fifty cents per week for this labor.

Let us now take a view of the church. The church was a mere tool in the hands of the monarchy. The priests were as a whole servants of the Czar instead of God. Most of them were as wicked as could be. They would get drunk and do everything else that was bad. They taught that the Czar and God were one, and that to displease the Czar was to bring upon them the displeasure and vengeance of God. This was the only sort of teaching allowed to the peasants. Every child was compelled to be baptized at an early age, and in this way became a Christian. This was the only requirement to be a Christian in Russia. For this a large sum of money was charged by the priest. In order to remain a Christian, each person had to go once each year just before Easter and tell the priest everything bad that he had done during the past year, then pay him a sum of money. He was then forgiven of his sins and allowed to take communion Easter Sunday. So many attended then that the services would continue nearly all night. The people eventually learned that they had been fooled by the church. They say that the church is one of the things that must be abolished in Russia.

The schools were for the favored few. Most of these were to train officers for the army and navy. The one hope of the old monarchy was its military power. They had some very fine schools, in which the aristocracy educated their children. A person from the middle class or peasant could not get into these schools. In order to enter polite society it was necessary to be able to speak in two or three languages. The masses were not allowed any kind of schooling except what they were given by the village priests, and most that they taught them was the divinity of the Czar and the necessity of obeying him as a god. The result of this educational system was, at the outbreak of the revolution, only about ten or fifteen per cent could read and write.

The State was cruel and corrupt. The Czar held absolute power. People came near rebelling a few years ago because they had no part in the government. The result was that a law-making body was called together, but just as soon as this body disagreed with the Czar he dissolved it, and continued as before. The last Czar was considered a man of very little ability and also a weak character in every way. He was surrounded by a cabinet of wicked advisers, who, I have been told, managed to keep him drunk most of the time, and managed affairs as they pleased. This form of government just ground the life out of the lower class in order that the nobility might live in luxury and idleness. It was impossible for a person of low birth to rise to a high and noble position in the affairs of the nation. No wonder that they rebelled and kicked over such a system. It was understood that you could bribe nearly any public official. The whole system worked on bribes and tips.

I have learned very little of the conditions of those who worked in the factories under the old regime. It must have been very bad, because it is that class of people who have done more to destroy the old system than any other class of people. They have now very strong labor organizations. The labor unions have a great power in the present government. When they have a rally of any sort, they all turn out and make great demonstrations. They march along the streets with the largest red flags and banners, bearing their mottoes, that I have ever seen.

I am not surprised that Russia has Bolshevism. The thing that is surprising to me is that it did not come a long time ago. I trust that America will take notice of the things that have helped to bring this condition about in Russia, and will correct the evil that exists in our social institutions before such a catastrophe comes to our own dear land. No nation is safe that lawfully allows, or even winks at, sin. As long as we live up to the principles upon which our government was established—faith in God, equality of man, special privileges to none, and justice to all—just so long will America live and shed her rays of light to the benighted nations of the world.

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

Church Extension; Dr. C. C. Jarrell, General Hospital Board; J. M. Way, Board of Lay Activities; Dr. R. L. Russell, Board of Missions; Dr. L. E. Todd, Board of Finance; Dr. F. S. Parker, Epworth League Board.

The preaching of Dr. Walter Anthony, of Macon, Ga., deeply stirred the Conference. The congregations taxed the capacity of the auditorium at every service, and there was some "old-time" shouting during the service on Friday night. Dr. Anthony will always have a warm place in the hearts of the Mississippi brethren.

Brother L. P. Brown, of Meridian, who is, perhaps, as closely identified with the history of the Mississippi Conference as any layman in the State, was an influential member of this session. Among the many prominent men of Mississippi who were either delegates or visitors to the Conference, we noted Mr. D. W. Heidelberg, of Shubuta; Mr. John A. McLeod, of Hattiesburg; Dr. D. M. Key, of Millsaps College; Mr. W. M. Buie, of Jackson; Mr. C. B. Gates, of Long Beach; Mr. Walter Lampton, of Magnolia; Prof. R. E. Bobbitt, of Whitworth College; Mr. W. S. F. Tatum, of Hattiesburg; Prof. J. T. Calhoun, of Jackson; Mr. W. H. Bradlay, of Canton; Mr. S. C. Newman, of Satartia; Mr. Dennis Jordan, of Ellisville. There were many others whose names do not occur to us at the moment.

The news that Rev. R. Bradley, an honored superannuate member of the Conference, was seriously ill, brought sorrow to the brethren, and the Conference ordered a suitable message of sympathy sent to him.

Rev. C. F. Emery, who, after many years of faithful service in the Conference, was granted the superannuate relation, will make his home with a son in Houston, Tex.

Rev. L. A. Darsey was granted the superannuate relation after an unbroken service of fifty-five years in the itinerant work. Brother Darsey has served the church in Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi.

Two delightful social features of the Conference were the reunions of the Class of 1888 and the Class of 1902, to the latter of which the editor of the Advocate belongs. Rev. W. M. Sullivan entertained the Class of 1888 at dinner; the Class of 1902 entertained itself at lunch, with Dr. I. W. Cooper and Rev. L. Carley as guests of honor. Dr. Cooper took all the honors as a postprandial speaker.

Revs. W. W. Drake, J. G. Snelling, and W. L. Duren were Louisiana visitors to the Conference.

The editor of the Advocate is under deep obligation to Rev. G. S. Harmon, Assistant Secretary of the Conference, for many courtesies in connection with reporting the proceedings. Brother Harmon's minutes are a model of neatness and correctness, being ready for the printer as soon as approved. He is ably assisted in his work by Rev. J. Loyd Decell.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

She was an elderly lady, seated near the entrance of the passenger car. There was a dainty bow of white ribbon pinned on the front of her dress. Only a bit of narrow ribbon! It awoke in my mind a flood of memories of a great campaign which overswept our Southland some years since, when the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was pleading, urging, praying that our people be freed from the slavery, ruin and death of the rum traffic. Frances Willard, Mrs. Goodale, Mrs. Pliarr, Belle Kearney, Mrs. Lyons, Mrs. Zable, and a host of others, flaunted this little white ribbon in the face of the legalized saloon, and taught the rising generation of its evil, destructive sway, until the voice of the people said, "thou shalt not." Then came the Anti-Saloon League and plucky little Carrie Nation swinging the hatchet of damnation, until over two-thirds of our country was free from this fell traffic. Then the world war and the Eighteenth Amendment to our organic law.

Many good people thought the fight ended and the victory won. But this hydra-headed monster sprouts more heads than the fabled one, and has more lives than mythical Anteus. It is always, now, and forever lawless. Men who are in other relations of life fairly decent citizens, smile, smirk and play the arrant hypocrite and lawbreaker in violation of this amendment of our Federal Constitution. There is only one salvation for America to-day: Let the W. C. T. U. start a great campaign and pin a white ribbon on the breast of every loyal, devoted woman of this country who loves home and native land. Let every pulpit ring with the old-time fervor, preaching against this damnable lawlessness until men's consciences are aroused and their love for righteousness quickened. So flagrant is this violation of law that the average politician scarcely knows which way to turn in seeking the votes of his fellow-citizens.

"Let the people arise, yea, let all the people arise." Let them work and pray that God Almighty may deliver us from this flood which now threatens to overwhelm the most sacred things of our commonwealth. These traffickers in illegal whiskey are forever on the job. Their boats are on the seas, their trucks thread our highways, their agents and dispensers are abroad throughout the cities and country places. Love of money, greed and avarice are back of it, and its advocates prate of personal liberty, when in truth they are but licentious agents of Satan and the powers of darkness. Public opinion rules things in this country. Get it on the right side, for it is invincible when aroused.

"Oh, watch and fight and pray!
The battle ne'er give o'er,
Renew it boldly day by day,
And help divine implore."

Isn't it wonderful the way it is done! And they don't see how false and hollow it is—making the sin of another a palliation for his own. Habit is a thief—it steals the very best and highest faculties and powers of men and women. It enthralls them, enslaves them, and they follow its bidding as the hound does its master. Custom is habit at large, crystallized in the mass, claiming the authority of age-long ways and means. "They all do it," is the key that unlocks the broad gate, and many go in thereat. Oh friends, hear me! It is the inner forces that enable one to stand righteous in God's sight. Personal salvation is so closely allied with individual strength and responsibility, that you cannot have the one without the other. Excuse the slang, for it swings the thought—"quit passing the buck," and "buck your own line." Football fans and others may understand. Am I preaching? I hope I am, for I believe in my deepest soul this is a gospel that even an apostle would not be ashamed of.

The sun lights the great planetary system and guides these worlds of God's creation through all the vast reaches of limitless space, holding each in his appropriate pathway with the grip of God-given power, and all the heat and light, and force are the sun's very own. No playing off on other suns. When God said, "Let there be light," the sun's great burning heart was filled with glory, and his march through the free open spaces of the universe will not halt until the Captain and Creator gives the command. Men and women must learn like the sun how the powers within that shine, shine with the light of God.

Jesus does not hesitate to teach that love to God and love to man are not merely rewarded by life, but are in fact life itself, and that until one thus obeys the ancient commandment he does not truly live.—Frances Greenwood Peabody.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth authorizes the Advocate to announce that, for satisfactory reasons, Rev. E. R. Smoot will remain as pastor at Corinth, Miss., and that Rev. T. H. Dorsey has been appointed to Oxford, Miss.

THE HOUR HAND.

By Grantland Rice.

"What time is it?"
  It's time to move
From out the stolid-bordered frame;
  It's time to rustle from the groove
And beat it back into the game;
  It's time to edge in with a start
That's just a trifle more than bluff,
  And, whatsoever be the part,
To give the game your keenest stuff.

"What time is it?"
  It's time to fight;
To rally up the hosts of cheer,
  And, in the face of bitter night,
To wipe away the useless tear.

"What time is it?"
  It's time to be
Out there among the bustling throng;
  It's time to set your honor free
From any taint of shame or wrong."

There are men, young and old, who are always in some kind of a row. They cannot get along with other people at all, and they are uncomfortable themselves and they make all their neighbors uncomfortable. Whenever a man finds himself in such a situation it is well to inquire diligently whether he may not be to blame. It may be his aim is right, but if so perhaps he is absolutely wrong in his methods, and if so, for the sake of the issue at stake, he had better reform at once. It is easy to persuade ourselves that our troubles are caused by our very rectitude, but probably in the majority of cases they are due rather to our ignorance, our self-assertion, or our blunders. Many a martyr builds his own funeral pile, and he has no right to blame it on the Lord nor on his neighbor nor even on the devil. Well for us all if we learn in earilest youth to work with others so that we may work effectively and with the least possible friction during the later years of life.—The Christian Guardian.

SISTER D. V. SISTRUNK, of Mitchel, La., passed to her reward very suddenly Monday, Oct. 22, 1923. She was born and reared near Converse, La. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The church, community and State suffer a severe loss. Her graces will be missed so much, because she was ever ready to give her hand to help every worthy cause. She loved the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and often remarked that she had to read every word in it. She read her Bible regularly and loved the church literature. Her faith was unshaken in God and his works committed to man. She leaves a husband, eight children, mother and three sisters. Her life was proof of her love for Jesus.

"There are three words that sweetly blend,
That on the heart are graven,
A precious soothing balm they lend,
They are Mother, Home and Heaven."

BRANDON AND PELAHATCHIE CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: We held our fourth quarterly to-day at Brandon. All collections in full, notwithstanding we had a greatly increased budget over last year. There is no better appointment of its class in the Conference than Brandon and Pelahatchie. We have raised for all purposes over I7,000 this year and no building enterprise on hand. Two churches have been repainted, and the job of repainting the parsonage is just about finished. New and modern lights have been installed in the church at Brandon. We have had 51 accessions. About half of these were on profession of faith.

We had two fine revivals. We began at Pelahatchie on Sept. 24, with Rev. Mark N. Terrell, of Sherman, Tex., doing the preaching, with Victor C. Harrison, song director. Brother Terrell did good work. His sermons were strong and convincing. While all of his sermons were good, his sermons on Christ and on fire are deserving of special mention. Brother Terrell is a fine man, a good preacher and a fine fellow to work with. The results of the meeting will abide.

We began at Brandon on Oct. 24, with Rev. W. M. McIntosh, of Columbus, Miss., doing the preaching, and J. O. Bryant, of New Albany, Miss., leading the song services. Brother McIntosh is a veteran in the evangelistic field. He is a splendid help in a revival. He preaches a pure gospel in a very telling and convincing way. His hold on his congregation increases in power until the close of his meeting. We had a real revival at Brandon, in which old-time shouting was heard. Brother McIntosh's preaching was constructive, and I feel sure that the results will abide. At the close of his sermon on the "Lordship of Christ and Stewardship," about 40 either gave their hands as thithers, or pledged themselves to tithe. One of the most effective services was his sermon to men only at the Courthouse Sunday afternoon on the "Sympathetic Brotherhood." Other sermons deserving of special mention were the "Light of the World—the Church," "Crossing the Dead Line," "Filled With the Spirit." Perhaps the most touching of all the services held was his service to old people, when he preached on fidelity.

Sister McIntosh was with him and did splendid work in special services with the women and the children. Brother McIntosh and wife and Bryant make a strong evangelistic team. We are glad that they came this way.

W. J. DAWSON.

SOME REASONS FOR CHRISTIANIZING THE BATETELA.

By C. C. Bush, Missionary to the Congo (at home on furlough).

The Batetela tribe, being a branch of the Bantu people, extending over Central and over a large part of Southern Africa, has inherited, along with various customs and conventionalities and political institutions, the worship of ancestral spirits, coupled with the belief that living souls dwell in natural phenomena and inanimate objects. Any one interested in the beliefs of primitive people will find the Animism, Animatism, and Dynamism of the African tribes worthy of much consideration.

In this tribe one finds belief in the power of communicating with the spirits of the dead, as when a husband addressed the spirit of his wife after the corpse had been lowered into the grave and tried to cajole her spirit into a kindly disposed attitude toward himself. Another instance was that of attributing the illness of a certain woman to the malevolent spirit of one of the dead wives of one of her former husbands, and it was thought that the spirit had to be coaxed out of her before she could recover her health. Some of these people build small huts into which they put food for the evident purpose of properly providing for the discarnate spirits of their dead relatives because it is a general belief among the Bantu people that these spirits of the ancestors will bring disaster upon their living descendants unless suitable funeral ceremonies and regular monthly offerings are made to them.

The spirit of the dead chief is the great spirit worshiped by all of his subjects. Therefore it is not difficult for the native mind to conclude that God is the Great Chief of everybody, that the Holy Spirit is the Best Spirit, and Jesus Christ is the example of immortality which he already was conscious of in his own soul. Thus the worship of God takes the place of ancestral worship and frees him from the FEAR of spirits. Then comes the main reason for teaching these people about Christ, the sinless person.

There are found some rudiments of morality in the restraints imposed by law or decency or duty, yet this morality is of such a low type that one might correctly speak of the natives as having either a non-moral religion or a non-religious morality. Hence the need for spiritual Christianity, which perfectly combines the religious belief and the moral duty. The ancestor-gods are non-moral. The absolute character of the moral law can only come from the absolute character of God who has established it. To the native mind stealing or slander or intrigue and the like are not wrong in themselves as such, but are wrong only when these acts interfere with established social customs. The endangering of society defines misconduct. One may steal and not be guilty unless society discovers it, as no one has been conscious of being offended. He does not even feel guilty of a fault unless found out and duly convicted. To prevaricate does not impress him as being wrong because part of his worship is often an effort to deceive his god.

The native needs Christian education, coupled with the "gospel of work." The African associates happenings and draws conclusions, but has no use for theoretical speculation. His mind is not scientific. He does not ask how a wizard can bewitch a person and be unconscious of it, or how a fetish can detect the guilty party, but he states these for facts and thoroughly believes in them as verities. Mathematics and all studies aiding in developing his reasoning faculties will quickly supplant his faith in taboos, magic, wizards, fetishes and fears of malignant spirits. He will put his faith in a personal, loving, omnipotent God and find satisfaction for his religious nature which hundreds of them have already done.

My concluding reason for Christianizing the Batetela people is because they are capable of accepting spiritual Christianity and of appropriating its converting, regenarating, and supernaturally transforming power which they so woefully need. This need is a challenge not only to a Christian interest in them but also to a sympathetic approach toward understanding their struggles for soul satisfaction.

MRS. HINCKLEY NERVOUS WRECK
Tells Women How She Was Restored to Perfect Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
Memphis, Tenn.—"Two years ago I was completely run-down and my nerves were a wreck. I could not sweep a room without resting. I could not do my work except a little at a time, and the doctor's medicine did not help me. One day some one threw your little book on to my porch, and in it I read several testimonials of women who had been like myself. I went right out and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and before I had taken the whole of that bottle I knew it was helping me. I took six bottles, and then in about three months I took two more. Now I am in perfect health. ## MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

We call attention again to the Conference Presidents' meeting in Meridian Jan. 15-16, 1924. Those who are expected to take part in this meeting are, Conference Presidents, Chairmen of Conference Boards, Conference Junior Superintendents, Conference Intermediate Superintendents, and City Union Presidents.

The Mississippi Conference Cabinet will probably meet on the day following the Presidents' meeting. Mr. Hawkins urges all Conference officers who possibly can to come to Meridian on the morning of the 15th, and stay through the three days.

Mr. J. R. Bush has been appointed Secretary of the Newton District. His address is Newton, Miss. Mrs. T. M. Ford, whose address is Lorman, Miss., has been appointed Assistant Secretary for the Vickhurg District.

We have received a letter from Miss Gladys Smith, our delegate to Junaluska, written soon after her return, but which was miscarried and has only recently reached us. Miss Smith reports the work at Junaluska this year "fine" and the instructors all good. Miss Smith took for her study: Dramatics, taught by Mrs. Thorpenning, of Chicago; Social Messages of the Bible, Mr. Trimble, teacher; Fundamentals of Missions, Mr. Barnett, teacher; Recreational Leadership, Mr. Harbin.

Miss Smith says: "I was right proud of my little Certificate of three credits. Hope I shall he able to earn a diploma by next year. We only had three from Mississippi, so on stunt night they put Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana together, calling us 'Miss-Ark-La.' group. We pulled off the 'Grand rush after Tabernacle meeting at Connelly's Drug Store.' We were short of boys, so they made a Jelly out of me. Well, after all the combined efforts, the Ka-Fla-Va. group came out on top with a grand opera stunt. I certainly wished for all our Mississippians to receive the inspiration and help from this wonderful Conference.

"I hope in a measure to show my appreciation for the lovely trip by more efficient and enthusiastic work this year."

Miss Smith also announces to us the wedding of Miss Ina Mae Cochran on Sept. 20 to Mr. Spencer Furlow. Both of these young people were very popular in Laurel, Miss Cochran being President of the Laurel Chapter, First Church. Those who attended the Brookhaven Assembly will remember Miss Cochran, now Mrs. Furlow.

But that is not all. Cupid's dart has hit Mississippi Epworth League-dom again, and almost right in our Conference President's office. But we hope by these two weddings we have not lost two faithful League workers, but that we have gained other two.

We take the following from the Meridian Star of Sept. 18, which carried almost two full columns announcing the wedding of our very efficient Secretary:

"Prominent among the early autumn weddings was that of Miss Margaret Cooper to Mr. James D. Picket, of Toomsuba, Miss., which occurred Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock at East End Methodist Church, Rev. W. H. Lewis officiating, and the ceremony being witnessed hy a large coterie of friends. The sacred edifice was embellished artistically with handsome ferns, Holland hays and foliage plants, in which pink and green color tones were daintily introduced. Smilax banked the altar railing, on which were hurning pink and white tapers, and bows of pink and white tulle in amongst the greenery banked about the altar appeared in dainty contrast."

The Star gives a beautiful account of the ceremony, and mentioned some of the entertainments given in honor of the bridal party.

Mr. and Mrs. Picket visited several points in Texas, and are now at home in Toomsuba.

A new League Chapter has recently been organized on the Vimville charge at Pleasant Hill Church, Meridian District. Ralph Hayes says that the presiding elder of the Meridian District is "the organizingest" preacher he ever saw, and pretty soon he will be huilding more churches in order to find room for more League Chapters. Meridian District practically has no District Secretary up to now, so Ralph says, he being out of the district the entire year almost, hut this district is reporting new Chapters almost continually.

Rev. W. A. Terry called to see us on his way to Annual Conference, and reports his League in excellent condition, at Shuhuta.

MY LITTLE PRAYER.

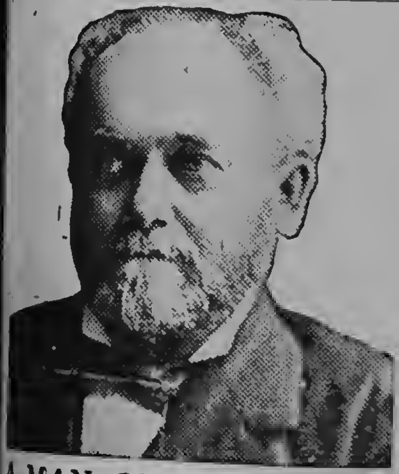
There is one little prayer I say
Over and over, every day;
So small it is, yet whispered low,
Love's listening ear will hear, I know.
And so I pray, "Lord, may my eyes
See, in each day, some glad surprise;
May I forget my griefs and lend
A daily sunshine to each friend.
When troubles, as deep shadows, fall,
Let me, in quietude, recall
The pleasant things that, nothing less,
I count ventures in happiness;
And, with thy gentle peace, erase
The happenings that hide thy face."
Lo, even as my prayer is sent,
The answer comes in sweet content.

—Alice Wilson Olroyd.



A MAN OF INTEGRITY

A physician who reaches out to benefit humanity leaves a record behind him that is worth while. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. He was an eminent physician, a leading and honored citizen, known for his honesty and executive ability. His study along medical lines, and his knowledge of the remedial qualities of herbs and plants led to the discovery of his wonderful herbal remedy, Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the woman's tonic which has had the greatest number of supporters for the past fifty years. It is just the herhal tonic required if a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings at regular or irregular intervals, by nervousness or dizzy spells, headache or backache. Favorite Prescription can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid at most drug stores.

YOUR POSTGRADUATE READING

A great hishop once said that the development and growth of the ministry will always be in proportion to the hours it spends in study.

What is true of the ministry at large is also true of the individual. Congregations watch closely and recognize the preacher who strives for self-improvement. They know that your value to them and to the cause you preach cannot grow without study.

THE FIFTH POSTGRADUATE READING COURSE

EARLY CHURCH HISTORY. By H. M. Gwatkin, Professor of Ecclesiastical History, Cambridge. In two volumes, handsomely bound and hoxed. Price, $5.00.

Selected hy leaders of our Church as the most comprehensive and most valuahle history of the early Church that can be had. Although the author has not attempted to make this an exhaustive study, he has presented all of the important details in a way that leaves nothing to be desired. The two volumes are uniformly hound and hoxed and are not sold separately. The present price of $5.00 for the set will hold only as long as our stock lasts. A worthy addition to your library and a real hargain in every sense of the word.

ORIGINALITY OF THE CHRISTIAN MESSAGE. By H. R. McIntosh, Professor of Systematic Theology, New College, Edinhurgh. Price, $1.75.

The connection of the author's name with any work of Christian literature is sufficient recommendation in itself. His reputation is that of being one of the foremost Christian writers whose work we study.

PERSONALITY, HUMAN AND DIVINE. The Bampton Lectures of 1894, delivered at Oxford University hy J. R. Illingworth, M.A. Price, $1.00.

These eight lectures delivered hy a scholar of high rank in educational attainments and spiritual reflections have withstood the tests of time and are known to-day as one of the most heautiful and most useful expositions of a suhject that should be a subject for constant study by every preacher of the gospel.

THE GLORY OF THE MINISTRY. By Prof. A. T. Robertson, A.M., D.D., LL.D. Price, $1.50.

This revelation of the real magnitude of the minister's work has brought forth the hearty approval and commendation of great preachers all over the land. It will do incalculable good wherever read.

LOUISIANA SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Conference minutes show we have three hundred and twenty-seven schools. Sixty-four reported last year with a Sunday School Day offering of $1,306. This year up to date one hundred and seven have reported with an offering of $2,624.

* * *

There have been over six hundred credits issued in Teacher Training work, the New Orleans District receiving the largest number of credits as a district, but the Alexandria Standard Training School the largest number as a school.

Of the thirty-five preachers taking a credit in Teacher Training, four of them were presiding elders.

* * *

Children's Week has been observed better this year than last. Ten out of the thirty-eight Sunday schools in the Shreveport District have sent in written reports from Children's Day observance.

* * *

Our records show that thirty-nine Program of Work charts have been placed in our Sunday schools up to date. Our goal for next year is, "A Chart in Every Sunday School in Our State." The Dubach school is the first school to get recognition from the General Board as a progressive school of the "C" type.

* * *

Our list of "financial friends" of the Conference Sunday School Board numbers up to date forty-eight. This list should be as large as the number of schools we have in the Conference—three hundred and twenty-seven.

* * *

Thursday night, Nov. 22, will be Sunday School Anniversary night at Bogalusa. Mr. M. W. Brabham, of Nashville, will represent the General Board.

* * *

The first three months of the new year will be given to Sunday school evangelism.

* * *

On Anniversary Night at the Annual Conference each of the departmental superintendents will bring a short message about his department: Missionary Education, W. W. Drake; Teacher Training, N. E. Joyner, and Intermediate-Senior Work, H. L. Johns.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The record for the year 1923 has been made and written on the books down here and in another world. The record on earth and in heaven are not always the same. The one recorded in heaven is the true one. We have no promise for the year, but a promise moment by moment. We may plan for the year, but another may carry out the plan. If we are not united in our spirits on earth, if we do not have the spirit of brotherliness, some of us will be in an awkward predicament in heaven. Let us enthrone Christ that the Holy Spirit may fill our lives; let us trust Christ fully that he may entrust to us the power of the Spirit. Co-operation with one another in carrying out the plans of the church to establish the kingdom of God will be worth more than all our criticisms of our leaders. As for me, "This one thing I do."

The General Sunday School Board issued 831 certificates to the teachers in our Conference the past year, more than were issued to the entire church ten years ago. How may we receive a thousand the coming year? Let one hundred preachers and two hundred superintendents take the first book in our course of study, "Organization and Administration," and see what progress we shall make. The school cannot go ahead of the teachers, and the teachers meet with obstacles when they go ahead of the appointed leaders. Forty-five certificates were issued to our preachers last year—that is good, but let us pray that one hundred more may do likewise.

Up to the present our Sunday schools have contributed more than $51,000 toward the Centenary. There is no school so small or so poor that it might not do something toward giving the gospel to a lost world. The schools at Pontotoc, Leland, Robinsonville, Phillip, and Rome have paid one hundred cents on the dollar. Others have said we shall never stop until our complete pledge has been met. If every other organization in the church fails the Lord in this hour of the world's need, let not the Sunday schools neglect their pledges. The money is needed worse now than ever, but our honor is of more worth than the money.

Specialization courses are now ready to be offered by supervised correspondence study. Write to L. F. Sensebaugh, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., if you are interested in either of the following courses: Beginners' Pupil, Beginners' Organization, Primary Pupil, Primary Organization, Junior Organization, Intermediate-Senior Psychology, Intermediate-Senior Organization, Intermediate-Senior Agencies, Young People's Organization, Young People's Agencies, Rural Sunday School Management, City or Departmental Sunday School Management, Development and Principles of Education, the Study of Adult Life (by Jan. 1), Educational Task of the Local Church (by February), Principles of Christian Service for Adults (by Jan. 1).

JAPANESE PROVERBS.

When all men praised the peacock for his beautiful tail, the birds cried out with one consent: "Look at his legs! and what a voice!"

Everything must wait its turn, peach blossoms for the second month and chrysanthemums for the ninth.

Brothers quarrel like thieves inside a house, but outside their swords leap out in each other's defense.

One meal without rice mars domestic happiness for a week.

Even the emperor has straw-sandaled relations.

Better to wash an old kimona than to borrow a new one.—Exchange.

HOW LAW ENFORCEMENT IS FAILING.

Just to show how the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment is failing, we note a statement by the Federal prohibition director for New York State. He reports that out of 1,168 dry cases there were 1,065 convictions. Really, now, does that look like failure? If that ratio of convictions continues and the court makes the penalty fit the crime, the bootlegger will either have to get up some other war cry, or wear a blindfold when he makes it.

Also the amount of liquor that is coming in by smuggling is subject to the same subtraction. It is known that this rum-running is less and less attractive. Too many are being arrested and punished according to their deserts. Just one case is a sample: a man arrested a month ago had $20,000 worth of liquor on his ship; he is charged with scuttling the ship; if found guilty he will face the punishment of imprisonment for life.

All the American people need to do is to continue to show their intention that the Constitution of the United States is not to be flouted, and make the penalty fit the crime.—Central Christian Advocate.

THE REWARD OF THRIFT.

They were talking at the club about the problem of poverty. One of the party, says the Argonaut, was sure that no industrious and careful person could fail to be prosperous. "When I see a ragged man," he said virtuously, "I say to myself there goes one of life's wasters. There goes a man who has refused to make the most of his gifts. There's no excuse for poverty, gentlemen. Every one should rise. Every one may carve out a good position for himself if he wishes."

"Perhaps you are right," interposed a member. "Only to-day I met a newspaper man who told me that twenty years ago he came to Chicago with exactly five dollars in his pockets. He is now worth forty thousand dollars, and he owes it entirely to his own ability and energy, combined with good health and a high code of ethics, and also to the fact that his uncle recently died and left him thirty-nine thousand nine hundred and ninety-five dollars."

Wanted! Ambitious Men and Women

We are receiving calls daily for men and women of character, ambition and business training, men and women who can accept and efficiently fill responsible positions, positions that give every opportunity for advancement; positions of high salaries, positions in banks, law offices, insurance, real estate, brokers' offices; positions with manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, in every imaginable type of business in the South.

Many of them we capably fill, others are yet vacant. The men and women who fill them need not be wealthy, nor even moderately well-to-do. They need not be young, nor need they be college or even high school graduates. All that is necessary is that they possess character, ambition and a business training.

The character and ambition they must possess, the business training we will furnish under the direction of the South's most efficient training corps and in one of the South's most efficient and best equipped business colleges. A training with unique courses in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, accounting, banking, business administration or our secretarial course. Such a training we will furnish in a few months' time at little cost to you, and at terms to meet your own financial condition.

Thousands of Southern men and women have taken advantage of the opportunity and trained themselves for a higher calling, a better salary and a greater opportunity for advancement. Many who have accepted the posi we offer have risen to the top of the ladder, and are numbered among Ame ica's foremost and wealthiest busin and professional men and women.

An institution with such stan and reputation as the Georgia-Ala Business College does more to adv the business interests of its gradua than can be done by any amount family or personal influence.

Consider your present status—woul you not like to improve your stati in life, increase your income, att financial independence and success? A opportunity awaits you, for positi are being constantly offered us th must be filled.

Obituaries.

JAMES PORTER RODGERS was born at Ebenezer, Miss., June 13, 1876. He died suddenly from acute indigestion at Canton, Miss., Nov. 12, 1923. His death occurred on his twenty-second wedding anniversary. On Nov. 12, 1901, he married Miss Irene Bufford. His remains were interred in the Pickens cemetery, Nov. 14, 1923. For many years he was in the employ of the Cudahy Packing Company as traveling salesman. He was a trusted employee, being popular with his customers and absolutely loyal to the trust which his employers placed in him. Mr. Rodgers loved his friends. He was always affable and courteous, and his greeting was accompanied with a smile. One of these friends remarked to the writer, who, with Rev. L. B. Golden, had charge of the funeral service, that he would not hesitate to call on Porter Rodgers for anything that he needed. He felt sure that he would help with all the resources at his command. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Pickens. He united with the church under the pastorate of Rev. R. H. B. Gladney. Whenever he went to preaching service he always listened with the greatest interest, and was invariably able to summarize the sermon when he returned home. Several weeks before his death he attended services at the Baptist church. At the conclusion of the service, expressing his appreciation of the sermon, he remarked to his wife, "I am a saved man." His wife loved him with a devotion which was touching to behold. There was no social function which was important enough to cause her to be away from home when he returned every Friday afternoon from his weeks' trip. She was always there to greet him. There is usually something fine in a man to inspire such devotion on the part of his wife. There are certain things which by universal admission are recognized as the finest things in life. Appreciation of these things is a mark of depth of soul. Along with other things which might be mentioned are three, music, flowers and children. Porter Rodgers loved music, flowers and children.

His pastor,
JULIAN S. DUNCAN.

RESOLUTION.

"Resolved by the Baptist State Convention, in session at Corinth, Miss., Nov. 15, 1923, That it is the sense of this Convention that Section 3685 of Hemmingway's Code of the State of Mississippi ought to be amended so as to authorize the Board of Supervisors of each county in this State to have the power, in its discretion, to employ counsel by the year or by the case, to assist the County or District Attorney, in addition to the regular employed counsel by the year, to prosecute all criminal cases arising in said county, as well as to assist in the prosecution of civil cases in which the county is interested, and pay said attorney such reasonable fees as may be agreed upon for such services."

The above was unanimously adopted by the Convention.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

SOUTHERN METHODISTS AID JAPAN SUFFERERS.

Receipts on Japanese relief reported by W. M. Cassity, acting treasurer for the Board of Missions, show a total up to Oct. 8 of $45,921.17 received from Southern Methodists.

This fund is coming in as a result of a church-wide call for the observance of Japan Day on Sept. 9. Three hundred telegrams were sent by the Board of Missions heads in Nashville to presiding elders and bishops asking that these officials, through the pastors of Southern Methodism, press a church-wide collection on that day for sufferers from the earthquake disasters in Japan.

Funds will continue to be received at Mission Board headquarters. As fast as the money is received it is sent to J. S. Oxford, treasurer of the Japan Mission, Kobe, where it will be used by the Mission authorities in co-operation with the local Red Cross and other agencies for general relief work.

LAURA HAYGOOD GRADUATE MAKING GOOD.

During a Y. W. C. A. conference in Soochow last summer the dormitory of the Laura Haygood Normal was occupied by a group of Chinese girls. One night a terrific storm raged in which the young women were awakened by the wind and rain which swept through the dormitory, shattering the windows and soaking their beds. Great confusion ensued, and groups of frightened girls were huddled together, fearing that their lives were in danger. In the midst of the panic, a young Chinese teacher appeared at the head of the stairway and quietly gave directions to the girls to go at once to the chapel. After all were gathered the young woman stood on the rostrum in her bare feet and led the song, "Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Love," in which the frightened girls, now grown more quiet, joined in singing. Then followed a few words of prayer. Those who listened felt that the peace that came down upon the little company was as real as that when Jesus spoke one night on the lake of Gennessaret. Then the young Chinese teacher said: "Will those whose beds have not been damaged by the storm gather on this side of the chapel?" And straightway two separate groups were formed. "And now," continued the quiet voice. "will each of you invite one of those who have suffered because of the storm to share your bed for the night?" Thus each girl's comfort was provided for. The long line of pajama-clad figures, their plaits swinging behind them as they marched, went quietly to their beds. The name of the young Chinese teacher in whose conduct was evidenced the power of Christ in her life is Miss Sue E. Yui, a graduate of the Laura Haygood Normal, a graduate of our Scarritt Bible and Training School, and a graduate of Peabody College. She returned to her country and is a missionary to her own people as she touches the lives of his little ones in the Laura Haygood School.

Box 614, Emory University, Georgia,
November 8, 1923.

Mrs. J. G. Snelling,
1110 Louisiana Avenue,
New Orleans.

My Dear Mrs. Snelling: Will you please insert this in the Missionary Society column of the Advocate? Several have written and asked me to attend various special meetings and tell about the work in Korea. Since the letters have to be forwarded to me, it requires extra time and I fear my answers do not reach them in time. I am at Emory for my six months' study. On that account, I shall not have the pleasure of being with you during the Annual Conference of the Missionary Society nor the various District Conferences. I had anticipated this pleasure and am sorry that it cannot be realized, but know that my friends will want their representative to receive all possible preparation in order that the greatest good may be accomplished towards the advancement of the Kingdom.

If the lending of my voice in urging our people to lift the Centenary indebtedness would be of material help, I would be all the more anxious to attend the several meetings. A great work has been done in Korea through the Centenary. Many things have been begun and are being carried on by the Centenary, and if our people should fail to pay their pledges, I do not know what could be done. Of course, this is God's work, and he will see that it is accomplished; and yet—Though this is God's work, has he not given it into our hands to perform it? What shall our report be?

I expect to be in Louisiana again after attending the meeting of the Council in Florida, and I shall remain there three or four months, when my furlough shall have expired.

Love to all my friends,
Most sincerely,
PAULINE GLASS RANDLE.

OUR UNFINISHED BRIDGES.

Some years ago travelers entering or leaving one of our large Western cities might have seen, spanning the broad river upon which the city is situated, the unfinished structure of a great bridge. Supported on huge piles of solid masonry, it stretched its graceful spans far above the yellow flood, a tangled web of cables and wires silhouetted against the sky. For months it stood thus; no sounds of labor came from its lofty height; no busy workmen swarmed over the girders. What the cause of the delay was no one seemed to know. Perhaps it was difficult in getting materials; perhaps it was labor trouble. At any rate there the bridge stood day after day, unfinished and useless.

Something like that bridge are the good resolutions that many of us make but never carry out. Every conscientious Christian longs to do better things with his life, but it always seems as if there were some river of doubt—moral weakness or a thoughtless habit—that he must cross before he can reach his goal. So we resolve to bridge the gap, to surmount the weakness or the thoughtless habit. Day by day we adhere to our resolution; span by span our bridge reaches out. We anchor it upon the solid masonry of determined purpose; we rivet it together with earnest faith and prayer. Sometimes the spans reach only a little distance; sometimes they almost close the gap. Not frequently we become weary, though success is almost in sight; our activity ceases; the work halts, and in the end our good resolution stands like the unfinished bridge, beautiful in inception and purpose, but falling short of its goal.

Why are so many good resolutions abandoned? Possibly it is because we do not always receive the encouragement we think we ought to receive. Possibly it is because unforeseen difficulties discourage us. But probably the real explanation is that most of us depend too much on ourselves and too little on God. The Christian of today might well profit by the advice of the great apostle who said, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."—Youth's Companion.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Internal cleanliness protects against disease

IT is but a step from those immediate results of constipation—headache, heaviness, loss of appetite—to serious disease. Such minor ailments are a warning that poisons from food waste are flooding your body. Keep clean internally.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a laxative and cannot gripe. Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world.

Don't give disease a start. Adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. Nujol is not a medicine. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

PROHIBITION AND AUTOMOBILES

There are in Ohio enough automobiles to carry the entire population, with an average of five persons in each machine. Father Ohio therefore can get out the family flivver and take the entire family a ride without overcrowding.

The growth of the number of automobiles in Ohio has been far out of proportion to the growth of the population. It has been steady ever since 1917 with the exception that in 1919, just at the close of the war, it dropped slightly, because at that time there was a great tendency on the part of the people to make their old cars do and to invest their money in War Savings stamps and Liberty Bonds.

Nobody will contend that prohibition alone is responsible for the large increase of the number of machines in Ohio. but it is a fact that the percentage of increase has been very heavy since prohibition went into effect. Ohio, which has been gradually drying up for several years, went dry by State-wide prohibition, May 27, 1919—about five weeks before complete war-time prohibition went into effect.

In 1917, the last complete wet year in the United States, Ohio had 342,500 passenger cars and trucks. In 1918 the war-time food control bill was passed, which stopped the manufacture of distilled liquor. Other legislation closed up a great many saloons around army camps and prohibited the sale of liquor to soldiers so that there was some stride in 1918. Notice that the number of cars and trucks rose to 511,150.

In 1919 the total number was 511,300. In 1920 there were 537,342 passenger cars and 81,791 trucks—making a total of 619,133. National as well as State prohibition had gone into effect at that time. In 1921 Ohio had 625,912 passenger cars and 98,591 trucks, a total of 724,503. In 1822 the passenger cars numbered 740,886 and the trucks 117,857, making a total of 858,743.

As this is being written, Oct. 1, the licenses already issued added to those which the secretary of State, T. H. Brown, estimates will be issued, will make for Ohio 889,000 passenger cars and 147,000 trucks—a total of 1,036,000. This number is three times as many as the total in 1917 and twice as many as in 1918. Practically every workingman in Ohio owns his car and drives it to work.—Bulletin.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"THOU HAST CONQUERED."

A gentleman in New York had a fine copy of Hoffman's "Jesus Talking to the Doctors." One day a judge of the Supreme Court came in on business. He was instantly attracted by the picture on the easel. His eyes would go back to it. as he talked, again and again. Later in the morning he came back again and said. "I want to see that Boy again." I said, "Take it into my private office and look at it as long as you want to." An hour passed, and then he came out and laid the picture down, with tears running down his face, and said: "The Boy has conquered me," and he went out to become an earnest Christian devoted to the Master.—Speer.

GETTING BEHIND EACH OTHER.

'Since the church paper gets behind every good cause, there is no reason why the church should not get behind the church paper. Getting behind it must mean in every way—financially, sympathetically, and laboriously. The columns of the church paper are used freely and constantly for notices, appeals, discussions, and in other ways. The Conference could not well get along without a voice, a medium of communication. It is, therefore, incumbent upon the Conferences to see that the "organ" does not fall by the wayside.—Methodist Advocate.

Life of Thomas Coke

By WARREN AKIN CANDLER, D.D.

Great achievements, whether they be of individuals or of the masses, are usually the result of the uncommon devotion of some great man. The establishment of the Methodist Church and the promulgation of its doctrines during the early years centered upon the lives of a few devout leaders, among whom was Thomas Coke. In the propagation of Methodism he was second only to John Wesley, and in some respects he was superior to that great man.

Layman or preacher will profit by a close study and application of the life of this illustrious character.

Substitutes are generally more expensive in the end than genuine articles. Housewives have learned—they KNOW this is true where bakings are concerned.

Self rising flours are classed as substitutes for plain flour and good baking powder. The use of these special mixtures is very liable to result in false economy, failures and waste on bake day.

Remember there is a big difference, in many ways, between biscuits and other bakings made from these so-called self-rising flours and those made from good plain flour and a dependable leavener. Try the experiment—make a baking from each—convince yourself.

You will find the baking made from flour and baking powder far more attractive in appearance. It will raise higher—retain its full food value and taste better.

For best results, do not fail to use Calumet, the Economy Baking Powder, and a reliable brand of plain flour.

Just think of it—the sale of Calumet is 2½ times as much as that of any other brand. It contains only such ingredients as have been officially approved by the United States Food Authorities. It is pure and sure.

You save when you buy it—you save when you use it.

RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING PURE DOCTRINE.

(Adopted by the Mississippi Annual Conference and Publication Requested in the Advocate.)

Whereas there has been continued discussion throughout the bounds of the church of the propriety of certain remarks made by one of the lecturers on the platform at Junaluska last May; therefore, be it resolved by this Conference:

1. That we urge that all differences in opinion be regarded with charity toward the souls of those who differ from us.

2. That we insist upon all criticism being courteous in form and loving in spirit.

3. That we deem it extremely unwise to provide instructors for our young people who either assail the integrity of the Scriptures or who raise doubts as to their sufficiency as inspired guide for our faith and practice.

4. That we assure our young people that no truth has ever been so vigorously and continuously assailed as that contained in the Bible, and that no truth has ever been so thoroughly tested and proved as that on which we rely for our salvation.

5. That the evidence of the Divine origin and trustworthy character of all contained in the Bible is too well established to justify skeptical statements in our church teachings, either through the printed page or the spoken word.

6. That our great need is for teachers and writers and preachers whose personal relations with God lift them above skepticism or uncertainty.

Resolved, finally, That we pledge ourselves anew to living by the teachings of the Old Book, so as to exemplify to others the sentiment:

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in his excellent
Word."

BLACK-DRAUGHT SINCE BOYHOOD

LOUISIANA MAN ATTRIBUTES HIS FORTUNATE ESCAPE FROM A SERIOUS EPIDEMIC TO THE USE OF BLACK-DRAUGHT.

Holden, La.—"When I was just a boy at home," says Mr. F. D. Roberson, of this place, "my father and mother used Black-Draught, and I found then what a good medicine it was for the liver and for indigestion. I have used it on from then to now, finding it was good for headache, indigestion, bloating after meals, and colds.

"A couple of years ago, every one, almost, around me was having the 'flu.' I took a cold and was feeling bad. I thought then I would take Black-Draught. I took a good big dose every night and I can't begin to tell just how much good it did me. I was able to stay up and wait on others, and I believe my good fortune was due to the use of Black-Draught. I wouldn't be without it in my home, for it is the best medicine I have ever used."

By keeping your liver and stomach in good order, you stand in little danger of catching the serious ills that occasionally become epidemics, spreading through town and country.

Black-Draught is composed of medicinal roots and herbs, finely powdered and carefully mixed in the right proportions to act naturally on the stomach and liver. It has been found to improve digestion, and to relieve constipation in a prompt, safe way.

GOOD LITERATURE SUNDAY.

Sunday, Jan. 27, 1924, will be Good Literature Sunday in Southern Methodism. The College of Bishops has given this its endorsement.

The purpose of observing this day is to promote the circulation of your Conference organ and the General Organ, the Nashville Christian Advocate.

The committee appointed by the Southern Methodist Press Association will mail to pastors, through the Circulation Department, Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., certain materials and supplies during the first week of January, for use on Good Literature Sunday.

We solicit the hearty support of our preachers in making this day a success.

Proceedings of the Louisiana Annual Conference.

First Day.

The seventy-eighth session of the Louisiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in the beautiful Elizabeth Sullivan Memorial Methodist Church, in the hospitable city of Bogalusa., La., at 9 o'clock, Wednesday morning, Nov. 21. Bishop Warren A. Candler, the Senior Bishop of the church, greatly beloved in Louisiana as well as throughout the church, was in the chair. Bishop W. F. McMurry, President of the General Board of Finance, was present at the opening session in the interest of the Superannuate Endowment Fund.

The opening address of Bishop Candler was a characteristic one—full of religion, wit, common sense, profound philosophy, keen satire, tender sentiment. When Bishop Candler "gets off on his right foot"—and he seldom does otherwise—we doubt if he has an equal on this continent as a preacher. He was fully at himself on Wednesday morning.

The organization of the Conference for business was perfected by the election of R. H. Harper as Secretary, with John F. Foster and H. N. Brown as assistants, and R. W. Vaughan as Statistical Secretary, and by fixing the bar of the Conference and the hours of meeting and adjourning.

The roll call showed that most of the preachers and lay delegates were present. The Conference learned with sorrow that P. O. Lowrey had just undergone a surgical operation and would not be able to attend this session of the Conference, and that Martin Hebert and O. W. Bradley were kept away by the critical illness of their fathers.

Hon. Ed Cassidy, acting mayor of Bogalusa in the absence of Mr. W. H. Sullivan, was presented to the Conference, and he officially extended to the Conference a welcome to Bogalusa that was as appropriately expressed as it was manifestly sincere. Bishop Candler responded in suitable vein.

R. H. Wynn, for the presiding elders, nominated the following for the standing committees, and those nominated were elected:

Public Worship—E. C. Gunn, J. W. Lee, K. L Bean.

Conference Relations—H. W. Rickey, R. T. Ware, A. A. Bernard, A. H. Parker, T. J. Holladay, L. N. Hoffpauir, J. F. Waltman.

District Conference Records—P. H. Fontaine, G. D. Purcell, J. W. Faulk, S. M. Abel, Dr. T. P. Bell.

Sabbath Observance—A. W. Waddill, L. E. Crooks, H. C. Murphy, P. O. Lowrey, F. J. McCoy, C. F. Sheppard, H. B. Thomason.

Prison Reform—H. S. Johns, D. C. Barr, T. H. Mills.

Hospital Board—Clerical: W. L. Duren, L. I. McCain, A. J. Gearheard, G. S. Sexton, S. D. Howard, W. E. Akin, C. C. Miller; Lay: C. M. Roberts, R. O. Randle, O. H. Cline, F. T. Whited, Dr. George S. Brown, R. H. Nelson, Dr. M. S. Cushman.

Memorial Home—Ellis Smith, R. W. Vaughan, Dr. M. F. Wilson.

Memoirs—Briscoe Carter, for J. M. Brown; R. H. Wynn, for P. M. Brown; W. L. Doss, Jr., for H. B. Vandenburg; J. B. Williams, for S. D. Roberts; W. W. Holmes, for Mrs. R. E. Smith and Mrs. C. C. Wier; R. H. Wynn, for Mrs. J. O. Bennett.

On nomination of the presiding elders, vacancies on committees were filled as follows: Committee on Admissions—W. W. Holmes, in place of W. W. Drake, relieved of work on the committee on account of his duties as a presiding elder; Admission on Trial—A. D. George, in place of Paul M. Brown, deceased; Class of Third Year—W. C. Childress, in place of J. W. Pearson, transferred to another Conference.

T. W. Talkington, pastor of the First Baptist Church; Spurgeon Wingo, pastor of the Superior Avenue Baptist Church, and H. E. Hoppen, Secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., were presented to the Conference.

According to time-honored custom, the names of the presiding elders were called, they reported the work of their districts, and their characters were passed, as follows: W. L. Doss, Jr., Alexandria District; J. W. Lee, Baton Rouge District; J. B. Williams, Lake Charles District; W. D. Kleinschmidt, Monroe District; W. W. Drake, New Orleans District; K. W. Dodson, Ruston District; R. H. Wynn, Shreveport District. The reports of the presiding elders showed that the past year has been a good one in the work of the church, both materially and spiritually. Several churches and parsonages have been built or repaired, gracious revivals have been held throughout the Conference, and many hundreds of members have been added to the church upon profession of faith. The figures given indicated that the net gain in membership for the year would probably equal that of last year, which was 3,850.

Bishop McMurry was presented, and he spoke concerning the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment, giving in detail the plan as adopted by the Board of Finance and approved by the General Conference. The Bishop's address was both informing and inspiring, and the evident interest of the Conference is a guarantee that this cause will meet a hearty response on the part of Louisiana Methodism. Following Bishop McMurry's address, Bishop Candler addressed the Conference forcefully upon the same subject.

The Committee on Public Worship announced that F. M. Freeman would preach at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and that the Board of Missions would observe its anniversary at 7:30 p. m., with addresses by Dr. R. L. Russell, Secretary of the Board of Missions, Home Department, and Rev. F. S. Onderdonk, Superintendent of the Texas Mexican Mission; announcements of board and committee meetings were made, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction pronounced by Robert Randle.

A large congregation assembled for the preaching service at 3 o'clock in the afternoon to hear Rev. F. M. Freeman, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Monroe. Brother Freeman is considered one of the strongest preachers of the Conference, and he delivered a helpful message on the subject, "The Quest for God."

The anniversary meeting of the Board of Missions at 7:30 o'clock was presided over by J. G. Snelling, chairman of the Board. Brief addresses were made by Stephen S. Thomas, Conference Centenary Secretary-Treasurer, and Dr. R. L. Russell, of the General Board of Missions. A truly great presentation of the missionary work of the church was made by Rev. F. S. Onderdonk, Superintendent of the Texas Mexican Mission. Dr. W. W. Drake, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, presented to the congregation the need of two Ford cars for the use of preachers in the French section of Southern Louisiana, and an offering was taken for their purchase. This service was attended by a congregation that filled the church to its capacity.

Second Day.

The second day's session of the Louisiana Annual Conference met at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, with Bishop Candler in the chair. The Bishop again delivered a great address, his closing period being overwhelmingly beautiful and powerful.

After the roll was called and the minutes of the previous day's session were read and approved, Dr. W. W. Drake announced that the collection at the Missionary Anniversary the evening before amounted to $172.12, and one Ford car. The object of the collection was to purchase two Ford cars for the use of preachers in the French Mission territory, and Dr. Drake stated that the necessary amount was in sight. Mr. T. L. James, of Ruston, was the donor of the car.

The Bishop announced the following transfers to the Conference: Clyde D. Baker, in the Class of the First Year, from the New Mexico Conference; Floyd W. Dick, in the Class of the First Year, from the Western Virginia Conference; Leon Picone, an elder in the Class of the Third Year, from the Florida Cnference. These brethren had come to the Conference since the session last year, and all of them have had charges this year.

Dr. A. J. Lamar, Senior Publishing Agent, was presented to the Conference, and he spoke concerning the publishing interests of the church. The profits of the Publishing House go to the superannuated preachers, their widows and orphans, and a strong plea was made for the patronage of all our people, preachers and laymen. Special attention was called to the Cokesbury Hymnal, recently issued by the Publishing House, which is generally regarded as the best book of its kind that has ever been published.

The names of the following superannuate members of the Conference were called, their characters were passed, and they were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the same relation: R. A. Davis, W. F. Henderson, F. G. Hocutt, S. S. Holladay, R. S. Isbell, J. F. Patterson, Robert Randle, J. T. Sawyer, S. A. Steel, F. N. Sweeney, W. J. Porter, J. G. Sloane, B. T. Crews, S. J. Davies. When the names of P. M. Brown, J. M. Brown, and H. B. Vandenberg were called, it was announced that they had died during the year, and their names were referred to the Committee on Memoirs. Of these men on the "Honor Roll" of the Conference, the following were present: W. F. Henderson, Robert Randle, F. N. Sweeney, J. G. Sloane, S. J. Davies. Letters of greeting were read from the following: J. F. Patterson, J. T. Sawyer, S. A. Steel; a telegram of greeting was received from R. A. Davis.

On motion of the presiding elder, the name of B. H. Sheppard was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation. Brother Sheppard served the Jena and Jonesville charge during the past year, and the report of his presiding elder showed that he has done a fine work.

The following traveling preachers, having met the Disciplinary requirements, were elected to deacon's orders and advanced to the Class of the Third Year: Henry LeRoy Johns, Claude H. Mayo; the following, not having stood approved examinations, were passed as to character and continued in their present classes: Eunice V. Duplantis, D. C. Bennett; Henry B. Hines, and Dan F. Anders, already deacons, were passed in examination of character and continued in the Class of the First Year; Joseph L. Greenway, Jr., was passed in examination of character, and advanced to the Class of the Third Year, but was not eligible to deacon's orders, having served only one year in the traveling connection; Lee R. Sparks, already in orders, was passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Third Year.

A class of ten was received on trial into the traveling connection, as follows: Franklin Pearson Moss, from the Alexandria District; Thomas Frederick King, James Anatole Knight, James Berry Grambling, and Adrien Maurice Serex, from the New Orleans District; Ellsworth J. Buck, and John F. Dring, from the Ruston District; Guy Morgan Hicks, from the Shreveport District; Peyton Benjamin McCullin, and Henry Washington Jordan, from the Monroe District. Of these, Thomas Frederick King has recently come from England for the express purpose of joining the Louisiana Conference, he having been a local preacher in the British Wesleyan Church; James Anatole Knight is a young French preacher who is especially fitted for work in the French Mission territory, and Adrien Maurice Serex is a native of Switzerland, now a student in Emory University preparing himself especially for work in the European mission fields. It has been several years since such a large class was admitted on trial.

In answer to the question, "Who remain on trial?" the following, having stood approved examinations, were passed as to character and advanced to the Class of the Second Year: Charles E. McLean, Claude C. Smith, Robert A. Bozeman, Archibald K. McLelland, Floyd W. Dick; the following, not having stood approved examinations, were passed as to character and continued in the Class of the First Year: Aristile Bruiet, Jay Coburn, Don E. Dulaney.

Announcement was made that W. F. Chase had withdrawn from the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Clyde D. Baker was discontinued at his own request, in order that he might make further educational preparation for the ministry.

The name of George S. Sexton was called and

REV. J. A. HALL—A MEMOIR.

By Rev. V. C. Curtis.

Rev. J. A. Hall, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Hall, was born on a farm near Scotland, Ind., and died at Tupelo, Miss., May 31, 1923. He attended the country schools in the county where he was born, and later went to the University at Mitchell, Ind. After he had been in the University two years, he married and spent some time in teaching. But feeling the need of better equipment, he returned to the University and graduated from there two years later. The next two years were spent in teaching in the high school of Mitchell, and then he came South and took charge of a large boarding school located at Plattsburg, Miss. He taught there one year, and was then elected principal of the high school of Louisville, Miss. At the close of the second year in the last position, he gave up his school work and entered the ministry.

Brother Hall joined the Baptist Church when he was seventeen years of age and remained a member of that communion until 1900. Under the ministry of Rev. D. W. Babb, he decided to join the Methodist Church, and was licensed to preach. He was admitted on trial into the traveling connection in the North Mississippi Conference at its session of 1900, which met in West Point, Miss. He served the Louisville charge four years, Como three years, Winona four years, Grenada four years, Greenwood four years, and was serving his fourth year in Tupelo when he laid his armor down and received his crown.

Brother Hall was married on Dec. 1, 1888, to Miss Margarette Holt. To this union were born ten children, four of whom died in infancy. His faithful wife, Mrs. Margarette Hall, and the remaining six children, Mr. Fay Hall, Mr. Ray Hall, Mrs. Eva Hoffman, and Miss Janie Hall, all of Greenwood, Miss.; Mrs. Ruth Hight, of Jackson, Tenn., and Mrs. Pearl Dean, of Tupelo, survive him.

It was my good fortune to be associated with Brother Hall before either of us was licensed to preach, and a warm and abiding friendship had been formed. He was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial from the Durant District the same year that I was recommended from the Columbus District, and the former friends met at West Point and became members of the same class. At this first Conference we were entertained in the same home, and at our request to the Conference hosts we roomed together, with only three exceptions, at each succeeding Conference while he lived. For twenty-five years we were bound together with the strong ties of Christian love. In all this time no shadow fell across our path, nothing disturbed the tender relations that existed between us. We withheld no secret, but confided fully in each other in regard to private and personal matters.

I had the opportunity to study his character at close range. His soul was transparent—no secret design or unworthy motive was harbored there. No suggestion of hate, no disposition to jealousy, no shadow of suspicion were lurking in his breast. He despised the spirit of place-seeking or ambition for earthly honors. He left the making of his appointments in the hands of the Lord and his brethren, and was never solicitous about the result. Wherever he was sent, he regarded his appointment as the best in the Conference.

Brother Hall's heart was as tender as that of a little child. The current of sympathy that ran through his soul was broad and deep. In him, the poor, the widow, the orphan, and the outcast had a friend; the discouraged, the afflicted and the bereaved had a comforter. These elements drew men to him and held them as with hoops of steel, and made him one of the most beloved and popular pastors this Conference ever had. He was indeed the shepherd of the flock over which he had been appointed overseer. In him was seen an example of the highest type of Christian manhood.

Brother Hall was a strong and attractive preacher. His pulpit ministry was of that kind that wears well. It was necessary to hear him Sunday after Sunday to appreciate fully his strength. His mind was enriched with the best that there was to be found in literature, and it was his delight to express the great truths in the language of the poets and the words of the masters. His extensive reading gave him a breadth of vision and a sympathetic attitude towards those who differed from him. With a rich vocabulary and a heart aglow with the love of God and for his fellow-man, he brought forth out of his treasure things new and old. He made as careful preparation of his sermons for his regular weekly appointments as he did for those he used on special occasions. Over his protests he was appointed frequently to preach during the sessions of the Annual Conference, and he usually used the same sermon that he had preached to his congregation the preceding Sunday.

While he had definite opinions and the courage of his convictions, he had not the spirit of controversy. He did not impugn the motive or grow impatient with those who differed from him. He was ready to do the work assigned him, whether it was on Conference Committee or a Quadrennial Board, yet he seldom took any part in debate on the Conference floor.

The main secret of his life was his strong faith in God and his rich personal experience. He was an humble supplicant at the Father's throne. He felt that he was a sinner saved by grace. Well do I remember on one occasion, when he was listening to the strains of "Amazing Grace, How Sweet the Sound," he was overcome with emotion, and amidst his tears said: "That is I, that is I."

His health had not been robust for several years. When the first symptoms of the fatal disease appeared, he conferred with the writer freely as to what was best to be done after he was gone, and spoke of his going Home as he would of going back to his native State to see his father and mother. Only a few months before the final summons came, he expressed the hope that the Lord would permit him to remain long enough for his daughters to finish school. The approaching marriage of two of them had been announced, and the youngest had finished high school only a few days before he went away.

I will not invade the sacred precincts of his home life further than to say that the union of hearts and blending of lives seemed to be perfect. A stronger affection or a more beautiful devotion to wife, children and grandchildren, I have never seen. When you entered that home, it seemed that love had made the atmosphere holy and the very place sacred.

It was Brother Hall's privilege to die in the active service. This had been his desire, and in that the Lord heard his prayer. He held the usual Wednesday evening prayer service in his church on May 31. Little did he or the congregation know that a convoy of angels was waiting at the door to carry him home. After the service was over, he spent some time in his study and then went to his room, retired and went to sleep, and waked up in Glory.

The funeral services were conducted by his intimate friend and presiding elder, Rev. T. H. Dorsey, assisted by a number of the brethren of the Conference and the pastors of the local churches of Tupelo. His body was carried to Greenwood, Miss., the scene of his former labors, and in the presence of a host of relatives and friends was laid to rest among many of his former parishioners over whose graves he had said the last funeral rites. The services at the grave were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. L. W. Rose, of the Episcopal Church, his former friend and co-worker.

In his going the Conference has lost one of its strongest preachers and most beloved pastors; the brethren a true and loyal friend, and the family an affectionate husband and devoted father.

Greenwood, Miss.

SUPERFICIALITY IN SOME FORMS OF SCHOOL EVANGELISM.

By John W. Shackford.

One of our Conference evangelists recently asked me if I didn't think that there is danger of superficiality in some kinds of Sunday school evangelism. My reply was that there is more than danger, that I was sure there is much actual superficiality in it, and that one of our main concerns is to arouse our pastors and Sunday school workers to the great need of giving more careful attention to this most important matter of making our Sunday school evangelism more vital and more thoroughly effective in reaching the pupils of our schools.

We cannot insist too strongly that our religious education be permeated with the spirit of evangelism. On the other hand, we must seek to redeem our evangelism from sporadic emotionalism and mechanical superficiality by relating it more closely to a continuous program of religious teaching. Jesus plainly designed that the work of teaching should prepare the way for complete obedience to Him as Lord and Master. Even in the case of his own disciples, he first asked only that they become learners; their confession of his lordship and the higher reaches of their faith and experience were to follow.

There is a very real need for a re-study of the nature and conditions of a fruitful and abiding evangelism, especially as regards the children and youth of the church. The reasons why we so often have professions and accessions of members who have no real knowledge of the meaning of Christianity and of the program of Jesus for his followers are certainly not far to seek.

The practice of receiving members into the church who have had no previous preparation for membership, not even a personal conference with the pastor, and have had no provision made for the care of their souls or the further training in the Christian way, is at strange variance from the practices of the early church, and of early Methodism as well. Whatever may be the excuse, during a great evangelistic meeting, for hurried and superficial dealing with adult converts unknown to the evangelist and whom he may never see again, there can be no corresponding excuse for dealing in this manner with the boys and girls who are in regular attendance upon our Sunday schools.

Sometimes the entire year of opportunity for personal evangelism is allowed to pass with no real effort on the part of either teacher or pastor to talk with the pupils of the deeper things of Christ, and then there is held, without careful preparation, a formal Decision Day at which an effort is made to stir the emotions of the youthful members of the school and press for an immediate decision for Christ. After this, frequently, they are received into the church membership almost immediately with less private instruction than is given to a candidate seeking admission to some fraternal order. When looked at in all seriousness, this is little less than trifling with the most serious business of the Kingdom. Such practices are a wrong to childhood and justly bring Sunday school evangelism of this type into disrepute.

One hesitates to characterize the lack of understanding of the Christian life or of the mind and heart of a real boy or girl that must lie back of such a mechanical treatment of the children and youth of the church who constitute the primary hope of its future strength. The pastor can plead no reason for holding a decision service in his Sunday school without taking the time to prepare for it and to follow it with the proper care of those who are concerned about their religious life and experience.

A Misconception as to the Real Nature of Decision Day.

The very name Decision Day is too often intepreted to mean that a whole group of Sunday school pupils is to be urged at a particular moment on a particular day, to decide then and there for Christ. Perhaps they are sometimes told on such occasions that "Not to decide for Christ is to decide against him." Yet every thoughtful person understands that it is unnatural as well as mechanical to expect all the boys and girls of the church to be ready at a given signal to make a decision of this nature. Especially is this true when no effort has been made to prepare them for this occasion.

What is still worse is that many make what is called a decision when they lack all preparation for it and understanding of its significance. They may act in response to a mere emotional appeal or the influence of the occasion, or the example of others, and yet have very little real religious impulse lying back of the act, little conviction, and little of anything that has real significance for the Christian life.

To line up the young members of the Sunday school in this fashion, call their response to our appeal "a decision for Christ," and then to give no further thought or attention to helping to interpret their own act, or to understand more fully what their privileges and responsibilities are in the Christian life, is to do a great wrong to these little ones who can be easily exploited in the name of religion, but who are likewise so ready to be led into the growing experience and understanding of the Christian life.

If we are concerned for an evangelism that lays broadly and deeply the foundations for an ever expanding Christian experience, we will not tolerate a Decision Day service of this sort in our Sunday schools.

"ABBA, FATHER."

By O. Sewell Palmer.

Throughout the panoramic scope of the New Testament Literature the words "Abba, Father," are used only thrice.

In Mark 14:35, 36, is the following: "And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from Him. And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless, not what I will, but what thou wilt."

The next instance is in Romans 8:15. Beginning with the fourteenth verse it is read thusly: "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father."

In Galatians 4:6 is to be found the third instance: "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father."

At numerous times preachers in their sermons and other people in their religious conversations have quoted these two words without realizing the depth of their potential meaning.

One of the standard Greek-English lexicons, i. e., Liddell and Scott's, defines "Abba" as the Hebrew word "Father." Then, when we say "Abba, Father," we are actually saying, "Father, Father." That is what Christ said in His Gethsemane prayer. "And he said, Father, Father, all things are possible unto thee."

Considering the quotation from Romans in the same manner we have the following rendering: "Ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Father, Father." "God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Father, Father." Galatians 4:6.

In regard to the excerpt from Galatians it is well to remember the context for several verses previous to this one. Paul was discussing the function of the Law. He had shown that it was a schoolmaster to the children—the Hebrews. But when the child became of age, that is, when he put on Jesus Christ, he became not under the Law but a son of God. It is when the child Hebrew became of age, or became an adult, or became a son, that he put away the Law. In this state "there is neither Jew nor Greek; there is neither bond nor free; there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." And all are sons, in the figurative sense. "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, crying, Father, Father." It is not "your hearts" that are crying "Father, Father"; it is "the Spirit of His Son" that is so crying.

"Abba, Father," is not found in the Greek translation of the Old Testament, which translation was made about 280 B. C. The Septuagint knows not such a combination. They are used in the New Testament only three times. It is possible that their use is due to the mere Hellenization of the Jewish environment, and to a greater or less degree, of the Jews themselves. But there is probably a better reason for their use in the New Testament, since they are used only three times. Probably they carried with them some significance other than the mere meaning of the Hebrew word by itself plus the mere meaning of the Greek word by itself.

If there is no such particular significance, this would be a group of instances of mere repetition. But in even that event they may well connote an anguish of spirit in the first two quotations. Yet the writer thinks that they possess a greater significance than even that.

In this combination we have a Hebrew and a Greek, or Gentile term. "And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee." These words—what soul-agony they express in this prayer of Christ's! Is it possible, or is it probable that Christ was, even in his anguish, uttering the truth that God is the God of the Hebrews and of the Gentiles, too, when he said, "Abba, Father?"

The passage in Romans, penned by the very "Apostle to the Gentiles," seems to bear that interpretation as well. It reads, "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God," etc. The phrase "as many as" includes both Hebrews and Gentiles. It is worth remembering that this epistle was to the Roman Church composed principally of Gentile Christians. So the Gentiles can also be sons of God. But it is not the Hebrew God only, but He is also the Gentile God.

In the instance of Christ's prayer we have the Incarnated God, the Revealer of God, declaring this Father of the Hebrews to be also the Father of the Gentiles. In the next cited passage we have saved souls crying the truth that God is the Father of the Hebrews and the Father of the Gentiles. How great! But in the passage from Galatians is to be found an interpretation equally as great. Here it is the very indwelling Spirit "in your hearts crying, Abba, Father," declaring God to be for the Gentile heart as well as for the Hebrew heart. How wonderful.

It all points to the truth expressed in Galatians 3:28: "There is neither Jew nor Greek—for all are one in Christ Jesus." God is not only the most powerful God of all gods. That is not the only reason that the Gentiles call Him their God. But God is a universal Father who loveth all of His children, Hebrew and Gentile, without respect of persons. What a glorious truth these words express—"Abba, Father"—the UNIVERSAL Fatherhood of God!

THE MEANING OF MONEY.

Everybody is supposed to know the meaning of money, and most people recognize it quickly enough when they see it. And yet we are amused when we notice some little tot in a store never thinking to proffer his nickel, over which the tiny fist remains tightly closed, in return for the cake or candy held out by the smiling storekeeper. It is really only gradually that people come to appreciate the significance and service of money. We may leave the trained economists to dispute over the exact definition of this term, and give a more popular account of it. From earliest times men have had some mediums of exchange or counters by which to tag off the goods they wished to trade. Barter, where one commodity is itself directly substituted for another, may do in simple communities, and is the only method known to utter savages, but it is a slow and clumsy process, and so cowry shells, wampum belts, Chinese cash, Roman coins, or carefully minted sovereigns came into general use, and have a psychological as well as economic value, since they can be seen, handled and stacked up. A check, however valuable, hardly seems like money, and to some a silver dollar, heavy in the palm, represents a more tangible value. There have been misers—and may be yet—who have gloated over literal stacks of gold or silver coin, counting them again and again, and treating them like spoiled pets. It may not be possible for a modern bondholder thus to visualize his stocks and dividends, but too often such a one evinces just as miserly a spirit.

But what, now, in the larger sense is money? It is an index of value, and a capacity for action. The man who has a dollar, says Carlyle, owns the world—to the extent of a dollar. This is not strictly true, since there are things which for sentimental and other reasons never come on the market; but yet in a sense money is power. Many men there are, accused by their associates of being worshipers of the dollar, who are really thinking in terms, not of shillings, pounds, pence, or gold coin, but of automobiles, garages, more acres, or trips abroad—that is, of the things which money, that nimble messenger, will bring. Many such men, too, have expensive families who have overmuch been coddled in luxury, and demand to live in a showy style, for whose upkeep they scrifice time, strength, health, and perhaps reputation. That surely is the height of extravagance, where one is spendthrift not only of material things but also of nervous tissues and virtuous character. Others still there are who think of money only as a means to political power. This, they argue, is the day of the "multo" man, who is the only kind going on diplomatic missions, elected to legislatures, or presiding over big corporations, to whom, like a modern Nebuchadnezzar, the multitudes obsequiously bow down. There remains just one other use for money, which alone can justify its minting—and that is as it is consecrated to the kingdom of God, and so serves the highest interests of man. For money, as for every other sort of capacity, acquisition, or power, men are accountable to their Maker. A man may make money if he can, but he should never allow it to unmake him. If wealthy, let him become richest of all toward God.—Zion's Herald.

No one of my fellows can do that special work for me which I have come into the world to do; he may do a higher work, a greater work, but he cannot do my work. I cannot hand my work over to him, any more than I can hand over my responsibilities or my gifts.—John Ruskin.

No man has come to true greatness who has not felt in some degree that his life belongs to the race and that what God gives him he gives that for mankind.—Phillips Brooks.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE

his character was passed. As President of Centenary College he made a report of the condition and work of that historic institution, calling attention to the fact that it would celebrate its one hundredth anniversary in the year 1925. The growth of the college in resources and in the number of its student body has been one of the outstanding features of the educational work of the Conference. Its productive endowment now amounts to $452,000, and its student body numbers 254. The Centenary Academy has also had a splendid growth.

The Committee on Public Worship announced that Rev. N. E. Joyner would preach at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and that the Sunday School Board would observe its anniversary at 7:30 o'clock, with the principal address to be delivered by Mr. M. W. Brabham.

The benediction was pronounced, and the Conference stood adjourned.

At the 3 o'clock hour, Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor of the Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, preached an inspiring sermon on the subject, "Things That Come Through Defeat." The church was filled to its capacity with an attentive and appreciative audience.

The anniversary of the Sunday School Board was presided over by Mr. William Shields Holmes, of Baton Rouge, chairman of the Sunday School Board. Brief addresses were made by C. D. Atkinson, H. L. Johns, N. E. Joyner, and W. W. Drake, after which Mr. M. W. Brabham, of the General Sunday School Board, delivered an address that greatly pleased and benefited the great audience. A feature of this service was the singing of a quartet composed of B. D. Talley, K. I. Bean, W. J. Willoughby, and L. J. Simmons.

Third Day.

The third day's session of the Louisana Annual Conference began promptly at 9 o'clock Friday morning, Bishop Warren A. Candler in the chair. Again Bishop Candler gave a great devotional and inspirational address.

The minutes of the previous day's session were read and approved.

The name of Ollie Lee Tucker, already in orders, was called, he was passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Third Year. B. D. Watson was passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year. Leon Picone was passed in examination of character and he was continued in the Class of the Third Year.

Question eight, "Who are readmitted?" was called, and the answer was, none.

Rev. Otto William Nalley, from the Alexandria District, was received in orders from the Methodist Protestant Church, and immediately, upon his own request, was granted an honorable location.

The orders of Charles F. Greene, coming to us as a local elder from the Methodist Episcopal Church, and of Joshua Soule Sanders, coming to us as a local elder from the Church of the Nazarenes, were recognized by the Conference.

Porter Miles Caraway was passed in examination of character, graduated in the Conference course of study, and elected to elder's orders. Thomas William St. John was passed in examination of character and he was graduated in the course of study, but, not having served the required length of time as a travelling preacher, he was not eligible to elder's orders. William F. Roberts was passed in examination of character, but, not having appeared before the Examining Committee, he was continued in the Class of the Fourth Year.

Request was made of the Conference for prayer in behalf of Mrs. Fontenot, of Crowley, La., and for a son of Rev. G. P. White, of Livonia, La., both of whom were reported seriously ill.

The following visitors, all of the Mississippi Conference, were presented to the Conference: Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. D. E. Kelley, Rev. J. S. Purcell, Rev. W. H. Saunders, Rev. T. H. King, Rev. A. J. Davis, Rev. J. V. Bennett.

John F. Foster, for the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, submitted a resolution of the committee, which had also been presented to the North Mississippi and the Mississippi Conferences, concerning the advisability of changing the name of the Advocate to "The South Central Christian Advocate" and removing its headquarters to Jackson, Miss. Upon motion of S. J. Davies, and by unanimous vote, the Conference went on record as opposed to the changes.

Dr. H. H. Sherman, of the General Board of Education, was presented to the Conference, and he spoke of the educational interest of the church, with special reference to the Christian Education Movement. Bishop Candler also addressed the Conference upon the subject of Christian education.

Prof. W. M. Bratton, President of Mansfield College, was presented to the Conference and he spoke concerning the college. The institution of the church now has 18 teachers and 100 students. The college urgently needs increased facilities and an endowment and a campaign is now under way for raising [illegible]. President Bratton stated that Dr. [illegible] has [illegible] more than $50,000 for this purpose. Upon motion the Secretary of the Conference was instructed to send a telegram to the [illegible] heartily endorsing and commending the movement.

The Committee on Public Worship announced that R. W. Tucker would preach at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and that the anniversaries of the Epworth League Board and the Board of Church Extension would be observed at 7:30 in the evening, with an address by F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League.

The benediction was pronounced by W. H. Saunders and the Conference stood adjourned.

R. W. Tucker preached a helpful and inspiring sermon at 3 o'clock p. m. on the subject, "The Sources of the Christian's Encouragement." A great congregation was present at the service.

The anniversaries of the Board of Church Extension and the Epworth League Board were observed at 7:30 o'clock p. m. The meeting was presided over by W. W. Holmes, chairman of the Epworth League Board. Brief addresses were made by F. M. Freeman, of the Board of Church Extension, and J. B. Grambling, of the Epworth League Board, after which the principal address was delivered by F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League Board, who is an honored member of the Louisiana Conference.

Fourth Day.

The fourth day's session was called to order by Bishop Candler promptly at 9 o'clock. The Bishop again gave the Conference one of his great addresses. The minutes of the previous day's session were read and approved.

Rev. H. M. Ellis and Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, both of the Mississippi Conference, were presented to the Conference.

The report of the Conference Woman's Missionary Society was read and ordered to record. This report showed that, as usual, the Methodist women of Louisiana are doing a magnificent work through their missionary organization.

Bishop Candler announced that the following had been transferred from the Louisiana Conference: H. F. Brooks, to the Mississippi Conference; Leland Clegg, to the North Arkansas Conference; J. W. Pearson, to the Southwest Missouri Conference.

The report of the Hospital Board was read and adopted. Pending the adoption of the report, Bishop Candler, President of the General Hospital Board, addressed the Conference concerning the need of hospitals under the auspices of the church. The fact was brought out that Epworth Church, New Orleans, leads the connection in the number of members of the Golden Cross Society—300.

The presence of Dr. T. P. Bell, a lay delegate from the New Orleans District, was noted. This brought out the interesting fact that every lay delegate from that district had been in attendance upon the Conference.

Rev. J. B. Williams, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, called attention to the fact that P. O. Lowrey, our pastor at Indian Bayou, had just undergone an operation at a hospital in New Orleans, and asked that a collection be taken for his benefit. The Conference responded heartily to the request, and $161 was raised.

The reports of the Board of Directors of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage and of R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Orphanage, were read and ordered to record. The election of F. M. Freeman as a member of the Board of Directors was confirmed. These reports showed that the Methodists of Louisiana have the interests of this great institution at heart, evidenced by their liberal contributions on Easter Sunday and on Work Day for its support. The continued observance of these special days was endorsed and commended. It was made plain that the Orphanage urgently needs to be enlarged in order that it may meet the demands made upon it, and the plans for enlargement were received with approval by the Conference. The outstanding need of the institution is an endowment fund, and steps are being taken to raise this fund. R. W. Vaughan was re-elected as Superintendent.

A resolution by the Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground School requesting the Conference to authorize a bond issue of $50,000 for the payment of outstanding indebtedness and for making improvements on the grounds, was presented to the Conference. After considerable discussion, the request was not granted.

Henry LeRoy Johns and Claude Herman Mayo, deacons-elect; Ollie Lee Tucker, an elder, and Thomas William St. John, a deacon, having served the required length of time as probationers, were called to the chancel, addressed by the Bishop upon the duties of the Christian ministry, and, having met all other [illegible] requirements, were [illegible] into full connection.

A motion by R. H. Wynn that an afternoon session be held at [illegible] o'clock was adopted.

The report of the Trustees of the Legal Conference was [illegible] and ordered to record.

H. [illegible] was granted membership on the Epworth League Board in place of Leland Clegg, transferred to another Conference.

An invitation from Homer, La., to hold its next session in that city was extended to the Conference through a telegram from the Mayor and by R. W. Tucker, the pastor. An invitation from Crowley, La., was also extended through Mrs. B. M. Lambert, acting for the church at Crowley. Crowley was chosen as the place for the next session of the Conference.

The Committee on Public Worship announced that the Board of Education would observe its anniversary at 7:30 o'clock p. m., with an address by Dr. H. H. Sherman, Associate Secretary of the General Board of Education. Other announcements were made, and the Conference stood adjourned with the benediction pronounced by F. N. Parker.

Afternoon Session.

After the devotional exercises and the reading and approving of the minutes of the morning session, Bishop Candler, under the call of question twenty-one, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" called the names of all the preachers whose names had not been called before. Those present made their reports and their characters were passed. During this time, Briscoe Carter, Financial Secretary of the Orphanage; R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Orphanage, and J. G. Snelling, Superintendent of the Memorial Home, made reports of the interests committed to their care.

A resolution, signed by F. S. Parker and Charles W. Crisler, requesting the Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground School to present a complete report of the resources and liabilities of the institution, with a policy for financing the same in the future, and authorizing the Board to borrow a sufficient amount of money to meet interest charges on the present indebtedness, was adopted.

A resolution, signed by Briscoe Carter and H. W. Rickey, commending the Times-Picayune for publishing each week studies of the International Sunday School Lessons and expressing the hope that the publication of the same would be continued, was adopted.

On nomination of the presiding elders, the following Hospital Board was elected:

Clerical: W. L. Duren, H. W. Bowman, R. F. Harrell, William Schuhle, W. C. Childress, R. S. Walton, Ellis Smith. Lay: Dr. M. R. Cushman, Dr. Roy B. Harrison, R. O. Randle, Dr. T. S. Jones, Dr. S. L. White, Dr. T. H. Watkins, F. T. Whited.

A motion that when we adjourn we adjourn to meet in Memorial Session at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, was passed. The Bishop appointed Briscoe Carter to preside at the Memorial Session.

Announcements were made, after which the benediction was pronounced by A. S. Lutz, and the Conference stood adjourned.

The anniversary of the Board of Education was held at 7:30 o'clock on Saturday evening, the service being presided over by H. T. Carley. A. S. Lutz, Conference Secretary-Treasurer of Education, made a report of his work during the year. Mrs. Laura M. White represented the work of the French Mission School at Houma, La., in a brief address. Dr. H. H. Sherman, Associate Secretary of the General Board of Education, was presented, and he gave a stirring address concerning the educational obligations and opportunities of the church.

Fifth Day—Sunday.

The Annual Conference love feast was held at 9:30 Sunday morning, conducted by W. F. Henderson. This was a gracious occasion, both to those who gave testimony and to those who heard the religious experience of those who recounted the blessings of God upon their lives.

Bishop Candler preached a great sermon at 11 o'clock on the "Significance of the Resurrection of Jesus," after which he ordained H. L. Johns and C. H. Mayo deacons.

At 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, the Conference convened in Memorial Session, with Briscoe Carter in the chair by appointment of Bishop Candler. After devotional exercises, conducted by Dr. Carter, question fourteen was called, "What preachers have died during the year?" The Secretary of the Conference reported the death of Paul M. Brown, J. M. Brown, H. B. Vandenburg, and S. D. Roberts. It was also announced that Mrs. R. E. Smith, Mrs. J. O. Bennett, and Mrs. C. C. Wier, wives of preachers, had died during the year. Memoirs in honor of the deceased were read as follows: Memoir of Paul M. Brown, read by R. H. Wynn; of J. M. Brown, read by Briscoe Carter; of H. B. Vandenburg, read by W. L. Doss, Jr.; of S. D. Roberts, read by Henry T. Young; memoirs of Mrs. R. E. Smith and Mrs. C. C. Wier were read by W. W. Holmes, and of Mrs. J. O. Bennett by R. H. Wynn, the memoir of Mrs. Bennett having been prepared by P. O. Lowrey. After the reading of the memoirs, many of the brethren paid tender tribute to the memory of the deceased.

The Memorial Session of the Conference stood adjourned with the benediction pronounced by D. C. Barr.

At 7:30 o'clock on Sunday evening, after a profoundly inspiring sermon by Dr. F. N. Parker, Bishop Candler ordained Porter Miles Caraway as an elder.

Sunday Services.

In addition to the services at the Elizabeth Sullivan Memorial Methodist Church, there was preaching at the other churches in Bogalusa, as follows:

First Baptist, 11 a. m., R. H. Harper; 7:30 p. m., F. S. Parker.

Superior Avenue Baptist, 11 a. m., C. W. Crisler; 7:30 p. m., W. W. Drake.

Second Baptist, 11 a. m., D. B. Boddie; 7:30 p. m., L. R. Sparks.

Presbyterian, 11 a. m., W. L. Doss, Jr.; 7:30 p. m., R. H. Wynn.

Sixth Day.

Bishop Candler called the Conference to order at 9 o'clock, Monday morning, Nov. 26, and conducted the devotional exercises. After the reading and approval of the minutes, the Bishop announced the ordination of H. L. Johns and C. H. Mayo as deacons, and the ordination of P. M. Caraway as elder on the preceding day.

The name of Leon Picone, italian preacher, was called, he reported his work, and his character was passed. His report brought out the fact that there are 79,000 Italians within the bounds of the Louisiana Conference.

The report of the Statistical Secretary was read in answer to the minute questions. This report showed that Louisiana Methodism now numbers 52,010, a gain of 2340 during the year just closed. This healthy growth is one of the most encouraging features of what has been one of the best years in the history of the church in Louisiana.

Through nomination of the Board of Lay Activities, T. W. Holloman was elected Conference Lay Leader.

The reports of the following boards and committees were read and adopted or ordered to record: Committee on Conference Relations; Conference Treasurer; Committee on Memorial Home; Trustees of New Orleans Depository; Commission on Budget; Committee on Prison Reform.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, representative of the National W. C. T. U., was presented to the Conference, and she spoke on the subject of Christian citizenship. Bishop Candler also made some remarks on the same subject.

Bishop Candler called a meeting of the presiding elders, and appointed Briscoe Carter to take the chair during his absence.

On motion of R. W. Vaughan, W. C. Childress was elected Assistant Statistical Secretary.

The following reports were read and adopted or ordered to record: Board of Education; Board of Missions; Committee on Evangelism (Bishop Candler resumed the chair); Board of Finance; Epworth League Board; Sunday School Board (reports Nos. 1, 2, 3); Board of Christian Literature. Pending the adoption of the report, the editor of the Advocate addressed the Conference, after which Bishop Candler spoke concerning the importance of circulating our literature.

A resolution concerning membership of the district Conference was read and adopted.

The following reports were read and adopted or ordered to record: Board of Lay Activities; Committee on Sabbath Observance; Board of Church Extension; Board of Temperance and Social Service; Bible Society Board; Committee on District Conference Records; Orphanage Board.

A resolution requesting Dr. F. N. Parker to deliver a series of three addresses at the next session of the Conference was adopted.

A resolution of thanks to the pastor and membership of the Elizabeth Sullivan Memorial Methodist Church, the good people of Bogalusa, and all others co-operating to make the Conference a delightful occasion, was unanimously adopted.

The Bishop announced the following transfers into the Conference: F. R. Power, from the Little Rock Conference; R. E. Goodrich, from the Texas Conference; J. B. Peters, from the Virginia Conference.

The minutes of the morning session were read and approved, and the Bishop, after appropriate religious exercises, announced the appointments, the doxology was sung, the benediction pronounced, and the Conference stood adjourned sine die.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

THE PINKS AND THE THRILL OF MOBILIZATION.

Comparatively few people know just how big is the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In the homeland alone, since August, 1923, I have traveled approximately 20,000 miles in visiting seventeen Annual Conferences. I have yet to travel nearly 10,000 miles more in visiting ten additional Annual Conferences. This states nothing concerning the miles traveled by those associated with me in helping to present the cause of the "forgotten man" to the home Annual Conferences. Nor does it state anything about the miles covered by five of our bishops who have belted the globe to reach our eighteen foreign Annual Conferences and Mission Conferences, where they set in motion the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment. If anyone thinks this is an easy or simple task, anyone needs to do a little figuring on the subject.

Mr. Preacher-Man, Lend Me Your Ear.—Perhaps I should request the loan of your trousers instead, as mine are worn nearly threadbare from constant slipping and sliding on railway train seats of every character, the result of constant going hither and thither throughout the church seeking to provide an old-age support for you when you shall have been superannuated. But, notwithstanding, it is you ear I want. Listen, "just between us and strictly confidential," etc., have you effected the organization for the Superannuate Movement at your first quarterly conference as called for in the "Workers' Guide"? And if so, why have you failed to send the pink leaf report to the Board of Finance telling about it? Don't you think you owe it to those who are working night and day to provide for you when you cannot provide for yourself to do this service which has been so earnestly requested of you? How can you be careless and indifferent in this matter which is so vital to the success of this sacred cause? It seems to me that the pink tint of every flower or sky line or my lady's dress and cheek should condemn you as unfaithful until that pink leaf report from your charge is safely in the hands of the Board of Finance. Come on, boys, the game is on! Hold the line! Carry the ball! We must make a touchdown! Send in your pink leaf report!

East Oklahoma Conference.—A night and half a day traveling from St. Louis brought me to a small town railway junction in Oklahoma. There I waited for three hours to get a train which landed me at Shawnee late Wednesday afternoon. On Thursday morning I explained the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment to the brethren of the East Oklahoma Conference. They heard me gladly and voted unanimously to do for the movement all that was asked of them. I have not visited any other Conference that received the details of the plan with greater enthusiasm or more determination to do the work.

The Oklahoma boys have had a hard year. Poor crop conditions, floods, the slump in oil prices, and some other things have made the work exceedingly difficult. However, this wonderful State has a powerful comeback. The people there are not the kind who whine and give up. They have the real fighting spirit, and they recover quickly from every unpromising situation. Many preachers assured me that the superannuate cause would win in that Conference, notwithstanding the present depression in financial affairs. Whatever happens, I know those loyal men will make a real effort.

Dr. C. C. Selecman delivered the inspirational address, and it was splendid. As I sat there listening to his eloquent words my mind went back to our days together at college when he won every speaking contest in which he engaged. The superannuates are fortunate in having Dr. Selecman addressing some of the Conferences in their behalf. About three years ago he subscribed to superannuate endowment as much as he subscribed to the Centenary, and he has already paid four-fifths of his subscription. He has a right to speak on the subject, for he has proved his convictions concerning it in a manner more convincing than words. May his kind grow in number!

Bishop Moore impressed upon the Conference the fact that the movement was solely dependent upon the presiding elders and pastors. He said: "If any preacher fails to do his whole duty in the effort to raise the ten million dollars for superannuate endowment, he will not only be ashamed of himself but greatly regret his failure when he becomes dependent on the fund in his old age." I trust that these words will burn their way into the heart of every preacher in the church. Furthermore, it will be terribly humiliating to those preachers who fail to do their best for this cause and then afterwards receive sustenance from a fund which they had no part in creating.

The East Oklahoma was the sixteenth Conference I have visited this fall. Some of the brethren asked me how I was able to hold up under the strain of constant traveling and the burden of the office work in addition. I think it is in answer to the earnest prayers of thousands of people all over the church. If it were not for this spiritual tug of friends of the "forgotten man," I should have snapped long before this. And, too, this glorious work lies very near the heart of our dear Lord. He will surely give strength to those who get under a real strenuous program to provide the ordinary comforts for his worn-out prophets.

North Mississippi Conference.—About thirty-two hours traveling east and south from Shawnee brought me to Greenville, Miss., the heart of the great Delta. There the North Mississippi Conference was busily engaged on Saturday morning. Hardly had I appeared when Bishop Ainsworth called me to the pulpit and very soon thereafter announced the order of the day—that is, the presentation of the plan for superannuate support.

A member of the Conference told me that he believed practically every preacher was present when I for the seventeenth time explained the details of the movement proposed. The attention was perfect, the interest intense, and the approval enthusiastic.

For the first time it was a layman who delivered the inspirational address—Mr. G. L. Morelock, Secretary of the Board of Lay Activities. He did splendid work, and without exception the preachers and others present were greatly stirred by his words. Evidently he convicted himself by his own speech, for he gave me a check for $50 as a first payment on the amount he expects to contribute to superannuate endowment. I have been much with this new Secretary this fall, and do not hesitate to state that he is a prince. The church picked a live one when he was chosen for his present task. He will lead the laymen to do a notable work for superannuate endowment.

Bishop Ainsworth exhorted the Conference to support the movement faithfully. I started to ask him if he had arranged to take care of certain matters committed to his care by the Board of Finance, but I stopped quickly when he assured me that everything was being cared for. What a friend he is of this great cause, always alert and eager to do his utmost to get it ahead! He is a charter member of the Board of Finance, and his abandon to the work has been from the beginning until now a real inspiration to me. The "forgotten man" has no better friend than Bishop Ainsworth. The Lord bless him.

I spent an hour with the Conference Board of Finance and was delighted to find that they were so diligent in their work. Such men as these in the Annual Conference are a valuable asset to the work we are now projecting. They are wide-awake and eager to go. It is not necessary to persuade them to be watchful for opportunities to assist the cause, for they are constantly seeking something to do that will help. They assured me out of much warmth of feeling that they could be depended upon to do everything in their power to assist.

This is Saturday night, and I am speeding homeward. The week's work has been satisfactory. I am happy in the faith that my beloved church really is about to remember her "forgotten man." And the North Mississippi Conference will do her share in that process of remembering. This was one of the first Conferences to receive me and my cause into wide-open arms, and she will be the last to disappoint any confidence that she inspires. Come on, North Mississippians! The band is playing! Orders have come to go forward! And I cannot find in history where you failed to respond to any worthy call. Come on; it is your turn to fall in line. Soon the great army of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will press forward in solid phalanx, not to take another's flag, but to remove a stain of reproach from her own. Move over, boys, make room for the colors of grand old North Mississippi!

THE TONE OF VOICE

It is not so much what you say,
  As the manner in which you say it;
It is not so much the language you use,
  As the tones in which you convey it.

"Come here," I sharply said,
  And the baby cowered and wept;
"Come here," I cooed, and he looked and smiled,
  And straight to my lap he crept.

The words may be mild and fair,
  And the tones may pierce like a dart;
The words may be soft as the summer air,
  And the tones may break the heart.

Whether you know it or not,
  Whether you mean or care;
Gentleness, kindness, love, and hate,
  Envy and anger are there.

Then would you quarrels avoid,
  And in peace and love rejoice;
Keep anger not only out of your word,
  But keep it out of your voice.

—Youth's Companion.

THE LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION.

Amos Pierrepont, the "Copper King," and his son had been spending the summer on the Massachusetts coast; and there they met Tom Rowland in the humble capacity of a street-car conductor. Late one night the three had been the only occupants of the car; and while the motorman drove the car through the sea-scented darkness the men inside fell into conversation.

"Is this your regular business?" asked Pierrepont of Tom, attracted by the latter's high-spirited bearing and frank blue eyes.

"No, sir; I'm filling in for the summer."

"College?"

Tom's face suddenly showed certain sharp lines. They meant character—of the kind that can overcome disappointment.

"Two years in Princeton," he replied, "but I lost my father and left college to go to work. I had to help my mother."

"Then you are through with education?"

"I have to work to keep my mother and my two younger sisters," Tom explained. "I could have worked my way through college easily and was doing it; but I couldn't do that and help at home to amount to anything."

"How should you like to finish that educational course traveling? I want my son here—several years younger than you, I take it—to spend two years in Europe before he enters college. How should you like to take him? I intend to pay his tutor two thousand a year and bear all expenses. In your case that amount would keep things at home going all right."

"Do you mean that you would consider me?"

"Certainly. We people from the West talk straight. But there's one thing I must have; a good letter of recommendation."

It was to the head master of his old school that Tom wrote for that vital letter. He tried to think what sort of boy he had been in school; he had behaved himself well. But he awaited the letter with the greatest anxiety. Before long it came.

"There's no greater pleasure I have," the letter ran in part, "than in writing a letter of recommendation for one of St. John's alumni. But, after all, I am only a sort of secretary. I have to forward the letters that have already been written. When you were here for three years you wrote your own letter; and it is that which I am forwarding to you to-day. It says that you were industrious, honest, trustworthy, cheerful, loyal. It was the way you worked, lived and behaved that wrote that letter; and I now take delight in transcribing it for you."—The Companion.

HOW BETTIE LEARNED TO COOK.

Bettie had learned to spread her little bed very nicely indeed, and mamma was praising her to papa one day, saying how much she helped her. So Bettie determined to learn to cook, too.

"Mamma," said Bettie one day, while standing on a little stool by the kitchen table, stirring very briskly on a little cake for her doll party, "Mamma, I'm going to learn to cook so I can help you some more. If you'd give me one lesson a day, I'd learn a whole lot in a year, wouldn't I?" asked Bettie.

"That would be a lot of lessons; you ought to learn something," said Sidney, who was always counting and adding up things. "Didn't you know there were forty-eight weeks in a year?" Bettie made no reply, which was proof to Sidney that she didn't know. "Bettie, you don't even know how many months there are in a year and a half."

"Yes, I do, too," said Bettie. "There's twelve and five more, ain't there, Mamma?"

"Why do you ask mamma if you know? Girls never know whether they know anything or not."

"I do know," insisted Bettie, "and I'm going to know more'n you do when mamma teaches me to make pies and cakes, and if you don't stop teasing me I won't give you any either. So there!"

"You'd better learn the multiplication table first," said Sidney, "and find out how many months in a year and weeks and days, so you'll know how many lessons it will take. But if it takes as long to learn the table as it does to make cake, you'll be a mighty long time learning. You're always stirring up something, but I never see any cake."

"Mamma, please make him leave me alone; I'll forget to put in something directly," cried Bettie.

"Leave little sister alone, Sidney," said mamma, "don't be such a tease. She will soon be mamma's assistant and surprise you one of these days."

"What is 'sistant?" asked Bettie.

"Some one who helps you with your work, a sort of partner, you know."

Bettie told her little friend, Marie, the next day that she was taking cooking lessons, and was going to be mamma's 'sistant.

"What is a 'sistant, mamma?" asked Marie. "Bettie says she is going to be one, and I want to be one, too."

"It is not a play, dear, to be in; Bettie means that her mother is teaching her to make nice things, like cakes, and desserts, and all."

"Couldn't you teach me, too, mamma?"

"Yes, dear, I'd like to."

"Really?" and Marie clapped her hands with delight. So when she met Bettie again she told her she was going to learn to make cakes and pies, too. Only three weeks had gone by when Bettie, all dressed in her pink dress, ran over to Marie's.

"Mamma said I could ask you over to tea. Please say 'yes'," begged Bettie; "and guess what we're going to have."

"Ice cream," said Marie.

"Yes—well, I don't know, but that's not it."

"Oh, I know, some of your cakes."

"Yes," said Bettie proudly; "mamma said it's as nice as hers."

"What do you think of my assistant?" asked mamma when tea was over.

"She is a grand little cook," said papa. "That cake was fine."

"It will do to eat," said Sidney, teasingly.—Sunshine.

THE SPARROW.

Can any good word be said for him? Despite his many human enemies, he has still some friends. It almost looks as if the very powers that be who advocated his wholesale destruction might be coming over onto his side. According to a report issued by the Bureau of Biology, United States Department of Agriculture, "on one Utah farm infested with alfalfa weevil, English sparrows alone in one season fed to their young, it is estimated, five hundred thousand of the pests, making them about a third of the diet of the growing birds."

We have observed so often this little bird-immigrant-chasing, catching, and eating moths and bugs of various kinds that we much prefer to praise him than blame him. Perhaps he pays in service for what grain he eats. There are many farmers and fruit growers who would like the birds to put in about eighteen hours a day destroying insect pests, but never peck at a cherry or a grape or a strawberry or help themselves to a few mouthfuls of grain.—Dumb Animals.

THE DEATH OF REV. R. BRADLEY.

With great sorrow we announce the death of Rev. R. Bradley, an honored superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, on Tuesday morning, Nov. 20, at Louisville, Miss. He was buried on the following day from Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., with interment in Cedar Lawn cemetery, Dr. A. F. Watkins, assisted by Rev. M. L. Burton and Rev. M. M. Black, officiating.

Brother Bradley came to Corinth, Miss., from England, on Dec. 2, 1872, and two weeks later joined the Mississippi Conference. He was for sixty-one years a Methodist preacher, serving for ten years in the British Wesleyan Church and fifty-one years in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He came of distinguished Methodist ancestry, his grandfather having been a co-worker with John Wesley in London. He was a faithful and efficient preacher of the gospel, ready for his coronation.

He is survived by his widow and six children—two daughters and four sons—to whom we extend sincere sympathy. Two of the sons are prominent ministers in the church their father loved and served so long, O. W. Bradley being a member of the Louisiana Conference, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, La., and T. M. Bradley being a member of the North Mississippi Conference, pastor at Charleston, Miss.

We hope to have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

We are glad to be able to report that Rev. P. O. Lowrey, who underwent an operation at the Presbyterian Hospital, this city, last week, is getting along well.

Several of the brethren paid the Advocate office appreciated calls last week while passing through the city en route to the Louisiana Conference at Bogalusa.

The Sunday School Board of the Mississippi Conference has elected Prof. C. A. Bowen, of the Department of Religious Education, Millsaps College, as president, and Mr. H. T. Newell, P. O. Box 308, West Jackson Station, Jackson, Miss., as treasurer. Let all concerned take notice.

Our attention has been called to a typographical error in our issue of Nov. 22, in the report of Rev. W. J. Dawson, the pastor, from the Brandon and Pelahatchie charge. The charge raised for all purposes during the year $7000, instead of $17,000, as it appears. The correct figures, however, show the great liberality and loyalty of the fine people of that charge.

Our correspondent from the North Mississippi Conference unwittingly fell into error in stating, in the Advocate of Nov. 15, that Rev. J. J. Brooks is the oldest member of that Conference on the effective list. Dr. John W. Boswell was admitted on trial in 1859, thus antedating by ten years the admission of Brother Brooks. Dr. Boswell is still in active service, one of the "grand old men" of Southern Methodism.

Bishop W. F. McMurry recently dedicated the Country Club Methodist Episcopal Church, at Kansas City, Mo. He did so by special invitation, acting in place of Bishop W. A. Quayle, who is in very feeble health. Bishop Quayle was present at the service, but was unable to take any part except to pronounce the benediction. The church is one of the most beautiful in Kansas City, erected at a cost of about $150,000.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

The gavel used by Bishop Candler during the Conference was made from the wood of a table used at the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Petersburg, Va., in 1846. The gavel was made by two Negro preachers and presented to Bishop Candler.

The Conference learned with great sorrow that Dr. T. D. Ellis, Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, would not be able to be present on account of the very serious illness of his wife. Bishop McMurry, President of the Board, was its representative before the Conference.

Several preachers of the Mississippi Conference looked in upon the Louisiana brethren, most of whom were presented to the Conference at various times. Rev. C. C. Evans was accompanied by his wife.

The news of the death of the father of Rev. Martin Hebert, one of the most popular and efficient members of the Conference, brought deep sorrow to the brethren. He died on Tuesday, Nov. 20, at the ripe age of 73 years. He left twelve living children, 34 grandchildren, and 6 great-grandchildren, all of whom are Protestants, most of them being Methodists. This is significant in view of the fact that they all came from the Roman Catholic Church, the father himself having been received into the Methodist Church by his son. Interment took place in the family burying ground at Hayes, La., on Wednesday, Nov. 21.

Many visitors were present on Sunday to hear Bishop Candler preach, some of them coming from as far away as New Orleans. There are magnificent roads leading into Bogalusa, and many motorists came from neighboring towns.

Rev. T. J. Holladay and Dr. Alonzo Early were called home during the Conference to officiate at funerals of their members. Rev. O. W. Bradley became painfully ill and had to return home before the adjournment of the Conference.

A delightful social feature of the Conference was the reception given the ladies in attendance and their hostesses, by the Methodist ladies of Bogalusa, at the beautiful Y. W. C. A. building. Another courtesy was a visit to the great sawmill and paper mill by members of the Conference.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, the pastor, and his efficient committees looked carefully after the comfort and convenience of visitors. Bogalusa is a genuinely hospitable city, and the Conference greatly enjoyed its sessions there. The Elizabeth Sullivan Memorial Methodist Church is one of the most attractive and conveniently arranged church plants in Louisiana.

Mr. H. H. Ahrens, of the editorial staff of the Times-Picayune, was in attendance throughout the Conference, giving close attention to its proceedings and furnishing his paper each day with full reports of the gathering. Mr. Ahrens is thoroughly at home in a Methodist assembly, and his reports are technically correct and very interesting.

The guests of the Pine Tree Inn greatly appreciated the unfailing courtesy and attention of the office force and the entire staff of employees. Bogalusa is justly proud of this fine hotel.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The presiding elders of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences are requested by the Centenary Commission to act as directors in their districts for the pending Pay-Out Campaign during December and January. I am hereby requesting them to act and likewise to attend the set-up meetings for these two Conferences when called.

W. N. AINSWORTH.

Macon, Ga., Nov. 22, 1923.

MRS. ALMYRA ATKINS BAKER, wife of William J. Baker, was born in Winston County, Miss., Sept. 6, 1847, and died at her home near Pocahontas, Miss., Sept. 23, 1923. She was a member of the Methodist Church for seventy years, having joined when only six years old. O, how wonderful it would be, if the church could thus claim and gain the lives of all its people in the tender years of childhood! She was married in Madison County, Miss., Dec. 24, 1874, to William J. Baker, who, during the past decades, has been the leading layman of the Pocahontas congregation, Madison charge. Every Methodist preacher who went that way found an unstinted support by this noble pair, and an unbounded welcome in that home, as the present writer can well attest. She was a woman of strong character and of unusual mental power. She was a great reader. She loved the church and its services, and rejoiced in its prosperity. Her heart went out to the Methodist preacher. But her greatest work was in the home, where she gripped husband and children, claiming all for honor and usefulness. She died peacefully, her last words being, "He is waiting at the portals for you and me." All her children were at the bedside: Mrs. Dave Coughlin, Jackson, Miss.; Mrs. W. B. Sanders, Magnolia, Miss.; Miss Grace, Tishomingo, Miss.; Joseph A. Baker, El Dorado, Ark., and William J. Baker, Jr., the latter having lived with his parents the past twelve years. The church building was crowded to overflowing at the funeral services, which were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Percy W. Vaughn.

A former pastor,
H. G. HAWKINS.

A GENUINE THRILL.

The Sunday before our final Sunday at Pearl River Avenue, McComb, I stated in the pulpit that I really enjoyed the thrill of winding up the Conference year better than "to eat when I'm hungry." I have never had just such a thrill in winding up a Conference year. The stewards had done practically nothing toward finances up till this time—a good per cent of tithers and a good church collector caused this lack of interest on the part of the stewards—and we came right up to the end with a deficit, financially, all because the stewards failed to check up occasionally and get right down on the job, but what a rallying! How I did enjoy seeing them get "down to it!" How I did enjoy praying "through" the whole thing and believe God for "level columns" at Conference! We had had the one hundredth addition to the church since the present regime has been in operation—the one hundredth addition coming in the last Sunday night before Conference—so the few days remaining till Conference were full days, and it was a happy crowd that checked up and found that money had come in even beyond expectations, and the pastor walked to the depot to catch the iron horse for Conference crying for joy. Yes, just simply acted old-fashioned and cried out and praised God, walking along the street when, in his mind, he saw the flock rallying so loyally—"it just cried itself." Amen! I have never seen a people more interested in a good wind-up. They have resolved, by the Lord's help, they will not reach the end of next Conference year with such a financial deficit—good resolution, and I believe it will be carried out.

Glad to be assigned to the same field again? I should say I am! I have never really ENJOYED my work as recently—"thou, Lord, hast made me GLAD through my work."

We have really had a hill to climb at Pearl River Avenue, but we've had a Guide who knows every by-path, and he has led us safely thus far, and will lead us on to such victory as is seldom seen these latter days.

How I thank God for Dr. Anthony's preaching at Conference. What a combination of brains and heart! Just such as he will be God's medium of saving us from the onrushing waves or infidelity and modernism that threatens us at this present hour. I like to get up under his shadow and sit down for a few moments and feel the surging billows from heaven run through my soul while I cry and shout to my heart's content! Oh, how indelibly he impressed this preacher's heart! How he made me want to really preach and live a holy life! Everybody pray for me!

Hungering and Happy,
J. A. WELLS.

THE RED CROSS IN JAPAN.

American Red Cross assistance to Americans rendered destitute by the Japanese earthquake will approximate $200,000, it is announced from National headquarters.

Immediately after news of the calamity reached this country, the American Red Cross notified the State Department that its funds would be available for relief of American citizens in the affected area. In accordance with this $46,899.50 has already been expended for the living expenses and rehabilitation of Americans who lost everything. In addition to this, at the request of the State Department, National Headquarters has made $150,000 more available for the work.

Million-Dollar Hospital.

Occupying eight acres and accommodating 1,000 patients, the Red Cross hospital started by the American relief unit immediately after the earthquake, is now complete in every detail and is reported filled to capacity.

Japanese People Grateful.

Among the new evidences of gratitude being received by the State Department and Red Cross headquarters, the following letter is typical:

"My Dear, the People of America: How we all Japanese thank you for your great kindness, in this time, you gave us all. You send us much necessary things and you all are very kind to us. Our thanks are beyond measure. We all will never forget them hereafter. I am only a nameless woman. But I must write you this, even with such a broken work, as I could not keep secret my thanks. Please excuse my impolite. Hoping you are happy and peaceful forever and thanking you for your great kindness, yours truly."—Bulletin.

BRINGING BEAUTY IN.

By Margaret E. Sangster, in the Christian Herald.

It's fun to make a simple room,
As plain as it can be,
A wonder place of warmth and hope,
Of cheer and mystery.
It's fun to point a bit of wood,
To hang a curtain bright,
To make a pretty shade of silk
To hide a glaring light.

Oh, some folk dwell in palaces,
With stately marble halls;
Their windows look on garden spots,
With vine-entangled walls.
The furniture they own is grand,
Their rugs are soft and rare—
But can they ever know the thrill
Of bringing beauty there?

I'd rather—almost—have the joy
Of moving things about,
Of turning tables clear around,
And pillows inside out—
Of patching, trimming, furnishing,
Of matching chint and lace—
Of putting charm into a room
That sadly lacked in grace!

THE DEPARTMENT OF ELEMENTARY WORK.

The Department of Elementary Work of the General Sunday School Board exists for the purpose of bettering the condition of children's work in the local schools of Southern Methodism. But from the Nashville office to each local school is a long reach, so a chain of organization is absolutely necessary if the policies and plans of the department are to carry over into the Sunday schools of so broad a field.

At the request of the Superintendent of Elementary Work, the General Sunday School Board created the office of Conference Elementary Superintendent. This officer is some woman whose education and experience have fitted her for a leader of workers with children. She has oversight and supervision of the children's work within the Conference that sees fit to appoint her. Of the thirty-eight Conferences of Southern Methodism, twenty-eight of them now have such an officer. Fourteen of these are employed for full time work and paid a salary by their Conference Boards. The others are serving capably as voluntary workers, giving their spare time to this work.

Each of these Conference Elementary Superintendents has a carefully worked out organization of district and sub-district elementary superintendents, who in turn reach the local school through wisely chosen key women. The key women, of whom there are now some 1,500, serve as a direct medium of communication, with the elementary workers of the school. They have no official authority, but serve as messengers through which the sub-district superintendents reach the local workers.

This entire organization is devoting its time just now to the placing of the Program of Work in the Cradle Roll, Beginners, Primary and Junior Departments of the Sunday schools. When placed, they are properly explained and adopted as a working goal by the department.

Since these Programs of Work cover every phase of the elementary work, they furnish an excellent basis whereby a school may compare itself with the standards its leaders think it can and should attain. A department may thus check up on its strong points and its weak points, and thereby know where to place its emphasis, that it may be well rounded in its work.

Every department superintendent or teacher of children under twelve years of age should be in direct touch with this organization, that they may profit by the assistance being offered them. Those who are not in touch with it in their own district are asked to inquire about it through the Department of Elementary Work, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

HIS LOGIC.

The sea, says "Whiting" in the Boston Herald, breeds philosophy and logic and an agreeable way of viewing many things. Take for example this case of a handy man on Cape Cod.

"How much do I owe you, Obed, for fixing the screen?" a cottager asked him.

"Wal, be ye goin' to pay cash or charge it?"

"Oh, whichever you prefer."

"Wal, ef it's cash, it's two dollars and sixty cents for the job; but ef you're goin' to charge it, it'll be two dollars."

"Why Obed, that's queer! Usually it's less when it's cash."

"Yes; but ye see so many summer folks go 'way an' forgit to pay their bills, I lose more where it's charged, an' so I'd rather keep them charge accounts as small as I kin."—Exchange.

THE Methodist Hymnal
IN THE BEAUTIFUL INDIA PAPER EDITION
Only 7-16 of an Inch Thick Weighs Only 13 1-2 Ounces

The Methodist Hymnal, the most precious of all our Church books except the Bible, is at last available in the ultrafine bindings and thin India papers used only in very expensive Bibles.

No finer sentiment of love or esteem can be expressed than by the gift of a beautiful Hymnal. The soft touch of the fine leather bindings and the thin India paper with gold edges lend a distinction to these Hymnals that is a pride to the owner. There is the satisfaction of knowing that there is nothing better.

This edition is designed especially as a "Gift Edition" and therefore is made in the very best bindings and printed on the best papers that money can buy.

All these books are printed on thin India paper, with round corners, have silk headbands and markers, red under gold edges, and use the famous "Open Style" binding, which allows the book to lay flat when opened near the front or back, and is guaranteed not to break.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The following is the plan of work for the coming year. We desire that all Sunday school workers read it and help us put it over. We are going to promote the following STANDARD for circuits:

1. Open all the year. 2. Representation in a Standard Training School or holding a circuit-wide Training School. 3. Sunday School Day observed by each school. 4. One person from each school enrolled in the Leadership Training Course. 5. Clean-up-Fix-up Day at each school. 6. Circuit organization meeting at least twice a year. 7. Each school supporting Orphans' Home. 8. Each school making an offering for missions. 9. Bible reading encouraged and pupils taught to pray. 10. Evangelism, at least decision day. 11. Tithing and Sabbath observance emphasized. Seven out of these eleven points makes a Standard Circuit. Point one is not optional.

Forty-two sub-district meetings. Fifteen county organizations. Seven Standard Training Schools. Fourteen non-Standard Training Schools.

A Program of Work placed in each school.

Thirty-five new standard elementary departments checked and reported.

Promote better equipment. Promote clean-up-fix-up day. Promote organized Bible classes.

Hold a meeting of the district officers early in the year and plan the work for the year.

Push Children's Week definitely and positively.

Press the membership and evangelism campaigns.

Strive for 25 four-times-a-year-circuit-wide-institutes running by next Conference.

Two hundred and seventy-four Sunday schools reported $2,118.51 this year. The Brookhaven District reported each school sending in an offering.

Pray for the work and the workers.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Rev. E. H. E. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

When we enroll one hundred preachers and two hundred superintendents in the study of one of the books in the course in Leadership Training we shall go forward in the one task of the church.

It is not too early to draw a red ring around Jan. 26, 1924. This has been set apart as Conference Leadership Training Day. On that day the pastor and superintendent can say, "We have enrolled for definite study and prayer." We want every teacher and every substitute teacher in our school to study or read one of the books of our training course. Another proper thing to do, read out the names of the teachers who have one or more credits. Enroll all who desire to attend one or more of the training schools to be held during the year. Ask for a liberal offering from each class and explain to the school that this offering was ordered by the Annual Conference and is to be used to help support the training work in your own district. The check for the amount contributed should be sent to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss.

Steps have been taken for Leadership Training Schools in the Aberdeen District (Tupelo); Greenville District (place to be named); Corinth District (Booneville); Conference school (Grenada). The Greenville and Corinth Districts are going to make it possible for 100 per cent of the preachers in these districts to take one of the courses. It is all right to raise 100 per cent of the money asked for, but it is a more worthy ambition to train 100 per cent of the leaders; for trained leaders will get the money and something more that is of infinite worth. Let us put the emphasis where it belongs.

We welcome most heartily the new preachers and the new superintendents who take charge of the religious education of the little children, the boys and girls, the young people, and adults under their care. The position of superintendent has always been important, but this office has been magnified and the duties have been increased until it requires a big man to fill it, and that man should be consecrated to God. His consecration implies that he will do some definite study of his Bible and of the organization of the school he supervises. The book that gives this information is "Organization and Administration of the Sunday School." Another practical help is the program of work. This shows the aim of the school and outlines the things that a superintendent is expected to do to make his school a success. After studying the needs of his school the superintendent is very apt to feel that the first thing the school needs is a thoroughly equipped superintendent. The school gives him the opportunity to do this. He will also discover that most of his teachers are anxious to fit themselves for more effective teaching. He should be able to tell them the books they need to study. A trained preacher, a trained superintendent, and trained teachers are qualified to deal with souls more intelligently and effectively than those who are untrained. It is not easy to study, but if we take our task seriously we shall be willing to pay the price in study, prayer and work that must be paid to establish the kingdom of God more perfectly. Call upon me if you need me.

ABOUT THANKSGIVING DAY.

Thanksgiving as we all know came to us from New England, but the New England Thanksgiving wasn't much like ours. The first one lasted a week instead of a single day. It was just a year after the Pilgrims landed. They had suffered dreadfully during the first winter, and had lost about half their numbers, but they had had a good harvest, and after it had been gathered in they made merry for a whole week in the lovely autumn weather. The governor sent four men to shoot wild birds for the feast and we may be sure that they brought back plenty of turkeys, because the Pilgrim records tell us that at that time there was a "great store of wild turkeys" in the forest. The Indians, with their king, Massasoit, joined the feast and added five deer to the larder. There may have been pumpkin pies, too, for the pumpkin is a native of America and probably twined around the first Pilgrim cornstalks.

For the next two years the Pilgrims didn't have much cause for rejoicing. New immigrants arrived without supplies. Promised supplies failed to arrive, and finally a drought came and threatened to destroy their harvest. When at last rain came they had their second Thanksgiving. It was not in November, but in July—probably about July 30, 1623—and so they continued to have Thanksgiving Day whenever there seemed to be a good reason for them—when ships arrived with food, when friends arrived from England, when they had made peace with the Indians, when Margaret Winthrop, wife of Governor Winthrop, arrived, and, in fact, when anything unusually pleasant happened.

President Washington proclaimed the first national Thanksgiving Day after the Government was established. The day he named was Nov. 26, 1789. A few years later, in 1795, he recommended Feb. 19 as a Thanksgiving Day, and then we didn't have another Thanksgiving Day until the time of James Madison. But many of the States kept up the custom.

We had two Thanksgivings in the year 1863, and one of them was in August. It was during the Civil War, and for a couple of years people had not felt much like keeping holidays, but in the summer of 1863 came the victory of Gettysburg, and President Lincoln appointed Aug. 6 as a Thanksgiving Day. On Nov. 26 he appointed another Thanksgiving Day, and since then they have come on the last Thursday of each November. The President issues the Thanksgiving proclamation first, and the governors of the States usually follow with other proclamations.—New York Tribune.

THE UNNECESSARY QUESTION.

"Well, son, is the boss in?" asked the visitor.

"I asked if the boss is in," said the visitor.

The office boy glanced at him but remained silent.

"Didn't you hear me?" the visitor demanded sharply.

"Of course I heard you," answered the boy.

"Then why don't you answer my question? Is the boss in or not?"

"Now I ask you," retorted the boy as he crossed his legs on the desk, "does it look like it?"—Exchange.

Wanted! Ambitious Men and Women

We are receiving calls daily for men and women of character, ambition and business training, men and women who can accept and efficiently fill responsible positions, positions that give every opportunity for advancement; positions of high salaries, positions in banks, law offices, insurance, real estate, brokers' offices; positions with manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, in every imaginable type of business in the South.

Many of them we capably fill, others are yet vacant. The men and women who fill them need not be wealthy, nor even moderately well-to-do. They need not be young, nor need they be college or even high school graduates. All that is necessary is that they possess character, ambition and a business training.

The character and ambition they must possess, the business training we will furnish under the direction of the South's most efficient training corps and in one of the South's most efficient and best equipped business colleges. A training with unique courses in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, accounting, banking, business administration or our secretarial course. Such a training we will furnish in a few months' time at little cost to you, and at terms to meet your own financial condition.

Thousands of Southern men and women have taken advantage of the opportunity and trained themselves for a higher calling, a better salary and a greater opportunity for advancement. Many who have accepted the positions we offer have risen to the top of the ladder, and are numbered among America's foremost and wealthiest business and professional men and women.

An institution with such standing and reputation as the Georgia-Alabama Business College does more to advance the business interests of its graduates than can be done by any amount of family or personal influence.

Consider your present status—would you not like to improve your station in life, increase your income, attain financial independence and success? An opportunity awaits you, for positions are being constantly offered us that must be filled.

Write for our inspiring book, "Your Future—What Does it Hold in Store?" It is sent free on request, explains our offer in detail and points the way to a brighter future.

"THE PRESENT-DAY NEEDS OF THE CHURCH."

Dr. A. H. Strong once, expressed himself in this way: "The present-day needs of the church are not the vagueness and freedom of rationalism, but the self-limitation of a Scripture faith. Not the methods of the politician or the worldling, but Christ's ways of renegeration and faith and prayer. An authoritative Bible, an evangelical theology, a spiritual church—these are our instruments for winning men. They are God's appointed means; and I'd rather send out from this Seminary (Rochester) ten consecrated preachers and missionaries than a hundred brilliant scholars and critics. Our first need is to be great believers."—Watchman Examiner.

Health and good looks
—the reward of internal cleanliness

HEALTH and good looks go hand in hand. If you do not keep clean internally, your looks and health are undermined together. A clogged intestine breeds poisons that reach every part of the body. These poisons ruin the complexion and undermine health. Constipation brings on such ailments as headaches, bilious attacks, and insomnia—each of which saps your health and vitality. Soon much more serious conditions follow.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life

Good Looks Throughout Life If You Keep Clean Internally

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Cleanliness Demands More Than Bathing

Not a Medicine

Nujol is not a laxative and cannot gripe. Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world.

Don't give disease a start. Adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. Nujol is not a medicine. Like pure water it is harmless. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Week of Prayer at Lorman.

Our Society at Lorman held three services during the Week of Prayer period. The closing one was held Sunday morning, Nov. 12, at the regular preaching hour, our pastor being at Conference.

As our Auxiliary had paid its obligations in full for the year, we felt authorized to change the name of the dialogue used, "The Auxiliary That Couldn't Pay Out," to "Numerous Calls of the Auxiliary." The characters in the dialogue were well impersonated by those taking part.

After the grand old hymn, "Tell It Out Among the Nations," an interesting talk was made by Mrs. Ford, who told of the needs of the school called Laura Haygood Normal, which is one of our Week of Prayer specials. This talk was immediately followed by a pageant, "Laura Haygood's Messenger," rendered by the children of the Junior Missionary Society and others. The children appeared in Chinese costumes, which made the scene more realistic.

The "Week of Prayer" offering was about twelve dollars, and the interest in missions is gradually being deepened.

ARE YOU AGENT FOR THE MISSIONARY VOICE?

Be Proud of Your Position as Agent for the Voice. It is an office of dignity and importance. Not even the president of the society has a more responsible position. Show that you realize that the agency for the official missionary organ of the Southern Methodist Church is an honorable position. Make no apologies for soliciting subscribers, but rather assume an attitude of offering an opportunity to a fellow church member to share in the ownership of a high class magazine.

Inform Yourself About the Missionary Voice. Be able to assure the person whose subscription you are seeking that the Missionary Voice is at the head of the list of missionary magazines. Tell them how many pages it contains; that it is not only the mouthpiece for Methodist missions, but it seeks to interpret world movements; that it contains articles of literary merit as well as simple, heart-stirring messages from the missionaries on the field. Let them know that the Voice is an all-round family magazine and discusses topics of importance in the secular and religious world which will interest every member of the household. Men and women alike read the Voice with pleasure and profit. Explain that the work of the Woman's Missionary Society receives special attention and that the programs are printed a whole month in advance, so as to be in time for the monthly missionary meeting.

LIKES LOUISIANA.

Will you please allow me just a tiny bit of space in your good paper to make an announcement and speak a word of appreciation?

I held my first two meetings in Louisiana this year, one at Zachary and one at Hammond.

If all Louisiana is like these two towns I would like not only to work in Louisiana but live among such people.

In all my years of service in the church, I have never been received more cordially and treated more royally. In fact, they petted us as if we belonged to them; and we do, all for the glory of God and our great church.

Mr. Gordon, my singer, had to go to the hospital from Zachary, but he is well now and will be in his place again the first of the year. Mr. Gordon has the best voice and is one of the best choir directors I have ever known.

Should the brethren in this territory need us, you can always reach us at Green Forest, Ark.

Our last meeting is to be in central Illinois.

With a prayer and a bundle of good wishes to the Advocate family,

Successfully yours,
W. HARDY NEAL.

FROM SLIDELL, LA.

As a result of a union revival recently held in our community by Rev. C. P. Roney, Baptist evangelist, and some diligent personal work by the pastor, the Methodist church received 31 members. The remarkable feature about the 24 who were received on profession of faith is that 15 of that number were adults, two of whom were grandfathers.

MY TEMPER.

I have a little temper,
'Tis like my pony gray,
Unless I watch it closely
It tries to get away,
And rears and kicks and tramples
On all who near it stand;
And so I try to curb it,
And hold it well in hand.
No use to me a snaffle:
I keep a tight curb rein;
And speak, to it quite gently—
Yet sometimes all in vain.

Neutralizes Uric Acid!
Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." Sold by druggists, price 50 cents, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

HEALTH FOR WORKING WOMEN

Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Help You to Become Well

Thousands of girls have to work in homes, offices, stores, mills or factories who are physically unfit for work, with often an aged or invalid father or mother dependent upon them for support. Standing all day week in and week out, or sitting in cramped positions a girl often contracts some deranged condition of her organic system which calls a halt to her progress and demands restoration to health before she can be of use to herself or anyone else.

For these distressing weaknesses and derangements these girls have found health to do their work in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—"Like many girls, I had troubles every month," says Carolyne Mangels, "and they interfered with my work as I could never be sure of my time. My mother often suggested that I take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I never did until lately. I have had very good results, and am now a private secretary and do my work without missing a day. I recommend your medicine to every girl who speaks of having troubles like I have had."—CAROLYNE MANGELS, 407 14th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Office Worker Helped

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine for three and a half years, and they have improved my health wonderfully. My mother also has taken the Vegetable Compound and we recommend it to our friends. I am working in an office now and can always do my work as I do not have the troubles I had at first. I read of your Vegetable Compound in the newspaper and you may use my letter in that way if you wish to do so."—ELEANOR SHEBLAK, 537 36th St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Pains and Headache

Webster, Mass.—"I was all rundown, had a bad complexion, and suffered with pains and backache, and was dizzy at times and felt weak. I worked in a mill and my girl chum told me about your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am feeling much better since taking it."—MARY PLAZA, 13 West Street, Webster, Mass.

SOME INTERESTING INCIDENTS.

By George F. Erwin.

It has been my privilege to teach a class of fine young Russians Bible and English for the last few months. I have found them to be very apt pupils. Most of them speak English with ease. In this class I have three volunteers for our work. One is a doctor, who has had much experience as an eye specialist. He is a graduate and post-graduate of seven European Universities. He offers to go to China or Europe to work in our hospitals. He will gladly work here if we can give him the opportunity. Also two excellent young men offer their lives to our service to become ministers and forward the cause of Christ here in their homeland. They are well educated and are as intelligent as any pupils I have ever taught. When the first one offered to enter training, he said to me: "I certainly can conscientiously become a Methodist preacher. We only look on our Russian church as a theatre where we can go to see good acting and hear good singing. We do not get any consolation of heart or food for our souls."

Yesterday, Sunday, Mrs. Erwin and I went to visit another one of my class. He is a young man of much ability. When the war broke out in Europe he was a student in a German University. He returned to his home and became an officer in the Czar's army. He was on the Western Front for four years, and was shot four times. He later came here and entered the tax department of the White Government. When that government was overthrown last October, he lost his job. It is very hard for him to live now. He teaches a few private lessons and makes toys in order to exist. He married about one year ago and now they have a six-weeks-old son. His mother-in-law lives with him. Her grandfather was Consul General to the United States. Her mother was reared in San Francisco. His father was a Russian naval officer. Then she was married to a Russian General in the Czar's army. She is very highly educated and speaks four or five languages. When the revolution came they were living near the Volga. Her husband, herself and two daughters ran for their lives. They had to go on horses more than four hundred miles to reach the railroad. Their horses all died on the way. She told us that there was a dead horse almost every ten steps along that road. Almost all the people had tried to escape from that section and would ride their horses to death. Her husband was captured before they got very far and his body torn to pieces. She and the two girls got to Vladivostok with only their lives. The captain of our United States warship here at the time gave them a change of clothes. Soon after I entered the home the young mother asked me if I could baptize the little baby. I explained to them that I could do so according to our church customs and rules. They said that they did not want the Russian priest because he was so rude to them when they were married. He was not kind to them because they were able to pay him only $10. They say that they want their son to be a Methodist. There are plenty of people here who are not satisfied with the Russian Church. I find the intelligent people very interested in what Methodism proposes to do for Russia. Would to God we had the men and money to go forward and possess this land!

We have a Chinese boy to help us in our home. I bought him a Bible in Chinese a few weeks ago. He goes to sleep many nights reading this book. He read about forty chapters in three weeks. Now he calls in his friends and they read together. Chyn is the boy's name. He brought his uncle in to see me to-day and I found this uncle to be a Christian of long standing, fifteen years. He tells me that he has a little class of about a dozen which he teaches, trying to spread his knowledge of the Bible. He brought his Bible and hymn book with him. I invited him to bring his class to my home to-morrow night and hold services. When he was ready to go he fell down on his knees and prayed in Chinese. This man's life confutes the statement that I have oftimes heard made by critics of Missions, "The yellow people are Christians because of the money that is given out among them and other things of the world that they happen to like." There is no Christian church here for the Chinese, and this man has been away from his religious influences perhaps many years, yet he is striving to teach Christ to his people up here in Siberia without any hope of earthly gain. What will Mr. Critic say? There are thirty thousand Chinese here, or have been (many are leaving because of bad conditions), and as far as I know he is doing all that is being done to give them the gospel.

Pray for us that we may face the great task as brave soldiers of the Cross. It looks sometimes like the task is too great to tackle. I look out on a mass of humanity, hungry, cold and discouraged. I almost break down in tears sometimes and say, What can I do? Then I remember that Christ and his Holy Gospel are the only hope. When I encourage some soul and see a smile of appreciation pass over that face, then I feel in my heart encouraged.

THE COKESBURY HYMNAL

"A SONGBOOK FOR EVERY OCCASION"

Hymns for the Church Songs for the Sunday School Songs for the Revival

The Cokesbury Hymnal is a songbook for every occasion and for every possible use—for the regular Church service where a HYMNAL cannot be afforded, for the Sunday school in churches of all sizes, and for the revival services as well.

The Cokesbury Hymnal brings back the old hymns and tunes that our fathers and mothers used to sing. Songs that thrill the heart and inspire the soul with the intense love of divine worship. They are the hymns and songs that the people love to sing, because they come from the deepest recesses of the heart and because the heart and mind and soul respond to them in a glorious rhythm of worshipful praise.

Preachers, song leaders, and Christian workers from everywhere made the selections comprising the Cokesbury Hymnal. The publishers asked them to select only those hymns that are nearest to the hearts of the great mass of Christian people. On nearly every list submitted the old familiar songs were predominant! They represent the most treasured numbers from the very best books of the foremost song publishers of the world.

Special Chorus Arrangements

Professor Harold Hart Todd, Professor of Harmony and Piano in Southern Methodist University, has contributed special chorus arrangements for eleven of the most popular choral numbers, a feature that cannot be found anywhere in a songbook of this price.

Three Indexes

The Cokesbury Hymnal is equipped with three complete indexes so that any one song or list of songs for a special purpose may be easily found. There are over fifty different subject headings, with from one to forty-three different songs listed under each. Only its actual use in your own Church can demonstrate in a better way that it is a songbook for all occasions.

Responsive Readings

Not satisfied with publishing a remarkable songbook, the publishers have included a selected group of responsive readings. The readings are taken from both the Old and New Testaments, many chosen for use on special occasions, while all are appropriate for regular use in the weekly Church service.

Orchestrated Edition

Of supreme importance to the members of the choir and orchestra is the orchestrated edition. The publishers of the Cokesbury Hymnal have had every song in the book set to music for fourteen different instruments—bound in separate volumes, one for each instrument. These books will be available January 1, 1924. Information as to prices, etc., will be furnished on request.

AFTER CONFERENCE—THE YEAR AHEAD.

The three patronizing Conferences of the Advocate—the North Mississippi, the Mississippi, and the Louisiana—have held their sessions for the present year and adjourned sine die. It is fitting that we review somewhat the record that has been made, and glance at the tasks that lie ahead.

The Record.

First of all, we should characterize the past year's work as successful. In spite of unprecedented financial difficulties in large sections of the territory, the collections for various causes were gratifying. We noted at all the Conferences the reports as to amounts raised for ministerial support and for Conference and General Work, and, without exception, they were such as to convince us that our preachers have been faithful in the performance of their duty and that our people have been loyal and liberal in their contributions to the regular work of the church. There were, of course, cases where the collections were not in full; but, all things taken into consideration, the showing made is really remarkable.

In connection with this remarkable showing, we venture to make the suggestion that the cry of "hard times," so often heard when the financial work of the church is being considered, is largely out of place. It is true that times have been "hard," and that a great many people do begin to economize with the church first; but there are still enough faithful, loyal, liberal Methodists to support the institutions of the church to make it reasonably sure that all financial claims will be fairly well met.

The reports made by the representatives of our special causes—the Centenary and the Christian Education Movement—showed that they, too, have accomplished great things in the face of a most difficult situation. It is only right that due credit should be given these representatives for what they have been able to do—Rev. J. H. Holder and Rev. B. P. Jaco, in the North Mississippi Connference; Rev. J. M. Morse and Mr. W. D. Hawkins, in the Mississippi Conference, and Dr. A. S. Lutz and Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, in the Louisiana Conference. Not all was done, we are sure, that these leaders had hoped would be done in their respective fields; but they wrought well, and their diligent efforts produced creditable results. These great movements have by no means lost their grip upon the hearts of our people.

But the real success of the past year's work is shown by the results of the evangelistic efforts that were made. We believe that the spirit of evangelism was the outstanding feature of the year's activities. In Mississippi, under the inspiring leadership of Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, an evangelistic program was adopted in the beginning of the year that definitely committed the church to revival efforts throughout the year, a program that was carried out in a spirit and with a success that prove that the church has not lost sight of its primary mission. Magnificent church buildings may be erected; all collections may be reported in full; special enterprises may be undertaken and carried to a successful conclusion; but if souls are not born into the Kingdom of God through the preaching of the Word and the labors of devout men and women, under the blessing of the Holy Spirit, all else is of little avail. It is indeed a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners; and it is in the salvation of sinners that the gospel is glorified. In Louisiana, though an evangelical program was not formally adopted, the evangelistic spirit was manifest, and gracious revivals marked the labors of the ministry throughout the Conference. Bishop W. A. Candler, himself aflame with evangelistic zeal, set the pace with written and spoken word, and his brethren followed with joy.. All three of the Conferences reported a gratifying net increase in church membership—an evident mark of the blessing of God. Our greatest rejoicing is over the fact that sinners have been converted and brought into the Kingdom.

The past year has been one of peace within our borders. In the midst of a state of theological unrest that has characterized some sections of the religious world, Mississippi and Louisiana Methodism has held fast to the fundamental doctrines of salvation, and preached the same in demonstration of the Spirit and with power. There is no occasion to fear that the church is departing from the faith. Men will think boldly, independently, fearlessly—as they have a right to do—and differences of opinion will inevitably make themselves manifest; but Methodist preachers will continue to preach the doctrines that have been revealed in the Word of God, certified by the Holy Spirit, and authenticated in personal experience.

The Year Ahead.

With devout thanksgiving to God for the blessings of the past, we need to look at the tasks that lie ahead for accomplishment. We set some of them down as they occur to us.

Evangelism. First of all, and above all, we place the continuance of the evangelistic efforts of the past year as the most important part of the work of the year ahead. By personal work, by the regular services of the sanctuary, by special revival meetings, by all possible organized activities, the evangelistic note should be sounded from all our pulpits, in all our charges, to all the people, so that sinners may be taught the error of their way and turned from Satan unto God. This is a task as glorious as it is great, one that should stir to the depths every heart that has itself experienced the blessings of pardoning grace. No preacher has a greater privilege than that of being an ambassador of Christ to lost men.

Edification. We believe the time has come for the ministry to place special emphasis upon the task of building up the people in their most holy faith. Methodism believes in and teaches the doctrine of growth in grace; but growth is conditioned upon nourishment, and spiritual growth is conditioned upon spiritual food. That we may supply this food, we, as preachers, need to feed upon the Bread of Life ourselves; then, and only then, shall we be able to preach unto the edifying of saints. A revival of effective expository preaching will involve much of prayer, study of the Bible, meditation. This kind of preaching may, more than we realize, be the means of bringing in the revival we all long for.

The Centenary. The Centenary is an unfinished task, but it should not forever remain unfinished. The problem now is not the securing of new pledges, though new pledges might appropriatly be made, but the collection of unpaid pledges. The "Pay-out" period is at hand, and one of the first tasks of the new year is to clear the records of these amounts that are still not paid. Neither weariness in well-doing nor discouragement over past failures should make us relax in our efforts to complete this great undertaking which has already meant so much to the church, and upon the completion of which so much depends.

Education. The fact that many Centenary pledges remain unpaid does not relieve the urgency of our educational needs, nor does it lessen the obligation to pay the pledges that have been made to the Christian Education Movement. A glance at the educational situation in our three Conferences will show how important it is that we give prompt attention to this matter at once.

Millsaps College. In the two Mississippi Conferences the educational work for men is represented in Millsaps College. This institution has a history which reflects great credit upon Mississippi Methodism, and it is to-day doing a work that is invaluable. But it is hampered in its usefulness by the lack of means to enable it to meet the heavy obligations of a new day. The payment of the Christian Education pledges will add largely to its resources, and, therefore, to its ability to do the work it ought to do.

Centenary College. In the Louisiana Conference, Centenary College represents the educational work for men. This historic institution, which will celebrate its one hundredth anniversary in 1925, is in the midst of a phenomenal

IRA B. ROBERTSON—A MEMOIR.

By Rev. W. H. Huntley, D.D.

Born March 30, 1840. Received his first appointment in 1860. Died June 6, 1923.

The name of Brother Robertson, given as No. 1 on past Journals of the Mississippi Conference, will not be so recorded again. Time's instruments will register his name no more, nor oppose restriction or limitation to the life transferred now by divine appointment to the Church Triumphant. Only the eye of Faith may note the name engrossed upon the Roll of the Kingdom—of Life.

Ira B. Robertson was man-grown before the war between the States. He had answered his call, and was received on trial during the year before that war proclaimed the United States to be on trial. To follow his life along those years; to have his witness to anxious days; to surpassing agitation in the State's defenders; ruptured family accord; heave and stress of breaking hearts; of smoke-screened future—it would be of strange interest, his witness and his impressions. From where we stand the Past seems very far, the morning when our brother applied for Admission on Trial.

As the successive Journals show, Brother Robertson kept step with history, marching with events, a spiritual leader among the people. Multiplying interests compel the formation of two Mississippi Conferences. Our young preacher keeps with the mother Conference, proceeds to invest his life at work in the region south of a line separating the State in halves. He was a preacher during "reconstruction" days, when the church strove and tabernacled verily as upon a bleeding Calvary.

On his march, clearing the way, and eagerly welcoming the reviving spirit of good-will and Godspeed ahead, one cannot fancy Brother Robertson as anything but eager, all along his journey through. Never outgrowing the impulsive, the impetuous, the spring and summer season of his service must have been intense.

He is not seen shouldering for place in the ranks. As a good soldier he stepped in the uniform of the regular, going at command, as holding his assignment from the Council of Heaven; then forward untiring upon the work he held to be the greatest work in a sin-troubled world.

His preaching was strong, his personality marked by clear convictions, always convincingly spoken. He loved to sing. A useful member of our Conference said: "Listening to Brother Robertson sing, one day, I received the deciding influence of my life in my call to the ministry." Only the Spirit of God has the record of the blessings upon many other lives arrested by the cries of the watchman, preaching the Gospel, absorbed in his "loved employ."

Brother Robertson's home life was loyal, devoted. Without children of his own, he gave full affection to the daughter of the widow whom he married. The good wife has been gone for years—she was awaiting him when he went.

The following appointments, as nearly as they can be made, mark Brother Robertson's active ministry: No record obtainable until 1865; 1865, Sunflower; 1866, Indian Bayou; 1867, Boliva; 1868, Covington; 1869, Cayuga; 1870, Cayuga; 1871, Cayuga; 1872, North Warren; 1873, North Warren; 1874, Summit; 1875, Summit; 1876, East Feliciana; 1877, East Feliciana; 1878, East Feliciana; 1880, Clinton, La.; 1881, Amite City; 1883, Spring Ridge; 1884, Brandywine; 1885, Brandywine; 1886, Camden; 1887, Camden; 1888, Camden; 1889, Anguilla; 1890, Anguilla; 1891, South Vicksburg; 1892, South Vicksburg; 1893, Bowerton; 1894, Gallman; 1895, Gallman; 1896, Lake; 1897, Montrose; 1898, Montrose; 1899, Montrose; 1900, Roxie; 1901, Homochitto. From 1902 honored with the relation of superannuate.

Since his superannuation, with unflagging interest, Brother Robertson has been a familiar figure at all Conference sessions. Emotion was characteristic. Humor evoked smiling sympathy from bishops and brethren. Courage was high. He loved his brethren, loved to say so. He loved to live. He will be missed a while—and deserves to be. More than is ordinary, he has proclaimed, "I love to preach."

Surely the high privilege long was his. Can time ever harvest fully the fruits from so long and so loving a seedsman?

From the home church at McNair, simple, but deeply impressive funeral services were held. The pastor, Rev. M. L. McCormick, together with Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder, and Rev. W. H. Huntley, pastor at Port Gibson, gave feeling tributes in speech. Many old friends and neighbors gave theirs in tears. Their father in Israel had fallen on sleep. They would not look upon his like again.

As his friend of years, may I offer, to close this simple tribute, a verse from a poet—from a spirit ever wondering, overwhelmed by the saving love of Jesus Christ.

Was Ira B. Robertson attempting, year on year, to teach and preach his experience thus:

> "When men shall say to thee: Lo, Christ is here!
> When men shall say to thee: Lo, Christ is there!
> Believe them; yea, and this—then art thou seer
> When all thy crying clear
> Is but: Lo, here! Lo, there! Ah me, Lo, everywhere!"

He was so attempting—he was so succeeding.

REV. JOHN MARSHALL BROWN—A MEMOIR.

By Rev. Briscoe Carter, D.D.

John Marshall Brown, son of William Brown and Mary Ann Gibson, was born in Cahawba, Dallas County, Ala., on the 25th of January, 1840, and passed to his reward in Belcher, La., July 16, 1923, at 11:50 p. m., and was buried in Forest Park Cemetery, Shreveport, La., July 18, 1923. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in September, 1856. He was educated at Centenary Institute, Summerfield, Ala., was licensed to preach in May, 1860. He was married July 2, 1860, to Miss Carrie L. Pruitt, of Summerfield, Ala. Of this union seven daughters were born, of whom four survive: Mrs. A. G. Wrenn, of Shreveport; Mrs. R. P. Newton, of Doyline; Misses Mattie C. and Carrie M. Brown, of Belcher, La. He was married the second time on Aug. 29, 1882, to Mrs. Virginia Ann Conner, of Webster Parish. Six children were born of this union, two of whom survive: J. M. Brown, Jr., of Belcher, and B. W. Brown, of New York.

Brother Brown joined the Alabama Conference in December, 1860; was ordained deacon in 1865; elder in 1867. He served thirteen years in the Alabama Conference, and was transferred to the Louisiana Conference in 1873.

For fifty years Brother Brown was a member of the Louisiana Conference. Brother Brown, on account of sickness, failed to reach the session of our Conference held in Alexandria in 1921, being the only absence from roll call in his sixty-three years in the ministry. I cannot recall when I did not know Brother Brown, he being a close friend of my father, and from my admission into the Louisiana Conference in January, 1888, to the time of his departure being as intimate with him as was possible between men of such disparity of years. I was his presiding elder twice; and it seemed to me as though the order ought to have been reversed, though I never had shown me such deference as superior in office as was shown by him.

The first appointment served by him in our Conference was Vermillionville, now known as Lafayette. Then, for forty-six consecutive years, he went in and out among us as an itinerant, taking the relation of honor at the session of Conference held by Bishop Kilgo in New Orleans in the latter part of 1918.

It is customary in such sketches to give a list of the appointments served by the subject, but I do not put much emphasis on "place where." It might be interesting to some to run over the list to see how he "stood," as we always say, a poor way to get the measure of a man. I don't think when the Master Workman calls upon us for our report, he will ask "Where did you work?" but I am strongly impressed that he will make a close inspection of how we worked wherever we were. Measured only by "place where," Brother Brown would not rank very high in the estimation of folks in general, for he never held what might be called the "big" appointments. The fact is, he was bigger than any appointment he ever held. This is not true of some of us. There are instances where a man's appointment is the biggest thing about him, which is a great pity, both for the man and the place. But measured by character and real worth, I count Brother Brown as one of the really great men of our Conference, great in his goodness. There seemed to emanate from him an aroma of righteousness, and a man felt he had to be his best in his presence.

Brother Brown was among the last of a fast disappearing type—the genuine Methodist itinerant, the man who still believes that Christ is in the church as its Head and Guide, and that his spirit is still active in its direction, even to the making of appointments! He took his appointment as from God, and consequently never had any complaint as to its character or grade. He once said to me, on hearing some young brother make himself manifest after receiving his appoitment, that he never had one that was too small for him.

In his preaching, he was worthy of imitation by us younger preachers. He was a great believer in the converting power of edifying preaching.

Having none of the gifts of the orator, rather like Paul, with his presence against him, yet he was one among the most helpful preachers I ever heard. To be this required study, and this he never ceased to do; to the last he read the best and latest books and got their content. As a result, his messages were as fresh as the mountain spring. I will never forget the freshness of the message that he brought to the Shreveport District Conference that met in Mooringsport in 1920, when he preached at the morning service of the first day on John 12:31: "Now is the judgment of this world." Every one there was impressed with its force and helpfulness. He had then been superannuated two years. Since his retirement from active service, he did not buy as many books as was his custom, but, for years, I have been sending him every new book I got, if he did not get it before I did, and especially did I do this since his retirement.

His mental activities continued to the last. He loved to preach and was always ready to do so when able. The last time I had the pleasure of hearing him was the second Sunday in June, 1921, when he preached for me both hours that day from Rom. 8:28-29 in the morning and Rom. 12:4-5 at night, both being to the edification of his hearers.

His was a tranquil spirit, serene under all circumstances, and as he lived, he died. There was no suffering or agonizing pain, no sickness—

> "The voice at midnight came;
> He started up to hear;

A mortal arrow pierced his frame;
He fell, but felt no fear.
Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATIONS OF NORTH AMERICA.

By John R. Mott.

The Constitutional Convention held in Cleveland, Oct. 17-23, 1923, was one of the great creactive moments in the life of the Young Men's Christian Association. This representative gathering of 400 leaders of the Brotherhood launched a distinctly American National Association movement. At the same time it insured the strengthening of the historic ties which for three-quarters of a century have bound together the Associations of the United States and Canada because the existence side by side of two independent national bodies, still organically united, makes possible a relationship more logical and more consistent with national dignity and expression and a co-operation mutually more helpful.

By establishing a National Council of some 400 men, elected directly by the Association in relatively small electoral districts and holding an unhurried meeting each year for the purpose of estimating needs, determining policies, authorizing services to be rendered, and providing financial support, we have at last a plan which will enable the Association to make unmistakably clear their wishes to their agents, the General Agencies, and thus making sure that these General Agencies are quickly responsive to the expressed will of the Brotherhood. The pathway is pointed to the solution of the old and baffling problem of the adequate maintenance of the General Agencies in that by the new arrangement the Associations will assume responsibility for the moral and financial support of their General Agencies.

The executive functions of the national body are widely and wisely distributed among several national and international service committees, thus insuring larger initiative and more prompt clearance in a vast and ever-expanding movement; at the same time provision is made for the close co-ordination and vital union of these varied and growing services to the Associations at home and abroad.

In new and effective ways the State Committees are integrated with the national; in fact, an arrangement is entered into by which the two General Agencies—the State and the National—are so integrated that it is hoped the result or outcome "in working, in spirit, in economy, and in fruitfulness will be tantamount to one agency."

Provision is made for a judicial body to render interpretations of the Constitution and to settle promptly disputes or disagreements arising between Associations, or agencies, or their representatives. The Association College and other training agencies are brought under the more immediate control of the Brotherhood.

More important than these and other constructive achievements of the Constitutional Convention was the wonderful, triumphant unity realized and the resultant larger freedom (freedom from distrust, conflicting purposes and uncertainty) of which all are now conscious. In very truth a new atmosphere was generated at Cleveland—an atmosphere in which men came to loathe to differ, to determine, to understand, and then to forget themselves by becoming lost in their great unselfish cause. Abundant proof of this is seen in the fact that groups of strong men who had differed so radically, so strongly, so conscientiously, found it possible to adopt unanimously the new Constitution. This larger synthesis was the work of the omnipotent, creactive Spirit of God, for where the Spirit of the Lord is and where men yield to his sway, there is unity, liberty, vitality, productivity.

The Convention made no change in the basis of membership of the Associations. The entire work of the gathering has served to strengthen the relation of the Association Movement to the churches and their program. The following Preamble of the new Constitution adopted rings true on this point:

"We, the Young Men's Christian Association of the United States and Canada, through our representatives in Constitutional Convention assembled, reverently and joyfully confessing our faith in Jesus Christ our Lord and only Savior, and our unswerving allegiance to his church, recognizing humbly the creative hand of God along the pathway of three-quarters of a century of corporate experience, and dedicating ourselves afresh to our great mission of bringing under the sway of his kingdom the young manhood and boyhood of North America and of the other lands served by our Associations, and with the desire of conserving all the values of our past and likewise of unifying and strengthening our work so as to enable the North American Associations to meet the requirements of the modern age and of the coming day, hereby adopt the following Constitution of the National Council of the Young Men's Christian Asosciations of the United States of America."

REPORT OF BOARD OF TEMPERANCE AND SOCIAL SERVICE.

To the Bishop and Members of the Louisiana Annual Conference:

Dear Brethren: Your Board has gone carefully into the comprehensive scope of the work of Temperance and Social Service, as contemplated in paragraphs 524 to 533, and we stand with the other evangelical churches of this country in promoting and fostering every agency that contributes to the higher life of our people, physically, morally, and spiritually.

We deplore the extravagance and thoughtlessness that prevail to-day that find expression in such a mad craze for pleasure-seeking. The low grade vaudeville and suggestive and immoral picture shows are a mighty factor in contributing to the juvenile delinquency that has become so grave a question that even grand juries and other court bodies are voicing a solemn protest and a warning to parents and others who are responsible. The foundations of home and family life are being threatened by holding up in caricature by cheap joke and suggestive pictures the sacred and holy relationships upon which the home is builded. We enter our solemn protest against such sinful and vicious practices and urge our people everywhere to awake to the dangerous tendency along these lines. We call to the defense of these sacred interests the power and influence of godly people everywhere. We deplore the widespread divorce evil and urge a uniform divorce law, in keeping with the Scriptural requirements, as a thing vitally needed if we are to preserve the power and influence of this great institution.

The inter-racial problem is one that is deserving of our most careful thought. At Lake Charles, a Colored Community Club has been sponsored by the Woman's Missionary Society and a playground has been purchased. A delegate was sent to the school for colored workers at the Bethlehem House, Nashville, Tenn., which is resulting in much good. We commend the work being done. Our St. Mark's Community Church in New Orleans is one of the most complete plants in the entire country, and is doing a wonderful work for the neglected of that city.

We are pleased to report that progress has been made in the enforcement of the prohibition laws in Louisiana. The conditions are far from ideal, but the courts, with some few exceptions, are responding to public sentiment, and in many parishes in Louisiana the violation of the prohibition law is not more frequent than that of carrying concealed weapons or other misdemeanors.

Be it Resolved: 1. That we go on record as opposing any effort to modify or repeal the Hood Law in Louisiana or the Federal law known as the Volstead Law.

2. Our State Constitution says gambling is a vice and should be suppressed by legislative acts; therefore, we respectfully call on the Legislature to carry out this provision of the Constitution of Louisiana, and we call upon Christian people and others who believe in orderly government to qualify themselves, under the laws of our State and nation, to perform that patriotic and Christian service of casting their ballot for orderly government that comes as a result of placing in office God-fearing men who are to make and administer our laws.

We heartily commend the work of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League and the splendid work of the W. C. T. U., and we further recommend the appointment of Rev. A. W. Turner as State Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, and promise co-operation in all efforts to prevent any modification of our Prohibition Laws.

Respectfully submitted.
C. C. MILLER, President.
W. C. CHILDRESS, Secretary.

ON DOING GOOD WORK.

The ideal thing for every man and woman in the world would be a daily task in which the fullest satisfaction and pleasure could be had because it was a task that had abundant interest and variety and worth-whileness in it. But as a matter of hard fact, that is not the kind of daily labor that many of us have to perform. Some good day in the world's history may come when work for a great many people will lose much of its drudgery and monotony, and when men and women will find it much easier to get the work for which they have qualification and fitness. But it is not likely that the time ever will come when work will lose all its drudgery and monotony, or when most of us will not find it tiring and hard, at least in spots. For many of us the time may never come when our work will be satisfactory and enjoyable because it is easy and congenial at every point. But in most cases is it not possible to put something into work even that is tiring, and has much drudgery and monotony in it, that will give to it a very real pleasure and satisfaction? No matter what a man's work is, there will always be some good reasons for his doing it well, and well-done work, no matter of what kind, always brings its own peculiar enjoyment and satisfaction. In fact, an ambition to do one's work well will usually redeem it from most of its drudgery and monotony. —Christian Guardian.

TO THE COLLECTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

My Dear Co-workers: On November 1, our third payment was due on Education. Some have paid the first and second, but some have not paid. Please make special effort to collect all collections that are due, which will include first and second that have not been paid, and third.

If any of you have not your lists, please let me know and I will send this list at once. If at any time you find that a mistake has been made, some credit overlooked, kindly report to me at once and I will do my best to straighten it out.

Please do not fail to see every subscriber who is delinquent and collect as closely as you can. No movement is more vital to the church than that of the Christian Education Movement.

Cordially your brother,
J. M. MORSE,
Secretary-Treasurer.

All government in a Republic rests upon obedience to law. Disregard for law tears down the very basis of free Government. It is gratifying that most citizens, whether they approve of prohibition or not, are observing the prohibition law. Disregard for law is the foundation of Anarchy.—Josephus Daniels.

Respect for the Constitution and obedience to law are required alike by Protestant, Catholic and Jewish churches—then you owe it to your church to obey the Eighteenth Amendment.—Colonel Dan Morgan Smith.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Nature conceals things of rare beauty and worth in the far-distant places. In dells and glades, hidden in forest depths, serene and quiet in the woodland air, this wonder mother of all weaves her tapestries of grasses and flowers, sets around her shining circles of leafy trees and calls her singing bees and birds to feast of melody. The wealth of the unseen and the unheard, hidden mysteries of earth's vast store, oceans decked with gem-like islands, caves deep hidden, bestrewn with jewels, or lined with laminated rocks, seamed with gold, yea, the deep things the Almighty One placed these while yet the earth was young! Then again the silent forces are the mightiest forces. None may hear the stars in their mighty march across the infinite abysses, nor measure the rhythmical beat of this endless processional—the force that guides and holds them in courses is as silent as a mummy from Egypt's tomb. Men have dreamed in silence within the chambers of the soul, builded vast cathedrals or kingly palaces, planned wonders for ocean, air and land, bound continents with roads of banded steel and arching bridges; yet none heard the coming and going of the thought wraith. Thought moves the world; its waves break on every shore; its argosies sail every sea; its busy engines wheel through all the earth. Yet the eye hath not seen it nor the ear heard its goings. So the best things of life—the thought unexpressed, the tear uncrystalized, the love heart hidden, the hope unfulfilled, the sorrow too deep for utterance—these may never break forth, but live to refine, to chasten, to mold and fashion into a character of lasting worth. We sometimes are aghast at the tragedies of this modern life; its toll is fearful, but there are so many secret passions, living, moving, burning in human hearts, we fail sometimes to note the heroes who march right onward with upward breast and lifted head.

Bread, after all, is only the fuel of life; faith is its essence, and the man who lives only to eat is a lonely, half-starved creature. Israel ate of the desert manna, yet the idolatry they had learned in Goshen so clung to them that a new generation must perforce come forth to eat of the "hidden manna." Mighty indeed are the secret silences in which life and spirit live, move, and have their being. No clarion voice proclaims their presence; the still small voice keeps watch and tryst there, in the dwelling place of God.

The need of the after years is the fruition of life. He had toiled earnestly, faithfully, this veteran of the Cross. Sometimes he was blunt, plain, possibly a bit uncouth. The finer graces of a circle in which manners were rated above worth looked askance when he ignored some standard of trifling import. The tear on the cheek of a child was of vastly more importance to him than any book of etiquette ever written. He did not always draw a broad line of distinction between sinners and saints in his ministry, and some wondered. Perchance after a dusty drive on some errand of mercy, or to bear the living Word to some neglected spot, his linen may have been soiled or his tie awry; but his soul was clean and his heart set to music. He knew the way that led to the hearts of men, and cared for little else. His pulpit was his throne, and there he was supreme. His conscience was confessed to his Lord, and his messages received and delivered only at his hands. Men and women who had never preached or studied its art, who knew as little about its principles as they did of Einstein's theory of the fourth dimension, would advise him concerning the length, breadth or even depth of his sermons. He would smile and soon forget their sage counsel. Sometimes he wondered himself at his preaching, for wonderful vision of life, truth and beauty would flash through his mind, and these would be portrayed in language so chaste and pure that one thought of pearls strewn on velvet, or flowers on terraced gardens. Faithful and honest with God and man, he cared but little for popular approval. Earnest and true in social and private life, he never took thought for reputation. This he knew full well would care for itself, and, after all, he was in God's keeping. Another has now taken the place he once held, but the memory of the elder one lingers among the people of the village as a heritage of richest worth.

WITH OUR EXCHANGES.

A Cause for Gratitude.

Redemption from our folly stands out for gratitude. The cross calls for adoration. The altar of God, the humble and the contrite heart, the miracle of regeneration within the soul, the accompanying wisdom and love and power of Jehovah put us forever in debt to him whose we are and whom we serve. What are bins of coal, or elevators of grain, or the crush of markets compared to the force which adorns the inner man and makes him fit for heaven? Should not the worshiper in deepest gratitude find a better way of expression than by eating at feasts, or visiting friends, or watching sports?

The interest of heaven and the help of heaven go on forever. "Beloved now are we the sons of God, but it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." (I John iii. 2.)—Methodist Advocate.

Scholarship.

Oh, no! We are not opposed to scholarship, but the so-called scholarship. We are not opposed to scholars, but to some of these self-styled scholars who go about undermining the faith of young men and women by telling them that parts of the Bible are untrue, that parts of it are mere myths, and even going so far as to teach that Jesus is a mere man, and that as man and monkey came from the same tadpole, jelly fish or some other spineless object, so Jesus did, too. It must be wonderfully pleasing and inspiring to have such a scholarship as that!—Alabama Christian Advocate.

Mob Rule.

The demagogue on the stump, in the press, and sometimes even in the pulpit, finds it easy to win applause by declaring that he will give the people what they want, and then encourages the people to express themselves in terms of selfishness. Thus the mob-spirit is cultivated, and when some deed occurs that stirs the imagination and arouses the primal instincts, the people cry out for blood, and forget their laws and the courts which they have established, to protect the weak and punish the criminals. Being encouraged to believe that their will rather than God's law should prevail, crowds of excited people make unreasonable demands and are ready to enforce them by violence, if obstructed. The mob spirit is really produced by the methods of the demagogue in his appeal for popularity. We need in public office men who have intelligence enough to know what is right and sufficient courage to stand for it even at the cost of popularity. As long as leaders are ready to be led and yield to every passing breeze, we shall have mob rule. —Arkansas Methodist.

Before and After the Revival.

The preaching of your pastor may not be as thrillingly interesting as the preaching of the evangelist that held the meeting in your church. There may not be so many people present each Sunday morning and evening. These conditions are not expected as the regular order throughout the year. There are converts to be taught and workers to be trained and souls to be nurtured. A high pressure revival and great crowds continuously are not necessarily essential to the highest Christian culture. The revival is the period of action and ingathering. Without the cultural period and seed sowing, there would be no trained workers and no young people prepared for church membership. Only those church members who continue in patient well-doing throughout the year keep the revival power and blessings and are ready in prayer, faith and work when the time comes for the next meeting.—St Louis Christian Advocate.

Neglecting God's Poor.

"What is the use of living in an empire which boasts that the sun never sets upon it, if you live in a slum like this where the sun never rises?" Such complaint is attributed to a poor woman who lived in a miserable tenant in East London. The query cuts like a sword with two edges and applies more widely than to British rule which in its pride of empire allows squalor and wretchedness within the borders of the capital city.

Here is a lesson for the church of God. In its vision of world conquest and its persistent plea for the nations of the earth there should be no oversight of God's poor which may be at one's door. To have a zeal for missions in Africa and at the same time neglect the negro in one's kitchen or to mistreat the colored laborer who is one's near neighbor, to say the least, is not Christian. To speak the whole truth, such conduct is contemptible and devilish.

The Christian order is first at Jerusalem and then to the uttermost parts of the earth. Let not Jerusalem be forgotten while one fixes his gaze upon the uttermost parts of the earth. Neither let the "regions beyond" be neglected with the spurious plea that the duties at home are so exacting. "The world is my parish," was Wesley's law of services. It should be the rule for all his followers.—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

A Book a Day.

It is said of Rev. William L. Stidger, the author of "The Place of Books in the Life We Live," that "He reads at least one book a day."

This is a most astonishing statement, and implies a mastery of the art of reading that is, we imagine, without a parallel. When we remember that he is the pastor of a large church, and a prolific writer of books, we wonder how he finds time to read so much.

Too many of us, alas, read books but rarely; and not always the kind of books we should read, at that. It is in the hope that we may encourage our [illegible]—especially our younger ministers—to [illegible] the reading habit, and to learn how to select and read wisely, that we are calling attention to what a prodigious achievement Doctor Stidger finds it possible to attain to as a book reader.

The common plea for not doing more reading is the lack of time. Surely, if so busy a man as this pastor of a great city church can find time to read "at least one a day," there are not many of us who could not manage, with wise use of our time, to read at least one a month. For many that would mean a substantial increase in the number read during the year.

We do not recommend to our readers the hurried manner of reading that Doctor Stidger evidently practices. We rather recommend a patient, thoughtful method of reading, that absorbs, understands and digests the thought of the writer of the book, assimilating its contents almost as thorouhly as our food is assimilated in the process of digestion.

Of all the suggestions for reading profitably that we have seen, none has more impressed us as thoroughly wise and useful than that of Newell Dwight Hillis, who said: "Read a paragraph, or a page, carefully and thoughtfully. Then close your book, and close your eyes, and look, and see what you have read." (We quote from memory.)

This visualization of what you read will make it yours forever; and every book thus read will feed and strengthen your mind, storing it with material for thought and speech through all the years to come.

"But have no taste for reading," says one. Then by all means acquire it, and lose no time in doing so. Why condemn yourself to poverty of mind, when you may easily, with suitable effort, become the possessor of ample resources, that will make for your happiness and wellbeing.—Florida Christian Advocate.

Paganism is Crumbling

A Methodist Bishop, recently returning from world-wide travels, thus remarks, "In all my travels belting the globe I did not see one new pagan temple, but churches, schools, hospitals rising as Christianity is going forward. How in the face of such achievement can we stop even for a moment?"

Methodism is perhaps the most potent force in this crumbling of paganism, and it is the Centenary which is sending Methodism forward. Without it we would to-day be impotent. It has added five new lands to our world parish and multiplied our work three-fold.

Yet only half of the pledges have been paid! How can we dream of stopping? We cannot! We will not!

IS THE CHURCH REALLY SQUARING HERSELF TO PAY AN HONEST DEBT?

Off again! I hear the old boys calling me, and everything I possess responds to the call. My Katy train runs west along the north bank of the Missouri River for two hundred miles to the place of my birth, then turns south for what seems an endless journey. After forty-two hours of travel, I reach a place called Gonzales, Tex. They say it is one of the oldest towns in the State, but it does not look it. There is very interesting history here, but I must forego relating it in order to tell you about something which happened at the Methodist church.

West Texas Conference.—My, what a company of connectionals had been on the ground, each trying to say his piece and get away before the "forgotten man" program which was scheduled for Saturday! Bishop McMurry was to be my teammate at Gonzales, but he was prevented from making the trip on account of unexpected business and some physical indisposition. Bishop Dickey had everything in order for the presentation of the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment, and promptly at the hour agreed upon he called for me. It was the thirteenth Conference I have visited this fall, and that hoodoo number made faces at me. But I think the occasion turned out to be one of the very best. The brethren received the plan with high enthusiasm and gave every assurance that they were ready to do the work.

Bishop Dickey followed me with an earnest exhortation that gripped the Conference like magic. That man is a power when he turns loose, and he invariably lets himself go when he discusses superannuate endowment. He urged the impelling necessity of providing for the church's worn-out preachers and on the basis of paying an honest debt long past due. He loathed the placing of this obligation on the heart of the church as a charity. If all of us will really consider the subject in this light, we shall be convinced that we cannot shamelessly hold up our heads until the account is paid in full.

Rev. Arthur Moore, the wonderfully successful pastor of Travis Park Church, San Antonio, could hardly wait until Bishop Dickey had concluded his address to put his Conference on record. He moved that the West Texas Conference, by standing vote, assure the Board of Finance that they cheerfully accepted their part of the program for superannuate endowment, and would apply themselves diligently to carry it out in the fullest measure. So far as I could see, the vote was absolutely unanimous. This was the first time that any Conference had voted on the subject, but I am confident that every Conference would have voted the same way if the vote had been called for.

Dr. Sam Burgin took me for a walk. I said to him: "Sam, tell me frankly, do you think the special effort for superannuate endowment has a chance for success?" He replied: "Todd, if this thing had come before the other financial campaigns, the church would have raised double the amount you are asking. But even now, and notwithstanding the drives for other causes, she will surely raise that $10,000,000. It will mean hard work, but this is something for which all of us are willing to spend ourselves to the limit."

I met the Bishop and his cabinet for a few minutes. They received me cordially and gave assurance that every request for service concerning the special effort would be responded to with enthusiasm. My old friend, Dr. Casper Wright, of the San Antonio District, sat there grinning. He whispered: "Don't you worry, old man, we are going to do it." And Rev. H. E. Draper, of the Beeville District and a member of the Board of Finance, was there. Afterwards he said to me: "Understand, the presiding elders and every preacher in the Beeville District are heartily committed to the plan for raising adequate superannuate endowment, and we will do more than our share." The other presiding elders were just as positive in their words of committal to the task.

I had a delightful stay at Gonzales, and I wish that space would permit dozens of other testimonials favorable to the outlook of the movement to be recorded. As I departed there was something kept saying: "Write, Blessed are the superannuates who put their faith in the West Texas Conference; they shall not be disappointed."

Upper South Carolina Conference.—It was held at Newberry, S. C., and the distance from Gonzales, Tex., is a journey of three nights and nearly three days of almost constant travelling. These long hours shut up in a railway train are conducive to the blues, for one has so much time to entertain doubts and fears. But the West Texas Conference started me on the long trip with such confidence and high spirits that I landed in Newberry on Tuesday afternoon happy as a lark and eager to feel the pulse of the Upper South Carolina brethren concerning the superannuate cause.

After the communion service and the organization of the Conference on Wednesday, I was called upon to explain the plan of the movement in behalf of the superannuates. Rev. W. A. Lambeth, of the Western North Carolina Conference, came next with a stirring inspirational address. Lambeth is a sight. Rarely have I known a speaker of such magnetism. From the first word to the end of his address he had everything his own way. We all sat there like children under a magic spell, eager not to miss a word of the speaker's lightning speech. He gripped our reasoning faculties, warmed our hearts, and stirred us to attempt to do our best for the sacred cause. Long before he concluded everybody was fully committed to the program. In his final pressure of exhortation, wherein he pleaded with soul aflame that every person would hold fast in loyalty to the great movement, he exclaimed out of his matchless humor: "Stick to this thing, men; stick to it like a cocklebur to a cow's tail." That finished us. When the uproar of laughter and good humor had subsided, there was every evidence on the faces of those South Carolinians that they would stick to it.

Bishop Denny followed with earnest statements that aroused the Conference all over again. He always says something good when he speaks, but this time he was especially helpful. It is very gratifying to see this good Bishop giving such whole-hearted co-operation to the movement for superannuate endowment. He has not failed once to respond to any request for service at his hands. Furthermore, he seeks opportunities to assist the work.

While at Newberry I talked with numerous presiding elders, pastors, lay members, connectional men, an editor, etc., and without exception they expressed the conviction that the special effort for superannuate endowment is sure to win. One brother did express himself as regretting that he had to go through another financial agony, but he changed his mind on the subject, thus making the Conference unanimous in its attitude. The doubts of this dear brother could not stand up under one of Lambeth's witticisms—namely: 'If you think this movement puts you in a tight place, there is a way out. Behold a pig in a pen. He cannot get out by squealing; he has to root. Root, brother, root!" The Upper South Carolina boys will come through.

North Alabama Conference.—This beautiful first day of November I am speeding through Georgia en route to Ensley, Ala., where the great North Alabama Conference is grinding away. The swiftly passing fields give evidence of "a good year, Bishop." The chickens, ducks, and turkeys hold carnival in yards flitting by; the cattle, satisfied, stand here and there working their mouths as if chewing gum; and the negroes, with broad grins on their faces, contentedly ride the laden cotton wagons going to market. My, but it's fine to be way down in Dixie when they have had a year like this! Really it seems that the good Lord is smiling on his people of Southern Methodism just now so that they in turn may be able to smile upon his aged and worn-out preachers.

Friday morning the church was packed to its capacity with preachers and others who were on hand early to hear Bishop Candler's devotional address. It was truly rich in wit and wisdom. Promptly at 10:30 a. m. he called for the speakers who were to present the plan for superannuate endowment. It was my duty to explain the details of the movement. The vast throng listened with an eagerness to understand every step to be taken. I shall never be able to express my appreciation of the close and patient attention of all the Conferences visited to the plan analysis of the work contemplated.

Bishop Ainsworth followed with a stirring address on the debt we owe the grand old veterans of our ministry. He was at his best, which means that the great cause had a mighty champion at court. His wonderful voice rang like the clear tones of a bell, and there was not one in the multitude of listeners who was unable to hear every word he spoke. As I sat there on the platform near enough to touch him by extending my arm I saw the perspiration rolling from his face and could feel within me the vibrations of his impassioned soul. How I wished that all the twenty-three hundred claimants of the church could see this noble Bishop pleading so vehemently in their behalf.

Bishop Candler closed the morning's program with an exhortation on the subject. Just think, this man had come under an emergency call Tuesday night to hold the Conference, which began Wednesday morning. On this Friday morning he delivered a powerful devotional address of forty-five minutes, addressed the class for deacon's orders for thirty minutes, and was still as fresh as a daisy and as wholesome as ever when he closed our program with a speech of fifteen minutes. He has not failed once in doing most efficiently everything requested of him by the Board of Finance. The Lord bless him and give unto him the abiding consciousness of a loving and grateful church.

I was compelled to hurry away to take a train that would land me in St. Louis Saturday morning. However, the superannuate program was announced to continue Friday night. Dr. George R. Stuart was to speak, and after him Senator J. T. Heflin, of Alabama. These two men are heralded as the most popular speakers in that great State. What a joy it is to know that they readily consented to do their best for the cause of the "forgotten man." Surely after all that happened at Ensley there can be no question of doubt about the North Alabama Conference doing

BOYHOOD.

O for boyhood's painless play,
Sleep that wakes in laughing day,
Health that mocks the doctor's rules,
Knowledge never learned of schools,
Of the wild bee's morning chase,
Of the wild-flower's time and place,
Flight of fowl and habitude
Of the tenants of the wood;
How the tortoise bears his shell,

How the woodchuck digs his cell,
And the ground-mole sinks his well;
How the robin feeds her young,
How the oriole's nest is hung;
Where the whitest lilies blow,
Where the freshest berries grow,
Where the groundnut trails its vine;
Where the wood-grape's clusters shine;
Of the black wasp's cunning way,

Mason of his walls of clay,
And the architectural plans
Of gray hornet artisans!—
For, eschewing books and tasks,
Nature answers all he asks;
Hand in hand with her he walks,
Face to face with her he talks,
Part and parcel of her joy,
Blessings on the barefoot boy!

SHOES FOR UNCLE SAM.

Our great province of Alaska has been very much in the public notice this summer, with President Harding and his party making a tour of it. And we appreciate again what a valuable territory it is, not only in mines but men. A story written by Margaret R. Seebach, for the Woman's Home Missionary Society, shows well the quality of these folk. In part, we shall give it to you.

"That picture of Uncle Sam?" inquired a deep voice, with a tone of anxiety.

The government agent, who was also the storekeeper in the little Alaska town, turned around. He was getting used to the childish ideas of the Eskimos, though at first he had found it hard to understand them.

It was hard work for them to understand, too, that their country had been bought by the United States. They had no idea of a government by President and Congress (though some of them may now better appreciate who the President is, since they have seen him), but when the agent spoke of "Uncle Sam," and showed them the well-known figure, they took for granted that he was the person who had bought Alaska, and who sent supplies which were given out to them at the little store.

"That picture Uncle Sam?" asked the Eskimo again, pointing a stubby finger at the cartoon. It showed a lank figure in a pitiable condition; the long features and straggling beard of Uncle Sam rose above a shabby suit, patched in many places; and at the bottom appeared a pair of bare feet below a pair of trousers that were much too short.

"Oh, yes! that's Uncle Sam," said the agent rather wearily. He got tired of talking to these childish people. "Looks like he's pretty hard up, doesn't it?"

"Uncle Sam got no shoes?" persisted the man.

"Not a sign of 'em!" declared the agent jokingly. "Cold weather to go barefoot, isn't it?"

The Eskimo grunted, wrapped his blanket about him, took a last serious look at the picture, and stalked into the snowy darkness.

There was much excitement in a certain Eskimo hut that night. The fur-clad wife and the plump babies listened with eyes large and round, as the head of the family told what he had seen in the store.

"Uncle Sam sends us flour, sends us bacon, sends us much thing," he told them. "Uncle Sam take care of us, not let anybody hurt us! Mr. Carroll say so, many time. Now, Uncle Sam poor, very poor. Got no fur coat"—all the black eyes rolled in astonishment—"got no cap, only old hat"—still greater surprise—"got no shoes! Feet all bare!"

No words could express the horror of the family at this dreadful state of affairs. The little wife rose from her seat by the fire and began to rummage about the hut.

Presently she came back with a piece of the softest doeskin in her hand. Next she brought out a box of colored glass beads, and a rude painting outfit, also needles and thread and a large knife.

Two days later the agent looked up from his accounts as the door of the store flew open and his Eskimo visitor again appeared. He walked to the counter and laid down a bundle, waiting for Mr. Carroll to open it.

The agent unwrapped it, and there was a beautiful pair of moccasins. The doeskin was soft as velvet, the beading and painting made them a perfect rainbow of the loveliest colors. The agent, who had seen many pairs of moccasins, rubbed his eyes and looked again. He had never seen so fine a pair.

"Uncle Sam got no shoes," explained his caller. "Me and my wife take two days make these for him. Send them to Uncle Sam!"

"Sure, I will!" declared the agent heartily. "It's mighty good of you to make 'em for him. Now just wait a bit."

From the stores on the shelves he quickly chose provisions amounting to at least twice the value of the moccasins, and loaded the generous Eskimo with the packages.

"Well, I'm beat!" said the agent, sitting down to take another long look at the moccasins. "People like these are worth trying to help, after all. I guess they'll make good citizens. Uncle Sam wasn't such a dunce, anyway, when he bought up this country!"—Christian Advocate (New York).

THE CHEMISTRY OF THE BEE.

In an article describing his experiences with bee-keeping, Dallas Lore Sharp writes in the September Harper's Magazine:

"All flowers do not yield honey, or any flower indeed. Bees only yield honey. Flowers yield sweet water—those that flow for the bees—a sweet water which may be ravishingly perfumed and tinctured with distillations as of attar and frankincense and myrrh, but whose sweet taste is that of cane sugar only. This sweet water the bees suck from the flower tubes and carry home in their abdominal honey sacs, and on the journey in the body of the bee the sweet secretion of the flower, to which has been added a minute drop of acid secretion of the bee, undergoes a chemical change, resulting in a new compound called honey.

"As the drop of nectar is sucked from the flower tubes it receives in passing certain glands at the root of the bee's tongue an infinitely small drop of formic acid, and the change into honey begins. The bee hurries home with her load, but instead of running to the empty cell with her sac of sweets, she is met by a home worker who, mouth to mouth, drinks from her sister's sac, emptying its contents into her own honey sac and adding her own portion of acid, thus doubly charging the nectar, as we charge the fruit juice at the fountain with a dash of phosphate; and the sweet water, which had been sweet with cane sugar, is now, from out of this second bee's abdominal sac, poured into the cell of the comb, real honey, sweet with grape sugar, not cane sugar, a different product, the joint chemical compound of many blossoms and at least of two bees."

FOOLSCAP.

Every one knows what foolscap paper is, but not every one knows why it is so called. An Exchange ventures to say that not one in a hundred that daily use it can answer the question. The following will tell you how the term originated:

When Oliver Cromwell became Protector, after the execution of Charles I, he caused the stamp of the cap of liberty to be placed upon the paper used by the English government. Soon after the restoration of Charles II, having occasion to use some paper for dispatches, some of this government paper was brought to him.

On looking at it and discovering the stamp, he inquired the meaning of it, and on being told he said: "Take it away. I have nothing to do with a fool's cap."

The term "foolscap" has since been applied to a certain size of glazed writing paper.—Morning Star.

AFTER CONFERENCE—THE YEAR AHEAD.

development which runs the risk of being arrested for lack of sufficient funds to enable it to meet its urgent needs. Methodism in Louisiana has no greater asset than its college at Shreveport, and to allow that asset to diminish in value at this time would be a tragedy of tragedies.

Grenada and Whitworth. These two colleges for women—the one belonging to the North Mississippi Conference and the other to the Mississippi Conference—are facing crises after notable periods of usefulness. By the requirements of constantly advancing educational standards, the time has come when both of them must have adequate endowments—not merely that they may enlarge their usefulness, but that they may actually continue to exist. The urgency of their needs was presented to their respective Conferences, and by unanimous vote their appeals for endowment were endorsed and commended. These appeals must be met, and they must be met this year, or they will lose their classification as A-grade institutions. Mississippi Methodism will certainly respond to their calls at once.

Mansfield. Louisiana Methodism has only one school for women—Mansfield College—and in that institution it has a right to take pride because of its long and honorable history. But Mansfield, like its sister institutions, must have an adequate endowment. The active campaign for this endowment has already been started, and the city of Mansfield and the Parish of De Soto have responded nobly by pledging more than $50,000. But that is only a beginning—Louisiana Methodism as a whole must do its part.

We have mentioned the foregoing institutions because they are the outstanding Methodist schools of the two States; but there are other educational interests that will suffer greatly if we fail to give attention during this year to the all-important matter of Christian education.

The Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment. After a long period of discussion and of more or less desultory effort, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has at last determined to raise a fund of $10,000,000 to be used as an endowment for the relief of its superannuated preachers, their widows, and dependent children. The justice of the claims of these worn-out servants of the church is beyond question, and the wonder is that the raising of this sum has been delayed so long. By special action of the General Conference which met at Hot Springs, Ark., in May, 1922, a five-year period, beginning in the spring of 1924, was set apart for the collection of this fund, and every pastoral charge in the church will be asked to raise within that period, as a minimum, an amount equal to that assessed for its pastor's salary for the Conference year 1922-23, plus the amount assessed the same year for the support of its presiding elder.

Our three Conferences have approved, accepted, and adopted the plan to raise this endowment fund, and it is to be put into effect with the beginning of the year, March 16 having been appointed as the day for presenting it to all our people. We do not believe there is a single pastoral charge within the three Conferences that will refuse to accept its quota, or that will fail to pay it according to the plan—at least one-fifth of the amount each year for five years.

Is It Possible?

There may be some who will say that the tasks ahead are too great for accomplishment; if there are, we venture to suggest that they have not sufficiently estimated the resources of the church. WE ARE ABUNDANTLY ABLE, AND WE BELIEVE WE SHALL ACCOMPLISH THEM.

The chief resources of the church are not material; but its material resources are ample for all the financial demands made upon it. If our people would conscientiously pay but a tithe into the treasury of the Lord, all the Centenary pledges would be paid, all the Christian Education Movement pledges would be paid, all the special needs of our educational institutions would be met, the entire amount for Superannuate Endowment would be paid—AND THERE WOULD BE MILLIONS OF DOLLARS LEFT FOR OTHER USES OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD. Even in the midst of "hard times," there would be no lack.

But our reliance is upon the mighty movings of the Spirit of God to enable us to see our duty and our privilege and to inspire us to do what we ought to do. If we turn to God in earnest prayer, we shall be led to the consecration of ourselves and of what we have to his service; and that consecration will result in a determination that will give us success in all our undertakings. Prayer, consecration, determination—these are the things that will make easy the tasks ahead.

THE SUGGESTED CHANGES CONCERNING THE ADVOCATE.

At the meeting of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, held on October 18, it was voted to submit the following resolution to the patronizing Conferences at their approaching sessions:

"Resolved, That the approaching sessions of the participating Conferences be asked to act upon the advisability of reorganizing the New Orleans Christian Advocate under the new name of The South Central Christian Advocate.

"Resolved, That they be asked to act further upon the advisability of changing the location of headquarters from New Orleans, La., to Jackson, Miss."

Pursuant to this action, the resolutions were presented to the three Conferences at their recent sessions, with the following result:

The North Mississippi Conference, by a small majority, voted in favor of the proposed changes.

The Mississippi Conference voted against the proposed changes by a very large majority.

The Louisiana Conference unanimously voted against the proposed changes.

With this matter definitely settled and out of the way, we earnestly trust that all the preachers and people of the three Conferences will rally to their official organ, giving it their hearty support and co-operation. A vigorous campaign for subscriptions in the early part of the Conference year will undoubtedly largely increase its circulation and enable it to render a helpful service in promoting all the interests of the church. We are grateful for the fact that already new subscriptions are beginning to come in—let them continue in increasing numbers.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

More than 200 students at Emory University earn all or a large part of their expenses while attending the University.

Mr. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., was the special speaker before the Big Brothers' Class, Greenville, Miss., on Sunday, Nov. 25.

Rev. P. H. Fontaine and Rev. L. E. Crooks, of the Louisiana Conference, were appreciated callers at the Advocate office ono day last week.

Red Cross officials announce that in all probability the enrollment of Red Cross members in the Southern Division will exceed the quota of 250,000.

All applications for charters for Methodist Men's Clubs should be addressed to Rev. J. W. Frazer, General Secretary, 11 North Joachim St., Mobile, Ala.

The biennial convention of the National Anti-Saloon League has been transferred from Birmingham, Ala., to Washington, D. C., the date being Jan. 9-11, 1924.

Rev. W. Hardy Neal, general evangelist, requests us to announce that he has recently changed his home from Fayetteville, Ark., to Green Forest, Ark.

Rev. R. I. Collins requests us to say that he was appointed to Vaiden, Miss., instead of Shannon, Miss., at the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference.

Sister T. S. Randle requests us to say that she is now living in her own home, at 108 Austin St., Yoakum, Texas. Her sisters, Mrs. Hart and Mrs. Newton, will live with her.

We regret to learn that Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, our pastor at Summit, Miss., has been quite ill, but we are glad to state that he is making satisfactory progress toward recovery.

Rev. R. E. Woodfin, of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, has entered heartily upon his work. He is expecting this to be the best year of his ministry thus far.

Rev. R. M. Evans, of Verona, Miss., secured four subscriptions for the Advocate within two minutes after the sermon on Sunday, Nov. 25. That was fine work, quickly and easily done.

There will be a conference on evangelism at the Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn., on Dec. 11-12, under the auspices of the Bureau of Evangelism. An interesting and helpful program will be carried out.

Rev. L. P. Wasson, the new presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference, has been very cordially received by the good people of Aberdeen, where the district parsonage is located.

Rev. P. A. Sowell, an honored member of the Tennessee Conference, who makes his home at the Seashore Camp Ground, was in New Orleans on Friday of last week. We greatly enjoyed his call at the Advocate office.

The debt on tho Y-Hut at Whitworth College has been liquidated, and the beautiful building was formally dedicated on Thanksgiving morning. We congratulate the students of Whitworth upon the realization of their hopes and dreams.

The Mansfield Collegian, issued by the students of Mansfield College, is a highly interesting journal of college affairs. Miss Ladye Nelson Boykin, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Boykin, is the efficient editor-in-chief.

During the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. W.

Holmes, at Conference, the 11 o'clock service at the Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., was conducted by ministerial students of Centenary College, Rev. G. H. Corry doing the preaching.

Rev. W. T. Griffin is the Financial Agent of the Methodist Orphanage for the Mississippi Conferences. Money intended for the new Orphanage building should be sent to him. Correspondents should address him at Summit, Miss.

The sympathy of their Louisiana friends goes out to Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Pearson, Springfield, Mo., in the recent loss of their infant son. Brother Pearson was formerly pastor at Mansfield, La., where another one of his children passed away.

In a communication to this office Rev. O. S. Lewis states that the Biloxi congregation received him gladly. He says: "I see a big opportunity here and business for Methodism is going to pick up." We thank Brother Lewis for an invitation to visit him.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, our pastor at Greenville, Miss., has very graciously sent out a letter to all those who attended the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, expressing the pleasure Greenville Methodism felt in entertaining that gathering.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, in sending in the first round of quarterly conference appointments, states that the preachers of the Brookhaven District have about finished moving, and that preachers and people are happy and ready for a great year's work. So mote it be!

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., who was assigned by Bishop Candler to serve the Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, arrived in this city last Tuesday evening and has entered auspiciously upon his duties. The Carrollton congregation are greatly pleased with their new pastor.

Rev. D. L. Griffin, Route 1, box 155, Shreveport, La., requests us to say that he will be glad to correspond with brethren who may desire his services in conducting a "Bible-planned" revival. Brother Griffin is approved as an evangelist by the Board of Evangelism of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. H. G. Davis, recently transferred from the Florida Conference to the North Mississippi Conference and stationed at Aberdeen, Miss., comes from a very successful pastorate at Quincy, Fla. During his stay at Quincy, the membership of the church was largely increased, and a beautiful church building was erected.

In a note to the Advocate from Rev. W. J. Ferguson, in which he asks us to change the address of his paper, he says he received a most cordial welcome at Gulfport. Brother Ferguson regretted very much to leave Yazoo City, and had no idea that he would be moved. "But such is the life of a Methodist itinerant preacher."

Rev. Walt Holcomb, one of our general evangelists, has an article in the December number of Success Magazine, published in New York, concerning the famous evangelist, Sam P. Jones, as a Chautauqua celebrity. He also has an article in the December World's Work on "Something New Not Only Under the Sun, but Under the Earth."

A telegram from Rev. C. D. Atkinson, dated Dec. 3 says: "I was in Homer yesterday. The congregation there unanimously invites the Wesley Bible Class Federation to meet there March 18 to 20, 1924. Their new church, with their noted hospitality, makes Homer an ideal place for the eighth annual meeting of the Wesley Bible Class Federation and Sunday School Conference."

The corner-stone of the new Methodist church at Arcadia, La., will be laid at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, Dec. 16. Dr. George S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, will be the principal speaker. The pastor, R[illegible] H. W. Ledbetter, extends a cordial invitation to all former pastors and neighboring pastors to be present on that occasion.

Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburg, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Westboro, Mass., writes the Advocate, anent a recent note concerning the oldest Methodist church in Louisiana, that he was pastor, during 1911-13, of the Marblehead (Mass.) Methodist Church, founded by Jessee Lee in 1791, and that while there the 120th anniversary of the founding was observed.

We take the following from the Natchitoches (La.) Enterprise of Nov. 29: "The reappointment of Rev. H. W. Rickey as pastor of the Methodist church for another year is a matter of congratulation, not only to his congregation, but our citizenship as a whole, irrespective of creed, as Mr. Rickey takes an active interest in all community affairs, and has the respect and confidence of our people."

The going of Dr. H. F. Brooks from the pastorate of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., was the occasion of much favorable comment in the Shreveport papers concerning his stay there. During his two years' pastorate he received 825 into the membership of the church. The Sunday school had an enrollment of 2464, with an average attendance for the past year of 1260. Dr. Brooks was transferred to the Mississippi Conference and appointed pastor of the Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson.

MEETING OF PRESIDING ELDERS, BOARD OF MISSIONS, REPRESENTATIVES OF W. M. CONFERENCE, AND LAY ACTIVITIES, AT GRENADA, MISS., DEC. 13.

Promptly at 2 p. m., Dec. 13, 1923, at Grenada, Miss., in the Methodist church, will be opened a meeting of these workers to consider and plan to carry out the Centenary Pay-Out program for December-January next. Also, to discuss and arrange matters of special interest pertaining to our Conference missions this year. The meeting will probably continue into the 14th, at least until the work is finished.

BEN. P. JACO,
Missionary Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE CENTENARY HONOR ROLL.

The following churches have paid their pledges in full and are entitled to certificates:

Old Crystal Springs, Gallman, Miss., Brookhaven District.

Sandy Hook, Foxworth, Miss., Brookhaven District.

Oakdale, Fannin, Miss., Jackson District.

Andrew's Chapel, Fannin, Miss., Jackson District.

Hiwanee, Waynesboro Circuit, Meridian District.

Wesley Memorial, Wesley Memorial, Seashore District.

Logtown, Logtown, Seashore District.

Carlisle, Hermanville, Vicksburg District.

Oak Ridge, Oak Ridge, Vicksburg District.

Porter's Chapel, Oak Ridge, Vicksburg District.

There are twenty-five churches who are entitled to honorable mention on account of nearly having paid out their five years.

W. D. HAWKINS,
Centenary Field Secretary-Treasurer.

PASTORS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

As you know, on Dec. 1 will begin the two-months' effort on behalf of Missions. In every congregation, some time in December, by the assistance of the Woman's Missionary Society, you will have presented a pageant, play, or demonstration, enacting and displaying the work being done, needing to be done, and help needed on all our mission fields. To learn all about your duty and privileges in this matter, you should have three pieces of literature:

1. Plan of Operations, December-January Pay-Out.
2. Explanatory Notes on Co-operative Plan.
3. Demonstrations.

The first one explains the whole program; the second explains fully the work to be done by Woman's Missionary Societies; the third gives a synopsis of each play or demonstration.

These have been sent you. If they are lost, write me a card for more. Study them all closely. Then hurry to the President of your Missionary Society and plan with her for all this work immediately, and later for the All-Day service and Week of Prayer. These plays are made to carry the appeal of Christ's heart to our people, and should be prepared and delivered in awful earnestness, with much prayer, in each church, whether you have a Missionary Society or not.

Do your best, for Christ's sake.

Earnestly,
BEN. P. JACO.

TO THE DISTRICT STEWARDS AND PASTORS OF THE VICKSBURG DISTRICT.

Owing to the joint meeting of the Centenary Commission and our Conference Board of Missions, to be held at Jackson, Miss., Dec. 12, it is necessary to change the time of meeting of the District Stewards of the Vicksburg District from that date to Tuesday, Dec. 11, at 11:30 a. m., at Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg. It is hoped that as many will be present as possible.

W. B. JONES, Presiding Elder.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION OF OUR FORMER PASTOR.

Whereas, Brother H. R. McKee has been our faithful and efficient pastor the two preceding years, having been moved by our recent Annual Conference from Prentiss charge to Silver Creek charge, and upon his return from Conference, in full obedience to the mandate of the Bishop, "Get right off, brethren, to your new fields—the Conference year has ended," but few of our members had opportunity to see and thank him for his splendid labors with us during his pastorate, and we, the members of the Prentiss Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and Sunday school, desiring to express our appreciation and esteem of him; resolved:

1. That we are greatly indebted to Brother McKee for his patient and efficient labors with us, for his progressiveness along all lines of church work, for having been the main factor in building a much needed addition to our church building, many necessary improvements at the parsonage, for his very admirable Christian character, his able and trustworthy counsel in our Sunday school work, having raised it to a Standard School, for his strong efforts to impress upon each of us the true Christian spirit of service, the love of church and the Master's Kingdom; for all of this, we shall always hold him in our memories and esteem.

2. That we do most whole-heartedly commend and recommend him to his new congregations, in full confidence that he will be equally as efficient, progressive, helpful, uplifting, inspiring, and just as true to them as he was to us; that he will labor with that same zeal and enthusiasm, giving them the same wise counsel, and that he will prove himself worthy of their confidence and esteem, and above all a profitable servant of the Master.

3. That we shall always remember his wife, Mrs. McKee, and hold her in the highest esteem for her many splendid accomplishments, her thorough training and efficiency in all lines of Christian service, her effectual labors with us in every department of religious worship, especially for her ability as a Sunday school worker, teacher, and leader of the Woman's Missionary Society; therefore, we commend her to her new congregations with that same wholeheartedness and confidence that we do Brother McKee.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Brother and Mrs. McKee, a copy be given to our town paper, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

KEEP THE RECORD STRAIGHT

By Dr. C. M. Chapman.

I noticed in a recent Commercial Appeal that a member of a State Legislature, in debating a question before the house, made the statement that "More than half of Washington's and Lafayette's army at the birth of the Republic were Roman Catholics." I am surprised that a man who holds so high a position in statecraft could blunder in history so easily. Though a Protestant, the speaker has evidently been misled. I am sure that to claim or disclaim such a thing by positive proof is hardly possible; but a little reasoning and a practicable deduction would settle the matter. Now both Armies were composed of men of the thirteen Colonies and the few soldiers of fortune that came from Europe direct as mercenaries or with Lafayette.

1. Let us note the religious status of the Colonies. New York was Dutch Reform; New Jersey, Presbyterian; Deleware—called "New Sweden"—came over to flee the Catholic intolerance of Europe; Pennsylvania is too well known to discuss—Protestant Quakers whose decendants retained a love of Protestanism too well to have given a majority of Catholics as soldiers to defend its liberty; Maryland, settled by a lord proprietorship given to a Catholic peer, but whose settlers were from the beginning Protestants by majority; North and South Carolina were settled by French Protestants whose fathers paid the price of blood for their faith; Massachusetts was settled by Robinson's Protestant Plymouth colony; Virginia was too well known in religion to discuss it as to its early history as regards Protestantism; Georgia was settled by Moravians and Presbyterians.

2. The other source of soldiers in Washington's army was the 12,000 Hessians. Who were these Hessians? Were they Catholics or Protestants? I don't think anybody knows. But we can give a bit of the history of the principality of Hesse. In 1529, it was one of the first of the German States to protest against Rome by regular authorized legal means—hence we get the title of "Protestants." It protested a German National Church in 1555, and was doubtless the cause of the Reformation's being saved from union of church and State that so tangled other branches of Protestantism later. It was the vanguard of democracy in church or State—and from this country 12,000 lovers of liberty and adventure were hired by its Protestant Government to Washington to fight for the same thing that it had fought for at home—freedom in church or State. Now, is it reasonable to suppose that the "more than half of Washington and Lafayette's armies were Catholics" from either or both sources of supply of soldiers? Did the speaker overspeak himself, or was he just mistaken? There is too much of this taking for granted statements we see in every kind of newspapers and other sources of supply for creating false positions. If most of the soldiers were Catholics, how is it that there is only 14 per cent Catholics in this country now? When did they leave? Perhaps they were so much more daring than Protestants that they all got killed—and were unable to maintain such a high per cent since.

Shelby, Miss.

IS IT FAIR, IS IT HONEST?

The article of Brother P. O. Lowrey in a recent issue of the Advocate with reference to the preachers' breaking their pledges with reference to the use of tobacco, is very timely, and I think it of enough importance to call down every one who is guilty of thus breaking his pledge. One man told me he made the pledge till he could get in, then expected to go ahead using it. I believe that if one man is required to "toe the mark," let every one be compelled to do so if he has not manhood enough to do so otherwise.

Then I note some awful exaggerations in the reports of meetings. You would think that "the poor thing would have died had they not just arrived in time." One man told me that he had received 32 into the church; he reported in the Advocate 26, and two of his best members told me the number was 17. This is a fair example of some of their reports. Is it honest?

And then some fellows seem to not be able to keep their accounts straight, leaving owing every one, never taking care of these matters, and yet year after year they do something of the same things, and still "nothing against him." When the Methodist Church requires of its ministry to preach Methodist doctrine in all its purity, and requires each one just to be honest or quit, we will move forward with leaps and bounds. God speed the day.

RUSTICUS.

LIFE'S LESSONS.

I learn, as the years roll onward
And I leave the past behind,
That much I had counted sorrow
But proves that God is kind;
That many a flower that I'd longed for
Had hidden a thorn of pain,
And many a rugged by-path
Led to fields of ripened grain.

The clouds that cover the sunshine,
They cannot banish the sun,
And the earth shines out the brighter
When the weary rain is done.
We must stand in the deepest shadow
To see the clearest light;
And often through wrong's own darkness
Comes the living strength of light.

The sweetest rest is at even,
After a wearisome day,
When the heavy burden of labor
Has been borne from our hearts away;
And these who have never known sorrow
Cannot know the infinite peace
That falls on the troubled spirit
When it sees at last release.

We must live through the dreary winter
If we would value the spring;
And the woods must be cold and silent
Before the robins sing.
The flowers must be buried in darkness
Before they can bud and bloom,
And the sweetest, warmest sunshine
Comes after the storm and the gloom.

REPORT OF THE EPWORTH LEAGUE BOARD TO THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We rejoice in the continued progress of our young people's work under the direction of the Epworth League. From the showing made by the reports of the pastors, a number of new chapters have been organized and a large number of our choice young people have been added to the membership of the Epworth League.

Our Summer Conference, held at Grenada College, in June of this year, was a source of inspiration, and we urge the pastors and churches to send their young people to these meetings so that still larger work may be done in training leaders, as we aro now arranging to hold a standard assembly where intensive study of mothods will be given and a program of evangelistic inspiration will be carried out.

We ask the several charges and churches to use the President of the Epworth League organization, Rev. Julian S. Duncan, in any way possible which will not conflict with his pastoral duties, as an arrangement has been made for him to visit as many local chapters and communities as he can during the year to promote the cause.

A chain of District Institutes has been held, and another such chain of meetings will be planned for the coming year, in connection with the presiding elders and district secretaries, for promoting the work in the several districts. We ask your hearty co-operation in this undertaking.

Anniversary Day for every League Chapter, and Young People's Day for every charge where there may be no Epworth League, as such, is the rallying ground for the support of the cause. An offering is asked for, and should be sent as soon as secured to the treasurer of the Epworth Leauge Conference, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Belzoni, Miss.

A policy has been adopted by the Board and the Conference organization, and every church and pastor is asked to keep in touch with the district secretaries of their respective districts and report progress, or call on these secretaries for any service that they may be able to render.

The central office of the Epworth League work, at Nashville, Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary, deserves our sympathetic and active interest, and we urge close touch with these trained workers in promoting the cause in the districts and charges.

Respectfully submitted,
R. P. NEBLETT,
For the Board.

THREE GOOD RULES.

The other day we came across some sensible rules which Edward Everett Hale once gave to a high school graduating class, and we thought it might be well to pass them on to our readers, especially our young readers. First of all, Doctor Hale urged that his hearers make it a rule to be out of doors for some definite portion of every twenty-four hours. This is a good rule, and will undoubtedly conduce to good health and mental sanity, as Dr. Hale intended. It may be worth while, however, to say that the fresh air and sunshine are better taken afoot. The automobile covers a lot of ground, but it does not give the rider the exercise that brisk walking, or active participation in some out-door sport would do. And this fresh air exercise should not be a matter of chance, but should be part of the regular daily routine. It is just about as necessary as washing tho face.

Dr. Hale's second rule was, to "rub elbows every day with your fellow-men." The idea that a man can sit in his study and lay wiso plans for public welfare without really coming into actual contact with his fellows, is preposterous. No matter how wise a man, nor how good his intentions, if he intends to do anything to help his fellows, he should first of all find out by actual contact just what his fellows are like. A man may sit in his armchair and guess what other people are thinking about, but his guess will be much nearer the mark if he contrives to get down amongst his fellow-mortals. This applies to business, it applies to politics, it applies to home life, and it applies to the church. Success with men seems absolutely to demand that we mix with men until we get acquainted with them.

Dr. Hale's third rule was "to spend some time every day with some one who knows more than you do;" and it also is a counsel of wisdom. Most of us probably prefer to spend our time with those who know less than we, and who will gladly listen to our wisdom; but increase of knowledge and mental development come rather from listening than from talking, rather from learning than from display of our wisdom. Long ago a Hebrew wise man wrote, probably quoting, "He that walketh with wise men shall be wise," and it holds good to-day. Our companions largely mould our habits and our characters. Well is it for the man who is wise enough to choose companions wiser than himself.

Sometimes our circumstances may severely restrict our choice of companions, but at least we may commune with the wise men of all ages in the pleasant companionship of books. We can talk with Socrates and Plato, we can listen to the music of the poets of the long-buried past, we can live again in books the lives men lived centuries and millenniums ago, and we may to-day keep step with John and Paul, and even our Lord himself.

And this companionship should be made a rule of daily life. It is not enough to shake hands with a wise man, we must actually live part of the day with him. And if we do, there is no question as to the result. Little by little we shall add to our store of wisdom; bit by bit we shall come to see things from the point of view of our companions, and as we mingle with the men who are wiser than we, we also shall become wise.—Christian Guardian.

"STICK."

To the runner, summoning his every effort for the final dash to the goal, to the swimmer straining to make a record in the plunge, and to the football player smashing his way through the line at a critical moment in the game, comes the call, "Stick," from the side-lines. And to the entering student, playing a game no less worthy, no less interesting, comes the call from those who have been in the game, "Stick!"

Never has there been such a demand or such a need for trained thinkers, for trained workers. There is some truth in the saying that a half-learning is a dangerous thing. Students who stop school when they are only half way through are not a finished product. In the professional field they are handicapped because they have not yet learned to use their heads. In the field of manual labor they feel out of place because they have had a glimpse of the possibilities they are capable of attaining.

The manufacturer who lures pupils from the class rooms with attractive wages is not getting his money's worth. And the student who accepts such an offer as a way of making "easy money" will find in the end that he, too, has been cheated. Stick!—California Christian Advocate.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using the well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Pickens, Goodman, and Richland, the three churches on the Pickens charge, observed Children's Week with good results. Such painstaking and faithful work on the part of the pastor and people shows we are getting out of the ruts and making progress. So far, 21 schools have reported as having observed Children's Week.

June 10-17 is the date set apart for our Conference Standard Training School to be held at Grenada. With the co-operation of 160 preachers and 500 superintendents, we ought to have 250 to attend this school. One of our best preachers said when the stewards met to make and apportion the assessments he would ask that an allowance of at least $50 be put in the budget for teacher-training. Five years ago if a man had proposed such a thing he would have been laughed out of the church.

As soon as possible, let every preacher and superintendent take the Program of Work and check up the Sunday school to see where you are starting and see what you have before you to accomplish. This checking up should be done at least once a quarter. If you need help in attaining any point, let me know, and I will do my best to give the desired information. Only one school, so far as I know, has covered as many as nine points; that school is at Shaw and is supervised by a woman, Mrs. M. E. Dakin.

Up to the present, ten preachers have enrolled in the class 'One Hundred. Let every preacher join and get his superintendent to join, then get one thousand teachers to join, and we shall witness a spiritual upheaval mightier than an earthquake. We had as well face the fact that the leaders must know more than the followers if the leaders ever go forward.

To promote Religious Education in the Home and distribute Religious Literature, we need an intelligent man or woman in each community. If you have any spare time, write us for information. We pay liberally. No previous experience required. Exceptional opportunity for teachers, students, ministers, or church workers. UNIVERSAL BIBLE HOUSE, 478 WINSTON BLDG., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Wesley Bible classes that have sent their dues to Nashville have done well. They are helping extend the organized Bible class movement in our Conference as well as in the church at large. We are to receive half the amount we send to Nashville to strengthen and extend the work in our Conference.

I saw a test like this made recently: The pastor stood before the school and said, "Let me see how many under thirteen years of age can repeat the first three of the Ten Commandments." Not one undertook to repeat them. I am sure several junior girls could have repeated all the Commandments, but they did not. This fact shows that the teaching has been defective. The right kind of a test is very helpful. This pastor did a wise thing. He will have better teaching on the part of some of his teachers.

The spirit of missions and evangelism is one spirit, even the Holy Spirit, working in us for others. The Holy Spirit does not work through our ignorance of the Bible truth, but he works through what we know of the truth. The coming of the kingdom is delayed because we do not teach a sufficient amount of the truth concerning the kingdom. We do not give money as God expects us to give it, because we do not know. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," is the cry of the prophet. The world wallowing in sin and groaning in darkness is waiting for a church educated in religion to lift it up to the Savior. Our money gift is a measure of our knowledge of God. There is no money problem in the church; it is a prayer problem, a problem of knowing of God in his fullness and power. There must be a deeper and wider spread of knowledge of God before we shall have any great increase in giving of money. We have more money than religion. Increasing and improving the teaching forces of the church is a slow process of bringing in the kingdom, but it is the fastest yet devised. The church has provided a variety of teaching material. If your school has not received a copy of the "World Map of Missions," write Dr. E. F. Cook, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.

LOUISIANA CONFERENC.

"The Merger Matter"—Report No. 3 of the Sunday School Board.

To the Bishop and Members, Louisiana Annual Conference:

Dear Brethren: Whereas, our great church has put on an adequate program of religious education, and the records and facts show that the past year has been one of the best, if not the best, in our history as a Conference; and, whereas, the Louisiana Sunday School Association has declared in its official organ that the past year has been its best; and, whereas, all our relations to outside agencies are purely voluntary; therefore, your committee, appointed at the last session of Annual Conference on the "Merger Matter," recommends that present relations with said organization remain the same for the coming year, and that the same committee be continued, with J. C. Price in place of Rev. J. W. Pearson.

Respectfully submitted,
W. S. HOLMES, Chairman.
ROBT. M. BROWN, Secretary.

FROM COURT STREET, HATTIESBURG, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Our people have given us a very cordial reception for our fifth year. Many have pledged a more hearty co-operation in all departments of the church. The board of stewards voted a liberal increase in the pastor's salary.

Our heart is set, and we are determined, by God's grace, to make this the best of the five years we have served these good people.

C. M. CROSSLEY.

FROM HICKORY FLAT, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Let me submit to you and the Advocate these words from the Hickory Flat charge:

Despite the inclement weather, Thanksgiving service was held at the Methodist church, with all denominations co-operating. The little church was beautifully decorated. After singing, the writer read the one hundred and thirty-eighth Psalm, after which three little girls sang a Thanksgiving song, and the writer made a short talk suitable to the occasion. We then had an inspirational talk from the superintendent of our high school, and also from Brother Baker, our Sunday school superintendent.

There was then presented to the pastor and his family many good things to eat and to wear, for which we were very grateful. We pray the blessings of God upon the good people of this charge.

The outlook for this year is good.

May the Lord bless you in your great work.

R. C. NANNEY, P. C.

THE CENTENARY GIVES NEW LIFE TO HOME MISSIONS.

By Dr. R. L. Russell.

The Centenary has given new life to home missions, notwithstanding the fact that the Home Mission Department was in the askings of the Centenary for only 14% of the entire amount of the Centenary quota.

So rapidly has our program developed that whereas one man before the Centenary did all the work in the Home Mission department, it now requires three men giving their full time to it. Whereas before the Centenary we had not exceeding $150,000 to spend on home mission enterprises, running from Baltimore, Md., to Butte, Montana, and back to Key West, Fla., the Centenary, if paid in full, will bring us in about $800,000 a year for five years, in addition to the regular appropriation. It is not difficult, therefore, to understand how the home mission idea would take form rapidly and new enterprises would be begun in all sections of the church.

Through the Centenary we have been able to aid in building all church and Sunday school buildings, or carrying out an enlarged program in nearly every city all the way across the United States. Besides this, we have given aid and stimulus to many of the failing rural churches, and scores of rural churches that were abandoned have been reopened.

Wanted! Ambitious Men and Women

We are receiving calls daily for men and women of character, ambition and business training, men and women who can accept and efficiently fill responsible positions, positions that give every opportunity for advancement; positions of high salaries, positions in banks, law offices, insurance, real estate, brokers' offices; positions with manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, in every imaginable type of business in the South.

Many of them we capably fill, others are yet vacant. The men and women who fill them need not be wealthy, nor even moderately well-to-do. They need not be young, nor need they be college or even high school graduates. All that is necessary is that they possess character, ambition and a business training.

The character and ambition they must possess, the business training we will furnish under the direction of the South's most efficient training corps and in one of the South's most efficient and best equipped business colleges. A training with unique courses in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, accounting, banking, business administration or our secretarial course. Such a training we will furnish in a few months' time at little cost to you, and at terms to meet your own financial condition.

Thousands of Southern men and women have taken advantage of the opportunity and trained themselves for a higher calling, a better salary and a greater opportunity for advancement. Many who have accepted the positions we offer have risen to the top of the ladder, and are numbered among America's foremost and wealthiest business and professional men and women.

An institution with such standing and reputation as the Georgia-Alabama Business College does more to advance the business interests of its graduates than can be done by any amount of family or personal influence.

Consider your present status—would you not like to improve your station in life, increase your income, attain financial independence and success? An opportunity awaits you, for positions are being constantly offered us that must be filled.

Write for our inspiring book, "Your Future—What Does it Hold in Store?" It is sent free on request, explains our offer in detail and points the way to a brighter future.

Bible Sunday

December 9th

Theme

THE BIBLE
REMAKING THE ORIENT

Purpose

The earthquake in Japan has made large areas of the Far East practically Bibleless. Thousands of Bible printing plates in 25 languages and dialects used in Yokohama have been totally destroyed. They must be replaced at once or the whole missionary program will be seriously handicapped.

Need

The American Bible Society needs immediately $289,000 with which to make good the actual losses, to say nothing of the enlarged opportunities.

Responsibility

is definitely upon the Churches of America, whose agency for Bible work in the Far East is the American Bible Society.

Opportunity

is one of unusual significance and every Pastor, Sunday School Superintendent and Young People's leader should utilize Bible Sunday on December 9th (or nearest convenient date) for the promotion of interest in the distribution of the Scriptures in Japan and the Far East.

Please let every official be present, since we have business of great importance to the church to be transacted at this quarterly conference. The church gives us the opportunity to demonstrate our loyalty to God and His great plan of redemption for the human race. Every call of our great church is but the voice of God to His children to bestir themselves in behalf of world redemption, as becomes those who are sons of God. We had a great year together last year, and I am encouraged to believe that the next twelve months will mark yet greater accomplishments for the Kingdom of God in the Sardis District than were done last year. Pray for me and all other Kingdom workers.

NEW LAMP HAS NO WICK OR CHIMNEY

Most Brilliant Home Light Known—Costs One Cent a Night.

A new lamp which has no wick or chimney, yet, according to experts, gives the most powerful home light in the world, is the latest achievement of W. C. Fowler, 421 Factory building, Kansas City, Mo. This remarkable new lamp beats gas or electricity—gives more light than 300 candles, 18 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights, and costs only one cent a night. A blessing to every home, especially on farm or in small town. It is absolutely safe, and gives universal satisfaction. No dirt, no smoke, no odor. A child can carry it. It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall or church enjoy the increased comfort of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light, and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial to any reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate who writes him. He wants one person to whom he can refer new customers. Take advantage of his free offer. Agents wanted. Write him to-day.—Advt.

Life of Thomas Coke

By WARREN AKIN CANDLER, D.D.

Great achievements, whether they be of individuals or of the masses, are usually the result of the uncommon devotion of some great man. The establishment of the Methodist Church and the promulgation of its doctrines during the early years centered upon the lives of a few devout leaders, among whom was Thomas Coke. In the propagation of Methodism he was second only to John Wesley, and in some respects he was superior to that great man.

Layman or preacher will profit by a close study and application of the life of this illustrious character.

MISSIONARY WORK AMONG MEXICANS.

By Dr. R. L. Russell.

Three years ago, the Home Department, enabled by the Centenary, opened up a day school for Mexican children at Hillsboro, Texas. Mrs. O. L. Futch, a woman consecrated to this work, has given her full time to it since that date. Through this day school a Sunday school has been organized, a church has been built and a church organized, and a preacher has been giving part-time service to them. Mrs. Futch and her workers are not satisfied to limit their work to Hillsboro, but have opened new missions on the Sanderson farm near Whitney, Texas. Rev. J. L. Hines, pastor of the church at Hillsboro and Fort Worth, drove out to the farm for the first service. They had intended using a barn, but the barn burned the night before and the service was held under the trees. There were present 49 Mexicans and 9 Americans, who stood during the entire service. At the conclusion of the service many Mexicans said, "We wish you could come back, but we are very poor and cannot pay your expenses." The pastor said, "We will not talk about expenses. We are more interested in seeing you saved than in getting your money." So the men volunteered to build an arbor and the missionaries went back the following Sunday to organize a Sunday school.

THAT SERIOUS LEAK IN BALTIMORE.

Dear Dr. Carley: The notice you recently published, in regard to pastors and parents notifying the undersigned concerning our people who have moved to Baltimore and our young men and women who are in attendance upon the Johns Hopkins University, other schools, and are in training at hospitals, has been productive of considerable fruit. There have been not a few responses, and young men and women, pursuing their studies in this city, have been located and their moral and religious welfare will be looked after. Families have been found that would have drifted from Southern Methodism but for these replies. Thousands of people from the South who have moved to Baltimore have been lost to our church in the past, because the church here has had no means of locating them.

This leak in our Methodism can be stopped if every pastor and parent who have people or children in Baltimore will write the undersigned at once, and make a practitce of notifying the church when their people move to this city.

CARLTON D. HARRIS,
Pastor Alpheus W. Wilson Memorial Church, 309 E. University Parkway, Baltimore, Md.

FRIENDS IN NEED.

By Miss Bettie Branton.

"The man who has a thousand friends, has not a friend to spare; but he who has an enemy, will meet him everywhere."

Friendship is a delightful theme. Poets have caught its inspiration, while multitudes have felt its soothing influence. Who, in time of joy, have not taken pleasure in communicating their joyous emotions to a friend? And who, in the hour of sorrow, have not alleviated their grief by telling their feeling of sadness to a friend? Thus friendship increases joy and diminishes sorrow.

Help one another. This should be the golden rule practiced, not only in every household, but throughout the world. By helping one another, we not only remove thorns from the pathway, but we feel a sense of pleasure in our own hearts, knowing we are doing a duty to a fellow creature.

Our kind acts may seem to be in vain; but as the dormant seeds waken in the spring-time, so they shall bud, blossom and bear abundant fruitage in God's own time.

Hathorn, Miss.

"REFLECTIONS OF A CIRCUIT RIDER"—SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT AND A THREE-POINT CIRCUIT.

By Rev. Julian S. Duncan.

The success or failure of the Superannuate Endowment Campaign depends largely upon the circuit pastors of our connection. The station churches will probably bring up their quotas without any great difficulty. If the rural churches get behind it, the effort is an assured success.

Speaking from something over four years' experience as a circuit rider, this writer believes that our country constituency will respond to the call of the "forgotten man." Outside of appeals for orphans' home funds, no cause of the church presents a more appealing call. How can the pastors best put it over?

The budget plan has long ago proved its efficiency. The Presbyterians have wrought wonders with it. Their per capita contributions for all purposes is much ahead of ours. The Southern Baptists are putting a man in thte field whose chief duty is to get the people to budget all their expenditures. Methodism would do well to take a leaf from their experience. Our work would succeed better if we had fewer secretaries representing special causes and more definite effort made to put all of our calls in one budget. If our people were given the training in systematic giving, which the budget system assures, and came really to regard themselves as stewards, then money needed for these special causes, and they are all worthy, would be forthcoming.

It was with this conviction that we began the effort to raise the Superannuate Endowment Fund allotment for the Pickens and Goodman circuit. The cause was first placed before the Woman's Missionary Societies of the charge. Each organization responded with a small subscription. The matter was then presented before an organized Bible class and they agreed to take a small amount. The matter was then presented to the board of stewards of each church, and they were asked to include the remainder in their budget for the coming year. This they agreed to do, and promised to accept whatever apportionment the quarterly conference should make.

Our first quarterly conference was held Nov. 26, 1923. At this conference the vote was unanimous that we accept the allotment of the salary for one year for preacher and presiding elder, to be spread in payment over a period of five years. The apportionment was then made to each one of the three churches which constitute the charge. These amounts have been provided for in the budget with a substantial sum set aside for contingencies. The charge will thus be able to meet its allotment and the people will be trained in systematic giving through their monthly contributions. These budgets provide for pastor and presiding elder, Conference collections, local expenses and Superannuate Endowment. The minimum will be forthcoming with whatever addition the people may be able to make.

The circuit rider can make certain the success of the effort. Dr. Todd has placed on the book which he has distributed to all the pastors of Southern Methodism a picture of a Methodist circuit rider, which he has labeled "Methodism's Coat of Arms." The noble men who have been Methodism's strength in the past and who now constitute the majority of her ministry will not fail in this important and appealing effort. Persistent and systematic work will bring success.

Pickens, Miss.

This act of initiative and daring, this resolute step of entire confidence, is at the same time the most reasonable proceeding that a creature may undertake. Give credit to God; no wisdom, no prudent calculation could be safer.—Charles Wagner.

DOCTORS WANTED TO OPERATE

Mrs. Quillon Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from an Operation

Muskegon, Michigan.—"After doctoring for eight or nine years with different physicians without any relief at all, they said at last that medicine would not reach my case and I should have an operation. I had heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and often saw it advertised in different papers where some women had suffered just as I did and got well and strong again by taking the Vegetable Compound. I decided to see what it would do for me, and before I had finished the fourth bottle I was much better, the weakness stopped and the severe pains in my sides left me. I am now much stronger and do my own work and work in the factory besides. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and give it all the praise."—Mrs. NELLIE QUILLON, 17 Morris St., Muskegon, Mich.

Women should heed such warning symptoms as bearing-down pains and weakness, for they indicate some female trouble, and a persistent and faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will seldom fail to help.

THE METHODIST MEN'S CLUB.

By Rev. J. W. Frazer, General Secretary.

The Methodist Men's Club is the only organization of its kind that has been officially endorsed by the General Conference. The Federated Club movement is being extended to every part of the connection, and strong local clubs are constantly making application for charters as regularly affiliated members of the general organization.

In organizing a club in the local church, the usual procedure is to secure as large a number of pledged members as possible. Every Methodist man, or man of Methodist inclination, over eighteen years of age, is eligible to membership. When the list of pledged members has been secured, let the organizing committee (usually appointed by the pastor) set a date for the Charter Night. It is suggested that the Charter Night take the form of a banquet or supper, at which time the officers of the local club are elected, namely: president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, and program committee for the year. Speeches, songs, etc., might feature the occasion.

After the election of officers on Charter Night, the president-elect presents to the Club the charter of its connection with the Federated Clubs. This is the official notice of the local club's membership in the general organization of the Methodist Men's Club. After the Club charter has been presented by the president-elect, the secretary of the Club calls each pledged member by name and furnishes him with a Club emblem (a gold button), a membership card, and a Club song book; this being the official recognition of the individual as a member of the Federated Clubs. Thereafter, it is customary for the local clubs to hold monthly meetings, the program for each meeting being arranged by the Program Committee, with the president of the Club presiding.

The question is sometimes asked: "Will an independent club get the same results as one affiliated with the General Organization?" The records show that most of the clubs which started on an independent basis either ceased to function after a few months, or applied for a charter in the Federated Club movement. An independent club is in the same position as an independent Methodist church, or a clandestine lodge of Masons. The regularly affiliated club has the strength and co-operation of the whole organization, and is in communion with the whole body.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interferance with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.—Adv.

I shall expect the district stewards to do all their work without the assistance of any one. So please come with some plan outlined by which you may expedite the work. While there was a decrease in some of the assessments for this year there was a total increase on the Seashore District to the amount of $327, made necessary on account of our Home Mission work being carried on in our own district.

I wish all the preachers to meet me at the Methodist church, Gulfport, for a conference to be held at 7:30 p. m., Dec. 20. As many as can do so, I shall be glad for you to meet with us at the church at 3 p. m., as we will have some time while the stewards are at their work.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

THE DEATH OF BISHOP JAMES ATKINS.

The church is called upon again to mourn the loss of one of its distinguished leaders. Bishop James Atkins died at the home of Rev. James Thomas, in Little Rock, Ark., on Wednesday evening, Dec. 5, after an illness of several days. He had been holding the Little Rock Annual Conference and was stricken during its sessions, but had recovered sufficiently to preside at the last session and read the appointments on Sunday night. He had planned to remain in Little Rock several days to recuperate, but on Monday night his condition suddenly became serious, and he never rallied.

Bishop Atkins was born in Knoxville, Tenn., on April 18, 1850, the son of Rev. and Mrs. James Atkins. He was educated at Emory and Henry College, receiving the degree of Mster of Arts in 1872. He was ordained to the ministry in the same year and served in the pastorate until 1879, when he became President of Asheville Famale College, remaining in this position till he was called to the presidency of Emory and Henry, where he remained four years. He then returned to Asheville Female College as President again, where he remained until 1896, when he was elected to the position of Sunday School Editor. For ten years he served the church effectively in this position, and in 1906 he was elevated to the epsicopacy.

Bishop Atkins gave to the church a constructive leadership throughout his administration. In the Sunday school work, in the Centenary, and in the Christian Education Movement he expended his strength to the utmost, inspiring the church by his own devotion to these great causes and contributing largely to their success by his constant efforts in their behalf. He will be greatly missed in the councils of the church.

Interment took place at Waynesville, N. C., his former home, on last Saturday, the funeral services being held in the Baptist Church, the Methodists being without a church pending the erection of a new building. Bishop Atkins is survived by three children of his first marriage and by his widow, to whom the sympathy of the whole church is extended.

THE FIRST MORTGAGE ON THE CHRISTMAS PURSE.

By Dr. W. G. Cram, Directing Secretary, Centenary Movement.

Christmas! A season of gladness to all Christian people! The birthday of joy! The hour of fullest life!

The sorrowful world needs a genuine Christmas this year! Not a Christmas that burns shavings to make a light, nor a festival that burns powder to make a noise; not a Saint Nicholas who loads the few with gifts and forgets the many; not a Christmas that festoons with gorgeous colored crepe the chancel and the altar, and strews the house of God and the waiting people with confetti—all paper, mere paper, that flutters a moment then falls to the ground. A symbol of nothing; a blessing to nobody! The world needs a Christmas that expresses the love and life of Christ.

The world is all athirst for a true Christmas this year, a Christmas that expresses the love of God, the grace and peace of Christ. The giving of gifts is a beautiful custom. Christ started it. He gave himself. He gave life. Ever since Christ gave himself to the world we have been giving gifts one to another, gifts to our children, gifts to our loved ones, gifts to our friends, gifts to our neighbors. Have we included Christ in this riot of giving? Do we share with him our Christmas gifts? Is he on our list? Somebody has truly said, "Christ is the only one who on his birthday beholds others receiving the birthday gifts." Of course, the love and joy and holy sentiments in the hearts of his people are gifts of worship. We must not minimize that. Christ does not always want silver and gold. But he needs it this year. Devastated Europe, pagan China, helpless Korea, stricken Japan, priest-ridden Mexico and South America, and these great United States—our native land—are pathetically in need of the love and help of God.

Christ has committed the task of expressing his love to his church. Let us include him in our gifts this year. He included us in his gift. He will take these gifts and commend the church. The church will commend her ministers, her teachers and her missionaries. These agents of Christ will proclaim the message of life and love, and the people everywhere will enjoy real Christmas cheer.

America can give the world a real Christmas this year if she will. Out of every dollar earned in the United States, twenty cents goes for luxuries, and the expenditure totals nearly ten billion dollars. This is ten times as much as we spend for education. Our church giving is far below such a figure. That twenty cents should be reduced. Much of it can well be spared to redeem unpaid vows and pledges.

The Methodist church of our Southland can make this Christmas of greater cheer to the Orient, to South America and Europe, and here in these United States. On the great Centenary pedge of $35,000,000 made five years ago we still owe very large sums. Let every individual pledger who owes a balance include that unpaid balance in the Christmas budget. Let it be the "first mortgage" on the Christmas purse. Pay it out and thrill the heart of Christ and warm and cheer the shrunken, hungry souls of all our fellowmen everywhere.

CIRCUIT RIDING SIXTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.

By Rev. Jno. W. Boswell, D.D.

This is the 30th of November, 1923. This day sixty-four years ago I started to my first circuit. I have been in the work, without a break, ever since. It goes without saying that in these years I have had many and varied experiences. Some of these experiences were very happy ones. I recall them with the greatest pleasure. A few were not "joyous but grievous." These I would forget if I could. But as I cannot put them out of mind, I freely forgive any one who in anywise sinned against me. One or two laymen treated me badly. One presiding elder afflicted me; and one brother pastor, needlessly and without provocation, insulted me, but nobody save the bishop who was holding the Conference and I ever knew it. On the whole, I have led a charmed life, and if I had to begin again I would not shirk a single appointment, not even the Searcy District in Arkansas—the hardest work I ever had, not because the people were poor, for they were not—just an average country people, many of them well-to-do, and as clever and good as could be found anywhere in the world. It was hard because the district was large, and the roads were rough. One-half the territory was in the Black and White River swamps, and the other half in the hills. In the winter and spring the swamps were sometimes impassable. At all seasons of the year the roads through the hills were rocky and rough. More than once in going from Searcy to Augusta, a distance of twenty-five miles, I would have to go by way of Jacksonport, which required seventy-five miles of travel, and then you were never on high ground. The only modes of travel were horseback and buggy. Only about fifty miles of railroad were available. Henry Ford was a small boy at that time and never dreamed of an automobile.

Only a few days since I saw something in regard to the privations and hardships of preachers about the time I started. I do not doubt what the writer said so far as some sections of the country are concerned. But I never happened to visit such places. I have been in the homes of the poorest people of the land, but ever found them as generous, as hospitable, and full of the milk of human kindness as I ever experienced in the homes of the rich. The rich excelled them only in better homes and more conveniences. If anything, the poor exceeded the rich in the experience of grace. This calls to mind a bright and shining light:

There lived a man east of Oxford, Miss., whose

SENSELESS AND SINFUL SENSATIONALISM.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

A news dispatch from New York, which appeared recently, read as follows:

"Tom-toms thundered and great howls of incense sent a gray film of smoke through the rainbow-tinted church, while the rector, Rev. Norman Guthrie, invoked the gods of the Indians. Weird Indian music was played and cabalistic accompaniments were used to interpret Indian dances. The church was St. Mark's in the Bouwerie. The service was started by the invocation of the holy visions from Hako. Then came a responsive reading from an Omaha ritual, followed by a choir anthem from the Pawnee ceremony, in which the thin wail of an Indian chant conjured up campfire rites."

When the church in which this profane performance was exhibited was dedicated a prayer was made in which this pious petition was made: "Vouchsafe, O Lord, to be present with us, who are here gathered together with all humility and readiness of heart, to consecrate this place to the honour of thy great Name; separating it henceforth from all unhallowed, ordinary and common uses, and dedicating it to thy service, for reading thy holy Word, for celebrating thy holy sacraments, for offering to thy glorious Majesty the sacrifices of prayer and thanksgiving, for blessing thy people in thy Name, and for all other holy offices."

The pagan spectacle described in the press dispatch quoted was the nullification of this prayer of consecration and the negation of every part of the ritual of the Episcopal Church for the dedication of chapels and churches. It was a perverse and impious use of the building in which it was produced, and it was utterly foreign and antagonistic to the holy uses to which the house had been solemnly set apart. Sensible and devout people everywhere who read the account of the performance will deplore and condemn it as a gross profanation of a place of worship.

Unfortunately, it does not stand alone, although it is a peculiar type of the profanation of churches which, in various forms, is all too prevalent in our day. Many others do what is essentially the same thing, although they do it in different ways.

There has entered the minds of many, including not a few ministers, a false conception of the nature of the church and, by consequence, they hold erroneous notions concerning the methods which are fitting for promoting its success. The idea common to many such persons is that the church does not differ much from a commercial enterprise, or a fraternal order.

Hence, there is mania for drawing crowds into the house of God by any and all methods, both proper and improper. A demand is widespread for "preachers who can draw" and for "attractive programmes," sensational sermonizing and forms of unworshipful music are employed to collect crowds, special appeals being made to catch the ears of whimsical and worldly "young people." Shows are offered to substitute as nearly as possible on Sundays the scenes enacted in theatres and playhouses on weekdays. The churches and preachers who adopt these meretricious methods are in the market-place, piping for dancers and lamenting for mourners—doing anything, in fact, to get gaping crowds to patronize them. Worshiping congregations are thereby displaced to make way for aggregations of wonder-mongers and seekers of sensationalism.

But pray tell us what is the use of drawing people into the churches if what is said and done before them in the churches defeats the only object for which the churches exist? Is it possible that the desire to secure money to maintain the profaned establishments and to pay the salaries of the pulpit talkers (miscalled preachers) who serve them is the motive from which these evil proceedings arise? If so, what shall be said of reducing a church of God, founded for seeking and saving the lost, to the role of a caterer, or an entertainer, seeking profitable customers? Does the Lord Jesus Christ, who drove the traders and money-changers from the Temple at Jerusalem, look with less indignation upon such things in places of worship to-day?

Let us recall the significant record of that instructive incident: "And the Jews' passover was at hand, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem and found in the Temple those that sold oxen and sheep and doves, and the changers of money sitting: and when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the Temple, and the sheep and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables; and said unto them who sold doves, Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise" (John ii, 13.) Conscience-smitten, the traders fled before the denunciation of one who seemed to them no more than a presumptuous young man having no authority over the holy place. Their consciousness of profane covetousness made them cowards before Him. But while the Temple was cleansed, it was not so with the foul brood who had been nesting it. The traders were cowed, but not cured.

A little later the Master found them there again, filled with a more grasping greed than ever. In his second cleansing of the Temple his burning words of rebuke bespoke the deeper depths of degradation to which the traffickers in God's house had descended: "And he said unto them, It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves" (Matt. xxi, 13, and Mark xi, 17.) From robbing God of His honor, these greedy traders had come to practicing thievishness towards their fellowmen. They began to be profiteers in the matter of offerings for sacrifice. Doubtless, when at first they began their profane traffic, they defended it with many plausible pretexts and specious arguments. Already the dispersion of the Jews had begun, and many of them were as far away from Jerusalem as the city of Rome, and in all lands lying around the Mediterranean sea and neighboring regions, there were thousands of devout proselytes to the Jewish faith. All these, coming from their distant homes to observe the Passover, needed to purchase at Jerusalem for their sacrifices the oxen and sheep and doves which could not be brought with them from afar. And their foreign moneys had to be changed for their uses in the Holy Land. How easy it was for the traders and money changers to extenuate their crime by pleading that their nefarious traffic was a religious necessity, and that they were serving both God and men by their sales in the courts of the Temple. Certainly there was better reason for what they did than there is for the profanation of the Christian churches to-day by purveyors of pagan spectacles and cheap sensationalism in our houses of worship.

But it is the property of sin, especially greed and profanity, to run rapidly to the grossest and most repulsive excesses. And so the traders in the Temple came at last to take advantage of the necessities of worshipers from remote points by charging exorbitant prices for sacrificial beasts and birds, and by making excessive discounts for changing foreign money into current coin. Thus their covetousness bred thievishness, and their profanity produced swindling.

Is the final outcome on the characters of the profaners of our churches of a very different nature?

Do not sensationalists in the pulpit, trying by unseemly methods to get gaping crowds to fill their churches, swindle their hearers? To hungry hearts, needing the bread of life, they give the hard stones of buffoonery and hysterical declamation. Does that not amount to selling unclean beasts in the Temple?

And what of the shoddy shows which are often staged in some churches? Where can anything be found that is so little worth the price paid for it? No show is so sorry as a church show. That Indian performance in the New York church was probably one of this shoddy sort. The Indians whom it proposed to represent would have derided it, and resented it, if it had been their misfortune to witness it.

Our churches are erected and dedicated to "the service of God, for the reading and expounding of His holy word, the administration of his ordinances and for all other acts of religious worship." The bringing into them of aught else perverts and profanes them.

Strolling singers of cheap opera have no place in them.

Peripatetic lecturers, setting forth unsound systems of psychology, many of whom are now roving over the land, can not turn a house of God to the purposes of a second-rate lyceum without committing a grave offense to God and man. They who permit them to do so are like unto them and deserve to share with them well-merited condemnation.

To profane temples pollutes worship, and to pollute worship is to commit a high crime against both religion and civilization.

And let it be remembered always that profanity under the constitution of the Kingdom of heaven is a capital offense. For that gross sin Nadab and Abihu, Hophni and Phinehaz, and Belshazzar were slain. Against that sin Jesus showed forth a blazing indignation.

Ananias and Sapphira were brought to death, not for bare lying, but for an attempt at profane lying after retaining deceitfully in their own possession land which they had professed to have dedicated to God.

Let the present-day profaners of sacred places and holy things beware of like fate. God will not be mocked.

BLOCKING OUT A PLAN FOR THE YEAR.

The preacher is a builder. Some preachers are better builders than others. Here is one preacher who never gets beyond digging the hole for the foundation. A review of that preacher's labor shows nothing but a few unsightly, half-finished foundations. If that preacher were to write a volume of reminiscences—and who would read it if he did?—it would contain the tragic story of work begun but never finished, of energy expended without results, of a life lived with no reward to sweeten the aftermath of the years. Here is another preacher who starts fewer foundations but who always finishes the superstructure with grace and charm. Building is a thrilling business, providing you finish the job.

The Need of System.

What a contrast in preacher builders! Here is one whose life represents a series of shallow diggings. Here is another whose tireless labor has fashioned a shrine of imperishable beauty, at whose altars the multitudes kneel for rest and pardon. The one preacher's life is a blank. Yes, it is worse than that. It is a blot. The other preacher's life is a written page, a page of divine poetry that sweeps through the soul of the reader with majestic rhythm. Why the difference in preachers? It isn't a difference in character. It isn't a difference, very often, in ability. It is a difference in the practical art of application to the everyday tasks of the preacher's life. Some preachers plan their work and succeed. Other preachers, equal in character and ability, do not plan their work, and fail.

The preacher as a builder needs a plan. If he doesn't see the necessity of a plan, or seeing the necessity is not willing to submit to the rigorous requirements of a plan-conducted ministry, then he will be numbered among the transgressors who buried their talents and went down in defeat. That may not have been true yesterday. But it is drastically true today. The preacher who succeeds in this present hour must enter the lists with a whole host of others of all professions and labor, who plan their work to the last possible detail, and who have neither the time nor the patience to waste with any person who does not know what he wants to do or how he proposes to do it. Slip-shodness in the ministry, as in every other human activity, can no longer be tolerated, at least by those who aspire and achieve. That is why magazines stressing "system" have such a wide reading.

No attempt is here being made to deny that the minister's life and labor reaches backward and forward into an element of unseen reality and hidden power without which no amount of planning can possibly succeed. But that unseen reality and that hidden power must be harnessed to the present-day method of getting things done. That method is one of system. The preacher must block out a plan for each year of his ministry and for his life as a whole. Such a preacher's life gathers momentum as it moves along and develops a current that rushes swiftly to the sea of larger usefulness and wider influence.

No Thought for the Morrow?

You are a preacher, let us say. What are you going to do during the fall and winter months that will soon rush upon you? You say you are going to preach. But what are you going to preach about? Why, about the gospel, of course. But the gospel is a big theme and can be handled only by big men. One of the first essentials of a successful ministry is in knowing far in advance what is going to be said from the pulpit on any given Sunday. Too many ministers take too literally the admonition of Christ, "Take no thought for the morrow." As a consequence, the days of the week fly past on the wings of time, and the minister wakes up on Sunday morning with a haunting dread of the day that is before him and with the unexpressed wish that it were Monday rather than Sunday. It is so much easier to help with the week's washing than it is to preach a sermon with power. On that Sunday morning the minister's mind is a vacuum, his soul is heavy, and the bell of the church instead of bringing sweet music to his ears sounds like the solemn dirge of the funeral hour. If the preacher feels that way before he begins his sermon, how must the congregation feel after he has finished it?

These preachers without a preaching plan go into their pulpits expecting God to fill their mouths, and while they are waiting for the Holy Spirit to ventriloquize, the congregation multitudes are leaving the church, never to return. If the preacher faces a long stretch of empty pews on a Sunday morning it is largely his own fault. You simply can't blame people for not coming to church when all they hear on their arrival is a hodgepodge of meaningless abstractions, repeated in the same way, over and over again. The "zero hour" in a man's ministry comes when the congregation knows in advance what he is going to say. A man is willing to eat a stewed dinner of leftovers when his wife has been busy all day over the ironing-board, but he quickly and rightly rebels when a stewed dinner is served up to him every day as a regular diet. So it is with a man when he goes to church. He quickly tires of stewed sermons made up of left-overs from a former, unsuccessful pastorate.

The clairvoyant capacity of the average congregation immediately to divine whether or not their preacher has studiously prepared his sermon is simply amazing. There is too much poor preaching these days. The cause of poor preaching is the lack of preparation. The result is a disgusted congregation and a dead church. Now is the time, if it has not already been done, to outline and diligently prepare a course of sermons reaching through the Easter season. That will take work, of course, but drones have no business in the ministry.

Working with an Objective.

Preaching must be done not only according to a plan but with a purpose. It is the grasshopper preacher who fails, the preacher who hops around in his pulpit work all the year, not knowing whence he came nor whither he is going. It is often said that people generally do not have a sufficiently large grasp on the essentials of Christian conduct. That again is the preacher's fault. The preacher is a teacher. Let that never be forgotten. His congregation comes to church not to be entertained but to be taught. They want to be taught the essentials of character. They want to be instructed in the things of eternity. They are a bit tired of theology and doctrine, but they are eager to be shown the way that leads to righteousness. That can only be done by the preaching that is born of purpose. Let the preacher not only plan his sermons but let him plan them with a purpose, a purpose that provides for the continued enlightenment of the mind and enrichment of the soul of those who come to listen.

Extemporaneous Preaching.

The sermons of Jesus are often referred to by the lazy preacher as an illustration of the effectiveness of extemporaneous preaching. Such subterfuge rests upon two false premises. In the first place, Jesus never preached without preparation. His sermons give every evidence of spontaneity, but that spontaneity is an indubitable evidence of a long and careful preparation. In the second place, these intellectually lazy preachers are not Jesus of Nazareth. The Son of Man did many things and said many things that the lazy preacher will never be able to do or say. The preacher who builds wisely will know in September what he is going to preach about the following April, and he will adhere to that plan with a definiteness of purpose and a well-conceived objective which will make his life a joy and his ministry a blessing.

The Importance of Reading.

The pastor's reading will be determined largely by his preaching objective. The pastor who does not read incessantly will soon be a mental suicide and his congregation a valley of dead bones. People everywhere are reading. All this throws a tremendous responsibility upon the preacher. He too must read. He must read something new every day. He must read not only the Bible, the classics, church history and theology, but books on sociology, industrial ethics, religious psychology, and well-chosen fiction. The clergy at one time were the sole possessors of knowledge. That day was a part of what we now call ancient history. The pity of it is that many preachers do not know this. The only way in which the modern preacher is able to retain and command the respect of his congregation is in being always in advance of them in matters of general knowledge. How is a preacher going to buy these books? By spending more money in the bookstores and less money in buying worthless stocks, and by taking the money now given promiscuously in mistaken charity to tramps who are able to work, and spending that money for opportunities in reading. Then it always happens that there are a few good books in every public library which the minister may read without expense to himself. The fact that the average preacher does not do enough reading of the right kind cannot be charged against lack of funds but against lack of mental initiative.

A Program of Ceaseless Toil.

Pastoral work must be undertaken according to a plan. Pastors are human and they love friends, but no pastor has the right to indulge the friendship of a few choice spirits to the utter neglect of the rest of the congregation. A pastoral ministry that is built upon a plan of periodic calls within a given area will be saved from the menace of partiality. To map out pastoral work in advance saves time, energy, and shoe leather. While the shiftless pastor is leaning up against a telegraph post wondering whom he shall see next, the enterprising pastor will be making a dozen calls, and his church will be filled with worshipping souls while the church of his careless contemporary will be empty. A well-filled church does not happen by chance. It is the result of careful planning and tireless application.

Then, too, the minister of to-day must be a student of the religious educational movement. One of the outstanding developments in the educational policy of the church through all the centuries is now in progress, and many preachers are but dimly conscious of this period of transition and pursue the old, outworn methods with diminishing returns. A careful reading of the numerous books on this general subject, together with a genuine consecration to the task of conserving the child life of the community, will make of the average preacher a bigger asset to God and His church.

The preacher's task is a difficult one. It cannot be handled in a careless manner. It requires mental blue-prints and the skill of a constructive engineer. The first duty of every minister is to maintain an unbroken comradeship with the Good Shepherd. His next duty is so to plan the work God has given him to do that not one soul entrusted to his pastoral keeping shall be lost. —Zion's Herald.

"SUNSET AND EVENING STAR."

An interesting incident in connection with "Sunset and Evening Star" is given by Mr. H. P. Ford: "Some years ago, on a beautiful afternoon in the early autumn, I went for the first time along the famous Cliff Walk of Newport, Rhode Island. To a lover of art and nature the scene was one of rare beauty. On my right were the palatial homes of wealthy men, while far away to the left was the great pulsing Atlantic, making its ceaseless plaint to the lofty cliffs. As I neared the end of the walk, the ocean was beginning to reflect the crimson of the setting sun. Soon the great orb sank beneath the waters, leaving on the surface a pathway of burnished gold and a sky aglow with color. Nearby yachts, belated by the calm, caught the freshening evening breeze and sped away for the harbor, while faraway ships gave an added touch to the picturesqueness of the well-nigh perfect scene.

"As I looked out over the limpid waters, and then up to the magnificent afterglow in the Western sky, my eye caught, in the cloudless atmosphere, the gleam of a star, resplendent in its beauty. Instantly there flashed upon my mind the words:

"'Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me.'

"I was younger then; and to me the 'one clear call' was not to face death, but life; to take my Pilot on board for time as well as for eternity; to feel the need of him as much on the open main as when making for the harbor.

'The 'one clear call' should be a trumpet sound to present duty, and a splendid stimulus to all to 'follow the Gleam,' as did Merlin. I have always been grateful for the sunset and evening star at Newport and to Tennyson for helping me, by his tender lines, to make the experience an incentive to noble endeavor."

As Tennyson's nurse was sitting one day at his bedside, sharing to a degree the general anxiety about the patient, she said to him suddenly: "You have written a great many poems, sir; but I have never heard anybody say that there is a hymn among them all. I wish, sir, you would write a hymn while you are lying on your sick-bed. It might help and comfort many a poor sufferer." The next morning, when the nurse had taken her quiet place at the bedside, the poet handed her a scrap of paper, saying, "Here is the hymn you wished me to write." She took it from his hands. It proved to be "Crossing the Bar," and was sung later in Westminster Abbey at Tennyson's funeral.—The Expositor.

CIRCUIT RIDING SIXTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.

name was Jim Hyde. He was a poor man who made his living as a blacksmith and wagonmaker. I knew him at the beginning of the war. He was not a "slacker," but conscientously opposed to fighting. Towards the close of the conflict, when all able-bodied men were compelled to join the army, he reluctantly complied, but notified the authorities that he would not fight. He was detailed to work in an army shop. In a little while he was taken sick and died. While passing away he lifted up his arms, and looking at his big, brawny hands, first at one and the other, he said: "Thank God, these hands have never shed my brother's blood." And then God took him. A better man never went to heaven from old Midway Church.

My first circuit was the Holly Springs, with Rev. T. J. Gooch, the senior preacher, and Uncle Joe Brooks, the presiding elder. He was the father of my friend, J. J. Brooks, of the North Mississippi Conference, who was then a little boy, less than ten years old. Uncle Joe was the first preacher of whom I have any recollection. He was the station preacher in Grenada when my father went there as presiding elder in 1845. His home was my first stopping place after leaving my father's home that bright November day in 1859. The next year I spent on the Oxford circuit, and was busy all the time, preaching at twenty-four different places every month—eighteen regular appointments and six wayside ones. Some of these were filled at night. Oxford circuit was the poorest circuit I ever traveled, but the people were kind and good, and we had some glorious times—great revivals, and a large ingathering of souls. I had one of the saintliest men on earth as a colleague, the Rev. James Perry. On this circuit lived Uncle Tommy Lamar, famous as a man of prayer. Bishop Paine was the only man I ever heard that was more gifted, and he could not get any nearer the throne of grace on a cold day in a pine-pole meeting house than could Uncle Tommy. On great occasions, when there was much religious interest, nothing stirred the people more than Uncle Tommy's prayers. On one occasion, when interest was at its height, Uncle Tommy was called on to pray. Not often in a lifetime are people privileged to hear such a prayer. He had a daughter about 16 years of age kneeling close to him. When the prayer closed this daughter rose up, and gently slapping him on the shoulder, said: "Thank God for such a father."

From Oxford circuit I went to the Sardis. At that time we had nothing in the little village. Our preaching was done in the Presbyterian church. But in the surrounding country we had fine churches and flourishing congregations. It was at that day the richest circuit in the Memphis Conference, and the people generally the most refined and intelligent in the church and out to be found in any section of the country. Negroes abounded and I suppose I preached to nearly a thousand on every round. Time would fail me, if I undertook to relate my experiences among the good people on the Sardis circuit. From Sardis I went to Hickory Flat, another poor circuit. As long as I remained in the Memphis Conference it was my fortune to have alternately the best and the poorest—a streak of fat and a streak of lean.

In 1872 Bishop Wightman transferred me to the White River Conference, and appointed me to Jacksonport station—a waning town and a waning church. The Iron Mountain Railroad had just been completed to Newport, four miles distant, and was attracting the people. Jacksonport resisted with all its might, as long as resistance was possible, but it had to yield at last. Before I reached the town four of our best members moved away—not to Newport, but to open farms in the country. Those who remained were as true and loyal to the church as ever lived; and but for sickness I would have spent a pleasant and profitable year. The people without exception were kind and good to me. I formed friendships that have lasted to this good day.

Half of my life as a preacher, or a litte less, has been spent in the pastorate, the other part in editorial work; more than eight years I was with the Advocate, part of the time with Bishop Fitzgerald and part of it with Bishop Hoss, and for nearly twelve years I have been with Dr. Chappell as an assistant in the Sunday school department. Besides this, I was for nine years editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and at various times connected with other religious papers.

But my active days are over. During the last ten months the infirmities of age have crept upon me. My mental faculties are in no wise impaired except a slight failure of memory, and I feel as young inside as ever, but age tells on me whenever I try to act like a young man. I can't walk as fast as I once did, nor play with the children. There is no telling how soon "the silver cord may be loosed."

AN ASSET OR A LIABILITY?

By W. S. Holmes, Chairman, Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board.

The membership of the Louisiana Conference in 1914 was 36,382. In 1922 the membership was 49,670, a gain of 13.288. During the same period the number of Sunday school pupils reported as having joined the church was 13,130, almost exactly the same as the gain in church membership. The Journals of those nine years show that many charges did not report the number of pupils joining the church. Perhaps if all had reported, the number would have been larger.

In the same nine years (eight years in the case of the Orphanage, this item not reported in 1919) $37,876 were raised for Missions, and $72.469.23 for the Orphanage, while in the same period $83,895.86 were contributed by the church and by individuals for the maintenance fund of the Orphanage. The Sunday schools are rapidly gaining on the church and individuals, and the latter will have to look to their laurels if they expect to retain their place of leadership.

During the same period the Sunday schools raised $385,945 for their own supplies and for other objects, though it is possible that in the latter the amount for the Orphanage should be included.

None of this money was used for extending Sunday school work in Louisiana, the Conference Board having to depend for that purpose upon the amounts raised on Sunday School Day and what was received from the Conference budget, the latter of which was begun in 1919. The amount raised through Sunday School Day offerings in this period was $10,691. one-fourth of which was remitted, according to law, to the General Sunday School Board, and in the four years, 1919-1922, the amount received by the Conference Treasurer was $12,011.27. So that the whole sum received by the Conference Sunday School Board for the Sunday school work in Louisiana was $20.029.52, except that contributed by individuals. The latter amount was very small, except that one prominent layman contributed $2,000 one year and a smaller sum the next toward the salary and expenses of the elementary superintendent.

Make this comparison: During the nine years, 1914-1922 (only eight years included in the Orphanage fund, as no report was made of this item in 1919), the Sunday schools of our Conference gave to benevolent causes as follows:

|---|---|
| For Missions | $ 38,876.00 |
| For Orphanage | 72,469.23 |
| Total | 110,345.23 |

while they received from the Conference $12,011.27. Besides this, the Sunday schools raised $385,945 for their own local expenses and for "other objects" not specified. Thus the Sunday schools have paid their own way and have contributed liberally to benevolent causes. Only those engaged in Sunday school work know the many calls upon the schools for outside causes too numerous to mention.

In the nature of the case, the Sunday schools cannot furnish funds enough to propagate the work throughout the Conference, and our Conference work has been nearly starved to death. The Board had high hopes of employing a rural worker for the country circuits this year, but at the last Annual Conference was forced to change its plans for Sunday School Day, and we fear those offerings will be greatly reduced, and it may be impossible to employ this worker.

The foregoing shows that the Sunday school is a great asset to the church, both spiritually and materially, and it would seem to be plain common sense to nourish it as a valuable plant only at the beginning of its career of usefulness rather than as an institution from which to get every possible dollar while returning as few cents as possible. A fountain cannot rise higher than its source.

Our church as a whole is the worst offender at this point, as shown by the amount of money per thousand of their Sunday school enrollment gives by the several denominations to their General Sunday School Boards as follows:

|---|---|
| Northern Baptist | $598 |
| Southern Presbyterian | 296 |
| Northern Presbyterian | 270 |
| Episcopal | 233 |
| Congregational | 215 |
| Northern Methodist | 85 |
| Southern Baptist | 64 |
| Southern Methodist | 45 |

Brethren, is it not time for us to wake up and nourish the children who are the seed of the church? How long, O Lord, how long?

OUR EDUCATIONAL SITUATION.

A Few Plain Facts.

Three years ago the Methodists of North Mississippi pledged $406,000 for Christian Education. On this we are now due to have paid more than $240,000. We have paid only $90,000, leaving an unpaid balance of $150.000.

As a result, Millsaps College is about to lose a gift of $100,000 offered by the General Board of Education on condition that these pledges be paid. We have only a short time to make good this promise and secure this gift. Shall we lose this gift? The answer is with the individual subscriber.

The result at Grenada College is even worse. Educational standards now forbid unendowed colleges conferring degrees. Though meeting all other requirements, Grenada College must cease to exist as a Four-Year College unless our pledges are paid. Shall we lose the efforts of years, and sacrifice the only school for girls in our Conference, or pay our pledges and put Grenada College in the front rank?

Finally, there is a moral result. Do our people keep or repudiate their pledges? Possibly some cannot pay just now, but surely each one will cheerfully make any necessary sacrifice to save our schools in a time of real crisis and of opportunity such as has not come to us in the past.

May our Heavenly Father give us grace to make any sacrifice necessary to meet this pressing need.

Conference Secretary-Treasurer.

ANTI-PRO RALLY FOR DISCUSSION OF LEGAL DROUGHT.

By W. H. Patton.

Called to convene in Washington Jan. 21, under the auspices of the Association against the Prohibition Amendment. They claim to expect the presence of quite a number of prominent Americans, among them Marshall Field, Seth Low, and Kermit Roosevelt. They have named the meeting a "Face-the-facts conference." The aim of the conference will be to modify the Volstead Act now, and return the police power to the States. It looks unreasonable to think that the persons they have named as expecting to be there would be part of such a conference, this one composed of thirty-eight liquor organizations.

The Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution is a law and the Volstead Act is to enforce the law. Every citizen of such prominence should first of all be a law-abiding citizen, not only observing the law himself, but joining with every agency that is set for the prevention of crime and the enforcement of law. Every officer of the law needs the moral support and backing of such citizens.

Prohibition is God's way of dealing with evil; "Thou shalt not murder," is his great commandment, yet, the liquor traffic killed more than all the wars, crippled the earning capacity of thousands of our brightest minds, our laboring men and professional men; caused the committing of more crime and did more to add to the population of hell than all the other evils combined.

The "Jewish World," a paper published in the Yiddish language at Cleveland, Ohio, in a recent editorial called upon Jews in America to obey the prohibition law, declaring that "the law of our Government is the same as the word of God and is to be obeyed." I will add also "to be enforced by State and Federal Government."

Esthonia is sadly regretting the repeal of its prohibition law, according to reports from Helungfors to the Christian Science Monitor. Drunkenness has increased ten times; criminality has increased 60%, and suicides and accidents in proportion.

The following is an extract from a speech made on the floor of the annual convention of the liquor league at Columbus, Ohio, in the days of the open saloon: "It would appear from these facts, gentlemen, that the success of our business is dependent largely upon the creation of appetite for drink. Men who drink liquor will, like others, die; and if there is no new appetite created, our counters will be empty as well as our coffers. Our children will go hungry, or we must change our business to something more remunerative. The open field for creation of this appetite is among the boys. After men have grown up and their habits are formed, they rarely ever change in this regard. It will be needful, therefore, that missionary work be done among the boys, that nickels expended in treats to boys now will return in dollars to your tills after the appetite has been formed. Above all things, create appetite."

The traffic is now outlawed, the temptation removed, by the ratification of forty-six of the forty-eight States; and while many liquor men have gone into honorable business, others continue to create appetite and kill illegally. The situation with regard to prohibition challenges the serious consideration of every good citizen. It is never wise to overestimate one's strength, nor is it safe to underestimate a foe. Any one able to appreciate accurately conditions is forced to admit that the organized anti-prohibition forces have been able to stage a come-back in some sections of the country, which they then claim to be an indication of a gained reaction against the prohibition policy, and which, if not promptly and vigorously checked, might lead to more serious set-backs. That their heavily financed intensive and nation-wide propaganda has tended to create and increase prejudice against the law and its enforcement, seems to be beyond question, if it is true that such citizens as those mentioned from their list will lend their presence and influence to such conferences.

The drunkards are not all dead, and I will tell you the reason why; young ones are made as fast as the old ones die.

TO PASTORS AND PARENTS OF COLLEGE GIRLS.

Our Central Methodist Church in Columbus, Miss., is located just across the street from the great Mississippi State College for Women, where several hundred Methodist girls are students. Parents and pastors of students are requested to write me the names of young ladies they are interested in, and I will give them pastoral oversight and see that they get special attention from the organizations of our church. Our parsonage is just opposite the college entrance, and we are endeavoring to serve the girls in every way possible. Suppose you also write the girls a line telling them they are welcome at Central Church and parsonage, and send me any special request concerning the girls, and I will see that it is attended to.

EVERY CHRISTIAN AN EVANGELIST.

We are slowly getting away from the idea that preachers and missionaries alone are included in our Lord's command to go forth and disciple. It is at last dawning upon the consciousness of some that every Christian is a potential missionary and evangelist, whether specially commissioned or not. Christian fathers and mothers who hold themselves responsible for the religious nurture and training of their children are such, whether conscious of it or not. All Sunday school teachers who lay to heart their task of seeking to influence and win their scholars for Christ are such. But how about men and women in their business and social relations? To what extent do they as Christians recognize their obligation to influence religiously those with whom they come in contact?

Recently a Christian philanthropist, for many years at the head of a large industry, passed away mourned by a large circle of employees whose lives had been made richer because he was deeply interested in their spiritual welfare. He had been to them a constant and living sermon. Another employer, for years a foremost member in the church, had seldom approached his daily associates on the subject of religion. It happened that one of his most trusted employees suddenly took sick, and he hastened to his bedside. Almost the first words that greeted him from the man who knew he was about to die were: "O, why is it that you, a Christian, never spoke to me about the needs of my soul? I am near death's door and am not prepared to meet my God." The employer was struck with a deep sense of remorse which clung to him throughout life. Even his later endeavors to atone for his past sins of omission could not wipe out that sense of remorse. How little do we as Christians think of witnessing for Christ in our daily contacts with men!—Lutheran.

YOUR PASTOR.

No, your pastor does not expect or desire the scale of compensation demanded and received in the industrial and professional worlds; all he hopes for is a living wage while active, with something to care for himself and his family when old age and infirmity overtake them, and this he has a right to expect. He is not going to strike under any circumstances. You will get the best of his thought and energy, raise or no raise. He has been sent to you by the Conference and cannot lay down terms. He makes no demands on you and murmurs no threat. He is with you to serve to the uttermost, and this very spirit of sacrifice makes a strong appeal to you to give him a square deal.—Southern Christian Advocate.

CHURCH IN SANTA MARIA, BRAZIL.

Rev. G. D. Parker, Pastor.

Santa Maria, Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, is a city of 25,000 to 30,000 inhabitants—geographical center of State of Rio Grande do Sul, larger than Texas, most important railway junction in South Brazil; gateway to Montevideo, Uruguay and Buenos Aires, Argentina, from Brazil only two days by rail from either of these cities; Episcopal see of Roman Catholic Church, and center of their educational system, secular and theological, in South Brazil.

It is the center of a rich and an extensive cattle-raising section; occupied by our misson about twenty years ago, but abandoned for more promising fields. Entered and re-entered and deserted several times; no property acquired, a few converts made, but no progress for lack of property. The small congregation met in private homes and small rented halls until the Centenary placed them last September in this splendid building, which seats about six hundred, and has accommodations for a modern, graded Sunday school and other features of work. The Sunday school has gone from twenty-five two years ago to one hundred and ninety-six at present, and has nearly all requirements for one hundred per cent efficiency.

The church is sometimes filled to capacity. It is only three short squares from our new Centenary College for girls. C. L. Smith, our Mission Treasurer, is the architect of this beautiful building.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

THE FIRST REAL TEST OF LOYALTY TO THE SPECIAL EFFORT.

When you read these lines, all of the fall Annual Conferences will have been held. You have been reading on this page many encouraging reports telling about the favorable and enthusiastic receptions by these Conferences of the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment. At this writing, November 17, I have personally visited twenty of them and will visit seven more before these lines are printed. Never in my life have I been associated with any movement that had such unanimous approval as this. Hundreds of preachers have expressed to me their determination to do their part for the success of the effort, and I have not met a preacher or layman who doubts its complete triumph. But now we are in the midst of days which will test the loyalty of those who have so vehemently expressed their purpose to co-operate. I refer to certain matters of the plan which call for action at the first Quarterly Conference.

Have You Done These Things?

The first Quarterly Conference is expected to approve the charge's quota, decide upon the plan to raise the quota, appoint the charge special effort committee as required in the 1922 Discipline, and report the action on these matters to the Board of Finance, St. Louis, Mo. "The Workers' Guide," which has been placed in the hands of all the preachers, gives directions in full detail concerning the doing of these things. If the instructions of said booklet touching the duties of the first Quarterly Conference are studied with care, it will be impossible to mistake their meaning. Have you examined the booklet carefully on this subject? Did your first Quarterly Conference act as directed? Have you sent the pink leaf report to the Board of Finance? Or, if your first Quarterly Conference has not been held, are you preparing to give attention to these matters when it is held? Are you loyal to the program to date?

A Telegram That Made Me Happy.

While attending the Memphis Conference this week I received a wire from the office in St. Louis which read as follows: "It is storming pinks now." The message had reference to the number of pink leaf reports being received daily at the office from the first Quarterly Conferences. Storming pinks! Let us get the full meaning of the figure. Have you witnessed a snowstorm in winter? Do you remember how the flakes fluttered down from every direction? That is the picture the office was transmitting to me in that wire, except, of course, the snowflakes were in this case pink leaf reports. As I thought about it I could see those pinks coming in from every section of our great church and falling into the arms of my assistants in the office. It thrilled me with joy and gratitude. About two months ago a preacher expressed himself on this subject as follows: "The Board of Finance is giving the church a wonderful plan for the special effort, but Todd will find that the first Quarterly Conferences will not send in those pink leaf reports." Well, notwithstanding the brother's doubts, the pinks are coming. And if the preachers really mean to carry on in behalf of the "forgotten man," the pinks will keep on coming until every charge in the entire Church has reported.

The Lift of a Little Thing.

I can hear an occasional preacher say: "This pink leaf report from the first Quarterly Conference is a small matter, and I shall not get excited about it." Say, brother, do you recall a journey you had through the night on a railway train? All the hours you were sleeping without anxiety there was nothing but a little flange on the car wheels between you and death. Small matter, yes, but what a job it was doing. Why, brother, your head rests on a pivot the size of a pinhead. Don't turn away from something as unimportant because it is little. Remember this pink leaf report matter is the flange on the wheels of the "forgotten man" special. If you do not give it your serious attention, you are likely to ditch the special in the bounds of your charge. The Church has placed upon the Board of Finance the responsibility of leadership in the special effort for superannuate endowment; the Board in its detailed plan for the movement has called for a pink leaf report from every first Quarterly Conference, and the books of the Board touching this special effort as it concerns your charge cannot be prepared until you send in the pink leaf report. What is your answer? Will you trust the judgment of the leaders? If you will, send in your report.

The Men Who Go Around.

The church has about three hundred presiding elders. There was a time when some unthinking ones called them the fifth wheel, meaning to express the idea of their unimportance. But we now know that such an expression concerning them is as wrong as holding lightly the work of a company's captain in an army of soldiers. The men who go around the districts of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should rather in these days be looked upon more as the stabilizers of aeroplanes. It is by their efficient service that our great machine for doing things finds her balance. Men of the merry-go-round, I am for you. Having been one of you, I know how full your hands are of the church's business. In this special effort for the old preachers we will not be able to do more than cripple along in disorganized fashion without you. The first Quarterly Conference of this year calls loudly to your hand of direction. If you faithfully meet the requirements of the special effort program in that meeting, all will be lovely for the beginning of our work. But if you fail to do your duty there, all that comes after will suffer from your neglect of important things at the start. Therefore I beseech you in the name of our aged and worn-out heroes to give attention to those matters requiring action at the first Quarterly Conference as printed in "The Workers' Guide." Let not a single charge in any district fail the method of procedure at this point. And by all means see to it that every charge promptly sends the pink leaf report to the Board of Finance. I am not trying to dictate your movements, but I am pleading for your co-operation at a crucial juncture of our special effort program.

A Change in the Music.

For some weeks I have been giving on this page an account of the pulse beat of various Annual Conferences visited by me concerning their attitude toward the special effort for superannuate endowment. If it were possible, such publicity would be continued until every Annual Conference of the church could be reported. But other matters of the great movement now press for attention. We have been listening to the music of mobilization until now the brave boys are all mobilized. We must now change to the tunes adapted for the work of preparation in the cantonments. If we have quickened our steps under the thrilling melodies of "We're going over! We're going over! And we won't come back till it's over over there!" let us now add to our determination fully to prepare ourselves to finish the job while the band is playing "It's a long, long way to Tipperary." Watch this page, boys. Every time the step changes the band will play a different piece. And finally, when we have finished the work and all of us lay down our arms, we will dispense with the band and all of us join in singing "Praise God, from Whom All Blessings Flow."

The Call of the "Forgotten Man."

My, what an urge is going through the church just now in the interest of an old-age support for our worn-out servants of the ministry! It presses its claim upon us with an emphasis that cannot be ignored—that is, if we are still to be Christians. It is a Red Cross summons to a battle field where lie the age-stricken and disease-wounded forms of valiant soldiers are calling for a drink of cold water. Shall we turn a deaf ear to such a cry? God forbid! Come, you preacher sons and grandsons of these veterans of the cross, and let us moisten those parched lips so plaintively calling to us. Aye, let us tenderly speak to these suffering fathers in our Israel, give them sufficient bread to eat, clothe the nakedness of their battle-scarred bodies, and let them rest their dear old gray-crowned heads in our affectionate arms and know before they die that they are not forgotten!

One Word More, Please.

Send the pink leaf report to the Board of Finance immediately following the first quarterly conference.

A RIDDLE.

I have a head, a little head,
  That you can scarcely see;
But I have a mouth much bigger
  Than my head could ever be.

That seems impossible, you say.
  You think 'twould be a bother?
Why, no! My head is at one end;
  My mouth's way at the other.

I have no feet, yet I can run,
  And pretty fast, 'tis said;
The funny thing about me is
  I run when I'm in bed.

I've not a cent in all the world;
  I seek no fortune's ranks;
And yet it's true that, though so poor,
  I own two splendid banks.
I've lots of "sand," yet run away;
  I'm weak, yet furnish power;
No hands or arms, yet my embrace
  Would kill in half an hour.

You think I am some fearful thing.
  Ah! you begin to shiver.
Pray don't, for after all, you know,
  I'm only just a river.

—St. Nicholas.

A LAUGH IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

By Alice Norris-Lewis.

Two little figures looked over the garden gate—Ruth and Jean Mitchell in their neat brown play-suits.

"I wish," said Jean, wistfully, "I wish mother would let us have a barn party and invite the little girl who lives in the new house on the hill. I think she looks lonesome, playing all alone. She hasn't any brothers and sisters—mother said so."

"She's got a doll, though, the biggest one I ever saw. It looks like a real baby. Perhaps mother will let us have a party. We haven't had one for a long time. Let's ask her." Ruth was half-way up the path before she finished speaking.

"Let's!" echoed Jean, running after her.

Mother, sweeping off the piazza, stopped her work to listen. "Of course you may have a party," she told them. "I think Betty Lane would like it in the barn, too. I doubt if she ever went to a barn party before. Do you want me to call her mother on the telephone and invite her, or will you ask her yourself when you go by the house on your way to the post-office?"

"We thought—that is, I thought—it would be nice if we wrote a really, truly invitation on—on your lovely pink note-paper," replied Ruth.

"Why"— Mother hesitated a moment. "Do you think that would be just the thing? The party won't match the paper?" Then, as Ruth looked so disappointed, she added: "But I don't mind. I will write the invitation for you first and you may copy it. I don't believe you know just how to word it."

After writing and rewriting the note two or three times Ruth was satisfied that she could copy it neatly on the pretty pink paper. When it was finished Jean declared it looked like a grown-up person's writing and Ruth herself was not ashamed of it.

"It is really nice enough for a parlor party," she exclaimed, delightedly.

At two o'clock everything was ready. The big, cool barn had been swept. The table had been spread. The children knew the lunch would be a success, for they had sampled everything from the gingerbread horses mother had made to the apples, pears, and grapes they had picked themselves in the orchard. Dressed in pink gingham bloomer suits, they swung on the gate watching the road down which their little guest would come.

"I'm glad her name is Betty. I love that name," said Jean.

"Here she comes! Oh, goody! she's bringing her big doll," cried Ruth, dancing with delight as a little blue figure came in sight over the brow of the hill.

They watched her come nearer and nearer, Jean intent on the big doll and Ruth equally interested in the bigger doll-carriage.

All at once Jean saw something else.

"Oh!" she gasped. "Oh! What are we going to do?"

"What do you mean?" asked Ruth, and then she, too, began to cry, "Oh! oh! oh!"

The children looked at each other in dismay. They felt like running and hiding, and yet they knew that they couldn't. Already Betty was near enough for them to see more plainly this embarrassing thing that they must face.

Betty Lane was all in blue, ruffly, fluffy blue! She wore white socks and white slippers. A blue hair-ribbon, perkier and wider than any the children had ever seen before, was tied to a golden curl on top of her head. And in all this finery she was coming to slide down the haymow, jump in and out of the hay-rack, pat the horse, feed the cow, and hunt for eggs in the grain-bins!

"Oh," almost sobbed Ruth, "it was the pink note-paper that did it! She thought it was going to be a parlor party. Mother said the party didn't match the paper. What are we going to do?"

"We can't do a thing but stay right here and act as if we didn't notice anything wrong," returned Jean, miserably. "But it just seems as if I couldn't look at her at all."

Meanwhile the little guest had come very near. She waved her hand gaily. "Here I am," she announced, "and I've brought Isabella. She just loves parties. 'Specially the ice cream. Don't you, Isabella?"

"Come right in," said Jean, clearing her throat. Ice cream! This was worse than the blue ruffly dress!

Betty looked at the sisters a bit anxiously as they all went up the path. She felt that something was wrong. As for Ruth and Jean, it seemed as if they just couldn't take her into that barn!

Of course, they had to. "We're going to have our party here," explained Ruth, huskily. "It's a barn party, you see."

For a moment after that all three children stared at one another in silence—a silence that seemed to hurt. Jean's eyes were full of tears and Ruth's lips were quivering. As for Betty Lane, there was the queerest expression on her face. Was she going to cry, or fly into a temper and go home? For just a moment the three stood there, and then—then Betty began to laugh!

"Oh, what fun!" she cried. "I never went to a barn party before. Won't it be fun? Don't you think so, Isabella?"

After that nobody thought of anything else but fun. When the gingerbread horses and the fresh milk and fruit appeared, Ruth remembered with a little pang of regret that Betty had expected ice cream. Mother had thought of ice cream, too, and had remembered that no party, whether in a parlor or a barn is quite a truly party without it; so, without a word to the girls, she came in with a half-dozen cones piled high with it—pink, cool, and delicious. And, coming as a surprise, how much better it tasted!

"It is just the loveliest party I ever went to," declared Betty as she trundled Isabella down the path toward home. "I hope you'll ask me again sometime. Say good-by to the ladies, Isabella."

She made the big doll wave a china arm at her hostesses in farewell.

"We play in the barn every day," Jean told her, "although we don't have a party every day. We wish you would come and play tomorrow."

"If my mother says I may, I'll come early tomorrow morning," promised Betty, promptly.

When she was out of hearing Jean turned to Ruth. "I think she's just lovely," she said, "but for a minute, when we took her into the barn, I didn't know—I thought, perhaps—she looked so"—

"I know," Ruth nodded. "I thought she was going to cry. But she laughed! When she did that, I knew she wasn't cross or anything but just dear. The next time I don't know what to do, I'm going to do that too—laugh."

Jean understood her.—Zion's Herald.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Percy Vaughan, of Madison, Miss., writes that the new Conference year starts off well.

Rev. J. W. Booth has been kindly received by the people of Ponchatoula, La., and pastor and people are looking forward to a good year.

Rev. R. V. Fulton was given a cordial reception upon arrival at his new work, Hall Summit, La., a committee of ladies welcoming their new pastor.

Rev. Claude P. Jones has been very kindly received by the good people of Magnolia, Miss., for another year, and he is looking forward to a fine work.

Rev. G. L. McNeece was received by the good people of the Oloh, Miss., charge with an "old-time" pounding. The outlook for the year is encouraging.

Rev. J. L. Smith has received a most cordial welcome from the good people of Fayette, Miss., to which place he was appointed at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. H. W. Rickey was given a most hearty welcome by his congregation at Natchitoches, La., upon the announcement of his appointment to that important charge for another year.

Rev. Del Longgrear is entering upon what promises to be a great year at the Central Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss. Brother Longgrear is a most diligent and efficient pastor.

Rev. C. C. Evans begins his third year as pastor at Natchez, Miss., under the happiest auspices, many expressions of appreciation at his return being made by members of his congregation.

Rev. W. W. Graves, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, writes that all the preachers of the district are in their places, praying and planning for a great year's work.

We are glad to learn that Rev. O. W. Bradley, pastor of the First Methodist Church at Alexandria, La., who was forced to leave the recent session of the Louisiana Conference on account of illness and who has been confined to his bed practically ever since, is now on the road to recovery.

Rev. H. N. Brown, the newly appointed presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, Louisiana Conference, is now at home in the district parsonage at Baton Rouge, where he has been most cordially received.

The Wesley Club at Yale University is composed of students in the Graduate School of Religion and the Divinity School, and of the Methodist pastors of New Haven. It has a membership of more than sixty.

Mr. Chas. H. McEuen, song director, soloist, and young people's worker, has changed his address from Lawrenceburg, Tenn., to 841 East St., Baton Rouge, La. Those desiring his assistance may address him as above.

The illness of the editor of the Advocate this week not only curtailed his editorial activities, but also prevented his attending the annual meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association at Washington, D. C.

Mrs. M. A. Cunningham, of Aberdeen, Miss., has been a reader of the Advocate for fifty years. She is one of the choice spirits of Methodism. Her son, Mr. D. S. Cunningham, is treasurer of the official board at Okolona, Miss.

Rev. J. H. Foreman, in asking that his Advocate be sent to him at Mt. Olive Miss., intead of Flora, Miss., states that he has been a continuous reader of the paper for forty-four years. A pretty good record for a young man!

Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, requests us to call attention to the change of date for the first quarterly conference of the Sherman charge—from Friday, Jan. 11, to Thursday, Jan. 3.

The board of stewards of the Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., has unanimously and enthusiastically increased the pastor's salary to $5000 for the new Conference year. Rev. W. W. Holmes is the pastor of this progressive church.

Rev. and Mrs. William Schuhle, of the Louisiana Conference, were visitors to New Orleans last week, coming to the city to have the tonsils of their young son removed. The operation was successfully performed and recovery is rapidly progressing.

Rev. Earl B. Moll, recently admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference, is engaged in an evangelistic campaign in Hedgesville, W. Va. Upon the completion of that campaign, he will return to Mississippi to take up his work as Conference evangelist.

Rev. M. M. Black and family were given a very cordial welcome by the good people of Richton, Miss., on their arrival in this new field of labor, a substantial "pounding" being one of the evidences of appreciation. The new Conference year has begun auspiciously.

Rev. H. C. Castles has had an auspicious beginning of his work at Seventh Avenue Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss. On his first Sunday, he held two services and officiated at a wedding. The people have shown their appreciation by supplying the parsonage with a fine assortment of groceries.

Rev. J. A. Smith, recently transferred to the Louisiana Conference from the Pacific Conference and appointed pastor at Picayune, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call last Saturday, en route to his new work. His wife is in a hospital in Baltimore, where she recently underwent a serious operation, but she is rapidly improving and will be able to come to her new home within a short time. Brother Smith is not a stranger in the Mississippi Conference, and his many friends have given him a cordial welcome home.

Rev. C. C. Wier, recently appointed presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, has reached his new field, and is actively at work. His successor at Algiers, Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux, has been very cordially received, a splendid reception being tendered him and his family upon their arrival.

The first football game between Yale and Princeton was played fifty years ago this fall. A fact of great interest to Methodist students of these institutions is that Bishop Denny was a member of the Princeton team at that time. The Bishop was evidently a good player, since Princeton won by a score of 3 to 0.

Prof. C. A. Bowen, of the Department of Religious Education, Millsaps College, is attending this week the Sunday School Council in Nashville, Tenn., where he will read a paper on "Foundation Courses in Religious Education." Professor Bowen is one of our most efficient men in the field to which he has devoted his life.

The National Aeronautic Association will celebrate, on Dec. 17, the twentieth anniversary of the first successful aeroplane, at which time special honor will be paid Wilbur Wright, now deceased, and his brother, Orville. The first successful flight of a heavier-than-air flying machine was made by these brothers at Kitty Hawk, N. C., just twenty years ago.

The General Secretary of the Methodist Men's Club, Rev. J. W. Frazer, requests all clubs to send the names of their presidents and secretaries, also the names of the pastors, to him at 15 North Joachim Street, Mobile, Ala., as soon as practicable. This is very important, as the office of the General Secretary desires a complete roster of all officers.

We learn with sorrow of the death of the mother of Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder of the Seashore District, on Thursday of last week. She was nearly eighty-one years of age, and had been a member of the Methodist Church for more than fifty years. She went away in peace. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

In the annual election of Rhodes scholars to the University of Oxford, held last Saturday, Mr. M. B. Swearingen, of Millsaps College, won the distinguished honor from Mississippi. If we mistake not, Mr. Swearingen is a son of Dr. G. C. Swearingen, formerly a professor in Millsaps, now a prominent business man of Jackson. We extend hearty congratulations to Mr. Swearingen and to Millsaps College.

During the four years' pastorate of Rev. M. B. Sharbrough at Biloxi, Miss., more than two hundred people were added to the church on profession of faith, making a net gain of fifty per cent in the membership. The Sunday school was more than doubled, and the number of subscribers to the Advocate was increased threefold. Brother Sharbrough is a notably successful pastor, and we predict for him a great year at Wiggins, Miss., his new appointment.

Mr. L. F. Soxman, of Kansas City, converted in our Institutional Church there, a graduate of the University of Kansas, and a man of experience as well as a fine Christian character, is now one of the workers at St. Mark's, this city. He is organizing the young men and boys for religious, social and recreational activities, studying Italian under a very capable private teacher, with the purpose of taking charge of all the Italian work in St. Mark's. His experience and training in Kansas City have fitted him for highly useful service in this difficult field.

We take the following interesting item from a recent issue of the Leland (Miss.) Enterprise: "Last Sunday afternoon a most impressive service was held at the laying of the corner stone of the new Methodist church. Dr. G. L. Bitzer, pastor of the Presbyterian church, led in prayer, after which Presiding Elder Felts read the prayer of the church. A letter from Rev. Mr. Cunningham, the first pastor, was read. Then Rev. J. L. McKeown, pastor of the Methodist church at Hollandale, a former pastor of the Leland church, made a short talk, giving some of the incidents of the early church. He had held a meeting here when there were only four members of the church. After this, Dr. J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College, made a short but inspiring talk. Then the articles were placed in the box by Mr. J. T. Mathis, he telling the congregation what went into the box. Rev. W. H. Morgan, pastor of the Baptist church, pronounced the benediction. Of the four charter members, only one is now living, Mrs. J. E. Rather, who was present at this service."

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. R. M. Evans, Verona. Miss., 11; Rev. W. H. Giles, Slidell, La., 2: Mrs. T. J. Matthews, Extension, La., 2; Mrs. J. A. Gaar, Jonesboro, La., 2; Rev. T. B. Cottrell, Vicksburg, Miss., 2; Rev. C. P. Jones, Magnolia, Miss., 2; Rev. W. M. Young Batesville, Miss., 2; Rev. C. C. Evans, Natchez, Miss., 2.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE SEASHORE DISTRICT.

Since Bishop Ainsworth has called a meeting of the presiding elders for Jan. 10 and expresses a wish that the District Institutes follow soon after, I am deferring the meeting of the preachers from Dec. 20, 1923, to Jan. 17, 1924.

Please meet me at the Methodist church, Gulfport, at 2:30 p.m., and stay for a second session at 7 p. m., Jan. 17. Entertainment will be provided for you over night. Of course, the district stewards will hold their meeting Thursday, Dec. 20, as announced, only I wish they might meet at 2:30 instead of 3 p. m.

AMERICA THE IDEAL OF THE ORIENT.

By H. W. Jenkins.

(Prof. H. W. Jenkins is in charge of the work of the Methodist Institute in Harbin, China, one of the most promising Centenary ventures in Oriental fields. This institution is not yet a year old, but its present enrollment numbers over four hundred paid students. With an adequate building, Prof. Jenkins says he could easily increase this number to 750.—Editor's note.)

One afternoon some one knocked at my door, and, to my pleasant surprise, it was my Korean friend, Fritz Bien. I made his acquaintance during one month's study of the Korean language, and have not seen him since. He is about 25 years of age, well educated, speaks fluently, besides his own language, Chinese, English, German, and Russian. For some time he has been employed by the Chines-American Banking Corporation. The manager of this bank told me that on account of his unusual ambition and energy he was destined to have a great future.

After we were seated, Fritz enthusiatically began to talk. "O, I'm so happy because it is Christmas! We had a bank holiday to-day, so I wanted to come over and see you. Just to think what Christmas means to the world since Christ, and very few have come so humbly or so poor as Christ; but their birthdays are known only to their families, while Christ's is a world event. He came to save the world. The poorest people as well as the rich can rejoice, feel glad, and celebrate Christmas. The very thought of Christmas makes me feel happy and glad."

We talked about our cosmopolitan city. All the important languages of the world are spoken here in banks, business houses, churches and on the streets.

He told me of the exercises they had in the church the night before. In the play the four races of mankind—the white, the yellow, the black, and the red—were represented. The red race was almost extinct and had no record of performing any great work because they had not been Christians. To their descendants they would leave no great Christian heritage. What a shame! The white race's great world progress was represented as due to their acceptance of Christ and the Christian religion. The yellow and black races, still for the most part heathen, had come to the parting of the ways. They had the option to choose the course of the red race—a useless life and finally extinction—or the course of the white race—world progress or everlasting life.

They, of course, could speak only for the yellow race. The old man representing the yellow race, dressed in his Oriental costume, stood and listened to the Christian doctrine. He was told how the Christian religion stood for the brotherhood of mankind on earth and immortal life after this existence. The only requirement was to accept Jesus Christ as Saviour and abstain from evil-doing, then they could become Christians. Finally the yellow man began to take off the outer garment and stood before the audience dressed as the white man and said: "The yellow race accepts Christ as its personal Saviour and will henceforth be fellow-workers with the white race in bringing in His Kingdom."

Of course a representation of this kind cannot be absolutely true to facts, as there cannot be a racial Christian and non-Christian line of demarcation drawn, as this represents, but it brings out the fact that the only satisfactory life here and hereafter is the Christian life.

This method of appealing to their countrymen is representative of the spirit of the yellow people—Chinese, Koreans, and Japanese. When they are converted to the Christian faith, they become enthusiastic and energetic workers for the evangelization of their race. Although this young man is very busily engaged in his profession and could selfishly use his time and talent in other directions, he prefers to teach his people at night in their adult schools.

America to-day is heralded abroad as a great Christian nation. She is the ideal which the Oriental nations hope to attain. The American people enjoy the privilege of Christian homes, communities, and a Christian government. The responsibility of carrying the gospel to the heathen nations is very great and grave. Let us pray that the Christian people of America will not be recreant to their sacred trust.

GREAT HYMNS AND THEIR WRITERS.

By Hugh Frazer.

Am I a Soldier of the Cross?

When the Pilgrim Fathers came to this continent on the Mayflower in 1624 they brought with them a little volume of psalms with the title, "The Booke of Psalms, Englished Both in Prose and Metre." This collection of psalms had first been published in Amsterdam in 1612 by Henry Ainsworth, an English clergyman, who had separated from the Church of England and who had, for a number of years, been living in exile. This book was greatly treasured by the Pilgrims and was in almost constant use. Later as emigrants came, other collections of psalms were brought and grew in favor. Both in England and America very scant encouragement was given to the writing of hymns. The psalms were looked upon as being ample for divine worship, and hymns of "human composure" were regarded with disfavor.

It was not until 1707 that a collection of hymns of any importance was published. This was "Hymns and Spiritual Songs," by Isaac Watts. The author was a very delicate little man, who, all his life, had shown great interest in music. His father, who was not a member of the State church, had been twice thrown into jail for opposing it. Isaac Watts was a baby when his mother had often carried him to the prison to see his father. As a boy he showed remarkable intelligence and learned quickly in spite of his extremely delicate health. It is said that in his fifth year he was learning Latin, and in his ninth year studying Greek. He took up French at 11 and Hebrew at 13.

Although not of a fault-finding disposition, he became much distressed over the untuneful hymns and psalms sung at the Nonconformist meetings, where he worshiped with his father. It is said that his father, who was a deacon in the congregation, did not like the criticism of Isaac, and said with gentle sarcasm: "Make some new hymns, yourself, then."

Isaac was just in the mood to take his father at his word, and he retired and wrote a hymn at once. This hymn was the one beginning with the line: "Behold the glories of the Lamb." It greatly pleased the worshipers, and being so encouraged, Isaac Watts began his career as a hymn writer.

Some years after this he became a minister in London in 1702, but he was so weak physically that he had to retire and devote himself to the writing of hymns. This he did with such success that he became undoubtedly one of the greatest hymn writers of all time. He wrote hundreds of fine hymns. Among some of the best known are: "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," "Jesus Shall Reign Where'er the Sun," "From All That Dwell Beneath the Skies," "Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove," "Alas, and Did My Saviour Bleed," "Sweet Fields Beyond the Swelling Flood," and last, but not least, "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?"

The last named hymn was written in 1709, and specially composed to follow a sermon on the text: "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."—I Cor. 16:13. Every stanza in the hymn contains a reference to that spiritual fight in which all Christians are engaged. It has always been a great favorite, and its ringing call to courage and devotion to God has been heard and responded to by thousands.

Isaac Watts was a man of singularly beautiful character. He was only five feet tall and more or less a sufferer all his life, but he was greatly beloved by all who knew him. He was never married, but was extremely fond of children. One day when he was very sick he was invited to stay at the beautiful home of Sir Thomas Abney for a week. He went and became so endeared to the household that he stayed, not for a week, but for the remainder of his life, a period of thirty-six years.—Central Christian Advocate.

WILLIAM PINKNEY HUBBS was born Nov. 13, 1857, and departed this life July 19, 1923. Brother Hubbs joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of 14 years, at Rose Hill Camp Ground. When 19 years of age, he came to Montrose, Miss., and on Jan. 14, 1886, he was married to Miss Fannie Elizabeth Bayless, to which happy union there were born ten children, two of whom preceded him to the great waiting room. Brother Hubbs was one of the most optimistic men that I have ever seen; he was always looking on the bright side, and the best was just ahead, and he was expecting to enjoy it. But he, like so many others, gave too much thought to the material side of life and too little to the spiritual till near the close of his earthly pilgrimage. He saw his mistake, repented, sought and found pardon and peace, and then labored with his loved ones and friends to get them to prepare for the heavenly home. With radiant face he told me that each member of his family had made him the desired promise. Weep not, dear ones, but prepare for the happy meeting in the city of God.

FROM AMORY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The North Mississippi Conference was kind to me in that it appointed me to serve the Methodist church in the flourishing little city of Amory. Amory is a town of approximately four thousand people in population, with a large per cent of white people in the incorporation and the surrounding territory. It is a railroad center as well as having large lumber interests. Methodism is in the lead numerically, we having a little more than six hundred members. This church, only two years ago, was the seat of our Annual Conference. It has not forgotten that blessing. They still remember with appreciation the privilege of having the preachers in their homes. That Conference was a blessing because it opened their eyes to the great possibilities in the church.

We are living in a splendid parsonage, built a number of years ago while Brother Woollard was pastor, and remodeled during Brother E. R. Smoot's pastorate. These people have had some splendid men for their pastors in the past, men who have left the imprint of their lives: W. S. Shipman, R. O. Brown, J. E. Thomas, W. M. Young. During the pastorate of Brother Young the new church was built. All the interests of the church are alive; three hundred and forty were present at Sunday school last Sunday. Brother J. T. McCafferty left the church in splendid shape. His memory will be precious to many people in this town.

We hope to do something for the Advocate before long. I have a firm conviction that a church cannot be as stable as it should be unless a majority of its members read the church paper.

REASON FOR THANKSGIVING.

Another Thanksgiving Day has come and gone. We, as a people, are so ungrateful regarding the hand of Providence. This day, sitting by the fireside, I took an inventory of my life and environments. When I consider that I first saw light in a small log cabin, in Winn Parish, sixty-five years ago; was reared up through hardships, occasionally an opportunity for the development of mind; at the age of sixteen, went off into a far country where I found sin abounding in full force; naturally contracted the awful disease of dissipation of every conceivable nature. In 1877 my dear father was taken from us, leaving my precious mother, four sisters and one brother in poverty, excepting having our home—and a wayward boy who was depended on for bread. I fought the battle as bravely as a young man could, knowing nothing about Divine Providence, for eight years, with a misspent life, regarding neither the law of God nor of our land. Fortunately God blessed me with a godly companion, who was instrumental in transforming my life, erecting a family altar, which is still existing in my home to-day, and returning unto my Lord the tithes that belong to him. When I consider how the hand of Providence has been over me, caring for me under all circumstances, I should by all means love and adore him all the time. So to-day I can sing in the spirit of my Lord, "Praise God, from Whom All Blessings Flow," and know it is true.

God moves in mysterious ways. If it was not for Divine help to assist us in carrying burdens of disappointments and trials of every character of life, we would be complete failures. From appearances, God only helps those who try to help themselves; to have peace with God and man is the greatest blessing man ever had. The spirit of unrest and strife which is penetrating the minds of the people of our State to-day is caused by their unfaithfulness and ingratitude to their God. I have never accomplished anything of value without the Divine agency. Father, mother and wife, the best friends I ever had, have gone to reap their reward. Some day not far off there will be a meeting never to end.

Our Father surely needs
  All his dear ones near him still;
Are we not at home with him,
  In the house or on the hill?
So I fill my empty heart
  With the thought that far above,
Over them as over me,
  Spreads one roof of Heavenly love.

FROM WESSON, MISS.

On the evening of Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 29, the parsonage home of Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Purcell was made glad by a warm welcome service in honor of their return to Wesson charge for another year. All had been planned unknown to the pastor's family. At 7:30 o'clock the martial strains of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," were heard in the distance, coming nearer, gradually. Presently the front door was opened, and such a literal shower of good things was brought in by loving hands until the dining-room table was groaning under its burden. The church at Beauregard had joined in this celebration; groceries of all kinds were brought, and many beautiful personal gifts of table linen, hand-embroidered articles, etc. After the gifts had been stored away, all filed into the sitting-room, where Mrs. S. G. Armstrong, in most fitting words, told of the pleasure in having a new preacher in the old one. Then prayers of thanksgiving were offered by S. G. Armstrong and Mrs. Breland, after which Virginia Youngblood brought love and greetings from the Junior League; Ford Westbrook expressed love and good wishes from the Senior League; Rachel Breland recited an appropriate Thanksgiving poem, and Garland Perritt sang a cunning original song. Mr. V. D. Youngblood, the splendid superintendent of the Sunday school, told of his appreciation of Brother Purcell and family, followed by Mrs. Lillie Boyd, of the Missionary Society, who expressed in beautiful words the tribute from the Missionary Society. Mrs. McGinley, of Beauregard, in a humorous way, told of the pleasure of the Beauregard church in having the same shepherd for that flock. Mrs. W. L. Little then, in original rhyme, expressed the love of the whole congregation.

Mr. and Mrs. Purcell were deeply touched by this tribute from their people, and responded in fitting words, expressing the hope and belief of a wonderful new Conference year on the Wesson charge. All joined in singing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," which expressed the spirit of all present.

FROM DE SOTO, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a little space in your paper.

First, may I say it was three profitable years, in every respect, that we spent at Raleigh. Debt paid off church; 135 additions to church on profession, certificate and otherwise; twenty subscriptions added to the New Orleans Christian Advocate; parsonage remodeled, added to and furnished, making it comfortable and neat; Raleigh church put on one-half time; one of as good prayer meetings organized as I ever attended in same sized place; payment on Conference claims increased from $130 year preceding our assignment to charge to $375 last Conference year. Journal shows $845 paid pastor year preceding our assignment; the new journal will show $1200 paid for year 1923, and an appropriation of $200 for year 1923 also. We praise the Lord for it all.

We arrived at De Soto on Friday, Nov. 23, and found the parsonage with supper on the table, awaiting our arrival. A number of ladies were at the parsonage. One of them said some surprises would develop later, and after the close of the day's work a large number came in with groceries that will last for several weeks.

We have been cordially received, and have had two good Sundays. Some work on house has already been done. Plans have been put on foot that insure it to be comfortably furnished at an early date. We are happy, taking our appointment from the Lord. Brethren, pray for us.

LET'S FINISH THE JOB.

By Garfield Evans.

When quitting time camo on the farm at the end of a busy day, it often happened that there would be several rows unplowed. We always tried to finish these extra rows, oven though it required some over-time work, because on the next day we would have to harness up and make a special trip just to finish the little uncompleted work of the previous day.

During the Centenary we heard a lot about our world obligations, until no Methodist can say that he does not know what his responsibility is. It now remains for us to reach down in our pockets and finish the job.

Hundreds, yea thousands, of young men and women have responded, saying that they are willing to go to the uttermost parts of the earth as the messengers of the Cross, and to go as our representatives. But many of them who have prepared are unable to be sent out, waiting for us to pay our subscriptions and finish the job.

Church buildings, hospitals, and schools have been erected in our various fields that are the pride of every Methodist. Yet the completion of many others or their equipment—in some cases the materials are still lying on the ground—waits and is dependent upon us to finish the job.

Never before have the native Christians been so heartened. Never before has there been such an increase in membership. Never before have so many missions—and some whole Mission Conferences—planned to become self-supporting. But all of these plans halt on the very threshold of success, with only fifty per cent collection of our pledges—halting for us to finish the job.

Some are seeking to ease their consciences by beating the air and crying frantically about heresy. Some are sidetracking on unification. Some are becoming ecstatic over some theory of a millennium, oblivious of a much shorter period of their responsibility. While we are contending about little matters and finespun theological controversies and non-essentials, our missionaries are bleeding for us on the frontiers, unable alone to finish the job.

Epworth Leaguers have taken a definite task, setting our specific goal to end with this fiscal year. An increase in gifts is needed to reach this goal in our allotted time. Let's finish the job.

In the American Expeditionary Force 80,000 boys in khaki laid down their lives, of whom 40,000 still lie sleeping on Flanders fields, for the freedom of the world. Let's finish the job!

LOVING THE BRETHREN.

"All ye are brethren," said Jesus. "We love the brethren," said John, the disciple who perhaps caught most of the spirit of his Lord. The Christian church is founded upon love—the love of God manifested redemptively in Christ, and the love of sanctified souls one for another. Love is the living mortar that holds otherwise diverse units or items together. Without it, humanity would be atomistic, theology too individualistic, and no church community could be held together. The centrifugal tendencies even in Christendom are, as a matter of fact, altogether too rife. We are constantly noting splits off, of individuals, from established groups, while even the sacerdotal churches, which make so much of their assumed unity, often maintain an outward tranquillity only by use—or threat—of the ecclesiastical club.

The real hope for the church is found, not in formal order, mechanical constraints, or ostentatious consolidations of institutions, but in the thorough charging of all branches of the one body with the spirit of Jesus Christ, which is the spirit of love. Brotherhood, even while there are many "brotherhoods" in existence, is really a thing of the heart. Men begin to be at one within. Where love rules, harmony prevails. Love is tenacious of its own principles, but tolerant of those of others; it believes, and lets others believe; testifies on occasion to its convictions, but hears what other apostles have to say; lives near to God, but despises no man because he has not yet attained to sainthood.

This love for the brethren is a positive principle, not just a negative hiatus. In the contest of the passage previously quoted, John the Beloved is disclaiming against hate, while he is urging practical philanthropy. The animus of the world as world is hate, but we know that we have passed from the death of hate to the life of faith because we love the brethren—and if we can succeed in loving them, with all their crotchets and faults, it is safe to surmise that we can love almost everybody else. This love, however, is not to remain a shadowy sentiment; it must be evaluated in terms of daily sacrifice and practical help. The index of the love may often be a gift, perhaps literally of money, or a meal-ticket, or a room overnight, or a book. In any case, a real Christian will live himself over again in the lives of others. He will find his brethren in all who are in moral sympathy with him, and for the rest will do what he can to bring them to a better mind. This is the way of Christ, and it must be our way, too.—Zion's Herald.

Your doctor advises internal cleanliness

HE will tell you that the first results of constipation—headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.—warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease. In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Hence, doctors urge internal cleanliness—regular and thorough removal of food waste from the body.

"Keep Clean Inside" Say Physicians.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

A high aim is worth something; a program of work marked out to reach that aim is worth careful study. An aim for each department in the school and for the entire school will be furnished when request is made. The schools using the different programs of work are far ahead of those going along in a haphazard way.

Be wise and plan to use Jan. 20, 1924, to the best advantage. Organize one or more training classes. Take the offering on that day and send it to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss., said offering to be used in financing training schools in the district from which the offering comes.

Look after your Centenary pledge and pay it out. If you do not know how much your school owes, send me a card and I can tell you. Several schools have paid in full, and too many have paid little or nothing. It is not a lack of money, but a lack of leadership on one hand and a lack of religion on the other hand.

Where is the Wesley Bible Class that will take stock in the endowment of Grenada College? We should have classes that would take one hundred, some five hundred, and others one thousand. Every member of the church making an investment in the young women of our church is better than a few putting up the money. We must endow Grenada College.

Have you ordered your literature for 1924? Did you know that 17,000 orders sent to the Publishing House the last week in this month cannot be filled? It will pay you to order a supply of "Boys and Girls," for children under 10 years; "The Haversack," for boys from 10 to 17; "The Torch-bearer," for girls from 10 to 17; "Our Young People," for young people and adults. If you do not use the Home Quarterly, send for a sample copy and use all diligence to put it in every home.

The church at Sherard is simply wonderful. They have recently built a room to accommodate the beginners and primaries. They have a piano, chairs (not red); a sand table, and properly divided with screens. The pastor, superintendent, and every teacher ordered books to study. Besides this, Mrs. John Sherard will organize her young people and teach "Life and Letters of Paul," one of the books in the training course. They ordered cradle and home department supplies and a sufficient number of papers to supply every family with the best reading matter the church puts out. Sherard is on the road to become a standard school of the "C" type. Keep your eye on the Sunday school at Sherard.

The date of the Aberdeen District Training School is May 25-30; the place, Tupelo. The Corinth District school will be held at Booneville June 2-7. The people in this live church say they are going to have a larger attendance than we have ever had at Grenada. The school for the Greenville District will be held in May.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Missionary Specials in Louisiana.

It is an interesting fact that Missionary Specials are carried in all of the seven districts of our Conference. Altogether, there are 82 separate specials, carried by ten churches, $16,937.50; 55 Sunday schools, classes and departments, $4,791; 1 Epworth League Chapter, $20; 1 Epworth League Conference, $1,500; 7 individuals, $690; 1 Woman's Missionary Society, $125; totaling $24,063.50 per year. Another interesting fact—the Louisiana has specials in all the mission fields in which Southern Methodism is at work, divided as follows: China, 19; Japan, 20; Korea, 14; Cuba, 2; Mexico, 7; Brazil, 4; Congo, 5; Siberia, 1; Europe, 2; Home, 13.

Every Good Methodist

is interested in the successful completion of the Centenary and Educational Campaigns. What cause could be nearer our hearts than that of the Forgotten Man? But to get the full sympathy and co-operation of our Methodist people in these worthy movements, we must present the cause not only from the pulpit, but through the church press as well. In fact, one of the most efficient helpers the pastor has is the church paper. Its readers have a more sympathetic understanding and interest in the work of the church, which he as pastor is directing.

Increase the efficiency of your people by placing the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and (NASHVILLE) CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE in their homes on GOOD LITERATURE SUNDAY.

SAVE AMERICA.

Do you believe that America needs to be saved? Are her enemies who threaten her ruin outside, or are there traitors in her camp? Can America count on the loyalty of her people and depend upon them to render "allegiance to her Constitution, observance of her laws?" Can the loyalty of the women of Southern Methodism be counted on in this hour of crisis? It is a time of crisis, for there is grave danger that the prohibition law may be repealed. The President of the United States has called a meeting of all the governors for the purpose of seeing that the prohibition law is enforced. We are in peril from willfully selfish citizens of our own United States who have done nothing, and who expect to do nothing, to stem the tide of lawlessness, but rather have encouraged it by their attitude and words. There is danger, too, from the unthinking, unintelligent group who echo the cry of individual liberty, little realizing the menace to family and State by this theory.

The women of America are summoned to a mighty task; they must mobilize immediately: (1) For education which shall show them that this is no imaginary situation, but can be proved by facts and figures; (2) that this knowledge may be used in the widest possible way.

Because of widespread ignorance, the National Committee for Law Enforcement issues this intensely interesting and illuminating booklet, "Save America," with suggestions for using this material among individuals, in the public press, through affiliated organizations, clubs, church societies, and in our public schools and colleges. Buy the book now, see that others buy it, and read it carefully and give as much publicity as possible to the propaganda to see that the law is enforced.

"Save America" is replete with illuminating facts and presents methods for using the book, gives a series of splendid programs, including debates, and a pageant which can be used in any church organization, club, or other group.

The Woman's Missionary Council is represented on the National Committee for Law Enforcement by Mrs. F. F. Stephens, Mrs. Luke G. Johnson, and Mrs. J. W. Perry (alternate). We who are alive to the danger that threatens our country must be alert to work on the side of righteousness and to do it through our church organizations.

Order "Save America" at once from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn. Price 25 cents.

Wanted! Ambitious Men and Women

We are receiving calls daily for men and women of character, ambition and business training, men and women who can accept and efficiently fill responsible positions, positions that give every opportunity for advancement; positions of high salaries, positions in banks, law offices, insurance, real estate, brokers' offices; positions with manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, in every imaginable type of business in the South.

Many of them we capably fill, others are yet vacant. The men and women who fill them need not be wealthy, nor even moderately well-to-do. They need not be young, nor need they be college or even high school graduates. All that is necessary is that they possess character, ambition and a business training.

The character and ambition they must possess, the business training we will furnish under the direction of the South's most efficient training corps and in one of the South's most efficient and best equipped business colleges. A training with unique courses in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, accounting, banking, business administration or our secretarial course. Such a training we will furnish in a few months' time at little cost to you, and at terms to meet your own financial condition.

Thousands of Southern men and women have taken advantage of the opportunity and trained themselves for a higher calling, a better salary and a greater opportunity for advancement. Many who have accepted the positions we offer have risen to the top of the ladder, and are numbered among America's foremost and wealthiest business and professional men and women.

An institution with such standing and reputation as the Georgia-Alabama Business College does more to advance the business interests of its graduates than can be done by any amount of family or personal influence.

Consider your present status—would you not like to improve your station in life, increase your income, attain financial independence and success? An opportunity awaits you, for positions are being constantly offered us that must be filled.

Write for our inspiring book, "Your Future—What Does it Hold in Store?" It is sent free on request, explains our offer in detail and points the way to a brighter future.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Our records show that our Conference stands twenty-ninth from the head on assigned Missionary-Centenary Specials, with a total of $80,527 for the Centenary period.

The records further show that out of 154 charges, 31 have Missionary Specials and 123 have none. These 123, far more than half, present a large and immediate field for new Specials. We believe it is a most promising one. We ask your active cooperation in developing and making concrete their interest.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The last Sunday in November was spent on the Harrisville circuit. We had the pleasure of being with the workers from four of the Sunday schools. We placed the Standard Seal upon the Program of Work at the Harrisville Sunday school and checked the Poplar Springs Sunday school. They lacked just a fraction of a point of being 100%. They will get a progressive Seal. Rexford promised to move up and get a seal, and so did Sardis. The people have received Brother Sells graciously, and it looks like a mighty big year for them.

I surely enjoyed the visit, and I trust that the year's work will bo the best yet.

The Satartia Sunday school was checked and showed 60%, or an Advanced Sunday school. Their seal was sent to them. The Phoenix school lacked part of one point of being an Advanced school.

The Prentiss Sunday school was checked 100%, and a Standard Seal was sent to them.

The first Sunday in December was spent with the Scooba folks. I did enjoy the visit so much. They have arranged for a Non-Standard school in January. Their school is in fine shape, and they are planning to build to the church in order to care for it. Brother Ulmer started the year fine—received Brother Hatchett upon profession of faith and two hy certificate. If he keeps this up, he will do a great big year's work.

Pray for the work and workers.

Brother Hull reports a fine month's work. Pray for him.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS,
Conference Superintendent.

A JOY TO BE BUSY IN GOD'S WORK.

By J. S. Ryang.

In regard to my work, I am very grateful to say that I have done my very best, and that I have been busier this year than in any of the previous years, since my work has increased to three or fourfold in two years. Likewise I have been happier than any other year. It is a joy to be busy in God's work.

As Conference Missionary Centenary Secretary, I have edited the Centenary Bulletin, our monthly publication, including one issue in English, and several tracts on stewardship. I have especially been busy for the cause of self-support of the Korean church, and up to Aug. 25 I was able to collect from our Korean churches for that purpose, yen, 3,255.02, not including one thousand yen, which sum has been assessed on the churches this year for the purpose of self-support, and which will be paid in full to the Conference Treasurer directly.

When everything is paid in, the total missionary collections for this year may amount to about five thousand yen, which is a magnificent sum for the Korean people to pay, since they are at present having difficult times for enabling themselves to make a mere living. It is gratifying to report that the laymen of Songdo District, under the leadership of the Rev. C. N. Weems, presiding elder, in spite of economic conditions, have decided to undertake to make the district entirely self-supporting after this Conference.

I have administered during the eleven months (October, 1922-August, 1923) yen 17,736.40 to supplement the salaries of the pastors in fifty-two mission charges.

I have translated the 1922 edition of the Discipline of our church, and it has already been published for sale. It was my second experience in translating the Discipline in five years, but I found it no easier the second time. It was a very difficult task, and there may be some mistakes in it, but I did my best for this work.

Since last October I have been appointed to take charge of the North Kando District of the Siberia Mission. We have an interesting work, having been able to organize twenty-nine groups in a little more than a year's time.

I earnestly request all Christians to pray for our preachers and members in Siberia, who are passing through some unspeakable difficulties at present. Judging from the letters we get from our preachers, the conditions are getting better every day, and I trust that in the near future Siberia will be a great field for harvesting.

RENWAR VS. RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

FROM REV. C. H. ELLIS.

Dear Brother Carley: I know you will agree with me that our session of the Mississippi Conference at Gulfport was one of unusual interest and spiritual uplift. May we not expect the year to follow to be one of great spiritual power, a year of great soul-winning?

Immediately after adjournment of Conference I came on to Floresville, county seat of Wilson County, Tex. Rev. J. W. Chisholm is pastor of our church here. It is a delightful place, and everything points to a good year. Preacher and people seem pleased and have a mind to work.

It gives me pleasure to report the little son of Brother Chisholm, John Wright, on account of whom the change to Texas was made, is apparently, and it is believed, really restored to good health. He is in school and doing fine work. I expect to return soon to Mississippi, and hope to join a goodly number of our pastors in evangelistic work. Hoping to see you in New Orleans on my return, I am yours for service,

C. H. ELLIS.

Floresville, Tex.

CHRISTMAS IN BETHLEHEM.

By William C. Carl, Mus. Doc., Organist of the First Presbyterian Church of New York.

Bethlehem, with its azure sky, its terraced groves of olive and fig trees, and its sloping hills where shepherds kept watch over their flocks on the Christmas eve centuries ago, is the Mecca of the Christian world at Christmas. The people of Bethlehem look forward to the day with keen delight, and elaborate preparations are made to welcome the Greek Patriarch of Jerusalem, who comes each year to celebrate the feast with them. On the day before Christmas, the Patriarch, accompanied by a large number of his bishops, archimandrites, archdeacons, and priests, leaves Jerusalem about 10 o'clock in the morning, headed by Kawases carrying silver maces. Starting from the Jaffa gate, the procession descends into the valley of Hinnon on the western side of the lower pool of Gihon and on the Plain of Rephaim, known as the place where David overthrew the host of the Philistines at the shaking of the mulberry trees. Midway between Jerusalem and Bethlehem stands the Monastery of Mar Elias, where tradition locates the resting place of the Prophet Elijah on his long journey to Mount Sinai. As soon as the Patriarch and his retinue come within sight of this monastery, the natives of Bethlehem ride out to meet them.

On reaching Rachael's tomb, a large number of Bethlehemites, men, women and children, garbed in oriental dress of the gayest colors, join the procession, singing their sweetest songs until they come into the city. At 10 o'clock in the evening the chiming of the bells announces the hour of prayer. The Patriarch, clothed in his gorgeous robes and mitre, sparkling with gems and diamonds and preceded by the clergy carrying his crook, a banner with a picture of the Nativity and two lights on either side and a golden cross, proceeds to the church, with a choir of boys chanting as they lead the way. The Patriarch is seated on his throne, with his retinue on both sides. At intervals he rises to take part in the service, which is sung antiphonally and in unison without accompaniment. The service is chanted without intermission in Greek and Arabic. The bells chime at intervals, and especially at midnight, when the Patriarch celebrates the service in the Grotto of the Nativity. The church is illuminated by candles and lights of different colors and is crowded by the pilgrims, visitors and natives. At daybreak the service concludes with the Patriarch's benediction. Many return to their homes the same day, while others linger to visit the places made sacred by the Christ-child himself.

The people greet each other in front of the church with the words, "Kull sanah wa anta salim" (best wishes for Christmas), and spend the day in feasting and merriment.

(Note: Dr. Carl has recently returned from Palestine.)

WOMAN SUFFERED THREE MONTHS

Pains in Back and Nervousness. Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Montevideo, Minn.—"I suffered for three months with pain in my back and sides, and was awful nervous so that I was unfit to do my work. After I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I grew strong, and now I weigh 150 pounds. I keep house and am able to lift and do any kind of work. I have got wonderful results from the Vegetable Compound and recommend it very highly to my friends. I give you permission to publish my testimonial."—Mrs. OLE BERGSTROM, 210 8th St. So., Montevideo, Minnesota.

Another Nervous Woman Finds Relief

Port Huron, Mich.—"I suffered for two years with pains in my side, and if I worked very much I was nervous and just as tired in the morning as when I went to bed. I was sleepy all the day and didn't feel like doing anything, and was so nervous I would bite my finger nails. One of my friends told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it helped me so much that I soon felt fine."—Mrs. CHARLES BEELER, 1910 Elk Street, Port Huron, Mich.

The district stewards will please meet me at the Methodist church, Gulfport, Thursday, Dec. 20, at 3 p.m.

I shall expect the district stewards to do all their work without the assistance of any one. So please come with some plan outlined by which you may expedite the work. While there was a decrease in some of the assessments for this year there was a total increase on the Seashore District to the amount of $327, made necessary on account of our Home Mission work being carried on in our own district.

FRECKLES

Quickly and Easily Removed During Winter Months With Othine--Double Strength

Why not rid yourself of those unsightly deep-seated freckles while the sun is not so active? Get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your drug or department store and apply like ordinary face cream. Thousands for over 15 years have gained a beautiful clear complexion by this simple, easy method.

At the same time Othine imparts that natural glow and color so much desired. Many use it every night in the year in place of cold cream and secure greater satisfaction.

Always ask for the double strength Othine—willingly sold on the money back guarantee.

666 quickly relieves Colds, Fever, LaGrippe, Constipation, Biliousness and Headaches.

I wish all the preachers to meet me at the Methodist church, Gulfport, for a conference to be held at 7:30 p. m., Dec. 20. As many as can do so, I shall be glad for you to meet with us at the church at 3 p. m., as we will have some time while the stewards are at their work.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

THE REVELATION TO THE SHEPHERDS.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The knowledge of God is not a discovery by human reason, but a revelation by the Holy Spirit. "As it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him, but God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God" (I Corinthians ii:9-11.)

And the revelations of God to men are not given to powerful and penetrating intellects, but to devout and docile spirits. "Thus saith the high and holy One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones" (Isaiah lvii:15).

In agreement with this lofty teaching of "the evangelical prophet," Jesus said: "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father: for so it seemed good in thy sight" (Matthew xi:25 and 26).

This principle and method of the divine revelation sets it apart from the complicated and contradictory philosophizings of the learned, and brings it within the range of the humblest and least learned of the children of men. Indeed, the pride of the intellectuals is a prime obstacle in the way of their coming to the knowledge of God; for most of them refuse to come by the only way by which a human soul can find God—the way of humility and docility. 'The world by wisdom," therefore, "hath not known God." Hence "the princes of this world" knew not the wisdom of God revealed in the incarnate Saviour: "for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory." In His cradle they ignored Him and on His cross they derided Him; but to lowly men, with pious minds open to the light of heaven, He was revealed as the Saviour of the world, notwithstanding His destitution at his birth and his humiliation at his death. To adoring shepherds and worshipful wise men was his coming announced, when "Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king."

The annunciation of His birth was made first of all, not to the cruel and ambitious king in the palace, nor to the pompous high-priest in the temple, nor to the theatric Pharisee in the synagogue, nor to the learned scribe in the retired place of his painful studies, but to the teachable shepherds in the field, keeping watch over their sacrificial flock by night. To them was given the charge of the temple-flock, and their toils in the fulfillment of this sacred vocation suggested daily to them "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." "And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them" (Luke ii:9).

"The glory of the Lord" which shone round about them was the heavenly effulgence in which Jehovah had been wont to reveal Himself to His saints and seers in former ages, and which had come to be called the Shekinah.

As a flaming sword, glistening with divine brightness, it had been placed to guard the way of the tree of life (Genesis iii:24). To Abraham it appeared in a smoking furnace whereby God's acceptance of his burnt offering was signified and Jehovah's covenant with him was attested (Genesis xv:17). As a lambent flame Moses saw it in the burning bush at Horeb (Exodus iii:2), and again when "the Lord talked face to face" with him at Sinai, and he prayed, "I beseech thee, shew me thy glory" (Exodus xxxiii:1-23). It hung as an awe-inspiring cloud over the Mountain of the Law (Exodus xix:18-20). As a pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night it guided and guarded the hosts of Israel in the wilderness (Exodus xiv:19 and xvi:10). Before "the mercy-seat, from between the Cherubim, it shone forth" (Exodus xxv:17-22 and Psalms lxxx:1). It filled the Temple of Solomon at its dedication with overwhelming radiance, so that the priests could not enter for their sacerdotal ministrations (I Kings viii:10-11). In rapturous vision, Isaiah saw it "in the year that King Uzziah died" (Isaiah vi:1-13).

But when Jesus was born it had long since disappeared from the sight of the chosen people, who had departed from God and from whom Jehovah had departed. Now it reappeared to lead shepherds to Him in whom "dwelleth all the fullness of the God-head bodily" (Colossians ii:9), when "the word was made flesh and pitched his tent among the sons of men." And they "beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father" (John ii:14).

"Never had it served a purpose so august and blissful as on this most memorable of nights, when, after centuries of eclipse, it suddenly reappeared and shone round the astonished shepherds. Well might the effulgent cloud now return, as though in glad homage to the incarnation; for on this night is born he who is to be his own church's true pillar of fire-cloud, to marshall her through sea and wilderness into the true promised land. Oh, since the day was as night when Jesus died, let us be grateful that the night was as day when Jesus Christ was born".—(George Dana Boardman).

The God of heaven and earth is not theatric, but divinely majestic, in his manifestations of Himself. Hence his revelations are not startling spectacles, having no aim or object beyond themselves; but they are sublime disclosures of His fatherly nature, and heavenly expressions of His redeeming purpose concerning mankind. This truth is exemplified in the words of the angel: "Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord" (Luke ii:10-11).

These glad tidings were a heavenly evangel proclaiming salvation to all people everywhere, and with personal application to the wondering shepherds: "There is born to you a Saviour which is Christ the Lord"—with emphasis on the personal pronoun "you." The redeeming Christ brings redemption to all men because he provides salvation for every man. No soul is lost in the bulk of humanity so as to escape the glances of his

A CHRISTMAS MEDITATION.

The significance of the Christmas season is not in what we give to our loved ones and friends or in what we get from them, but in what we get from God and what we give to Him. The measure of our joy is not the amount of money we spend in the shops, but in the holy emotions that stir in our hearts. We may think to celebrate properly the Advent by the blowing of horns and the ringing of bells and the shouting of merry-makers on the streets, and in places of entertainment; but it was first celebrated in the quiet fields, where humble shepherds fed their flocks, by an angel's message and the shining of the glory of the Lord and a halleluiah chorus by a heavenly host. The first quest of those to whom the announcement came was not for place or power or comforts for themselves, but for Christ himself. They found Him—not a potentate seated upon a throne, not some mighty one dwelling in a palace, but a new-born Babe lying in a manger; yet, having found Him, they returned to their flocks, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen. The world has never been the same—it can never again be the same—since that day when there was born in the City of David a Savior, who is Christ the Lord. Hope found its fruition in Him, and the angels have been singing the song of His presence ever since. This is a holy hour, and humanity's heart is strangely stirred by the story of His appearing. Listen!—the song of the angels is again caroling in the skies and singing itself throughout the world. Look!—Christ is here.

THE PATH TO BETHLEHEM.

By Harry Pressfield.

Let us arise and go to Bethlehem!
It may be God has yet for us His star
To lead us to Him though we've wandered far;
Some vision of His face at travel's end.

Let us arise and go to Bethlehem!
Perchance once more we'll hear some angel song—
Those choristers of heaven we've wished for long—
Calling from out our hearts a rapt Amen.

Let us arise and go to Bethlehem!
There it may be we'll find our meed of peace;
There it may be we'll meet some glad release,
Some word celestial with good will for men.

Let us arise and go to Bethlehem!
Find in some manger our Immanuel.
See there some sign God with us dwells;
Let us arise and go and seek Him then.

THE TARES AMONG THE WHEAT.

"Didst thou not sow good seed in thy field? Whence then hath it tares?" Matthew 13:27.

Yes, where do the tares come from? Who are the carriers, and who are the sowers of the unwelcome seed? I spend no end of time weeding my garden. I choose favorable seasons when the soil is soft and loose, and I pull up the weeds, "root and all, and all in all." I cleanse the soil, I burn it. I give it pure nourishment. I sow the best seed. But the weeds appear. "Where do they come from?" I ask the gardener. "Well," he says, "for one thing there is a neglected patch less than a mile away, and we are not far from the open country." And what I experience in my garden every farmer experiences in his fields. The ill seed is borne by every wind, and every bird is a minister in its distribution.

Who has not seen tares? They even enter fortunate fields which have the most favored exposure. There are tares in the church of Christ. The good Lord sows good seed, for he has no other, and yet the tares appear. We can see them growing in the church of the earliest days. Cast your eyes over the church in Corinth; what an awful sight for the farmer! Could anybody have imagined that such noxious, poisonous things could so speedily have invaded the field and taken possession? We can see the tares growing in the church of the Middle Ages. We can see rank growths appearing in the church of the Pilgrims. And we should be stone-blind if we did not see them in the church of our own day. The tares are fearfully mixed up with the wheat, and wheat is often strangled and smothered in the wild confusion. Didst thou not sow good seed in thy field? Whence then hath it tares?

And who has not seen the tares appear in the fair field of beneficence and philanthropy? Some man makes a clean bequest for clean and honourable issues. Perhaps it it a considerate provision for the poor. And the wheat is very sweet and lovely. But the weeds appear. Sectarian prejudices get into the hospitality, and all sorts of bitter bigotries are mixed with its ministries. The good man sowed good seed; whence hath it tares? Or it may be that some Andrew Carnegie thinks of the field of education and determines to enrich it with his beneficence. He will open wide doors of opportunity for every student. He will make it easier for every one to make his way. Bursaries and scholarships shall abound. The university shall be practically free. What a field of fine wheat! But tares appear—lethargy, enervation, indolence, ease. Yes, indeed, fat tares flourish in the field of beneficence.

And who has not seen the tares in other fields of the soul's inheritance? Perhaps some finer freedom has been sown by noble hands, some splendid franchise, some quick and quickening emancipation. It was fine, clean wheat, and yet the blade had scarcely appeared before the tares appeared also. Every extension of noble liberty has been accompanied by some form of license—darnels which look very much like honest wheat. Freedom of speech is attended by irresponsibility, by blasphemy, by gossip and scandal. Good seed was sown in the field; whence hath it tares?

And who has not seen the tares in the fields of literature and art? Clean, sweet, strong seed is sown in the fields, but the tares are flung into the soil and grow up with the wheat. There are things which are sane and wholesome, and there are things which are neurotic. Some books are pure and healthy as the angels which excel in strength, and there are books with sensual setting and inclination. There are books which are vital and vitalizing, and there are books which are decadent and deadly. It is a rare field, and good seed was sown in it; whence then hath it tares?

And what about the fields of recreation? What fine, healthy, attractive things can be seen in the realm of sport! What clean vigor, what masculine emulation! But the tares appear with the wheat. Gambling is in every field, and in many a field there is jealousy and foul play and strife and ill-contention.

Aye, tares get among the wheat. What then? Let us scatter God's seed with prodigal hands. Let us sow it everywhere. Let us be keen and alert in our sowing. Let us be the first in every field. Let us sow it in private and in public. As far as lies in us, let us give the devil no advantage. Let us watch and pray, and let us be busy in our fields with an unfailing determination that in the day of the harvest home the Lord shall have a heavy reaping for his garner.—Dr. J. H. Jowett, in "The Friend on the Road."

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

On my writing desk are two bowls filled with pebbles and water. Standing erect in each, like sentinels on guard with lifted swords, are plants of the iris family. Out of the heart of each springs a triangular stem crowned with star-like blooms of purest white. In the center of each star is a tiny cup, which enfolds calyxes of gold. Beautiful lilies of green, white and gold may bring a lesson to you and me this Christmas time, as we think of life, its mysteries, its meaning, and its ever-renewing power. Mother or daughter of the home, a few brief weeks since, brought the brown bulbs here and placed them in their setting. Thereupon the Hand that made and sustains all living, growing things, took charge; soon the blade, then the frond, then the stem and its coronal or stars. As I write, my mind drifts out beyond the lilies and I think of the many wonderfull forces that God, our Father and Creator of all, has placed at the command of his children, for the purpose of making them creators of things useful and beautiful, using the furnishing and wealth of our Father's storing, that this earthly house of ours may be more comfortable, more beautiful, so that, like the shorn lambs, the harsher winds that sweep through are tempered. My heart is singing a song of grace and gratitude as I think of the untold blessings God is even now giving this land of ours and how earnest, thoughtful men are unfolding for the good and comfort of this people more and more of the hidden things in Nature's great repository. No man can ever discover anything or invent anything of real worth that is not a co-worker with God. He may not honor the superior One in the partnership, but He is ever present, and ever will be.

This leads further on to Browning's "acknowledgment of God in Christ." He came to bless the world in that elder day, the recurrence of which we now celebrate every year, and he will surely come again. And shall we not rejoice to know that in one sense he is coming now, coming more and more into the ways and hearts of men, coming more into his church as she girds herself for mightier adventures among the lands and people who, in a spiritual sense, are yet undiscovered, and pledges her faith for benefactions unknown in other ages? And just in the measure wherewith he comes, or rather we let him come, does he gladden and enrich life in every way. Through the weary centuries he has been waiting to come in the fullness of his regal power, in the majesty and splendor of his risen glory. As to times and seasons of this great consummation, too well we know, none may know. We do well to mark the wonders of this present age and keep step with all its mighty movements. Of one thing I am sure—he has come, is still coming, for the sound of his footsteps is in the earth to-day.

None who has the fellowship of his presence need be at all disturbed by a further and fuller manifestation of the Risen One. This advent is in the keeping of the Father. Then, there will be a greater Christmas tide of joy and gladness than earth had ever known before, and all the ages will bring their trophies and lay them at the feet of Him who is Prince of men and angels. His hand of power will be laid on the fevered pulse of this old world's fierce wavebeats of sin and sorrow, and peace that knows no break or surcease will come forever.

THE FRAGRANCE OF A CHRISTMAS REMEMBRANCE.

By a Parsonage Dweller.

It was a bright December morning that saw the end of all the packing, and the preacher's family, baggage and all, safely aboard the train for the new appointment. The close of that same beautiful day found all nearing their destination. Presently, all filed down the train aisle to the steps; as the last little pair of feet were guided down the steps, the conductor wanted to know if all were out. The porter, in an effort to jest, replied, "There are still about a dozen to come," as he lifted the fairest-haired one of all the six youngsters to the ground.

Kind and obliging stewards that had been selected by the original method, no doubt (see Acts 6:3), were at the train. The winter twilight had already deepened into the early darkness of a winter night, when all were ushered into the warm, cheerful sitting room of the new parsonage home, where a group of elect women were waiting to greet the newcomers.

The move was not such a long one, but was tedious and painful because of the fact that the wife and mother was not strong; really the move had been postponed a few days on account of this weakness, following severe illness. There is always some inspiration in a change of environment; some stimulus in new surroundings. At least one has a chance for a new beginning. So it was with a glad heart that the belongings had been packed and that pastures new stretched out ahead, though at times, the heart of the parsonage mistress ached with an almost unendurable ache, because she well knew that she could not meet the demands of mother, home-maker, housekeeper, and leader in church activities as she would love to, or as she knew the members would expect her, hindered as she was by lack of strength. But hope had been the beacon light that buoyed up her flagging courage before, and now an unquenchable faith poseessed her, and she knew that somehow, somewhere, there would dawn a brighter day, for even illness and discouragement—twin conditions—cannot last always.

These were busy hours, for Christmas was only four days off. Soon the things were fitted into the latest parsonage home; the books were all put on the proper shelves; father's hymnal, file of sermons, and Bible were placed most conveniently on the desk; the pictures and little personal articles that constitute the lares and penates of the average parsonage home, were all put in place. A "homey" atmosphere was settling down as the day before Christmas drew near its close. The children were making known their final wishes and hopes, and impressing the mother with the fact that they expected the literal fulfillment of each wish and hope. A knock at the back door halted for a moment the happy anticipations. A colored girl, servant of a noble-hearted woman, was at the steps of the back porch, an artistically tied and Christmassy-looking package in her hands. Eagerly the mother took it, and, thanking the girl, hurried back into the sitting room, where eager eyes were watching to learn the source of so early a Christmas package in a strange town, where there were no old friends to remember them in such an intimate way.

Imagine their surprise and pleasure when a shiny, silver molasses pitcher and saucer were brought to light, with a card, bearing a warm greeting befitting the season. The name on the card was that of a well-known family of the town.

Pretty soon there came to call on the new preacher's family a dear woman who must not have been far from the eighties in age, though one could never think of her as being old. How could one be ordinarily old with such a blessed, thoughtful heart? So thanks and pleasure were expressed for the gift and a bit of surprise, too. To this the new-found friend replied: "I always remember my minister's wife at the Christmas season. Two persons I never forget—my husband on his birthday, and my pastor's wife, old or new, at Christmastide."

There were dark days ahead of that parsonage home and family during their residence at that particular town. Sickness and more sickness came. The dreaded influenza was stalking over the land, taking away its hundreds and thousands. Early one morning, as the death angel was calling here and there, he entered this home, and bore away the spirit of the fair, gentle, little 6-year-old girl—the last one the porter helped from the train that December day of the last move. So at this time the kindly ministrations of this unostentatious Christian woman were to the heart-broken mother as the lighthouse is to the storm-tossed vessel on a dark night.

Three Christmas days came and went before this parsonage family were directed to fold their tents and go to a new field of labor, and each Christmas season a beautiful and well-chosen gift found its way to the Methodist parsonage. The last gift was a fur neck-piece, elaborate enough for the banker's wife. The preacher's wife marveled a bit at the extravagance.

She replied: "That is what you need; it is what I want you to have; and you must wear it, and get as much pleasure from its use as I have gotten from giving it to you."

Three more years have passed since the last gift, and in the meanwhile the dear friend has answered the Father's summons to a higher, more abundant life. That she had an abundant entrance is assured, and no doubt she has greeted on the other shore some preacher's wife whose heart she had gladdened on earth, for her Christmas giving had been a custom followed many years.

TWO BOOKS WHICH DESERVE NEGLECT.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

In one way or another the rationalists are now seeking to inject their rationalism into the minds of children as well as into the hearts of adults. They would destroy our innocents with their skepticism as Hérod slew the babes of Bethlehem, hoping to kill the infant Jesus.

Two books have been published recently which parents should not allow to enter homes in which there are children and youth. They well deserve neglect.

The first is "The Story of the Bible," by a man named Van Loon. A worse book could not be easily made with the Bible as its subject. It abounds in statements which are contradicted by history, both sacred and secular. The author writes what he wishes were the truth without regard to its agreement or disagreement with the established facts of history. He is disposed to distort, or falsely color, Scriptural history especially.

Here are the passages concerning historical matters in the Old Testament:

> "The stories of the creation we find in the Old Testament were written more than a thousand years after the death of Moses." (Page 13.)
> The story of the ladder that Jacob saw is thus commented upon: "On the ladder were many of the angels of Jehovah. At the top of the ladder stood Jehovah himself, and Jehovah had spoken and had promised that he would be a friend to the fugitive and would keep him during his exile. But whether this story is really true, that I do not know, and I rather believe that Jacob afterwards told the story to ease the knowledge of his own guilt and make people believe that he really was not as bad as they might think, since he had retained the friendship of so powerful a god." (Page 46.)
> "You must remember that the Old Testament is really a collection of short and unrelated histories which were put together in one book when the founders of the Jewish nation had been dead for almost a thousand years." (Page 50.)
>
> "The compilers of the Old Testament (as we have repeatedly stated before) were not particular in such matters. They took whatever they liked, wherever they found it and pasted their scrolls together without a vestige of what we modern people called 'editing'." (Page 251.)
>
> "He probably introduced the wholly imaginary episodes of the fiery furnace to tell his contemporaries what faith can do for those who seriously believe that Jehovah is on their side, and he made Nebuchadnezzar die a terrible death because such an unfortunate ending was sure to please his Jewish readers." (Page 261.)

This man's account of the Crucifixion is little short of blasphemous coarseness.

The second book of similar nature which deserves neglect is entitled, "The Children's Bible," and is by Henry A. Sherman and Charles Foster Kent.

Dr. Kent will be remembered as the man who "translated and arranged" what he called "The Shorter Bible" a few years ago. He is a modernist of the modernists and a rationalist of the rationalists, although he is the "Woolsey Professor of Biblical Literature in Yale University," an institution which was established by Orthodox Christians in protest of the liberalism in Harvard College when the latter institution began to depart from the principles of John Harvard and other faithful men by whom it was founded.

The reading of these books will not help, but will tend to impair the faith of the children and youth into whose hands they may fall.

They grossly misrepresent the Bible and merit emphatic condemnation and universal neglect. This brief article is written to put Christian parents on their guard against such publications which are so speciously advertised and industriously circlated.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The presiding elders of the two Mississippi Conferences are called to meet in Jackson at 3 p. m., on Thursday, Jan. 10. The meeting will adjourn by early afternoon of the next day.

WILLIAM N. AINSWORTH.

NARROW-MINDED MEN.

Most of us are very much opposed to narrow-mindedness in other people; some of us are not quite so opposed to it when we enjoy it ourselves; and a few of us are so constituted that we cannot abide any one who differs from us in any of our many prepossessions. The Methodist Recorder tells of a Wesleyan minister who was suffering from this affliction. He was sent to London to interview one of the heads of department in his church, and he reported on his return to his colleagues: "I must say," he said, "that I was very disappointed with ———. I could never have imagined that he was so narrow-minded." "Not a bit of it," boldly responded one of his colleagues; "you've got a totally wrong impression of him. I know him very well, and we haven't a more open-minded man in the ministry." "Don't be ridiculous," petulantly replied the superintendent; "why, he actually differed from me twice in the half-hour I was in his office!"

We smiled as we read the story, and we thought we recognized the individual, in fact, some half-dozen of him, and we wondered also if by any chance we ourselves had never been tarred a little with the same stick! It is so pleasant to feel that one is broad-minded and liberal—that most of us conclude that we are built just that way, and the only narrow-minded fellows are the ones who don't agree with us. It seems easy to believe the best of ourselves, in fact, it is so easy that if many of us were only half as good as we believe we are, we should be better than most of the men we know. But while we have heard not a few men confess their sins, we do not recall ever hearing one admit that he was narrow-minded or bigoted, and we cannot recall that we ever heard a narrow-minded brother pray to be delivered from narrow-mindedness.

Yet narrow-mindedness is a mean and ignoble thing, and all of us hate it in other people. To be narrow-minded is to be mentally restricted, so that the mind, instead of ranging over broad pathways, treads a path wide enough for itself alone. We are out of range of other minds, and we narrow our thought-life to a pitiable extent. We profess to be truth-lovers, but we refuse to recognize as truth anything which is outside our narrow path. The difference is not that between liberals and conservatives, for a liberal may be narrow-minded and a conservative may be broad-minded. A man may be bigoted in his radicalism as another is in his conservatism. The real difference between the narrow-minded man and the broad-minded, lies not in any difference between the truth they hold, but rather in their mental attitude towards those with whom they disagree. It is possible to disagree with a man on almost every point and yet at the same time to retain an unshaken belief in his integrity and sincerity. To disagree with us does not mean that our opponent is either less intelligent or less loyal to truth than we are; it means simply that he does not agree with us, and we have no right to read into it either culpable ignorance or willful apostasy.

To be narrow-minded is to judge and condemn all with whom we disagree, more especially if they formerly walked with us; while even our Lord said, "I judge no man." We do not argue that men should hold their beliefs so lightly as not to care what other men believe—this is not belief but indifference; but we do hold that while we have a right to cherish our faith as a possession so precious that we would even die for it, yet, at the same time we should give our fellows credit for the same honesty which we claim for ourselves; and we should accord to them the same liberty of thought which we insist upon.—Christian Guardian.

This act of initiative and daring, this resolute step of entire confidence, is at the same time the most reasonable proceeding that a creature may undertake. Give credit to God; no wisdom, no prudent calculation could be safer.—Charles Wagner.

THE REVELATION TO THE SHEPHERDS.

loving eye. One sinner who repents "gives joy in the presence of the angels of God."

In celebrating Christmas, many good people contemplate with profound satisfaction the fact that the Christian religion, through the atoning grace of the atoning Saviour, includes all mankind within the compass of his love, but fail to consider their own personal relation to Jesus, and their own eternal interest in His incarnation. Their ears do not catch the joyous words, "to you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." No man can adequately measure the meaning of Jesus to all men in general until he takes account of what the Christ means to himself. No human being knows the vast significance of the birth of "the Babe of Bethlehem" to all the world until he himself has been born again. Deeply meaningful are the lines of Johann Scheffler:

"Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born,
If He's not born in thee, thy soul is still forlorn."

"And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another: Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us" (Luke ii:15).

In like mind and promptitude of faith, let us also say, one to another, "Let us go now even unto Bethlehem." Going thither, let each at this glad season of the Nativity find for himself the Saviour:

"Within us, Babe divine,
Be born, and make us thine,
Be born, and make our hearts
Thy cradle and Thy shrine."

If with the shepherds we go on a quest of faith, we shall find for ourselves the Redeemer whom they found in the Manger, and returning with them to the duties of daily life, we shall come "glorifying and praising God for all the glorious things that we have heard and seen."

O little town of Bethlehem!
How still we see thee lie;
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by;
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The Everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee to-night.

How silently, how silently,
The wondrous gift is given!
So God imparts to human hearts
The blessings of his heaven.
No ear may hear his coming,
But in this world of sin,
Where meek souls will receive Him still,
The dear Christ enters in.

O holy child of Bethlehem!
Descend to us, we pray;
Cast out our sin and enter in,
Be born in us to-day.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great, glad tidings tell;
O come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Immanuel.

"THE LEAST OF THESE."

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

"The least of these"—I have seen them. Not one or five, or a score, or an hundred—but whole companies, regiments, brigades, platoons, an army in number, of unknown, helpless, ragged, sick, hungry human beings—all children! And not only an army of children, but an army of orphan children! And not simply an army of ordinary orphan children, but such orphan children as were never seen before; orphans driven out of their homes and out of their country, unable to return to their native towns, villages, and countryside, because the native land of these orphans is in the power of those who killed their fathers, outraged and then killed their mothers, and carried their older sisters to the slavery of the Turkish harem; orphans in a strange land, without a home, with nothing they can call their own.

Of such as these our Divine Lord and Saviour spoke when he drew the solemn, graphic picture of the Final Judgment. He declared that one of the standards of judgment would be: "Did you feed the hungry, clothe the naked, care for the sick;" not only your blood-kin, your friends, your acquaintances, your fellow-countrymen, but did you minister to the "stranger"? "The Son of Man came to minister and to give his life a ransom for many" because he loved them. "Have you, as my loyal follower, fed, clothed, and cared for your fellow-men for whom I died?" Whatever others may do or say, the genuine discipline of Jesus must have the spirit of their Master, or they are none of his, and if they have that spirit, they will go about "doing good" to "the least of these, my brethren."

Love Will Find the Way.

But how can we do these things for people, for orphans, thousands of miles away, whom we have never seen and to whom we cannot go? There is nothing too difficult for Love. "Charity never faileth," and Love has found the way to minister to the "least of these of, my brethren,"—these 100,000 homeless, famished Armenian and Greek orphans. Choice men and women (mostly young) have formed the Near East Relief organization and have given themselves to perform this service. These bearers of our love and givers of life have left their families and the comforts of their homes, have journeyed into distant lands and lived among cruel, hostile people, have borne fatigue and privation, have faced pestilence and (sometimes) death, have sought, washed, clothed, fed and nursed these needy, often diseased, friendless, helpless ones, and given them in your name a chance to live. These workers could not have gone to the Near East, and could not continue to save these lives but for the fact that we put in their hands money for food, clothing, shelter and training. And unless we can and will go in person to minister to the Master's "Little Ones," we must and will give what money we can to minister through those who can and will go for us.

People who say that they are tired of giving to the Near East Relief work forget how many years a child must receive care and training before it is able to care for itself. It must not be said of us, "This man began to build and was not able to finish." Let us finish the work which we set out to do.

I had recently a most interesting hour with King George of Greece, and later I received from him a letter, touching in its recognition of the assistance given by our people and of the devotion and self-sacrifice of the Near East Relief workers.

But greatly pleased as we are with such tokens of appreciation, how happy we will be when on that great day, the Master shall say: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. For I was hungry and ye gave me meat, I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me. . . . Inasmuch as ye have done it to one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

The Letter from the King.

September 28th, 1923.

My Dear Bishop Cannon: I desire to express to you as the representative of the Christian churches of America, my very high personal appreciation of the exceedingly practical sympathy which your people have manifested toward Greece during the past twelve months.

The necessity for caring for the hundreds of thousands of refugees, with so large a proportion of dependent women and children, has taxed the resources of Greece to the very utmost. Indeed, it would have been impossible for Greece to have met the awful conditions which faced her without the aid so generously extended by the people of your country. While the Greek Government has endeavored to secure a loan of sufficient amount to settle and to house the refugee population permanently in various sections of the country, it will not be possible for our people to furnish sufficient food and clothing for the refugees during the coming winter.

Not only personally, therefore, but in the name of my country, may I express the hope that your people will continue to support the splendid work of the Near East Relief, as by so doing they will prevent much suffering. I wish also to express the admiration which I feel for the devoted, self-sacrificing work which the Near East Relief is doing to relieve want and suffering, and especially for the wise and constructive program of that organization for the maintenance and training of the thousands of orphans whom they have actually rescued from the very jaws of death.

May I extend, through you, to the Christian churches of America the sincere thanks of my people for their sympathy and help?

(Signed) GEORGE R.

CENTENARY PAY-OUT CAMPAIGN CONFERENCE SET-UP MEETING.

The Centenary Pay-Out Campaign Set-Uup Meeting was held in Jackson, Dec. 12. Presiding Elders, Board of Missions, Conference Lay Leader, Presidents of Woman's Missionary Society and Epworth League, and Conference Field Secretary were the personnel of this meeting.

Dr. L. D. Patterson represented the Centenary, and the plan for the Pay-Out Campaign was thoroughly gone into. The feature of the meeting was the great missionary address of Dr. Patterson. The presiding elders also fixed the date and place for their District Set-up Meetings, and it is very important, in fact, necessary that all the pastors of each District, Centenary Treasurers, Superintendents of the Sunday school, Lay Leaders, and Presidents of Woman's Missionary Societies and Epworth Leagues attend these meetings; even at the point of a sacrifice, it should be done. Every presiding elder urgently requests that those mentioned be present at their District Set-Up Meeting, the date of which is given below:

Newton District, Dec. 20, 1:30 p. m., Newton, Miss.

Hattiesburg District, Dec. 21, 10 a. m., Main Street Church, Hattiesurg, Miss.

Brookhaven District, Dec. 27, 1:30 p. m., Brookhaven, Miss.

Vicksburg District, Dec. 27, 1 p. m., Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, Miss.

Vicksburg District, Dec. 28, 11 a. m., Fayette, Miss.

Jackson District, Jan. 3, 10 a. m., Capitol Street Church, Jakson, Miss.

Seashore District, Dec. 28, 11 a. m., Lumberton, Miss.

Seashore District, Jan. 4, 2:30 p. m., Gulfport, Miss.

Meridian District, Dec. 31, 1:30 p. m., Central Church, Meridian, Miss.

There will be two meetings held in the Seashore and the Vicksburg Districts, with the privilege given to attend the one most convenient, but if at all convenient, it would be well to attend both.

Yours for service,
W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Field Secretary-Treasurer.

TO THE HOLDERS OF SPECIALS IN THE MISSISSIPPI AND THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

Dear Co-operating Fiends: It is an interesting fact that Missionary Specials are carried in all of the seven districts of the Mississippi Conference. Altogether, there are 110 separate Specials, carried by 17 churches, $17,902.07; 62 Sunday schools, classes, and departments, $6,339.06; 23 individuals, $11,530; 1 Epworth League Chapter, $75; 1 Epworth League Conference, $1,430; totaling $37,276.13. Another intresting fact—the Mississippi has Specials in all the mission fields in which Southern Methodism is at work, except Siberia, divided as follows: China, 21; Japan, 29; Korea, 20; Cuba, 2; Brazil, 5; Mexico, 9; Congo, 7; Europe, 7; Home, 10. Our records show that the Mississippi Conference stands twenty-third from the head on assigned Missionary-Centenary Specials, with a total of $155,522 for the Centenary period.

Our records further show that out of 161 charges, 39 have Missinary Specials, and 122 have none. These 122, a startling number, present a large and immediate field for new Specials. We believe it is a most promising one. We ask your co-operation in developing and making concrete their interest. The Mississippi Conference is now directing $37,276.13 per year to specific fields and units of work.

It is an interesting fact that Missionary Specials are carried in all of the seven districts of the Louisiana Conference. Altogether, there are 82 separate Specials, carried by 10 churches, $16,937.50; 55 Sunday schools, classes, and departments, $4,791; 1 Epworth League Chapter, $20; 1 Epworth League Conference, $1,500; 7 individuals, $690; 1 Woman's Missionary Society, $125, totaling $24,063.50 per year. Another interesting fact—the Louisiana Conference has Specials in all the mission fields in which Southern Methodism is at work, divided as follows: China, 19; Japan, 20; Korea, 14; Cuba, 2; Mexico, 7; Brazil, 4; Congo, 5; Siberia, 1; Europe, 2; Home, 13. Our records show that your Conference stands twenty-ninth from the head on assigned Missionary-Centenary Specials, with a total of $8.527 for the Centenary period.

Our records further show that out of 154 charges, 31 have Missionary Specials, and 123 have none. These 123, far more than half, present a large and immediate field for new Specials. We believe it is a most promising one. We ask your active co-operation in developing and making concrete their interest. The Louisiana Conference is directing $24,063.50 per year to specific fields and units of work.

They are ours to Christinanize and support. This great privilege and personal responsibility does not stop when the Centenary closes. Those who carry Missionary Special are now face to face with a divine providence. The appropriation for Foreign Mission, General Work, in 1919, was $563,528; for 1924 it is $1,403,679. For Home Missions, the regular maintenance budget for 1919 was $133,975; for 1924 it is $365,000. Yet. the income from assessments, Home and Foreign, for 1922 was only $578,765, which is $1,189,914 short of the combined budget. This means that the missinary assessment on the church is no longer adequate to meet the world's needs, and that Missionary Specials have, in the providence of God, been given the opportunity to demonstrate that they can "carry on," and through directed, sympathetic, intelligent, prayerful partnership in the world task meet the financial requirements, and make possible long needed extension in unoccupied, unevangelized territory. This is a mighty challenge.

Word comes from Centenary headquarters that the holders of Specials are leading the Centenary forces in the full payment of pledges.—Centenary Bulletin.

NOTICE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE!

It was ordered by the North Mississippi Conference that all subscriptions to the .Conference Endowment Fund be returned, by the Board of Finance, to the several charges in which they were secured; and that they be credited on the assessment that has been made, by the General Conference, for the support of superannuated preachers.

No credits can be allowed for cash payments, since they were made and the money used in the North Mississippi Conference only, before the general plan was ordered.

The above statements are made so that the pastors may know what to do with the cards when they receive them.

The brethren will be glad to know that our superannuates have received more than have those of any other Conference in the connection.

J. E. CUNNINGHAM.
President, Board of Finance.

KICKING BIRD NEEDS A CAP.

The following letter explains itself:

"Dear Sir—Will write you a short letter. I've been from place to place to preach to my tribes, and now it is getting cold and I like to ask you to send me a fur cap. The size is 7½. Will now close.

"Yours truly,
"REV. KICKING BIRD."

Kicking Bird is a Southern Methodist preacher working in Oklahoma among the wild Kiowa and Commanche Indians. Himself a Kiowa, he has devoted many years of service to his people.

What Methodist will respond to Kicking Bird's plea and furnish him a fur cap to protect his aged head from the blasts of winter as he travels among his tribes preaching the Gospel? The cost will be about $5. If more than one check is received, other Indian preachers will be furnished similar caps.

Send your contribution to Rev. R. H. Ruff, Secretary in charge of Indian work, Lambuth Building, Nashlile, Tenn.

Everybody is ready to sustain the law he likes. That is not in the proper sense respect for law and order. The test of respect for Law is where the law is upheld even thought it hurts.—Charles E. Hughes, Secretary of State.

"What Hath God Wrought"

The Centenary record is one which none need take on faith. Its accomplishments are concrete and all may see them.

Search Methodist history, and you will find nothing comparable to the glorious advance made by the Centenary since 1918.

In 1918 we had 7 foreign mission fields; now we have twelve.

In 1918 we had sent no new recruits for two quadrenniums; since then we have sent 274.

In foreign fields the Centenary has built 250 new churches and residences and purchased nearly 100 sites for other churches.

The Centenary has won 15,000 converts in those lands where we did not even operate in 1918.

The Centenary has built or enlarged 12 hospitals and 42 schools in foreign lands alone.

And these are but sample achievements of what the Centenary has done, though but half the pledges have been paid.

WE MUST CONTINUE THE TRIUMPH
PAY OUT THE CENTENARY PLEDGE

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Stop! Look! and Listen!

The work just now of supreme importance to the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is that which is listed in the Workers' Guide to receive attention at the First Quarterly Conference of the Conference year 1923-24, as follows:

1. Determine the Charge's quota and apportion same to the Churches of the Charge.
2. Decide upon the Charge's plan for raising its quota.
3. Appoint the Charge's Special Effort Committee. (And immediately following the First Quarterly Conference, call a meeting of this committee for organization as called for in the Workers' Guide.)
4. Fill out the PINK LEAF REPORT appearing in the Workers' Guide on pages 19, 20, and send it under first-class postage to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

The Board of Finance cannot make the necessary preparations for keeping the accounts with the Charge, or for doing other important things vital to the success of the Effort, until the PINK LEAF REPORT, telling of the actions of the First Quarterly Conference, is received.

Thousands of pastors throughout the Church have solemnly promised, and with unquestioned determination, to co-operate in the plan of the Special Effort with unfailing loyalty. The plan is now calling for the PINK LEAF REPORT to be placed in the hands of the Board of Finance. Come on, men; take steady aim—and RING THE BELL!

Once upon a time a presiding elder was called the FIFTH WHEEL OF THE WAGON, but now we know he is the SPARK-PLUG OF THE AUTOMOBILE. Spark, brothers, spark! Make the GASOLINE do business in the First Quarterly Conferences for the "Forgotten Man"! And see that the PINK LEAF REPORT goes forward. Remember, you promised you would!

THE CHRISTMAS STORY.

By Lina Cornelia Hall.

God's love freely giving
  His Best to the earth;
God's Son gladly taking
  A peasant child's birth;
God's hosts singing "Glory"
  And "Peace" from on high;
God's star a bright beacon
  In Bethlehem sky.

Earth's King in a manger
  Is cradled to rest;
Earth's wise men come seeking
  A Heavenly Guest;
Earth's shepherds, with haste, bring
  The angels' glad word;
Earth's sin has a Saviour—
  'Tis Jesus, the Lord!

A CHRISTMAS ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

By Mary Foot Lord.

Dead Father, we thank thee for thy Christmas gift. If thou hadst asked us what we desired most, we should have answered: "Tinsel toys"—gifts that are broken in a day; playthings of which we soon grow tired. If thou hadst asked us what we needed most, we should have spoken of temporal things—food that must be consumed, lest it perish; raiment that waxes old. We should never have had the unselfishness to ask of thee a brother, lest that mean that we must divide our inheritance with him; we should never have had the will-power to ask of thee a Counselor and Guide, lest he change our habits and take from us the joy of life; we should never have had the wisdom to ask thee to choose our gift for us, lest thou shouldst choose that which suited thee, but found no responsive chord in us.

We thank thee that thou didst not consider our childishness, nor consult our sordidness, nor yield to our unspoken selfishness, but that thou didst indeed prove thyself our Heavenly Father in sending us this Heavenly Gift.

We thank thee that thy wisdom chose for us a Gift which is everlasting. We thank thee that thy unselfishness chose for us a Gift through which we may rise above the hindrances of earth and share thy heavenly estate. We thank thee that thy love chose for us a Gift we could obtain no other way, so that in our thought thou art ever one with thy Gift divine.

O our Father, how can we show our gratitude for thy Christmas Gift, except by receiving Jesus, with inexpressible joy, into our hearts and never letting him depart? This we gladly do, willing that he should show us thy more excellent heavenly way of living; eager that he should guide us into all thy truth; trusting that he will bring us to everlasting life with thee. Amen.—The Christian Advocate.

THE BIRTHDAY CAKE.

It was baking day. It was also father's birthday, but he had gone to work just as usual.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Ruth. "I think a birthday ought not to be just like a common day."

"How would you like to bake a cake for father's birthday supper?" asked mother. "It will be a surprise for him."

"O mother, may I?" Ruth was so eager that she could hardly wait for mother to get the things she would need. She had made many tiny thimble cakes; but never had she been allowed to make a big cake. Now she broke the eggs into the bowl, took the egg-beater, and began to work.

"Can't I help?" begged Johnny.

"Yes," answered mother, "you may be the flour-sifter." She tied an apron around his neck and gave him flour and sifter, and Johnny was ready to do his part.

"Oh, please, mother, let us do every bit of it," Ruth pleaded. And when mother promised, the children were careful to do just as she said, for they wished the cake to be good. Ruth beat and mixed and measured and chatted briskly. When it came time to put in Johnny's well-sifted flour, she beat the mixture till her little arms ached. Then Johnny took his turn.

At last the cake was ready for the oven, and when it came out, some time later, big and brown and beautiful, the children fairly danced for joy.

At supper that evening it seemed a long while to Ruth and Johnny till dessert was served. And when father tasted a large slice of cake and said, "Well, mother, you certainly made a good cake to-day," they had to cover their mouths with their napkins to keep from laughing aloud.

"Angel cake?" asked father.

"No," laughed Ruth; it's, it's Johnny cake."

"Johnny cake! Well, it must be a new kind."

"It is," answered mother. "It's what we call a Ruth-and-Johnny cake."

"Well! Well!" exclaimed father. "This is a surprise! What is the recipe?"

Ruth named what had gone into the cake.

"Mixed with a great deal of busy work," added mother, "a big dash of fun and laughter, a pinch of patience, and the whole well flavored with love."

"I just prayed that it would be good!!" exclaimed Ruth.

"Part of that is a pretty good recipe for a happy day," said father—"a prayer that it will be a good day, busy work, patience, fun, laughter and love. Did the day turn out well, too?"

"Oh, yes! Yes!" cried Ruth and Johnny.

"Well, mother, I thought that was unusually good cake," said father. "I think I could eat another slice if you have it, and I hope we shall have Ruth-and-Johnny cake soon again."—Christian Observer.

THE CHRISTMAS PRESENT LIMIT.

By Hilda Richmond.

Maybe it will sound mercenary to some and foolish to others, but the home circles or the groups of friends or the relatives more or less distant will find the Christmas problem largely solved if they adopt the money limit for gifts. Really it is a most delightful game instead of a problem, since you cannot have cold chills contemplating a beautiful and expensive gift after you have sent a fifty-cent cream pitcher. Neither can you have that terrible feeling that takes away all Christmas joy when you contemplate the money you wasted by buying without definite system or forethought.

One family among my friends has placed a fifty-cent limit on the gifts, and it is really wonderful how many things you can contrive that are really useful or ornamental or beautiful with that modest amount, even in these days of frenzied finance. A beautiful handkerchief or two, a book, a dish, a toy, a candlestick, a towel to be embroidered, a small bottle of perfume, a box of pencils for a child, a top, materials for doll clothes, box of home-made candy, small basket of fruit, a kitchen utensil, material for a baby frock, a fancy apron or a homely kitchen one, a box of note-paper—well, the list might be prolonged through many a paragraph.

One of the nicest Christmas gifts I ever had came to me more than twenty years ago and was merely a tinted bottle of good shape filled with camphor. A woman had a mania for practical things, and she handed out bottles of camphor or witch hazel or homely household remedies. Perhaps the druggist gave her the empty bottles, but even if they cost nothing they were beautiful and graceful. I still have the bottle, though the original spirits of camphor went for mosquito bites and small hurts years back. It was a nice gift then and it still reminds me of her thoughtfulness, though many more expensive gifts have gone to the junk pile in that time.

Even a new fifty-cent piece, or a crisp bill, or even a shining quarter, will give more pleasure, particularly to a child, than a gift of which you are not sure. If the child knows the family limit there will be no anxiety or disappointment, and when several members combine with money gifts the pleasure of being able to spend is delightful to little folks. It is a poor way to celebrate the greatest day of the year by being reckless or extravagant, so a wise limit that will impoverish no one but will bring joy and satisfaction to all is well worth considering.—Western Christian Advocate.

No liquor violation can be committed but some citizen has knowledge of it. The day of the bootlegger will be done when every citizen does his full duty in reporting violations of law to the proper officers of County, State or Nation.—L. R. Horton.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.

The Advocate extends hearty Christmas greetings to every one of its readers, with the prayer that all the blessings of this joyous season may be abundantly bestowed upon every heart and home.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Joseph A. Smith has been received graciously by the good people of Picayune, Miss., and his work has begun auspiciously.

Rev. J. A. Biffle, entering upon his fourth year as pastor at Chester, Miss., does so happily, expecting this to be the best year of the four.

Rev. D. C. Bennett, appointed to the Eros charge at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, has reached his new field of labor and has been cordially received.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham, the new presiding elder of the Greenwood District, North Mississippi Conference, has been cordially received. He writes that all the preachers are in their places, well, happy, hopeful, and busy.

We have been requested to announce that the address of Rev. S. E. Flurry, pastor of the Cleveland circuit, Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, is DeKalb, Miss., R. F. D. No. 2.

Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg, Va., is meeting with encouraging success in its campaign to raise $1,250,000. Already all but about $150,000 is in sight.

Prof. C. A. Bowen, Rev. J. C. Chambers, Mr. O. C. Hull, and Rev. H. R. McKee attended the Sunday School Council in Nashville, Tenn., last week from the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, of Bogalusa, La., the hospitable host of the recent session of the Louisiana Annual Conference, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Friday of last week.

A committee, known as the American Foundation, has been created to take over the copyright of the American Standard Revision of the Bible, now held by private interests.

Rev. F. R. Power, transferred from Portland, Ark., back to his home Conference and appointed to the DeSaird charge, is living at Fairbanks, La. He is encouraged by the outlook, and says he is glad to be back in Louisiana.

The Methodist church at Bayou Blue, La., in the French Mission section, Rev. George La Grange, pastor, will enjoy a Christmas celebration provided by the First Methodist Church of this city, this church furnishing the tree and all decorations, and gifts for 150 children.

Dr. H. F. Tolle, transferred from the Mississippi Conference to the Florida Conference, was appointed pastor of the First Methodist Church, Tampa, Fla., at the recent session of the Florida Conference. Dr. Tolle wrought a great work at Capitol Street, Jackson, Miss., and we commend him heartily to the Florida brethren.

The Methodist church at Hazlehurst, Miss., made an offering of $233 to the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage on Work Day last fall, in addition to some contributions in boxes for the children. It also made a contribution to the Orphanage on Thanksgiving.

Rev. James L. Sells, the new pastor of the Centenary Methodist Church, McComb, Miss., has been royally received by his congregation and the citizens of the town generally. Mingled with the many expressions of welcome are many words of appreciation of the work of his predecessor, Rev. George H. Thompson.

Dr. A. M. Pierce is the new editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate. The name Pierce is one to conjure with in Georgia Methodism, and great things will be expected of the new editor of the Wesleyan. We extend to him a cordial welcome to the editorial fraternity.

✓ Mrs. J. A. Compton, widow of a former member of one of the Texas Conferences, died in this city on Thursday of last week. She was a member of the First Methodist Church, and her pastor, Dr. R. H. Harper, officiated at the funeral on Friday. She was a faithful Christian woman.

A special train will be operated on Jan. 20 to carry students of Randolph-Macon Woman's College to their homes for the Christmas holidays. This is the first time in the history of the college, and probably the first time in the history of any college in this section, that a whole train has been run for the accommondation of its students.

Bishop Warren A. Candler, Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, and Bishop W. N. Ainsworth spent a few hours in New Orleans on Thursday of last week, being en route for San Antonio, Tex., for the fall meeting of the College of Bishops. They were all in good health and spirits. The editor of the Advocate greatly enjoyed the privilege of spending a short time with them.

Rev. Leland Clegg, recently transferred from the Louisiana Conference to Arkansas and appointed to Mountain Home, Ark., is delighted with his appointment. It is a county site in the Ozarks, a station, with a salary of $1,600. A Baptist school is located there, with an attendance of 250 students.

✓ The sudden death of Mr. W. J. Connerly, Gloster, Miss., on Tuesday of last week, removed one of the most prominent and influential laymen of that section of Mississippi. He had been for many years the chairman of the board of stewards at Gloster, and was active in every good work. He was the son-in-law of Rev. W. W. Simmons, and the father of Mrs. E. C. Gunn, wife of our pastor at Bogalusa, La. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

The pageant, "The Spirit of the Gray Moss," will be given at the First Methodist Church, this city, on Friday evening of this week. This pageant was written by Dr. R. H. Harper, pastor of the First Methodist Church, and was presented at the Sunday School Assembly at Lake Junaluska, N. C., last summer, where it was awarded the highest honor. It is being given here by the Sunday school, under the direction of Mrs. B. Kiern.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., has recently undergone an operation at the Lucy Brinkley Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., for the removal of a deflected sinew. The operationn was successful, and Brother Lewis will soon be actively at work in his pastorate. Since Conference, several members have been received into the church and more than $500 has been raised to apply on the floor covering of the new church.

✓ The sad news has come to us of the death of Major C. P. Varner, of Senatobia, Miss., at his home in that city, on Monday, Dec. 10. He was 83 years of age, and had been a lifelong Methodist. He was a gallant Confederate soldier, having fought under Lee in Virginia. He was the father of Rev. Carroll Varner, of the North Mississippi Conference, to whom, with other loved ones and friends, we extend sincere sympathy. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. W. S. Shipman.

On Monday, Dec. 3, a surprise farewell party was tendered Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Alford by the members of the Second Methodist Church, this city, which Brother Alford has served as pastor for the past eight years. A delightful program was rendered. Mrs. Alford was presented with a beautiful string of pearls, and Brother Alford with a handsome brief case and also with a bill folder with a $50 bill enclosed. The love and best wishes of the people of Second Church go with Brother and Sister Alford in their new work at St. Mark's.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. E. C. Driskell, Buena Vista, Miss., 5; Rev. R. M. Evans, Verona, Miss., 5; Rev. F. R. Power, Fairbanks, La., 2; Rev. T. B. Thrower, Shuford, Miss., 2; Rev. H. Mellard, Lucedale, Miss., 4.

THE FUNERAL OF BISHOP ATKINS.

The party with the body of Bishop Atkins, consisting of Mr. Hilliard Atkins, Dr. and Mrs. John W. Shackford, Mrs. James Atkins, Rev. W. B. Hays and Rev. Clem Baker, came through without any delay and arrived in Waynesville at 5 p. m., Friday. At every stop delegations of prominent preachers and laymen met the train, showing every kindness and rendering every assistance possible. At Knoxville, Tenn., Dr. E. B. Chappell, and Miss Dorothy Beauchamp joined the party. As we approached Junaluska the setting sun broke through the evening clouds and shining through the snow-capped peaks produced such a wonderful sunset as even the oldest people on the train said they had never seen before. It was as if this glorious child of his dreams had put on her most radiant garments to welcome home her glorious father.

We were met at the station in Waynesville by a large concourse of friends and relatives who conveyed the body to the family home, where, amid banks of autumn flowers, it lay in state till 10:30 a. m. Saturday.

The funeral service was conducted at the First Baptist Church (the Methodists being in a new building program) at 11 a. m. Saturday. The crowd that assembled for the last sad rites filled the spacious auditorium, overflowed the Sunday school rooms, and hundreds stood in the streets. In the crowd were scores of Methodist preachers from all over North Carolina and adjoining States, the best citizens of Waynesville, Asheville and nearby towns, plain country folks, and mountaineers who came down from their little homes in the coves to bid farewell to this man whom everybody loved.

The service was conducted by Rev. J. T. Mangum, pastor of the Waynesville Methodist Church, assisted by Rev. R. S. Howie, presiding elder of the Waynesville District; Dr. Ashley Chappell, of Central Church, Asheville; Dr. George R. Stuart, Dr. E. B. Chappell, Mr. John R. Pepper, Rev. W. B. Hays, Rev. Clem Baker, and Bishop Warren A. Candler. The singing was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Stentz. The songs used were, "Lead, Kindly Light," "Jesus Savior, Pilot Me," and "May There Be No Moaning of the Bar When I Put Out to Sea." Dr. Ashley Chappell read the first Lesson, Dr. Howie read the second Lesson, Mr. Pepper offered the prayer. Clem Baker spoke briefly of the love of Arkansas people for Bishop Atkins and read the resolutions adopted by the Arkansas preachers present at the service held just before we left Little Rock; Rev. W. B. Hays spoke of the contributions Bishop Atkins had made to Arkansas Methodism; Dr. E. B. Chappell spoke tenderly of his close relation with Bishop Atkins for twenty-five years in the work of Religious Education; Dr. Stuart had been closely associated with Bishop Atkins for fifty years, and paid a high tribute to him as a friend; Bishop Candler delivered the principal address, speaking of Bishop Atkins as a Christian man, remarkable for his vision, steadfast immovability, and wonderful works. He also spoke of the high esteem in which Bishop Atkins was held by the members of the College of Bishops.

At noon Saturday we laid the body to rest in the beautiful, evergreen cemetery at Waynesville, near by the blue waters of beautiful Lake Junaluska, in the heart of the "Land of the Sky," where the lofty peaks of the mountains he loved so well will keep watch till the resurrection morn. —Clem Baker, W. B. Hays, in the Arkansas Methodist.

SOME CENTENARY ACHIEVEMENTS IN THE HOME FIELD.

By Dr. J. W. Perry, Secretary, Home Department.

The Mountain Schools, as they are called, furnish a splendid opportunity for service through the Centenary funds. Each of the school is to receive $50,000. Nearly all of them have erected new buildings with the expectation of receiving Centenary funds to help pay for them. Buildings were very sorely needed because even after the erection of them the schools are all crowded. In them last year were more than seven hundred young people in preparation for the ministry and missionary service of the church.

Among the Negroes there are five schools which are expecting help from Centenary money. Four of them were needing new buildings very sorely. Some of these have started their buildings and others have plans to begin very soon. One, Lane College, is adding the Centenary money to its endowment, a very wise policy. At Paine College, our plans are to make of that a real teachers' college. Already the State of Georgia has recognized the work as that of an "A" Grade College. It is impossible to overestimate the importance of such a school in helping to train the leadership for the colored race. In the development of their schools they must have teachers, trained teachers, and for the most part at the present time they are compelled to go North for any special training. This is hardly wiso for them or good for us. But until we provide a place where they may be trained, it will have to continue so. The material resources of the South cannot be developed until Negro farmers are intelligent—at least have enough intelligenco and training to do something besides grow cotton; and they will not get the training needed until Southern people provide the ways and means.

Some notable things havo been achieved in industrial centers. In one mill town, with the use of about $5,000 of Centenary money, six splendid new churches have been made possible, and five of these have become self-supporting. In another mill center, $500 to the pastor's salary and $1,000 to employ a capable worker, have not only developed a strong church, but have been instrumental in bringing about the expenditure of $250,000 in that community for social benefit, such as school buildings and equipment, playgrounds, health centers, and such other social benefits. One who is not familiar with the growth of industries in the South can scarcely realize how rapid it is. Last year, more than half the textiles manufactured in the United States were made up in Dixie. This is adding much to the opportunities and responsibilities of the church for service.

We have several downtown problems in our larger cities where the well-to-do people have moved out from the old church to the suburbs and left the church surrounded by a growing population of young people, for the most part just in from the country, who earn small salaries and are compelled to live in the cheaper boarding houses of the downtown section. An appropriation for a worker in one of these centers has helped to bring into the membership of the church in this community each year about six hundred of these people, until now the church, inspired by its own opportunities, is erecting a hundred and fifty thousand dollar community house. Another church in a like center has had similar success in the addition of members, and has sent eight fine young men into the ministry and has provided for their education in preparation for the ministry.

There are many cases of this kind. It would be easy to multiply instances that are equally inspiring and encouraging, but this ought to be sufficient to convince any one of the good that is being done by the Centenary money.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE SEASHORE DISTRICT.

The Centenary set up meetings will be held as follows:

Lumberton—Friday Dec. 28, at 11 a.m., for the north end; including Columbia, Columbia Mission, Picayune, Carriere, Poplarville, Lumberton, Brooklyn, Stillmore, and Wiggins.

Gulfport—Friday Jan. 4, at 2:30 p.m., for the south end; including Americus, Escatawpa, Moss Point, Pascagoula, Vancleave, Ocean Springs, Coalville, Mentorium, Biloxi, Gulfport, Long Beach, Bay St. Louis, Wesley Memorial, Saucier, and Logtown.

If for any cause it is more convenient for any to attend the other one it will be all right, provided you notify the pastor at the place where you expect to attend.

Each pastor is requested to bring with him his Centenary treasurer, Sunday school superintendents, lay leaders, Pres. Woman's Missionary Societies, and Pres. Epworth Leagues, and as many more of his leaders as possible.

Please let each pastor notify the pastor where he is to attend of the number he may expect from each charge. Brethren, this is very necessary.

I trust that each one shall feel the responsibility of this meeting and do the very best possible to make it a success.

L. L. ROBERTS, P. E.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE NEWTON DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

On account of the condition of my wife's health, I have been released from the Sharon charge, and have been appointed to do evangelistic work in the Newton District. For the present, and until further notice, my address will be Birmingham, Ala., Box 146 A, Route 8, where those desiring my services may address me.

C. C. GRIFFIN.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE HATTIESBURG AND SEASHORE DISTRICTS.

My address for the year 1924 will be Wiggins, Miss. If there is any place that you need my service on your charge, please make the arrangements with your presiding elder, or send the dates to me and I will arrange with him. I would like to have my program arranged so I can hold some meetings early. I cannot do all of the work in the summer.

J. F. CAMPBELL,
Missionary Evangelist.

HOW "COLLIER OF MANCHESTER" SPENT HIS NIGHTS.

Dr. George Jackson in a recent volume tells the story of the life and work of "Collier of Manchester," a widely known Wesleyan minister. One passage of this appreciative biography shows that Doctor Collier, like John Wesley, required less sleep than most men take. How he spent the hours that are generally devoted to sleep discloses the secret of the fact that while he seemed to give all his time to the great mission he conducted in the heart of Manchester he was nevertheless well read. This is Collier's own account of his nights: "My days are spent largely in the office and in committee, and it must be evident to my brethren that I could not have carried on the spiritual work of my Mission if there had not been another side to my life. God seems to have taken the matter into his own hands, knowing how fully every hour of my time is occupied. The desire and the need for long sleep seem to have been taken away from me. I can not sleep early in the evening, but from twelve to two I generally sleep fairly well, then invariably I wake, and there is no more sleep until six o'clock. At first I used all sorts of means to try to induce sleep but by degrees I accepted the inevitable. I provided myself with a special light and a little table on which I kept a few favorite books, and in that way I get as much quiet reading as many of my brethren. . . At six o'clock I sleep for an hour, and then get up ready for the day's work." —Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

THE FIRST SPARK.

When, therefore, the first spark of a desire after God arises in thy soul, cherish it with all thy care, give all thy heart into it; it is nothing less than a touch of the divine loadstone that is to draw thee out of the vanity of time into the riches of eternity. Get up, therefore, and follow it as gladly as the wise men of the East followed the star from heaven that appeared to them. It will do for thee as the star did for them; it will lead thee to the birth of Jesus—not in a stable at Bethlehem in Judea, but to the birth of Jesus in the dark center of thine own soul.—William Law.

The Eighteenth Amendment is the will of America and must be sustained by the Government and public opinion, else contempt for law will undermine our very foundation.—Warren G. Harding.

On Oct. 11, 1923, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. Ella Taylor and carried her precious mother, MRS. E. J. FEARS, to the home of the blest. This sainted mother has suffered much, but through it all she was ever patient and resigned to the will of God. Her maiden name was Hendricks. She was born near Oak Ridge, Miss., was married to Mr. Robert C. Fears, Dec. 14, 1858. To them were born two children, Mrs. Ella Taylor and Mr. W. C. Fears, both of whom survive her. Her husband died in 1868. In the year of 1870 she moved to Yazoo County, and united with old Mount Olivet Church. She was a most consistent member; whenever it was possible she was at her place in the church. She will be greatly missed, for she was loved by all who knew her. She had a smile for every one, and seemed to love every one. She was laid to rest in Mount Olivet cemetery by the side of her granddaughter, who died twenty-six years before. Gentle, kind, ever thoughtful of others, she won all hearts. Trusting in God's Holy Word, she never faltered in her duty and devoutness as a Christian. When the Master called she was ready to go. She leaves a daughter, son, ten grandchildren, and several great-grandchildren, and many relatives and friends, who will miss her all along life's weary way. May he who says, "I will not leave you comfortless," help us to bow in meek submission to his divine will in this dark hour!

Farewell, dear friend, thou art resting
In the Shepherd's peaceful fold,
By God's grace we all shall meet you
When we cross death's river cold.

MRS. L. J. ABEL.

Mechanicsburg, Miss.

On July 27, 1850, H. MARION BOWIE was born in Choctaw County, Miss. In early life he was converted during a revival meeting at Salem Church, where he joined the church and was a consistent member and a regular attendant during life. Brother Bowie spent his life in this community and was known throughout the county as a fair, just, and honest man in all his dealings with his fellow-man. Brother Bowie was twice married. In 1873 he was married to Miss Jane Blain. To this union were born fourteen children. In 1899 he married Miss Bettie Bowie. To this union six children were born. Brother Bowie suffered very much during his affliction of several years, but it was without a murmur. On Oct. 1, 1923, he was relieved of his suffering and passed to his reward. He loved his family and provided well for them, and cared for his aged mother for fifteen years, when she passed away at the age of ninety-two. Brother Bowie leaves twelve children and two sisters to mourn his departure, and we pray that the comfort of the Holy Ghost may sustain them.

His pastor,

J. A. BIFFLE.

DR. C. K. CARUTHERS was born Jan. 22, 1837, and died Nov. 15, 1923. Dr. Caruthers was married to Miss Pattie J. Ellis, of Bailey Springs, Ala., in January, 1867, and to this union were born five children, two sons and three daughters, all of whom are living; but his wife preceded him to the haven of rest several years ago. He was educated in the old schools, graduated in medicine at the University of Virginia, taking the two-year course in one year, and he finished his studies at the Medical College of Philadelphia in 1858. Dr. Caruthers, at the outbreak of the war, in 1861, enlisted as a private in Company I, Second Confederate Regiment, under Colonel J. D. Martin, of Memphis, and was soon made a lieutenant. On account of bravery at the battle of Shiloh he was made Captain, and was soon thereafter promoted to the command of the First Mississippi Battalion of Sharp Shooters, and commanded this battalion at the battle of Corinth. It was at the battle of Shiloh that the Doctor's sword and orders from his commanding officer were shot from his hand; though the orders were destroyed before he could read them, he turned to his command and ordered them to advance and charge the enemy. Dr. Caruthers had this sword in his possession when he died. Dr. Caruthers saw duty in the Featherstun's Regiment at Vicksburg, Baker's Creek, Jackson, and Meridian, and he was also chosen by General Forrest as senior surgeon of the First Brigade, serving until paroled at Gainesville, Ala., at the close of the war.

Dr. Caruthers was a tender and affectionate husband and father. A truer man never lived than Dr. C. K. Caruthers. He held his friends by the power of a personal grace and transparency of character which made them confident and sure of him. The purity of his life, the loyalty of his service during the reconstruction years following the Civil War, the sacrifices he suffered without murmur for the cause or call of his profession, set forth the life of Dr. Caruthers as a portrait done in rare and beautiful colors, fadeless and immortal, even as the light which adorns his glorified Lord, whom he loved even unto death, and in whom he abides forever.

From the home, on the morning of Nov. 16, the funeral was held by his pastor, Rev. A. C. McCorkle, with some well-chosen words from his old friend, Mr. Will Roseborough, of Senatobia, after which his body was laid to rest in Friendship Cemetery in the midst of a beautiful floral display.

GENERAL EVANGELISTS TO MEET IN ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has an organized form of evangelism. The general evangelists and singers have an annual conference in December. This year this conference meets in Memphis, Tenn., at the Chisca Hotel, Dec. 19 and 20. It is usually a very interesting gathering. The evangelists make their reports and outline their work for another year. It is a time when they exchange ideas and suggest plans and programs for the successful carrying out of the evangelistic movements of the church. The meetings are open to the public, and we should be glad to have any of our pastors living anywehere near Memphis come and enjoy the meetings with us. Some very interesting subjects will be discussed.

The meeting will begin at 9 o'clock the morning of the 19th, and close the night of the 20th. We hope the church will pray that this may be a great occasion when the blessings of God shall be upon these men who are called to be evangelists.

R. L. RUSSELL,
Secretary Bureau of Evangelism.

WHAT THE CENTENARY OWES THE MOUNTAIN SCHOOLS.

By Dr. J. W. Perry, Secretary, Home Department, Board of Missions.

In the Centenary Survey, at the beginning of that Movement, twelve schools called Mountain Schools, or Mission Schools, besides Sue Bennett Memorial and Brevard, were included in the Askings for $50,000 each. Up to this time a little more than three annual payments have been made, leaving a litle less than two, or nearly $20,000 still due to each one of these schools.

For the most part this money has been used to increase and improve the equipment of buildings of these schools. One has had a severe loss by fire and had to rebuild. Others have needed to make enlargements. Others have needed equipment to enable them to do satisfactory work. All have projected their work with the expectation of receiving the full amount of $50,000, as was natural. Some of them have been very greatly handicapped and very much embarrassed because of the tardy payments on Centenary pledges. The money is very sorely needed.

These schools are rendering a very distinct and great service to the church. Last year there were in the twelve something more than seven hundred students who are preparing for the ministry or for some other form of Life Service. A very large number of the ministers of the church get their start toward equipment for their life work in one of these schools. In addition to that, they are giving to many others, who make leading workers in the church in communities, the only preparation they get and but for some such school, a preparation which they would be deprived of.

Surely no better investment can be made than an investment in these schools in view of the dividends which they are declaring for the church.

CONSISTENT WITH GOD.

By Garfield Evans.

There are 17,000,000 automobiles in the world, of which 14,000,000 are in the United States. Last year we spent in purchasing automobiles and their upkeep $8,000,000,000. We have plenty of moey for luxuries. Am I consistent with God?

We are the richest people on the face of the earth. Two-thirds of the bullion gold of the world is in the federal vaults of the United States. At the close of the world war we had on deposit (not capital stock) in our banks fifty billion dollars more than we had at the beginning of the war. The way that we are spending money is evidence that we are so rich that we do not know what to do with it. The Kingdom of God waits for us to invest our money in things that are permanent. Am I consistent with God?

You think that you do not have much of the wealth of America in your pockets. Yet your necessary clothes would cost twice and three times as much if you lived in many parts of the world. Much of the food you waste could not be bought for two to ten times the price you pay. We are rich and don't know it. Am I consistent with God?

The income of Southern Methodists last year was estimated at $1,073,000,000. You have a share of that which is needed for the advancement of God's Kingdom. Am I consistent with God?

He gave himself a ransom for the many. What have I given. Am I consistent with God?

Happiness is not the end of life; character is.—Beecher.

FROM CAPITOL STREET, JACKSON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We are now nicely located in our new home. We have been most graciously received, both by the membership and the people of the city. Our parsonage home has been newly papered throughout, and painted both on the inside and outside, and is being most splendidly furnished throughout. We have never received a more hearty welcome than was given us by the people of the grand old Capitol of Mississippi. We have preached to them now two Sundays. Our audiences have filled the house, even when the skies were letting down heavy rains. We have already received twelve into the membership of the church. We are planning for and expecting a great year. We have found a splendid plant here, well organized, and a most willing people to carry on.

We were strangers here in a social way, but we have already caught the spirit of Mississippi hospitality, and especially of Jackson, and we are confident that our Lord will lead us in a great campaign.

HENRY FELGAR BROOKS, P. C.

FROM AVERA, MISS.

On the night of Nov. 29, there came a storm in our town of some proportions. It centered on the parsonage, but we thank God there was no damage done. It carried in its trall a variety of groceries, and many of the lovely ladies of the community, with a few of the manly men, yes, and an expression in dollars and cents. After several musical selections, rendered by Misses McMaine and Howse, and a Scripture reading and prayer by the pastor, the ladies and gentlemen returned home, leaving the pastor and family happy with their possessions. A gentle breeze blew until Saturday eve, when there came another storm from Piave as black as a Dodge car. It, too, left many groceries in its trall.

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT WORK

Gained Strength, Weight and Now Doing Own Work, by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Marion, Ind.—"I was all run-down, nervous and bent over. I could hardly drag around, let alone do my work. I read some letters in the papers telling what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and I thought I would try it. Then a man told my husband about his wife and what good it had done her and wanted him to have me try it. I took one bottle and could see what it did for me in a week's time, and when I had taken three bottles I had gained both in strength and weight and was doing my own work. I took it before my last baby was born and it helped me so much. I sure am glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who suffers from female ailments, for I know by experience what it can do. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, also the Liver Pills, too, and think them fine."—Mrs. WM. ELDRIDGE, 620 E. Grant Street, Marion, Indiana.

A record of nearly fifty years service should convince you of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

FROM MT. OLIVE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Please allow me a word. Wife and I left Flora, Miss., on the morning of Nov. 30. We arrived in Mt. Olive at 12:30, and found that quite a number of the good Methodist ladies of Mt. Olive had preceded us and had prepared a first-class dinner for us, all hot and on the table, and immediately left us to do as we pleased. My, my! We did justice to it because we were in the right trim for a meal after having driven over 80 miles to get here. About 5 p.m., a big pounding came, with many good things that make a preacher and family happy; and that was not all—they came again the next day, and they continue to come, not only with something to eat, but the ladies brought us three nice rugs, which were very much appreciated and needed.

The lines have fallen to us in pleasant places. We have never been more cordially received than we have been here. May God help us in return to give them the best year's work of our life. We had a good service at Seminary last Sunday at 11 a.m. Pray for us that we may have a great year in the cause of Christ.

Yours in Christ,
J. H. FOREMAN.

Please let every official be present, since we have business of great importance to the church to be transacted at this quarterly conference. The church gives us the opportunity to demonstrate our loyalty to God and His great plan of redemption for the human race. Every call of our great church is but the voice of God to His children to bestir themselves in behalf of world redemption, as becomes those who are sons of God. We had a great year together last year, and I am encouraged to believe that the next twelve months will mark yet greater accomplishments for the Kingdom of God in the Sardis District than were done last year. Pray for me and all other Kingdom workers.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The Board of Missions has assigned to the Mississippi Conference the following attractive missionary specials for those schools that have no specials and have not paid their Centenary offering:

Miss Elizabeth Dean, missionary to Belgium, salary, 48 shares at $25 a share, $1,200.

Miss Byrd Boehringer, missionary to Belgium, salary, 48 shares at $25 a share, $1,200.

Wonsan Christian Hospital, Wonson, Korea, 80 shares at $25 a share, $2,000.

Home Field.

Charles Assaf, missionary evangelist, salary, 40 shares at $25 each, $1,000.

This makes a total of $5,400 at $25 each share.

One of the biggest things that could happen to a Sunday school is to take a "MISSIONARY SPECIAL." Please write and take the whole block of shares that have been assigned to our Conference—216 shares at $25 a share. Surely the Mississippi Conference can do this.

Who will be the first one to apply?

Quarterly reports will be sent you from each special selected.

Let us hear from you.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

THE DEATH OF J. W. CONNERLY.

Dear Dr. Carley: I was called to Gloster, Miss., on Tuesday of this week to assist in the funeral of Brother J. W. Connerly, of that town. He had passed away after a very short illness, and his sudden going away was such a shock to his friends and family. He was a member of one of the most substantial families in South Mississippi, and was born in 1866 in Tylertown, Miss. He was one of the best known and most popular business men of Southwest Mississippi, as he had been a traveling man for several years. He united with the church in early boyhood and virtually grew into one of the most substantial Christian gentlemen it has been my pleasure to know.

He had been a member of the Gloster Methodist church since the day it was organized, in the latter part of the eighties, and had been a faithful official for many years. In early young manhood he married the accomplished daughter of Rev. W. W. Simmons, of the Mississippi Conference, and to them were given four children, three boys and one daughter. Their married life has been an ideal and happy one, and they made a great contribution to the town of Gloster, where they lived from the earliest days of that town's existence. Their boys are among the substantial young men of that section of the country, and the daughter is the accomplished and helpful wife of Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, pastor of the Methodist church of Bogalusa, La., and one of the strong young men of the Louisiana Conference. He was a brother-in-law of Rev. W. W. Cammack, superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, and also brother-in-law of Brother Cammack's brother, who is one of the leading laymen of our church.

A son could not have been more to Brother Simmons, who has lived by Brother Connerly since he retired to the superannuate relation; and especially in these years he has been a stay to Brother Simmons and his faithful companion, the father and mother of Sister Connerly.

The writer of this note has known Brother Connerly for over twenty years, and had the honor to be his pastor two years, and between them has existed a growing friendship from the beginning. The old saying, so often repeated, was truly applicable to him—"He was nature's nobleman," reinforced by the graces of a Christian experience which expressed itself, living a faithful servant of his Master and meeting all the demands of all the relationships he sustained.

He was buried from our church at Gloster at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday, the services being conducted by the pastor, Brother E. D. Simpson, Brother J. L. Smith taking a part, and the writer of this note. The Masonic ritual was used at the grave.

LIBRARIES BY MAIL AND AUTOMOBILE.

In the September issue of "Our World," the director of the Public Library in Washington, George E. Bowerman, tells what provision the nation and State have made to facilitate securing books by people living in the country or small towns which have no library.

"The Library of Congress at Washington—the National Library of the United States—stands ready to furnish lists of references on a large number of topics of public interest. Its service does not, however, include the lending of books to individuals or to clubs, except that it does lend to local libraries for use by scholars, rare and unusual books needed for advanced research work.

"Certain of the States, notably California, have adopted the county as the unit for library organization. The system includes a central collection at the county seat, and branches or stations planted in widely scattered villages, to which frequent deliveries are made by automobiles. In Maryland, the Washington County Free Library, with headquarters at Hagerstown, and in Delaware, the State Library Commission make frequent house-to-house delivireies of books."

Indorses Good Literature Sunday

I noticed in a recent Advocate that we are to have a Good Literature Sunday, January 27, 1924. I want to give my unreserved indorsement to the plan. Several years ago I saw the need of such a day and have been observing it now for some time. It has proved to be one of our most beneficial services.

In 1921, prior to the meeting of the editors of Southern Methodism in the city of Columbia, S. C., I brought before our Upper South Carolina Conference a memorial to the General Conference looking toward action by that body to set aside permanently one Sunday in the year to be known as Christian Literature Sunday. The brethren of the Conference, seeing things otherwise, voted not to send the memorial to the General Conference.

It is a great day and can be made a bulwark against the inroads of the cheap, unorthodox literature that is now flooding the country. I am glad it has the indorsement of the editors of Southern Methodism and the bishops. We are planning to make it a great day.

W. Y. COOLEY, Pastor.

CHRISTMAS AT ST. MARK'S.

Just a word from St. Mark's to let you know our plans for dispensing Christmas cheer.

On Dec. 15, the first party will be held for the sewing school. So far, 125 have been enrolled, but of this number only those who have made a certain attendance record, about 90, will be invited. After a pleasant hour spent playing games, they will be served refreshments, and will also receive a sewing bag, in which will be placed scissors, thread, needles and a thimble. The sewing school has increased at least 50% this year. A competent corps of volunteer teachers come every Saturday afternoon, and but for their services the sewing school would not be possible.

A party of women is scheduled for the afternoon of the 19th. This group meets once a week and is under the auspices of the D. A. R. Some Americanization work is being done, together with sewing and other handwork. Then the social feature enters in, as these mothers seldom get out of the home for any kind of recreation. They enter into games with the zest of children; so, for that reason, plenty of games will be on the program.

One of the oldest groups in this institution is that of the Campfire Girls. They have met regularly for years, and have been faithful to the program as outlined in the national organization, which prepares girls to be good home-makers, clean in mind and strong of body. They propose to give their mothers a banquet which they themselves will prepare, with the help of Miss Young, on the night of the 21st. This brings mother and daughter together in a way that is mutually helpful, as was proven on a similar occasion last year and year before.

Santa Claus is scheduled to appear at a party for the juniors, primaries and beginners of the Sunday school on Saturday afternoon, the 22nd. No pains will be spared to make this a happy occasion for the Sunday school boys and girls below intermediate age. Of course Santa will bring presents for everybody, so 'nuf said.

Every Sunday evening the Epworth League meets for an informal supper, and along with the feed so far have gone pep songs, jokes, funny stories, etc.—plenty of amusement for everybody. Since this program has been followed, the attendance has gone from five or six to twenty-five or thirty. As soon as supper is over, the devotional meeting begins, and this is followed by Mission study, "The Choice of a Career" being the book used. On Sunday night, the 23rd, a better meal will be served, not as pretentious as a banquet, but a "good feed," and, instead of fun, along with it will be Christmas songs, because a group of these young people, together with St. Mark's workers, will start out at 5 o'clock Christmas morning singing carols. This has been done in other years, and the people appreciate it very much. Last year one lady said when she woke up: "I thought it was the angels singing." It is worth while to turn the attention of people heavenward at this glad season. There seems to be no other time to get the group together to practice carols except after the meal Sunday night, but they will not mind after having had a real good supper.

> "The people called Methodists must be educated in the program of the Church until its membership everywhere will have an intelligent interest in the supreme things for which it stands. This cannot be done until we raise up a generation that reads the Advocates of the Church."—Bishop W. N. Ainsworth.
> Now is a good time to plan for GOOD LITERATURE SUNDAY. Supplies will be sent you from Lamar & Barton, Agents, Nashville, Tenn.

The best is saved for the last. Many people come to church Christmas time who never darken the door otherwise. They come to be entertained, maybe, but there is an opportunity to give them a real message such as will be presented in the pageant—Bethlehem—on Christmas eve. This is given by the young people, most of whom are Leaguers. Too much cannot be said commending this effort on their part. You are invited to be present on any or all of these occasions. The purpose of all this is to acquaint you with the plans and thus give you an opportunity to come, not wait till afterwards and tell you what a fine time we had. Many of you will be at your own church service perhaps on the night of the 24th, at 8 o'clock; but if for any reason you are not, come to the pageant at St. Mark's. There will not be any presents given at that time to the Sunday school pupils; no, but there will be opportunity for the giving of gifts by every one present. The pageant is calculated to induce reverence and worship, and at the close every one will be expected to bring a gift to the King, whose birthday the world celebrates—not gifts of money alone, but also gifts or pledges of gifts of life and service—in other words, a white gift service. That is why the children will receive their gifts on Saturday afternoon at their party. The distribution of gifts always causes more or less confusion, which destroys the beauty and solemnity of the Christmas worship service. There will be one purpose, and only one, in the pageant Christmas eve—to worship the King. Come and join with us.

One more word (the preachers' "in conclusion"): Extra money is needed here as at other places for Christmas. With all the plans, and they are many because of the large number served here, those of us in charge have tried to keep within reason. We are doing only what absolutely needs to be done, not as much as is usually done in places of this kind. We usually receive free-will offerings from Missionary Societies and individuals at this season, but so far none has come this year. However, judging from the generosity of our friends in the past, we believe necessary funds will come from somewhere. What about it?

BERTA ELLISON.

A WARNING.

Treasury officials estimate that 5,000 deaths from bad liquor have occurred in the United States since Jan. 1, 1923. The same officials predict that another 1,000 persons will die from the same cause before the end of the holidays.

Some will read this warning as a joke, some will label it "DRY PROPAGANDA," others will heed the warning.

Better a "DRY CHRISTMAS" at home than a "QUIET NEW YEAR IN THE HOSPITAL OR THE CEMETERY."

Southern Editors Unite to Secure Co-Operation Between Races.

Editors of leading daily papers in six of the Southern States have united in a signed statement asking for mutual helpfulness and co-operation between the white and Negro races in the South for adequate educational advantages for colored people, for equality before the law, and for the abatement of mob violence. The paper was drafted in a conference of Virginia editors and has since been signed personally by more than fifty other editors of leading dailies in North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi, and Louisiana. Practically every man to whom it was presented readily attached his name. It is believed, therefore, with few exceptions, it fairly represents the attitude of the Southern people as a whole.

The statement submitted to each editor and signed by each carried the thought that as the Negroes of the South are largely dependent upon the white press for current news of the day, it would be well if even greater effort was made to publish news of a character which is creditable to the Negro, showing his development as a people along desirable lines, thus stimulating him to try to attain a higher standard of living. It is further stated in the article that if the entire mass of people, including both races, were educated, industrial problems would adjust themselves automatically, and the less fit of either race would find the work and place for which he was best equipped.

In the harmonious co-operation of the thoughtful and exemplary men and women of both races lies the prospect of larger understanding and better inter-racial relations.

In view of this attitude taken by the secular press, the following resolution was adopted:

"The Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Council in session notes with gratification the statement in the Nashville Tennessean, Sunday morning, Oct. 29, of the stand taken by the editors of the leading dailies of the South on the question of co-operation between the white and Negro races; pledging themselves to stand for adequate educational advantages for colored people, for equality before the law, for the abatement of mob violence; to this end purposing to put forth greater effort to publish news of a creditable character showing development of the Negro race.

"It is our conviction that the power of the press in shaping public opinion is unequaled by any other agency, and that herein lies the greatest hope for the harmonious adjustment of all forces which are tending to a break between the two races; therefore, be it

"Resolved: 1. That we express our appreciation and gratitude for this far-reaching movement, hailing it as a forerunner of a new day for our Southland.

"2. That we pledge ourselves to co-operate in every way, helping to create such public sentiment as will further the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in the resolutions signed by the fifty-six editors of the Southern press."

Harvest Day Is Here.

Do not fail to plan for an ingathering of members and of money on Harvest Day. Order "The Missionary Society Listens In" or "The Missionary Society That Could Not Pay Out," to use in making your program.

One more month of 1923 in which to double. Make Harvest Day count for new members.

FROM LELAND, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: I will say that we now have a roof on our new building, and we hope to be able to worship in it by the early spring of 1924.

The church is modern and meets all the Sunday school requirements for an A-grade school. Every department will have its own assembly. It has a three-story Sunday school department.

We have had 97 accessions to the church this year, and one man and his wife have gone to Africa as missionaries (Dr. W. B. Lewis). All the organizations of the church are at work. We have three Epworth Leagues. The Woman's Missionary Society is fine.

There has been raised on finances for the year $56.38 for every man, woman, and child in the church. God is with the good folk, and we are happy.

FROM POTTS CAMP, MISS.

Our new pastor, Brother McDougal, reached us in due time, and was given a cordial reception.

He has already won his way into the hearts of the people, by his genial smile and affable disposition. He has entered auspiciously upon his duties. He filled his pulpit last Sunday, and brought us a great and inspiring message.

We have an active Missionary Society, and enthusiastic Sunday school, which will co-operate with the pastor in all his work.

We have our hearts set, and we are planning and praying that this may be a great year for this church as well as the whole circuit.

"MEMBER."

METHODISM IN SHREVEPORT.

Dear Brother Carley: You will be interested to know that Methodism in Shreveport still holds its place in the sun, and the sun is shining. Goodrich has received a royal welcome at First; Holmes at Noel and his people are planning large things for the coming year; Alford and Texas Avenue are already in love; Smith at Queensboro is girding himself for the work before him, and good reports come from this quarter; Henderson, Jr., at Claiborne Avenue, our latest born child, is alert and busy; Roy at Bossier City—who ever heard of Roy failing?

Dr. R. H. Wynn is watchful, busy, and no doubt, as captain of the Lord's hosts in these parts, will aid and abet every good thing. We old fellows—Crews, Sloan, Henderson, and I—are looking on and scotching occasionally. Come up here and celebrate Christmas with us. This is a goodly land and all the giants are in the pulpits.

S. J. DAVIES.

WHERE I COME IN.

Some church members are prepared and can serve efficiently in almost any official capacity—but not all.

Some church members are gifted with the ability to teach and are wonderfully successful in teaching boys and girls the Word of God—but not all.

Some church members are gifted in public prayer, and on the wings of petition can soar into the very presence of God—but not all.

Some church members are peculiarly adapted to meeting strangers with a Christian cordiality that wins them for Christ—but not all.

There is one thing that every member can do—GIVE, and this is something the church cannot get along without. I may not be able to give as much as some others. I must give not according to what others give, but according to what I have. Everybody can give something. It is as much my duty to pay a tenth of the dime I have as it is the duty of my brother to give a tenth of the million he has. Here is where I come in.—Bulletin, Noel Memorial Methodist Church.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry
For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare, and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A CORRECTION.

I have been informed by Rev. D. W. Babb that it was Rev. D. L. Cogwell who received Dr. J. A. Hall into the Methodist Church, instead of Brother Babb, as was stated in the memoir of Brother Hall.

I make this correction at the request of Brother Babb.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interferance with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.—Adv.

WHAT BECOMES OF THE CENTENARY DOLLAR.

By Elmer T. Clark.

Managing a $35,000,000 business on a 8 per cent expense basis is quite a task. Many business houses congratulate themselves and declare an extra dividend when they can keep their operating expenses down to a 20% basis. The fact that the Methodist Missionary Centenary is operating on 8% should be a cause for general rejoicing throughout the church, and considered a monument to the efficiency and economy of the Centenary officials.

In a statement issued by the Centenary Commission, it has been figured to a mathematical certainty that ninety-two cents out of every dollar paid into the Centenary gets into active missionary work.

An equal amount is spent in home and foreign fields—45 cents out of each dollar goes both to foreign and home fields. Every possible phase of missionary work is entered into, settlement work, education, evangelism, and all the rest in eleven foreign countries and in the cities and rural sections of the United States.

The scope of the missionary work and the efficiency of the Methodist church has increased threefold since the advent of the Centenary, records show. This appears truly a remarkable record. since the Methodist church has always been known as the "Missionary Church."

In spite of many handicaps, the work of the church has prospered, and when one stops to think of the increase, and at the same time remembers that though this is the fifth and last year of the Centenary collection, only one-half of the pledges have been met, the results obtained appear phenomenal.

It is to be hoped that in the approaching campaign during December and January for the collection of Centenary pledges, all pledges will be paid up to date, and that every Conference will meet its quota. The time has come when substantial payments must be made, if the work is to go on. Too much has been accomplished, too much money has been invested, to let up until the task has been finished.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

LEADERS MUST BE LIKABLE.

This simple paragraph, fallen upon at random during a day's reading, is worth a moment's thought: "The leaders of to-morrow will have to be likable. Are you trying to qualify?" Large progress of any kind hinges upon leadership—real leadership, not assumed or self-appointed leadership. Real leadership implies, of course, the possession of the ability to lead; but an unpopular man makes a mighty poor leader, no matter what other qualities he possesses. It is a tragedy for any man who lacks the ability to make himself liked to be put in a position of leadership. How much greater is the tragedy when such a man lacks even the disposition to make himself likable! An unpopular leader makes an unpopular cause. Many a good cause has been hindered because its leaders were unacceptable to the people, while, on the other hand, many an unworthy cause has had large success because its leaders studied to make themselves personally popular. No good man will put personal popularity above adherence to principle; but he handicaps himself and his cause tremendously when he forgets that a man may be good and gracious at the same time. "The leaders of to-morrow will have to be likable. Are you trying to qualify?"

ON KNOWING A MAN.

In his new book, "The Character of Paul," just from the press, Dr. Charles E. Jefferson assumes to speak with full knowledge of his subject. We think he has a right to do so. He says in the introduction: "For over thirty years, Paul has been one of my favorite heroes. Through all that time, I have lived with him almost constantly. For thirteen years of my life, I made it my practice each succeeding year to carry away with me for the summer one of his letters and make it my special study. Through my vacation months he was my daily companion. I read the letter again and again. I read everything of value on the letter which I could find, meditated on its contents, pondered the problems it suggested, communed with the spirit of the man who wrote it, prepared a sermon on it, and finally made out a list of a hundred questions for the assistance of my people in their study of it through the following year. In this way Paul became to me more and more a living man. I feel I know him better than I know any other man who ever lived."

Apart from what is in the rest of the book—and it is immensely well worth reading whether one agrees with the author or not—this Introduction is worth a great deal more than the cost of the volume because it tells us how to know a man. Some men are not worth knowing; others, the better we known them, the better men we are. We come to know men by living with them—not merely forming a casual acquaintance, but by spending days and months and years with them, trying to see things from their point of view, trying to think their thoughts, trying to catch the inspiration that stirred their souls and made them great teachers and leaders in great movements. The Supreme Man is Jesus Christ. We do not know Him as well as we ought to know Him because—is it possible?—we do not live with Him as we ought to live with Him.

WISHING AND WORKING.

It is one thing to sit down quietly and wish for the realization of hopes and dreams that have to do with the betterment of the world; it is another thing to pull off one's coat and roll up one's sleeves and go to work in dead earnest to bring that realization about. The hoping and the dreaming and the wishing are necessary parts of the accomplishment of any great program, but they are not the only parts. They enter into the planning, but it is work that puts the plan into operation. It is said that Napoleon would sit for hours dreaming of the things he would like to see come to pass; and then, in the most careful and matter-of-fact way, work out in detail the steps it would be necessary for him to take in order to make his dreams come true. Some men are great dreamers—but they are only dreamers; other men are gerat workers—but they are only workers. The highest mark of genius is the ability both to dream and to work. For those who can, the whole matter is summed up in the familiar injunction, "Plan your work, and work your plan."

IN FAVOR OF THE CHURCH-GOER.

We came across this little quotation the other day from an article in the Hardware Age, written by Saunders Norvell, chairman of the board of McKesson & Robbins, New York City:

"Have you ever noticed how prosperous as a general rule church-going people are? You may think that such people are dull. They may not be entertaining, but it is surprising how the general average of religious people, no matter what denomination, prosper in life. There are reasons for this. Church-going people have formed habits of life that make them very efficient workers, and they do not waste what they accumulate."

This is looking at religion from a pretty low plane—that of material prosperity—but it is worth something. Most city pastors have a good many calls to help people financially—the unfortunate, the down-and-outers, dependents generally; very seldom do such people have a consistent record of church-going. Not all prosperous people are religious, but most genuinely religious people are able to make a living.

BROADCASTING THE BIBLE.

A group of Christian men in Cincinnati, Ohio, have formed a company for the purpose of giving to the world daily a message from the Word of God by radio broadcasting. This is simply another evidence that Christian people are zealously eager to make use of every possible means for spreading the gospel story. It is estimated that a daily average of 11,160,180 people "listen in" through the radio. Many of them, of course, will not "pick up" the stations from which the Bible messages are being sent out, but many, many thousands of them will, and there is no estimating the good that will result from this form of evangelism. The Radio Bible Service Bureau, as it is known, is not a commercial organization in any sense—it has nothing for sale, it is supported entirely by voluntary contributions, and it is undenominational and non-sectarian. There is something thrilling in the thought that the message of salvation will be always floating through the air, to be heard by those who will, around the world.

IT CAN'T BE BOUGHT.

Something of a sensation was produced throughout the nation several weeks ago through the revelation of the fact that high school "diplomas" were being sold by unscrupulous persons to prospective students of "medical" colleges, which, upon presentation of these "diplomas, would later sell them "medical diplomas." These fraudulent transactions have, of course, turned loose upon the country some hundreds of people who are utterly unfit, both technically and morally, to occupy any kind of position of responsibility. The fundamental error underlying these fraudulent activities, apart from their moral obloquy, is that knowledge, experience, skill can be bought for so much cash, without any further effort on the part of the purchaser. It is, in effect, the old fallacy that something can be had for nothing. A man who knows nothing of medicine would certainly be a poor specimen of a practicing physician. Likewise a man who knows nothing of experimental religion is a mighty poor specimen of a Christian.

WICKED WASTE.

A well known industrial engineer has recently said that if the managers of industry would make use of known devices and methods of conserving materials and power and raising production standards, industry could be made so profitable that even the unskilled wage-earner might have an income equivalent to $10,000 a year. If his contention is true, our leaders of industry stand charged with either gross ignorance or gross mismanagement. It is probably true, though, that most of us waste a great deal of time and other valuable commodities that might easily be turned into profit. It is a lesson worth learning that wastefulness is wickedness.

THE HANDS OF GOD.

By S. H. Shurtleff.

The hands of God are strong, strong hands;
They are strong as the rock-ribbed hills;
They swing out the earth with invisible bands,
And still the storm's wrath as he wills.

The hands of God are skillful hands;
They are skilled as the thought of man;
They mold the frost-flakes in north lands,
Or build worlds to a grand, cosmic plan.

The hands of God are tender hands;
They are tender as lips of love;
They open the buds by the brooklet strands,
And mother the nestling dove.

The hands of God are fierce, fierce hands;
They are fierce as a she-wolf at bay;
They fight to death, if the right demands,
And none are so loyal as they.

They are the hands of Love, are the hands of God;
Their palms are all bleeding and scarred;
They were nailed to the cross, were smote with the rod,
But the Gates of Life they unbarred.

JOHN WESLEY AS A BOOKMAN.

By Lorne Pierce.

James Beattie once said, "The aim of education should be to teach us rather how to think than what to think—rather to improve our minds so as to enable us to think for ourselves than to load the memory with the thoughts of others." This sounds almost trite and commonplace, and yet it is the very thing that is constantly being lost sight of in these days of compound-complex curricula. One book, lovingly, leisurely and thoughtfully absorbed is worth all the books in the research library. One sunset caught up into the mind, the glory of an autumn day secreted in the heart, the haunting sound of the cataract, and the wild notes of the woods in mating time, throbbing in one's pulse; no art gallery or conservatory can surpass these. And this was the secret of John Wesley's greatness as a bookman.

It is an interesting fact that nearly all great preachers have been great bookmen. Their names come trooping into our minds, Spurgeon, Beecher, Canning, Brooks, Dawson, Hillis, Jowett, Robertson, MacLaren, Roberts and Hutton; while the ministry of Canada has been rich in them and our own church not least. Not only have these men been anxious to share the delight they have discovered in books, but they realized that their greatest work could be accomplished in the atmosphere of a piety graced and enriched by a more widely diffused culture. A Lincoln may perform miracles with only three books at his disposal, the Bible, Shakespeare and Aesop's Fables, but there are few Lincolns among us.

Not only does a knowledge and love of books strengthen piety, but from the days of the Fathers, the Reformation and the Wesleyan Revival, the kindling fires of religious enthusiasm have also signaled the new day of enlightenment, the light that is reflected from the page of a good book. Conspicuous among all these stands out the work of John Wesley. He was born into an atmosphere of good reading. His father's library was well stocked, but it was his mother who knew where the choicest things were to be found and how they could be made most tempting. Oxford could only confirm, strengthen and amplify what had already become a passion, and we shall see how it entered into and determined much of what was greatest in his work.

Not least among the many agencies adopted and instituted by John Wesley for the diffusion of knowledge and the development of a fuller and a richer life was the fostering and extension of wholesome reading. He had to create a taste for reading among those humble folk who formed his first associates and helpers. Developing its own ritual and discipline and composing its own hymns, it was but a step to the founding of its own book room and publishing house. Consequently in the old Foundry in Moorfields a press was set up, a book room opened and a tract society instituted.

"Having a desire," writes Wesley, "to furnish poor people with cheaper, shorter and plainer books than any I have seen, I wrote many small tracts, generally a penny a piece; and afterwards several larger. Some of these had such a sale as I never thought of; and by this means I unaware became rich." His riches, however, went to charity and back into the publishing enterprise again, and in time it has become one of the largest concerns of its kind in the British Empire. In 1789 the Methodist Book Concern was established in Philadelphia with $600 borrowed capital. In 1804 it was removed to New York, and in 1839 a Western Methodist Book Concern was started in Cincinnati, making one of the largest and best book publishing houses in the United States. In 1829 Egerton Ryerson, with $1700 invested by seventeen Methodist preachers started the first book and publishing house in Canada. This was the original and only capital and to-day it is still the oldest and quite the largest publishing house in Canada. These three publishing houses supply the needs of English-speaking Methodism the world over, as well as successfully competing in the general book and publishing business.

In August, 1777, Wesley projected the Arminian Magazine. "It was," says Robert Southey, "one of the first four religious magazines which sprang from the resuscitated religion of the age, and which began this species of periodical publications in the Protestant world." This magazine is still published and is the oldest religious periodical in the world.

"The list of Wesley's own contributions to literature fills forty-four columns in Steven's Life, English Edition. They embraced books and book lists of a great variety of subjects, including a Christian Library of fifty volumes, beginning with the translations of the Apostolic Fathers; text books on English, Latin, Greek, Hebrew and French grammar; compendiums of logic and rhetoric; an English dictionary; short histories of England and Rome; expurgated editions of classic authors; selections from Corderius and Erasmus, and other works." (Withrow.) His tracts and leaflets fell from his pen with such profusion that he likened them to "leaves in autumn." These essays not only kept his preachers informed, but supplied that mental food which his people required as well. They were the forerunners of countless such experiments to reach the people through penny papers, and to supply the people with good reading at insignificant prices.

There is no better way in which one may see John Wesley in the light of a bookman than to read marvelous records of his life in his journals and correspondence. He had said to his preachers with all the earnestness of which he was capable, "Carry them (books) with you through every town. Exert yourselves in this. Be not ashamed; be not weary; leave no stone unturned." Wherever he himself went he left behind him books and more books. Peter Bohler, who it was that convinced Wesley of unbelief, on one occasion said to him, "My brother, my brother, that philosophy of yours must be purged away." And Wesley, bookman and scholar as he was, plainly tells us that he was unable to understand him. Indeed, the founder of the Methodist Societies never tried that impossible feat of attempting to satisfy the spirit while insulting the intellect.

It is significant that Wesley found a place for reading in his rules for the Societies, reading being coupled, as was quite natural, with meditation and with prayer. Of these many rules he charges them to mind every point, great and small, and that to do this successfully "you will need all the sense you have: and to have all your wits about you!" But this admonition was not enough and he drew up a time table for his preachers which is a model of its kind and one that bears studying. He advises them to rise as often as possible at four, but at any rate from six to twelve, allowing an hour for breakfast," to read and pray, "first, the Christian Library, and other books which we have published in prose and verse, and then those which we recommended in our Rules of Kingswood School." And again he raises the point by asking why the people under their care are no better, and one of the main reasons is that they have not been sufficiently diligent. May I quote the whole of this remarkable passage: "But why are we not knowing more? Because we are idle. We forget our very first rule. 'Be diligent.' . . . Which of you spends as many hours a day in God's work, as you did formerly in man's work? We talk, talk, talk. . . . We must absolutely cure this evil, or betray the cause of God. But how? Read the most useful books and that regularly and constantly. Steadily spend all the morning in this employ, or at least five hours in the four and twenty. 'But I read only the Bible.' Then you ought to teach others to read only the Bible, and by parity of reason, to hear only the Bible; but if so, you need preach no more. Just so said George Bell. And what is the fruit? Why, now he neither reads the Bible, nor anything else. This is rank enthusiasm. If you need no book but the Bible you are got above St. Paul. He wanted others, too. 'Bring the books,' says he, 'but especially the parchments'; those wrote on parchment. 'But I have no taste for reading.' Contract a taste for it by use, or return to your trade. 'But I have no books.' I will give each of you as fast as you will read them, books to the value of five pounds. . . . The sum is, go into every house in course, and teach every one therein, young and old, if they belong to us, to be Christians, inwardly and outwardly. . . . What patience, what love, what knowledge is requisite for this!"

And the secret of his own breadth and tolerance, his detachment and sympathy was to be found in his love of books. In a letter 1748 he outlines his suggestions for a Christian Library: "I have had some thoughts of printing, on a finer paper, and with a larger letter, not only all that we have published already, but, it may be, all that is most valuable in the English tongue, in threescore or fourscore volumes, in order to provide a complete library for those that fear God." The first volume of this Library was issued in the next year, and the last nine of fifty volumes in 1755. In order that you may see how it was done I take these entries from his Journals.

Monday, Sept. 24, 1750: "I reached Kingswood in the evening; and the next day selected passages of Milton for the eldest children to transcribe and repeat weekly." Wednesday, Oct. 3: "I revised for the use of children, Archbishop Potter's 'Grecian Antiquities.'" Thursday, Oct. 4: "I revised Mr. Lewis' 'Hebrew Antiquities." Saturday, Oct. 6: "I nearly finished the abridgment of Dr. Cave's 'Primitive Christianity'; a book wrote with as much learning and as little judgment as any I remember to have read in my whole life." Thursday, Oct. 11: "I prepared a short 'History of England' for the use of the children; and on Friday and Saturday a short 'Roman History,' as an introduction to the Latin historians." Monday, Oct. 15: "I read over Mr. Holmes' 'Latin Grammar,' and extracted from it what was needful to perfect my own."

These publishing ventures became so vast and demanded so much time that in 1752 Thomas Butts and William Briggs were set apart as the first Book Stewards of Methodism. Even in those days publishers had their difficulties. After the printing was done and the bills paid, little was left. What was to be done—cheaper labor or higher priced books? The last answer has not yet been given. But the thing to remember is that Methodism was founded by a bookman of the very highest type, and that to him piety and culture were one and inseparable. He placed books in the hands of his preachers. He scattered them as seed broadcast wherever he went. And in a foundry where revivals had once been held, he set up his printing presses to multiply books and still more books. We need point the tale with no moral save to remark that he who would be an evangelist and the bearer of good news in Wesley's sense should further enhance his ministry and his message by being also the bearer of books, good books, whole libraries of books, "for those that fear God."—Christian Guardian.

A NEW YEAR'S MEDITATION: CREED AND CHARACTER.

By Rev. Joseph A. Smith.

Character is the soul's vesture woven on the loom of life; its warp is faith and its woof is works, but the strength of the fabric is purpose.

"Are we no other than a moving row
Of magic shadow-shapes that come and go
Round with the sun-illumined lantern held
In midnight by the Master of the show?"

Fatalism does not fit into modern thought and idealism. It does not satisfy the profound consciousness of personal freedom inherent to the human spirit, and it cannot answer the deep sense of moral obligation felt by every man.

Man, a Free Thinker.

Man is a free thinker. It is a glorious sovereignty which he shares with God. His thoughts crystalize into convictions; his convictions form his creed; his creed reflects his character. The man that has no creed has no character, for he is without conviction, without any philosophy of conduct, has no sense of ethics—he is either an idiot or a mental and moral anarchist.

Destiny is potential in thought. Wisdom as well as logic supports the oft-repeated sequence, "Sow a thought and reap an act; sow an act and reap a habit; sow a habit and reap a character; sow a character and reap a destiny."

Believe something and believe it devoutly. Let it be the faith that lies at the base of your life. Find its spirit and its power in the matchless personality of the man of Galilee, who spoke as never man spoke, and lived as never man lived. Make your creed broad, deep and high. Touch not the fringe of human interest but the very heart of life. Make it social as well as spiritual. Enrich it with sentiment, ennoble it with idealism, glorify it with faith and love—but withal insist upon its being rational, practical, and livable.

A New Year's Creed.

I BELIEVE

in the fatherhood of God and in the brotherhood of man.

I BELIEVE

that the home, the church, and the school are the corner stones in the temple of our national life.

I BELIEVE

in political democracy, social equality, and religious liberty.

I BELIEVE

in the inestimable value of human life, the sacredness of personality, and the essential worth of true manliness.

I BELIEVE

in the rights of property, the freedom of speech, and in the universal application of the Golden Rule.

I BELIEVE

in the dignity of labor, the joy of service, and the beneficent ministries of mercy.

I BELIEVE

in the divine sovereignty of the will and the majesty of self-control.

I BELIEVE

in an open mind, a loving heart, and a helping hand.

I BELIEVE

in the sanity of laughter, the therapeutics of recreation, and the hygiene of sunshine and fresh air.

I BELIEVE

in the rare virtues of modesty, chivalry, consistency, and tact.

I BELIEVE

in the psychology of cheerfulness, the philosophy of the second mile, and the fine art of simplicity.

I BELIEVE

in the voice of conscience, the obligations of altruism, and the mandates of character.

I BELIEVE

in an adventurous faith, a courageous hope, and a dynamic love.

I BELIEVE

in the superiority of gentleness, the moral excellence of sincerity, and the divinity of forgiveness.

I BELIEVE

in the high privilege of reciprocity, the beatitude of friendship, and the spirituality of vicarious sacrifice.

I BELIEVE

in the beauty of holiness and the holiness of beauty, the science of religion and the religion of science, the works of faith and the faith of works.

I BELIEVE

in the deity of Christ: that He is the Revealer of God, the Redeemer of man, the norm of truth, the pattern of life, and the Conqueror of death.

THE ICE AGE.

By Rev. H. W. Rickey.

The past grand masters of prevarication swing preposterous time age-clocks. They have no conscience in disagreeing among themselves by fabulous figures. Their age periods rest upon no rock-strata facts.

Moreaux, in 1921, showed their extrordinary estimates contradict fossil facts and that man has been here only a few thousand years. The apostle of materialism, Albert Lange, said: "When the geologist Fraas comes down to periods embraced by six thousand years, we have no facts to oppose him." Sollas insists on not more than 7,000 years. Wright presents strong evidence that five thousand years covers the facts concerning man. DeGeers exhibits nine thousand years as sufficient. Kare Frank confesses very little faith in the methods used to determine the age of the earth-strata. Ranke avowed that "the oldest traces do not reach back prior to the Deluge." Roberts decided that the celebrated Grand Pressigny remains are only the ruins of an eighteenth century musket flint factory. Troyon judges that the Lake dwellers cannot be dated back beyond 1,500 B. C. Boyd Dawkins proved that man lived in caves to a late period, and thousands of Frenchmen, by necessity, are cave dwellers now. Such men as Bey, Branca, Beale, Paulson, Gandry, Evans, and a score of like authorities, apply a recentness to human fossils that is quite upsetting. John Reid found a petrified woman in Nevada that was proved to have been buried six years, yet the petrifaction was perfect. Fossils do not record their age.

Wiser studies of flints, skulls, deep-cut rivers; the radical unlikeness of dry land strata as compared with deep sea beds now forming; continental shore lines; the tremendous beds of all kinds of fossils mixed up together; the upside-down and other amazing contradictions concerning strata and fossil positions; the tragic proofs of instant death overtaking vast numbers of species; the shocking shrinkage in size of species as compared with the giant specimens of their kind in former days; the earth-wide reversal of climate, land and sea, the overwhelming proofs of continental deluges—these and other startling discoveries, put immense shortening in the Man-age estimates.

Winchell taught: "Man has no place till the close of the reign of the ice-cap. It has been imagined that the reign of the ice sheet dates back a hundred thousand years There is no evidence of this. Geologic events which we had formerly supposed to be located far back in the history of things are found to have transpired at our very doors." Gilbert fixes the age of man at ten thousand years. Penck sees only 5,500 years. Woodward's careful corrections fix the retreat of Niagara Falls seven thousand years. Wright places the seven-mile recession of Saint Anthony at seven thousand years.

Haynes, the authority on cave relics, judges that "the evidence for the antiquity of man on the hypothesis of evolution is pure speculation." Reinach canvasses the comical conjectures in his "La Prehistorique" and concludes that "the facts bring us back to historic dates." Glacial authorities, such as Croil, Salisbury, Adhemar Hall, Upham, Andrews, Prestwich, Wright, put the retreat of the all freezing ice-cap at from five to twelve thousand years ago. So sudden was the advent of the ice-age that long-haired mammoths were frozen solid in the act of eating.

Dennert advises us that "no conclusive proof of the descent theory is yet forthcoming." Haberlandt's experiments abolish any mechanical explanation of the matter of plant growth. Fleichmann shattered the Descent system on the anvil of his logic. Steinmann finds "it impossible to bring the Descent system into agree with the realities of plant or animal life." Bateson, as honest as he is clear, decides that "modern research lends not the smallest sanction or encouragement to the view of gradual evolution." Lionel Beale avows: "There is not at this time the shadow of scientific evidence."

The destructive criticism advances from the side of informed investigators. The opposition is not because it does not square with the Holy Bible, but because its deductions and assertions are born of ignorance, fraud, forgery, down-right lying. The critics of evolution are not ignorant fools, who believe that the earth is flat and the sky a dome studded with diamonds; but the most able of scientists.

Lord Kelvin said: "I marvel at the undue haste with which professors in our colleges and preachers in our pulpits restate truth in terms of Evolution, while Evolution itself remains an unproved hypothesis."

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

By Dr. D. M. Key, Vice President.

Millsaps College is the Conference college of the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences of the Methodist Church. It is the only A-grade college of the Methodist Church in Mississippi; in fact, there is only one other A-grade college for men, except State institutions, in the territory extending from Memphis to the Gulf and from Birmingham on the east to Dallas on the west. In this territory there are several million white people and thousands of accredited high schools. The secondary schools are improving rapidly, and State institutions are utterly inadequate to take care of the graduates who each year are looking forward to a college education. A rapidly increasing number of students wish, preliminary to their professional training, to secure a thorough liberal arts course in an atmosphere of pure scholarship and culture, rather than among the thousands who are seeking industrial and vocational drill. They will not be content to seek this culture in the North and East as the South has done for generations.

With the growth of Jackson and this territory, a great local patronage is assured for Millsaps. More than half of the graduates of the city high school who go to college enroll in Millsaps. Year by year the college is increasing its service to the city as the center of culture, the focus of the intellectual life, and the crown of Jackson's splendid educational system. The organized intellectual life and culture of the college are an essential part of the modern urban community. What Vanderbilt is to Nashville, what Tulane is to New Orleans, and "Tech" to Atlanta, Millsaps is to Jackson.

The faculty of Millsaps are recognized throughout the South for their thorough university training and scholarship. These men are of the new type of scholar, being not only specialists in their own departments, but practical men, prominent in the civic clubs and organizations of the city and in all kinds of public service.

The physical plant of the college is modern and commodious and most advantageously situated among the hills of North Jackson. The Administration building of red and buff brick trimmed in stone, commanding the eminence and looking across the valley to the West Capitol Street heights, is one of the handsomest buildings in the city. In a similar way the new and modern dormitories on the south side overlook the downtown district with the great dome of the new capitol in the foreground. The 100 acres owned by the college afford abundant room and opportunity for expansion and beautification, and constitute a setting for the college activities that will always be beautiful, expansive and restful.

The social and institutional life of the college is on a high plane. Various student organizations give expression to the varied interests of students—the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A., the DeMolays, the Greek letter fraternities, the Galloway and Lamar Literary Societies, as well as the various forms of athletics and the different student publications. The Purple and White and the Bobashela have been the training camp upon which the Jackson dailies have drawn for many Millsaps-trained writers. The Daily News and the Clarion-Ledger are largely manned by Millsaps students and graduates.

The moral and religious influences surrounding the college are fine and almost unique. The faculty is made up of men of scientific training and practical affairs, who are at the same time men of conviction and altruistic purpose. Of the fourteen professors, four are licensed ministers of the Methodist Church, five have official positions in the church, and all are active in some form of church work. The students are drawn from the finest and most purposeful elements of the different communities. About half of them are in one way or another helping to finance themselves through college—an achievement which is made more feasible by the fact that employment is found by many of them in the city of Jackson. A relatively small number, some twenty or thirty, are preparing for the ministry, and another smaller group have chosen Christian service as a life work; but, apart from these, the average student in Millsaps is honest, hard-working, and ambitious, whose acquaintance and friendship are helpful and educative rather than corrupting.

Finally, the moral and religious life of the city of Jackson has been for a number of years—along with its commercial vigor and enterprise—its most notable characteristic. The Associated Bible Class, the Flying Squadron, the Luncheon Clubs with their motto of "Service," all these organizations enforce the character-growing impact upon the student of a great city which is as a whole so fully committed to an aggressive Christian life.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

I have been reading Dr. Frank Parker's book, "What We Believe." It is a luminous exposition of that compendium of faith known as "The Apostles' Creed." The controversial element is markedly absent. There is no special striving after effect, only a clear statement, or rather a series of statements, of the great truths of our common faith, in language well suited to the mind of the ordinary reader. Dr. Parker, together with a class of men who are now counted as fathers in the Louisiana Conference, had the advantage, years ago, of sitting at the feet of men who were great preachers, profound theologians and scholars of no mean ability. I think I can safely make the assertion that nowhere in America could there be heard preaching of higher order, both with reference to its intellectual and spiritual quality, than at the Seashore Camp Ground during the days of his younger ministry in the city of New Orleans. And it was a gospel of power and demonstration of the Spirit. They declared their messages, and declared them with the authority of the Court of Heaven. Added to this there was an emphatic insistence given to the younger ministers of the importance of study on the part of these elder men of that day. Men who studied the doctrines of Methodism as elucidated by such thinkers as Wesley, Watson and Pope, and then passed examinations under men who were familiar with those masters, found the mental labor requisite to this no child's play. They had to draw from deep wells, but the draughts were refreshing when once quaffed.

Having had the pleasure in walking some of this arduous way, and drinking of these wells with our author and teacher, possibly therefrom I may more fully appreciate his contribution to the literature of our church. He brings together, in a succinct form, the important things of our faith, as he states, the results of the riper years of his full life. It is the fruition and crystallization of years of earnest thought and study of these matters.

We thank you, Brother Frank; write again.

* * * *

Brother Shaw told the editor that he was "skating on thin ice" when he defined his position with reference to his relation to certain things in the church. Shaw's expression covers much ground. I do not quote this to criticize either Brother Shaw or the editor, for I know the latter is exercising good judgment and Shaw's words were helpful and apropos. But I think how applicable the expression is to many in the social, intellectual and spiritual spheres of life. "Thin ice" for the woman who fondly hopes to build the best and highest things on the passing show of social distinction. Her star of hope is shining in a very murky sky, and at best its misty glory is but for a few brief days. Very cold and shivery are the cold depths below when the forgotten devotee to fashionable society breaks through. Lots of thin ice cover the black pools of sin and folly, very poor foundation for social skating.

Thin ice in the intellectual world. If man is a thinking animal, as some say, I wonder what kind of creatures are these who fail to think. Some movements that pass for thought are only the effervescence of a perverted imagination—the running over of a too ardent fancy. These folks don't think, they only stew. And much of this kind of stewing obtains among a class of men ordained to the ministry.

Dean Carnegie, of Westminster Abbey, quite recently says some wise and pertinent things concerning these effervescent brethren. I fully agree with him in most that he says on the subject—see newspaper of Dec. 20—only I wish to enter my protest against the rather invidious comparison he makes as to the safe position of the English Church. If I read history aright some of the fiercest ecclesiastical storms of the ages have raged over that devoted little island, and are likely to occur again. I think what most of these noisy brethren need is a good, wholesome case of religion. Spiritual things must be spiritually discerned, and the soul that has felt and realized the touch of the divine fire is not troubled so much with doubt as to the credal statements of our holy faith, as with his own imperfections. If men want a mere human Savior and Lord, it is their own choice and business I presume, but such a one is not the Christ of the New Testament, whom Paul met on the Damascus road and John saw on Patmos. Born of a virgin, conceived by the Holy Ghost, was a fit beginning for this One before whom we bow as Lord and Christ.

GREAT HYMNS AND THEIR WRITERS.

By Hugh Fraser.

"O Little Town of Bethlehem."

Phillips Brooks, the writer of this well-known hymn, was a preacher rather than a poet, but all his life he was very much interested in music. When he was a boy his parents had him and his brothers commit great hymns to memory and recite them on Sunday evenings. Phillips had a remarkably good memory, and he astonished the other members of the family by the ease with which he memorized the longest hymns. When he went to college he could recite over two hundred hymns.

He became a minister of the Episcopal Church of the United States and preached first in Philadelphia and later in Boston. He was very fond of children, and, although he was a giant of a man for size, he loved to play and romp with little folks as though he were one of themselves.

In the summer of 1865, while he was rector of Holy Trinity Church, Philadelphia, he went abroad for a year of travel. He pranned to visit Palestine and to spend Christmas at Bethlehem. On Sunday, Dec. 24, he rode on horseback from Jerusalem to Bethlehem, and before dark that evening he went out into the fields where the shepherds were when they saw the glory of the Lord. That evening he attended a service in the ancient Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem, which lasted from ten at night until three next morning. This made a great impression on his mind. He was deeply moved that Christmas morning in Bethlehem, and he never forgot that visit. He wrote a letter to the boys and girls of his Sunday school in Philadelphia, telling them of his wonderful experiences. This is part of the letter: "I do not mind telling you (though of course I should not like to have you speak of it to the older people of the church) that I am much afraid the younger part of my congregation has more than its share of my thoughts and interest. I can not tell you how many Sunday mornings since I left you I have seemed to stand in the midst of our crowded schoolroom again, and look about and know every face and every class just as I used to; nor how many times I have heard one of our hymns ringing very strangely and sweetly through the different music of some far-off country. I remember especially on Christmas Eve, when I was standing in the old church at Bethlehem, close to the spot where Jesus was born, when the whole church was ringing hour after hour with the splendid hymns of praise to God, how again and again it seemed as if I could hear voices that I knew well, telling each other of the 'Wonderful Night' of the Savior's birth, as I had heard them a year before."

No doubt this was when Phillips Brooks got his inspiration to write his famous Christmas hymn, "O Little Town of Bethlehem." He wrote it for the Christmas Sunday school service in 1868. After he had written the beautiful hymn, he asked Mr. Lewis H. Redner to compose suitable music for it. Mr. Redner was the organist of the church and a teacher in the Sunday school. He was, of course, very anxious to give a musical setting to the hymn, but nothing seemed to come. The day of the Christmas service drew near, but still there was no music to go with the words of the hymn. The night before the Christmas service was to take place, Mr. Redner woke with sweet music ringing in his ears. He hastily took some sheets of paper and jotted down the tune. The next morning before he went to church he completed it and handed it to Mr. Brooks.

Neither Phillips Brooks nor Mr. Redner seemed to realize what a great thing they had done, and it was a good many years before the hymn became generally known. Now it has a place in nearly every good collection of hymns, and if a vote were taken as to which is the favorite Christmas hymns, this hymn, no doubt, would stand very high in the list.—The Christian Advocate.

THE UNMARGINED LIFE.

It is the exceptional that unsettles the spirit; if the exception can be fitted into the order, it does not unsettle one. To most busy people this sounds like a mere counsel of perfection. Days seem to fill themselves up, leaving no margin for changes. But that is only seeming. If it is true that the day fills itself, then it is perfectly possible to accept anything that comes in it as part of its fullness. If these interruptions come in such a day, they come from the same source as all the other events of the day and can be accepted in the same spirit. If one is not regulating the day but merely accepting it, then it is illogical to be vexed by one set of its details because they displace another set of details. But as a matter of fact, days do not often fill themselves. A really busy man lays his plans for the day, knows what he hopes to accomplish during its hours, and sets out to get that done. It is then that interruptions disturb him. . . .

Some men are always in a hurry because they leave no margin. Here is one well-known man who thinks nothing of agreeing to meet three engagements within one hour, knowing perfectly well, if he would stop to think, that he could not do justice to more than one of them. He agrees to "look in" on three luncheons in different places on the same day, to address three meetings on the same evening by leaping into an automobile and dashing from place to place. Generally he thinks this is merely a strain on himself. Actually it is a strain on everybody concerned. It takes away the margin of comfort for all. Besides, such unmargined persons are generally late half the time, delaying programs and otherwise upsetting plans. Fewer promises with more margins would accomplish more results in the long run.

The unmargined life is apt to be resentful at interferences which are excusable. If one has crowded the day with plans which leave no margin, he is liable to become self-important, acting as if others were picking on him when they break in on his program. Men have come away from a busy man's house vowing never again to approach him on any subject because he has acted as if it were an offense to present anything to him which he had not invited. "You would have thought he was the king and I was a serf." said one man who had called on a busy man with an interest which was common to both.

One pastor exulted in the fact that in his conference room there were no chairs; everybody had to present any matter to him briefly if at all, and standing up. He thought this was a shrewd way of handling bores; and so it was, but one wonders how it served the purposes of earnest men who had rights as fellow-workers. How does one man become so important that other men are honored in having a moment of his time? Has he no margin?—The Continent.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH SERMONS?

By Paul Hutchinson.

Now that the columnist of the New York World has cornered the market on "What the world needs" items, it is necessary for the rest of us uplifters to go back to the "What's wrong" article. There is bound to be a deluge of them. I want to tell Protestant ministers what's wrong with their sermons.

There are two major shortcomings in the average Protestant sermon.

First, it isn't Protestant. The fundamental position of Protestantism is that a man is fit to decide for himself and religious matters. A good many Protestants will kick at that statement, but that is because they have never boiled their Protestantism down to its essentials.

When you apply Protestantism to preaching it means that the preacher is to discover to his listeners, in so far as he is able, the basic principles for righteous living, and that they are to be left to make the application. Jesus was a good Protestant preacher. Most of the present-day crop are not. They spend so much time on detailed, individual applications—whom their hearers should vote for, what movies they should attend, and things like that—that it is easy to suspect that they have never spent much time digging down to life's fundamentals.

Take, as an example, the matter of Sabbath observance. I doubt if there are ten per cent of the Protestant preachers of America who are courageous enough to follow the example of Jesus in talking about the Sabbath. Instead, they pester their hearers with an attempt to distinguish the precise degrees of guilt that attach to automobile riding, baseball playing and ice cream buying.

Second, the average Protestant sermon has no element of surprise. It is all predetermined, foreordained. Perhaps that is why I, as a Methodist, don't like it. Sometimes the minister puts his subject in the form of a question, and it may sound like a real question. But it isn't. You know the minister's answer before he starts to speak. Going to listen to a man take a prearranged trip down a mental highway that comes out in only one place may be a means to edification, but hardly to interest.

Again, this is a pitfall that Jesus escaped. If there is any one thing that the Gospels make clear about his preaching it is that his audiences were never sure, when he started talking about divorce or adultery or taxation or anything else, where he was coming out. They had an honest interest in the conclusion that held them to the last word, and brought them back for more when Jesus returned to the neighborhood.

There, that's part of what's wrong with sermons to-day. Isn't it?—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

ON LOOKING AFTER OURSELVES.

"If we do not look after ourselves and our own interests, who is going to do it for us?" That was the way the matter was put to me the other day, and I have been wondering about it ever since. And I have about decided that I, at least, do not need very much of that kind of philosophizing. Possibly there are quite a few others like me. That job of looking after ourselves and our own interests is likely to have quite a considerable amount of attention. But even if it didn't, would the result be such a tremendously serious one! Somehow I cannot get away from the thought that many of the people who have done a great deal for this old world of ours didn't take too seriously that task of looking after themselves. The Man of Galilee didn't ask very much from life for himself, but my! He did put a tremendous lot into it, especially for other people. Could you ever think of him as putting himself in the center of things, and insisting that his interests be attended to first? And the way he chose and adhered to so faithfully and heroically all his life through cannot surely be an unsafe or unwise way for me. Isn't that one of the real afflictions of this distracted and troubled world of ours, that there are too many of us so intent upon that job of looking after ourselves? If only we could get hold of his great ideal of putting much into life rather than trying to get much out of it!—The Christian Guardian.

SPECIAL NOTICE FOR JAN. 10, 1924.

The chairmen of the various Boards and Commissions of the Mississippi Conference interested in the establishment of Methodist headquarters in Jackson, Miss., will please to meet at 10 o'clock, Jan. 10, 1924, at Galloway Memorial Methodist Church.

I would suggest that these chairmen confer with their Boards and Commissions by mail beforehand, and be in position at this meeting to say just what we can do, financially, in maintaining headquarters.

From what I have learned, I judge that we will need at least $750 to $1,000 to defray the expense of this venture.

ROBERT SELBY, Chairman.

Vicksburg, Miss., Dec. 19, 1923.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE SEASHORE DISTRICT.

Dear Brethren: Please have your Workers' Guide at quarterly conference and be ready to fill out the pink leaf with the allotment for each church and the committee on special effort for "Superannuate Endowment."

L. L. ROBERTS, P. E.

THOUGHTS.

By Letitia Rutledge.

Thoughts, my constant stay,
  Through darkness and light,
  You must be led aright,
Lest I lose the way.

Strength, not of mine own,
  Comes with the days and years;
  A promise shines through the tears
When we approach His throne.

With thoughts beautiful and good,
  Oh! life is a sweet song,
  Christmas lasts the year long,
Bringing love and brotherhood.

Friend, what thoughts have you?
  Of pleasure, fame, and gold?
  Or, the sweetest story angels ever told,
A Saviour is born unto you?

UNWISE MINISTERS.

There are good ministers who, in their anxiety to make the church better, dwell so much on its imperfections as to give the impression that it is mostly feeble and wrong. How can such preaching reform the church? These are reformers who speak with the same emphasis on the evils they wish to reform, till reform seems hopeless. Men dwell on faults and imperfections of good men, magnifying and emphasizing them, and obscuring the real virtues.

The better way is to know the evil, but to encourage and develop every power that can overcome it. It is to believe that God is mightier than all the powers of evil, and that if we are on his side, working for his ends, that we shall surely succeed. It is for us to see in the mud and slush and chilly winds of March, the signs of the coming spring. It is for us to see in the disorders, and confusions, and revelations of evil, in the warring of discordant elements, the signs of an awakening conscience and a new life. Let us say with Jesus, after describing the signs of the times, "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh."—Peloubet.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

The "forgotten man" is calling you—for the pink leaf report from the first quarterly conference.

A wire from the offices of the Board of Finance received at the South Georgia Conference on Wednesday, Nov. 30, stated that pink leaf reports were pouring in from every section of the church. Have you sent yours?

Another wire from the offices received at the South Carolina Conference on Dec. 1 stated that fifty-six pink leaf reports had been received the day before. Was one of them from your charge?

I am spending this beautiful day, Dec. 2, on the train, hurrying to St. Louis for two days' work in the offices before leaving for the Florida Conference. While I ride I write in behalf of the church's worn-out preachers. And also I am wondering if you have sent in your pink leaf report.

Bishop W. F. McMurry was the sole representative of the special effort for superannuate endowment at the Central Texas Conference. But those who heard him tell me that he was a whole team in himself. At the close of his address Dr. Alonzo Monk, Jr., pastor of First Church, Corsicana, Tex., voluntarily walked to the front and handed Bishop McMurry a check for $910, saying that it was the full amount due from his charge for the first year in the special effort for superannuate endowment. Bravo, Dr. Monk, you are a worthy son of a noble father! The Board of Finance commends you heartily, and all the claimants of the church acclaim you!

Let me see, I had something very important to put down just here. O yes, I remember now; it was to inquire whether you have sent your pink leaf report to the Board of Finance.

Bishop McMurry scores again. He represented the Board of Finance at the Texas Conference and did it in a manner pleasing to all. Hardly had he finished speaking when the pastor of Caldwell charge, Texas Conference, whispered to one of his young laymen, J. R. Woodson, as follows: "Jim, how much of the Lord's money have you?" Mr. Woodson replied: "I have enough to pay the whole amount due from our charge on this movement for the first year." And he took his check book from his pocket, wrote a personal check for $555, walked down the aisle, and gave it to Bishop McMurry to send to the Board of Finance. The big Bishop nearly doubled up, for he realized suddenly that he had years ago started this same Jim in the Christian life. Ah me, "how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him who bringeth good tidings!" What have we here? A peptimistic bishop, an optimistic pastor, and Jim. Come on, bishops, presiding elders, pastors, Jim is close by everywhere. By the way, Mr. Woodson, they tell me that a jimmy is the best tool on earth when it is used in the right way. Let others in on your secret. Richest blessings be upon you, man! You have started something. And your pastor—well, I wish I had a lock of his hair.

The North Georgia Conference was ablaze with interest in the special effort for superannuate endowment. On the very day that the great cause was presented Mr. Lewis H. Beck, a noble and generous layman of Atlanta, gave $10,000 in bonds to superannuate endowment. Mr. Beck is widely heralded as a man of sterling qualities and just dealings. He is a loyal member of our Trinity Church, Atlanta. May his liberal contribution suggest to other laymen of his kind the privilege which is theirs to do something extraordinary for this sacred cause. And while this leaven is working all of us will pray earnestly for Heaven's richest blessings to come upon Brother Beck, the faithful and loving friend of the "forgotten man."

On Nov. 26 Brother Thomas, presiding elder of the Murphysboro District, Illinois Conference, visited the offices of the Board of Finance. He said that every charge except two in his district had sent in the pink leaf report, that the two charges which had not reported would do so as soon as the first quarterly conference was held, and that every charge in his district would show something added to its minimum quota. Whew, what a presiding elder! Fine, brother! And, mark you, this elder operates in one of the Conferences where the work is exceedingly difficult. Come, everybody, let us give him the grand honors!

Now, that puts something into my head—for which you should be thankful. Some time later I shall publish in one list the names of the presiding elders who succeed in having every charge of their respective districts send in the pink leaf report. It will be an honor roll worth while. Furthermore, any presiding elder who qualifies for this honor roll may have, if he requests it, an 18x22 group picture of our College of Bishops. The picture will be sent postpaid by the Board of Finance and complimentary for the service stated. I sincerely trust that every presiding elder in the church may be able to claim this token.

Immediately following the presentation of the plan of the special effort at the South Georgia Conference Bishop Ainsworth delivered an address on the subject that was truly a flash from heaven. If a man was ever inspired, the good Bishop had the enduement on this occasion. He held that great body of men as those under a light from above. He lost himself completely in being a voice of the God of the "forgotten man." The Conference trembled with emotion, few eyes were dry, and all of our hearts were thrilled. God bless you, Bishop Ainsworth! I shall never forget that hour.

Bishop W. F. McMurry was with me at the Little Rock Conference, and his work for the cause was magnificent. When Bishop "Mac" really squares himself on any subject, there is nothing much left to be said. Well, at Little Rock he did. I told him that his address was fully up to anything he ever did in his palmiest days as Secretary of the Board of Church Extension. He grunted, smiled, and said: "I am just beginning to get ready to start on this thing." If Little Rock was the place of his commencing, he is laying out a program for himself alone that would demand the strength and skill of twenty.

Will the following brethren please give attention: Our bishops, each and every one of them; all of the team men who gave service in presenting the special effort to the Annual Conferences; all of the members of the Conference Boards of Finance; each and every presiding elder who was and is; each and every pastor and his lay delegates to the Annual Conference; all of the editors and business managers of the church press; all of the connectional men and women in each and every department of the church's work; all of the men and women connected with schools, hospitals, orphanages, or other special service; and each and every one of anything else unintentionally omitted.

ALL OF YOU, listen! I am deeply grateful for the co-operation you have given in the matter of presenting to the Annual Conferences the plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment. God bless you! A good start has been made, and you have helped to make it. If some day the history of this movement should be written by somebody, it will not be complete until all of your names appear within its pages in bold-face type.

And now while we are all together in one group let us join hands and sing something. What shall it be, a war song? All right, all together:

> "We're going over! We're going over!
> And we won't come back until it's over."

Fine! And before we turn to our appointed places let me remind every one of you that the very next step on the way over is to see that every charge in the connection sends to the Board of Finance as soon as possible that pink leaf report. Amen.

Rev. W. A. Lambeth says: "Stick to this thing, men! Stick to it like a cocklebur to a cow's tail."

HERMES UP-TO-DATE.

By Julia M. Colton.

I'm a marvelous radio fay;
In the vast fields of ether I play;
There unseen I can race
Through unlimited space,
Invincible force to obey.

I have wonderful, tireless wings,
And accomplish incredible things;
Just show me a wire,
And, when you desire,
It talks, or it whistles and sings.

You can catch me as onward I fly;
But to hold me your strength I defy!
For I'm driving afar
An electrical car,
And to sing to the stars I shall try!

ROSEMARY'S SOCKS.

By Rosalie Elmerson.

It was twenty minutes past eight when Rosemary opened the door of the kitchen where her mother was preparing breakfast. On one of her little feet were a black sock and a patent-leather slipper. Her other foot was bare, and in her hand she held the other slipper.

"Mother," said Rosemary, "I've looked everywhere, and I can't find my other sock."

"Well," answered Mrs. Holden, "I don't know what I am going to do with you. It was only last week you lost one of that new pair of white socks I wanted you to keep for best. Rosemary, you are careless about your things. Try to remember where you put your socks when you took them off last evening. And do hurry or you will be late for school."

Rosemary went back to her room to look again for the missing sock, but she did not have any hope of finding it. "I never can keep anything," said the little girl to herself. "I put the socks together on the chair when I went to bed, and I can't help it if the things don't stay where they're put." It was plain that the lost sock was not on the chair or anywhere in sight. Rosemary searched all the corners in her room where it could possibly be.

"O dear, what can I do?" she cried and winked hard to keep back the tears that were trying to come.

"Have you found it?" Rosemary's mother asked as she appeared in the door holding a sock in her hand. But it was not the lost sock; it was the mate of the one that had been lost the week before. The little girl shook her head slowly.

"Then," said Mrs. Holden, "I am afraid you will have to put on this one. If you wear these two odd socks together, it will really be only one pair lost. I know," she added, noting her little daughter's astonished expression, "that it will look queer to wear a white sock with a black one, but perhaps it will help you to be more careful next time. Now hurry and finish dressing."

Before Rosemary could answer, her mother handed her the sock and went back to her work. The little girl angrily brushed away the tears that were making their way down her cheeks and quickly put on the white sock and the other slipper.

"Every one will laugh when they see that my socks don't match," said poor Rosemary when she kissed her mother good-by.

"I'm sorry," answered Mrs. Holden, but she was firm, for she knew that she must cure Rosemary of her careless ways.

The little girl started for school at last, feeling in spite of herself that she deserved to be punished for her carelessness Although it was nearly nine o'clock, Rosemary decided to walk across the fields to the school house, as she often did in the summer when she had plenty of time. She climbed the fence into the Jones' meadow as usual, but she was so busy thinking of what her schoolmates would say when they saw that her socks did not match that she could not enjoy the walk.

"I almost think I shall not go to school," said Rosemary to herself, but she kept on walking across the field. She had nearly reached the far fence, when the thought of going barefooted occurred to her. The Kelly children always went without shoes in warm weather, and nothing could be so bad as wearing this odd pair of socks.

Feeling a little guilty, Rosemary sat down on a large rock and began to unbutton her slippers. When she had taken them off she pulled off the white sock and then the black one. But to her surprise, she found herself holding in her hand two black socks, one inside the other. Rosemary was much amazed, and it was some time before she realized that she had put both socks on one foot without noticing it.

"No wonder I couldn't find it!" she cried, laughing, and hurriedly put on her black socks and slippers. The white sock she put into her pocket, determined that it should not be lost. "And I don't intend to lose another sock so that there will be an odd one to go with it," she said, and began to run so that she should be on time for school.—The Youth's Companion.

A HATFUL OF GRAPES.

By Sara Mack.

When you once paused at the shady corner, you were sure to go back again and again. It was such a peaceful place, but on this particular evening there was no one in sight.

Night had fallen and covered everything with a black veil, which was dotted here and there with golden stars—lamps left near windows over which the blinds were seldom entirely lowered. It was a friendly custom in the little unlighted town.

This evening one of the neighbor boys decided to eat grapes from the vines in the corner lot. Not that they would be denied him should he ask, but stolen fruits are sweetest, and a lot more fun sometimes, he thought.

He gathered his hat full of nice bunches, and quietly feeling his way he got clear of the fence. As he was passing the little house, he thought it would be fun to listen to the Jones family singing. Setting his full hat down on the shabby bit of a porch, he stole softly over where he would have a good view.

"O for a thousand tongues to sing
My great Redeemer's praise!"

He watched with great glee the shadow behind "Old Jones'" head—the shadow of his whiskers, his Adam's apple, and, oh joy, look at his thumb keeping time! It was rich!

Turning his eyes a little way, he nearly shouted when he saw little Matt's hair sticking out like two animated pigtails. How the boys would laugh when he should tell them to-morrow!

But now "Old Jones" was beginning his prayer, and the strong voice, raised in earnest supplication, awed him into standing still as no prayer in church ever had: "We thank Thee for Thy loving care over us in the day that is past. Forgive us the sins we have committed, and our sins of omission, may they be blotted out of Thy Book of Remembrance." (At this point the boy stopped eating grapes and started as though to go.) "Bless our neighbors' children, be very near unto them!" (The boy reached over and emptied the hat onto the porch, and slowly put it on his head.) "Dear Father, watch over them and guard them from all evil and danger." (The hat was softly drawn off and held in a shaking, boyish hand until the closing sentence.) "Prepare the dying for death and the living to honor and serve Thy great name. Amen."

Leaving the grapes unheeded, he quietly and thoughtfully walked home.

The town boys never could find out why one of their number saw no fun in stealing grapes from the Jones family, and accused him of being "sweet" on one of the girls.

But in after life that prayer echoed and re-echoed through his busy, prosperous life, saving him from many a dishonest or questionable action.

The heap of grapes on the front porch remained a mystery to the Jones family.—Exchange.

Whosoever is really earnest for divine direction, more anxious to know what the Lord would have him do than to know what is for his own present ease or worldly interest, and who confides the case to Him who giveth wisdom liberally, and upraideth not, may count on it very confidently that the Lord will send forth his light.—James Hamilton.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. J. H. Jowett, noted British preacher, formerly pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, died in Surrey, England, on Dec. 14.

Rev. J. W. Faulk, of Dubach, La., was recently operated upon for appendicitis at a Shreveport sanitarium. We are glad to learn that he is making satisfactory progress toward recovery.

Rev. J. L. Evans and family, of West Monroe, La., are spending the holidays with relatives in Algiers, this city. Brother Evan's paid the Advocate office an appreciated call one day last week.

The return of Rev. J. B. Cain to the Ellisville charge, Mississippi Conference, for another year, was the occasion of his receiving a heavy "pounding" from two of his churches, Ellisville and Moselle.

The editor and his family have had the great joy of having with them for the holidays Rev. Lyman Carley and Miss Grace Carley, of Ellisville, Miss., and Mr. and Mrs. Stephen S. Thomas, of Alexandria, La.

Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., has been transferred from the West Texas Conference to the Florida Conference and appointed pastor of the Hyde Park Church, Tampa, Fla., one of the leading appointments of the Conference.

The Christmas number of the Mansfield Collegian, issued by the students of Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, La., is a fine specimen of college journalism. Congratulations to the editorial staff!

Rev. H. L. Norton, returning to the Fernwood charge, Mississippi Conference, for the third year, has been most cordially received by the good people of the charge, and he begins the year's work under encouraging conditions.

Rev. W. L. Linfield, Rev. J. H. Jolly, and Rev. H. C. Castles, the new pastors in Meridian, Miss., are in their places, and their work has begun under encouraging circumstances, both preachers and people entering upon the new year happily.

Mrs. T. D. Ellis, wife of Dr. T. D. Ellis, General Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, died at her home in Louisville, Ky., on Monday, Dec. 3. Dr. Ellis will have the sympathy of all his brethren throughout the church in this time of sorrow.

"The Methodist Steward," compiled and published by Rev. H. H. Smith, Atlee, Va., is a pamphlet that would add greatly to the efficiency of our stewards if they would read it. The price is 10 cents, and it may be had upon application to the address given above.

The Great Southern Lumber Company, of Bogalusa, La., is arranging for a perpetual supply of lumber, paper, and naval stores through its program of reforestation. The Christmas greeting card of the Great Southern Lumber Company is one of the most beautiful we have seen.

Mr. Charles O. Chalmers, the efficient Business Manager of the Advocate, attended the meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association in Washington, D. C., recently. He also visited New York while away. He greatly enjoyed the trip—but the weather was a little colder than he likes.

The editor had the plesure of meeting Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Summerlin, of Rayville, La., on Monday of this week. Mrs. Summerlin is the Centenary treasurer of her local church and is foremost in all good works. Mr. Summerlin is a prominent business man of Louisiana, and president of the Tensas Levee Board.

Upon a recent visit to Richmond, Va., in connection with the educational interests of the Louisiana Conference, Dr. W. L. Duren and the editor of the Advocate were the recipients of delightful courtesies at the hands of Dr. J. M. Rowland, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, and Dr. J. F. Carey, the Virginia Conference Missionary Secretary.

Rev. R. S. Walton received a very cordial welcome upon his arrival at Rayne, La., his new appointment. Rayne and Branch have been combined into one charge, and these two churches will doubtless make a fine appointment. The Sunday school at Rayne is well organized, with all departments at work, under the efficient superintendency of Mr. R. C. Holt.

The Methodist Ministerial Association of Meridian, Miss., has organized for the current year with the following officers: President, P. D. Hardin, presiding elder; Vice President, J. L. Decell; Secretary, James M. Lewis; Social Service Committee, W. H. Lewis, J. H. Jolly, H. C. Castles; Program Committee, J. L. Decell, W. L. Linfield, James M. Lewis; Publicity, James M. Lewis.

We regret to learn that Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, has been quite ill for the past few weeks; but we are glad to be able to report that he is now on the road to recovery and able to attend to his duties on the district. Brother Hardin is greatly beloved throughout the Meridian District.

In stating last week that the church at Hazlehurst, Miss., gave the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage $233 on Work Day, the figures should have been $2,330. All the more credit belongs to this fine congregation. Rev. W. H. Saunders, the pastor, has been most cordially received for his third year on that charge, and the outlook for the new year is very encouraging.

The people of the Harriston circuit, Mississippi Conference, have been most cordial in their welcome of their pastor, Rev. B. M. Hunt, for the second year. All the churches united in a big "pounding," and the preacher's salary has been increased $150, half of which is taken by Lorman. Mizpah has organized a Woman's Missionary Society, and the laymen seem eager to work for the advancement of the Kingdom. Jefferson County has a "flying squadron," which is composed largely of Harriston men. The year is full of promise.

Rev. P. A. Sowell, a member of the Tennessee Conference, and Rev. W. W. Moore, of the Mississippi Conference, paid the Advocate office appreciated calls on Saturday of last week. Brother Sowell was in the city to spend the holidays with his son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Williamson, Jr., of Tulane University, and Brother Moore was en route to Shreveport, La., to spend the holidays with his son, Mr. W. W. Moore, Jr.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell begins his fourth Disciplinary year at Central Church, Meridian, Miss., under most promising conditions. A year of aggressive evangelism is planned, and a new pipe organ will be installed. The pastor's salary has been advanced to $4,800, and Mr. Emmett R. Lowry has been employed at a salary of $1,800 to be Financial Secretary of the church and assistant to the pastor.

Rev. John F. Foster is busily engaged in the work of his new pastorate, Lake Providence, La. He has made 130 pastoral calls to date, and the services of the church are being well attended. Brother Foster had the misfortune to lose his valuable library several weeks ago, the building in which they were placed being destroyed by fire. Such a loss is inestimable to a man of such studious habits and scholarly attainments as Brother Foster.

Our church at Lafayette, La., has made a splendid record during the past year. There was raised for all purposes $18,000; over $3,000 was raised for missions; the largest numerical increase in the history of the church was also made, and there has been a fine advance along spiritual lines. Within the past two years the contributions to the Conference benevolences have been doubled. Rev. Leon I. McCain is the faithful and diligent pastor.

We are greatly indebted to Dr. R. H. Harper, Secretary of the Louisiana Annual Conference, for a copy of the Journal of the recent session of the Conference, which was laid on our desk on Saturday of last week. It is a splendidly arranged and well printed volume, and Dr. Harper is to be congratulated upon the early appearance of the Journal. So far as we recall, this is the earliest the Journal has ever appeared after the adjournment of Conference.

The National Convention of the Anti-Saloon League will be held in Washington, D. C., Jan. 12-17, preceded by the conference of all League workers in the United States, Jan. 9-11. Great subjects, such as law observance, respect for the Constitution, the campaign of 1924, world prohibition, etc., will be discussed. Railroads have granted a rate of one and one-half fare for the round trip. This would be a fine opportunity for churches to give their pastors a trip to the National Capital.

The West Monroe Methodist Church, of the Louisiana Conference, has made remarkable progress within the past three years. The pastor's salary has gone from $1,700 to $3,000, a fine building has been erected, the benevolent assesments are paid in full, and all other financial obligations are met as they become due. This record is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that the church reports only 353 members. Rev. J. L. Evans is the efficient leader of this progressive church.

Rev. J. M. Alford writes that he has been cordially received by the good people of the Texas Avenue Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., and that he is comfortably domiciled in one of the best parsonages of the State. The pastor's salary has been advanced $600 over that of last year. The congregations are good, and there have alraady been several additions to the church. Texas Avenue was Brother Alford's first charge when he was admitted on trial into the Louisiana Conference, twenty-seven years ago.

ON STEALING FURROWS.

By F. C. Hoggarth.

Many generations ago agriculture was organized in England very differently from the methods of to-day. Then the common field system was in vogue. Out of that common land was allotted to each man his share. There were no walls or hedges of partition. Your furrow ran alongside your neighbor's furrow, each part of the common field. The system, like any other system, had its abuses. It was no uncommon thing for men to rise to plow at night, in which plowing they would furtively steal a furrow or two of their neighbor's plot. That naturally led to reprisals. The common field, with rows of disputed furrows, was almost richer in disputes than in crops. For when tillers quarrel the tilling suffers. It was in part because of these bickerings and the injury done by them to agriculture, that the common field system was abolished. For under it the best land was only too often most wretchedly cultivated.

The religious field has suffered in similar ways. On every hand now men are feeling that our divisions, these almost endless denominations and sects, are doing the cause of religion no little harm. In the past there has been no little furrow stealing. In one little town I know well the Baptists not so many years ago built a new church, and took away half the members of the local Congregational church. The new church flourished, while the Congregationalists drew what satisfaction they could from the fact that their situation could hardly be worse. Certainly it was a heart-breaking situation for minister and people. In that same place there were five or six other denominations represented by churches—any one of which would almost have held the whole church-going community. Nor are the Baptists worse than the Congregationalists or the Methodists. Often while we fraternized, called one another "brethren," there has been furrow-taking. It is almost inevitable when denomations are so thick on the ground.

The newcomers are the worst culprits. Christian Scientists and others live by furrow-stealing. One of the most significant and sinister things about them is that for the most part they grow at the expense of other churches. A minister friend of mine recently visited a Christian Science church. After listening to their testimonies, he exclaimed, "Why, nearly all these people are Methodists." He recognized their tone.

Is it not time that such plowing up of cultivated ground ceased and that churches give themselves to the reclamation of the waste, which after all is the main purpose of the church—to go, as Wesley said, not to those who need us, but to those who need us most? There is quite a wide scope for Christian Scientists among the outcasts of India and the Coolies of China and the natives of Africa, as well as among the waste products of modern civilization. Yet we hear not a word about home or foreign missions among them—so busy are they plowing up other churches' furrows over night!—New York Christian Advocate.

TO MINISTERS AND OTHERS.

A Page from the "Commonplace Book."

"Many a man aims at nothing, and hits it with remarkable precision."

A VISIT TO A LARGE SILK FILATURE IN OITA.

By Miss Mabel K. Howell.

The Woman's Social-Evangelistic Plant in Oita, built by the Centenary, is doing a very great deal of good work that is counting in the evangelization of Oita. I was greatly interested in the work that they are doing in a great silk factory. This factory is one of a series of forty under the same management in different parts of Japan. This factory is one of the most progressive in all Japan, and so represents conditions at their best in this land. There were fifteen hundred employees, and eleven hundred of these were little girls and young women. This factory buys up the cocoons and carries them through the various processes till the product is finished in the form of raw silk thread, which is shipped directly to America. The work of the little girls is to dip their fingers in boiling hot water and separate the delicate threads from the cocoons and fasten them to the great machine for reeling the silk. Their fingers are almost parboiled from the constant dipping in the boiling water.

You will be interested in the life of the girls. The factory management contracts for them with their parents for a period of five years at the price of eighty sen, or forty cents, a day. This is very good wages for factory girls in Japan. The girls are virtually slaves to the factory for five years. They live in dormitories provided on the factory premises by the management, and their hours of work are from 7:30 to 7:30 each day. The factory provides the meals on the premises, and also provides bathing and laundry facilities. The girls work seven days a week and have two holidays a month, on the first and the fifteenth. The methods of punishing the girls for mishehavior and disobedience are hitting on the head and pinching. Do not forget that this is one of the most progressive factories in Japan. It is now building an assembly hall on the premises in which to hold entertainments for the girls. The head of the establishment is not a Christian, and yet he allows our workers to do all they can for the girls. They are allowed to hold an evangelistic meeting for the girls in the factory one night each week, and are also allowed to come to the factory on the two rest days and play games with the girls. The girls respond to this feature in a splendid way. The factory also has a hospital. On the day that we were there we saw thirty girls in the hospital.

WAITING FOR A CHAPEL AT CALABAZAR, CUBA.

The pressing need for Centenary funds in Cuba is aptly illustrated by the following story from Rev. S. A. Neblett:

"Not long ago, at the request of the pastor, I went to Calabazar and preached. This is a thriving place near Santiago de las Vegas, and the work has been enterprised by the stewards of the Santiago de las Vegas church, the pastor of course co-operating. I was met at the train by a group of the workers, who had just arrived a few minutes before, and by them conducted to the chapel, the sala, or large front room of a private home. Our services were well attended, although a counter attraction claimed some who otherwise would have been with us.

"I had noticed a moving van in front of the chapel as we came up, but thought nothing of it. As soon as the service closed and the people were leaving, several young men began folding up the chairs and the portable organ, and loading them on the van. 'We have no furnishings for this chapel and have to bring them from Santiago de las Vegas,' one of the ladies explained to me. The chairs were from the homes of several members, and part of them from a furniture store owned by the father of one of the workers. Every week, until these faithful people can secure funds to furnish the chapel, they have to haul chairs back and forth, a distance of several miles. But they are happy in the Master's service, and doing good."

The announcement that Mr. S. P. Fenn, Vice President of the Sherwin-Williams Paint Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, has given $500,000 to the Young Men's Christian Association reminds us of a story about Mr. Fenn, as follows: Mr. Fenn started as a clerk in a Cleveland railroad office. The other clerks made it a practice to work Sunday mornings to make up for Saturday afternoons off for baseball. Young Fenn remained at work Saturdays in order to go to church Sunday; and when asked to conform to the routine set by the ball-playing majority, he refused and tendered his resignation, although he had no other job in sight. As a member of the Y. M. C. A., he not long afterwards fell in with another Association man, both on the way to a Y. M. C. A. convention. To him he told his plight. When the other delegate had heard the story through, he said: "I'd like to have you work for me. Come to see me when you get back to Cleveland." The train companion proved to be the late Henry A. Sherwin, then President of the Sherwin-Williams Company. Mr. Fenn took the offer and joined the corporation, rising to his present post. He was long associated with Mr. Sherwin in Association projects, and crowns his record for service with this splendid gift.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

"Was it long ago, or was it but yesterday, that we prayed for strength to perform a certain duty, to bear a certain burden, to overcome a certain temptation, and received it? Do we dream that the divine force was exhausted in answering that one prayer? No more than the great river is exhausted by turning the wheels of one mill. Put it to the proof again with to-day's temptation. Thrust yourself further and deeper into the stream of God's power, and feel it again, as you have felt it before, able to do exceeding abundantly. Remember and trust."—Henry Van Dyke, D.D.

SAMUEL DORSEN COBB, the subject of this sketch, was born near Natchez, Miss., in 1855, the son of Jessie and Mary Cobb. He was happily married to Miss Ella D. Lazarus, in February, 1887, who survives to mourn his absence. To this union were born two children; the oldest died in infancy; the other is now Mrs. Hardy Wilkinson, of Vicksburg, the mother of two children, whose hearts are saddened by the going away of "papa" and "grandpapa." Brother Cobb was converted and joined the Methodist Church at Lenwood, Jefferson County, in 1894, in a revival meeting held by Rev. J. D. Crymes, under the pastorate of Rev. John D. Ellis. From the date of his conversion to the time of his death, his devotion to his church was manifested in faithful service; often in an official capacity, as steward and trustee. Most of his religious activities was with the "Old Washington circuit," where the pastor always found in his hospitable home a hearty welcome. This writer was privileged to have him as a member of the Gibson Memorial Church the last two years of his life, and always found him ready to assist in carrying on the work of the church; and, unless providentially hindered, he was found regularly in his place at the worship of the sanctuary. At the time of his death, he was engaged in the mercantile business at Newelton, La., and the outlook for a splendid success was very flattering. But he who doeth all things well saw best to call him from things temporal and earthly to the spiritual and eternal. Brother Cobb was a "manly man," a splendid Christian character, with many friends; and, as has been said, those who knew him best, admired and loved him most. The end came calmly and peacefully after a few weeks' illness, caused by mitral insufficiency, in his home at Newelton, La., Nov. 1, 1923, surrounded by loved ones and friends, who bear testimony that there were no bands in his death, but it was as though he had fallen asleep. May the God of all grace comfort and sustain the sorrowing wife, daughter, and other loved ones; and may they look forward to that reunion where parting words are unknown.

"Judge not the Lord by feeble sense,
  But trust him for his grace,
Behind a frowning providence,
  He hides a smiling face."

T. B. COTTRELL.

CHRISTMAS AT MOORE MEMORIAL.

Christmas at Moore Memorial in Shanghai is very much like Christmas in the churches at home. Last year they celebrated with a community Christmas tree. Instead of the evergreen of northern climes, the big magnolia tree which stands on the lawn was decorated with electric lights, and all who would were invited to come. Under the glow of the symbolic star, Chinse men and women worked out living pictures of the birth of the young Christ Child. The tree was beautiful, the scene was beautiful, and the spirit of Christmas entered the hearts of all.

The crowning event of the Christmas service came next morning, when the children were brought forward for baptism. Mothers and fathers gathered around the pulpit with babes in their arms until there were twenty-three young lives to be consecrated. Among them was the little son of Dr. Sidney R. Anderson, the pastor of Moore Memorial, and grandson of Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, one of the Home Cultivation Secretaries of the Woman's Department who is now visiting her loved ones in Shanghai. As Dr. A. P. Parker baptized each little one, the audience was impressed and inspired with the spiritual fervor of this veteran, who is rounding out fifty years of missionary service in China.

The Centenary is planning a great future for Moore Memorial. When the new Institutional Church, which has been included in the Centenary Askings, shall rise on the present site, a better, larger work will be possible than ever before.—Centenary News.

The church gives us the opportunity to demonstrate our loyalty to God and His great plan of redemption for the human race. Every call of our great church is but the voice of God to His children to bestir themselves in behalf of world redemption, as becomes those who are sons of God. We had a great year together last year, and I am encouraged to believe that the next twelve months will mark yet greater accomplishments for the Kingdom of God in the Sardis District than were done last year. ## MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

On Sunday, Dec. 16, Mr. Truman Lewis, Mr. W. R. Meador, Miss Matalea Davis, Miss Grace Lewis, and the writer, went to New Augusta, Miss., on instructions from our District Secretary to orgaize a League Chapter for Brother Westbrook at that point. Brother Westbrook had been in correspondence with Mr. Harrell and Mr. Hawkins for some time regarding an organization at his church, and felt that this was the opportune time and called for Mr. Harrell, who was unable to go himself on account of sickness in his family. So on his request Broad Street Chapter sent out a part of their "Flying Squadron," who reached New Augusta in time to enjoy a nice supper with Sister Westbrook before the service.

The writer had charge of the service; after explaining briefly the work of each of the four departments of the Epworth League, Mr. Lewis talked for several minutes on the administration work of the Chapter and explained the benefits of an Epworth League in the church. On Brother Ellis' motion to proceed with the organization work, we proceeded to perfect the organization. Miss Jewel Ikard was elected president; Miss McKinzie, vice president; Mr. Russell McSwain, recording and corresponding secretary, and Miss Grace McCoy, treasurer.

Brother Westbrook certainly has a fine band of young people, twenty-seven of whom joined the League as charter members. There were several honorary members, too, who, we feel, will be an inspiration to the young folks in their new endeavor. They certainly have bright prospects for a live, wide-awake Chapter, and we predict for Brother Westbrook, in the near future, a band of young folks who will be real helpers in his church. Those elected to office, as well as many of the others, seemed to be enthusiastic and wide-awake, and it seemed we could read "determination to win" on the faces of the leaders, and we expect to hear from New Augusta at our next Assembly.

The Next Assembly.

We give you below a copy of the suggested program for our Assembly:

Theme—"The Christian Use of Money."

Slogan—"Money Talks—What Does Yours Say?"

First Day—Keynote Banquet: The Spiritual Keynote, the Social Keynote, the Class Room Keynote, the Theme Keynote, Harmony.

Daily Schedule—7 a. m., morning prayer; 8:30 to 8:45, devotions; 8:45 to 9:30, Bible study—One class in a study of "Christ's Teaching Concerning the Use of Money." (Syllabus to be prepared by central office.) Other textbooks: "What We Believe" and "Methodist Armor." 9:35 to 10, Mission study classes: 1. Current mission study book; 2. One book on stewardship. 10:25 to 10:55, directed games; 11 to 12, methods (by groups); 12 to 12:30, business session; 1:30 to 2, committee meetings; 2 to 3, quiet hour for rest and study; 3:30 to 5, mass games and competitive athletics; 7:30, vespers; 8 to 9, song service and address. (Stunts one evening.) 9, sing or campfire. Address themes: "Money and Character," "The Sin of Waste," "What Shall I Give?" "The Rich Young Ruler." (Truman Lewis wants to know right now, "When do we eat." I am willing to leave that to Mr. Hawkins—he will certainly not overlook such an important item.)

Some Appointments.

Our President announces the appointment of Mr. M. L. White as District Secretary for the Meridian District. Mr. White's address is 2607 Seventh Street, Meridian, Miss. Miss Lurline Faucette, 1817 Tenth Street, Meridian, has been appointed Assistant Secretary in this district. Mr. Hawkins also announces the appointment of Mr. S. Truman Lewis, 200 Mabel Street, Hattiesburg, as Commissioner of Missions, whose special duty is to look after the African Special.

Our League year is now half-gone; I wonder if we are half finished with our Chapter work for the year. One District Secretary said a few weeks ago that only one Chapter in his district had reported on their African Special. What about your Chapter? Find out NOW how you stand on your African Special. Check up on your plan of work and see what is lacking. Remember, the other fellow's colors will be flying high at the Assembly. Will you permit yours to drag in the dust? We want to ask for the name of the first Chapter who pays their African Special pledge in full.

AMERICA'S RESPONSIBILITY FOR EUROPE'S CRISIS.

Dr. William Orr, formerly Deputy Commissioner of Education for Massachusetts, writes in the September Our World on "Europe's State of Mind." Dr. Orr's impressions were gathered during his post-war educational service in Europe. As a result of the long series of brutal, despotic wars from the beginnings of Occidental civilization to the present day, all Europe is filled with inherited hatred and distrust.

"Deplorable as were the effects of these wars in the destruction of life and property and in many cases in the checks placed on the advance of civilization, the greatest injury suffered by Europe was the accumulation of traditions of injustice, of grievances, of memories of wrongs and the settled hates these peoples hold to each other. Europe became committed to war and strife, that with the advance of resources gained larger and larger dimensions until they bade fair to absorb all the energies of the continent.

"Are there any signs of promise in a sky so dark? Or are we, as some pessimists predict, at the beginning of a backward movement of humanity? There will be no sure basis for enduring prosperity until these peoples learn to work together and to put aside plans for war. And this means spiritual reconstruction and regeneration.

"Europe, to-day, does not need so much material help, with the exception of certain areas, but she does need, as never before in her history, the impelling, directing force and power of intellectual, moral and spiritual ideas that shall drive out the evil obsessions, prejudices and passions of the past. America, better than any other land, can furnish such leadership. England is ready to lend her support, but England alone cannot act effectively.

"Of two things I am firmly convinced: First, that a policy of isolation is impossible. The interests of Europe and America are so intertwined that neither can do without the other.

"Secondly, the new ideas America has brought to this old continent of freedom and of friendly relations between States place her under moral and spiritual obligation to keep in helpful and sympathetic touch with all those who are striving against tremendous odds to build a new Europe on foundations of mutual good will and helpfulness. Should America fail to respond to this call she will surely in the end suffer in her own life the inevitable penalty of those who betray great and solemn trusts."

Unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; so every man according to his several ability.—Matt. xxv. 15.

Mrs. Lodic Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Tyrone, Pa.—"A friend told my husband how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped his wife, so my husband bought me a bottle because I was so run-down, had a nervous weakness, no strength in my body and pains in my left side so bad that I could hardly do my work. Before I was married I used to work in the factory, and I had pains just the same then as I have had since I have done my housework. I would not be without a bottle in the house now. It has stopped the pains all right and I have found out that it is a wonderful body builder, as it has made me well and strong. It is going to be the 'old reliable' with me hereafter, and I am always willing to tell other women how it has helped me. You can use this letter as you wish as I can honestly say that my words are true."—Mrs. M. LODIC, R.F.D. No. 4, Box 40, Tyrone, Pa.

Letters like this bring out the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They tell of the relief from such pains and ailments after taking Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A GREAT START.

Pearl River Avenue Church, McComb, has "started" in several things in the last two years, and it has done well in all of them. Especially did it do well in a real, sure-enough pounding recently. It is very common for us itinerants to speak of the "great reception" we received, the "hot supper," the "pounding," etc. Well, this being the first real effort this church has made alone, it was a fine affair. The president of the board of stewards, H. A. Hayman, made the speech in behalf of the large crowd assembled at the parsonage. It was certainly an appropriate speech for such an occasion; and his speech and the speeches of others were certainly an encouragement to this chap. It was "beyond me" really to answer the good talks by the flock. And while the spirit of the occasion was the main thing, the pounding was no small affair. It is pretty much like going into a small grocery store now when we run out in the pantry. Now, isn't that fine? I should say it is! Well, Pearl River Avenue is really overloaded financially, considering their number, paying for their parsonage and furnishing it, with Conference assessments increasing and the superannuate fund coming; but we are making a drive now for every member to become a tither (those who are not already tithing), and we are not going to miss it far, if at all, and then we can only do what we can financially, and if it doesn't reach "clear round," we'll feel perfectly clear, for there are very few churches in our connection with a larger per cent of tithers than we have already. We intend to make this "Parsoage year." The payment of the parsonage comes first, but I am feeling the tithing campaign will enable all the other claims to be met.

Now, after you have read this, you needn't go back over it! Just thought I'd mention mine, too? "Much obliged" for printing it, Brother Henry.

Saved up to date,

J. A. WELLS.

"I WILL GUIDE THEE WITH MINE EYE."

By Rev. E. N. Evans.

That force of will power, to dare, to live and to do, in the Christian warfare, is not inconsistent with a deep sense of loneliness and utter helplessness that comes in some degree and in some form at some period to every true and normal life. In a very broad and vital sense, the Christian life is indeed "a life apart."

Cardinal Newman's great hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," touches the universal heart because of a kindred experience in all those normal lives which are individually worth while. Like a tree transplanted from the nursery into the open field, this is the beginning of this individual life apart with God. Like the student from a large class in a college of thousands of fellow-students he steps forth from commencement into the life individual. Will he lose or find himself in the multitudes? (How many are lost, and how few find themselves!) Much, if not all, depends upon the amount and character of meditation.

The boy or girl comes from the nursery of the home or the church to a time when his or her training, restraints and discipline are to be tried out in actual life. The mother's apron string- are now too short to cable all their paths. Parental authority, admonitions and counsel count only for what they have produced in the way of character in the individual personality. Maybe fortunately these things come gradually or in single instances, but sooner or later such an one must come to the lonely hour, day, or year of self-determination. "Hast thou faith, have it to thyself." Who and what are you? Is there no guide who knows all this dark and rugged way, which can unfold to me only day by day?

From a religious home of prayer, from the church, with all its sacred teachings, hymns of inspiration and religious customs, these can mean no more than the strength of character formed. Their strictest observance and a devotion to all church provincialisms, have missed their objectives unless I may stand or walk without these stays and props. I need and must have a living guide who knows all the way, and will lead me there. So Mr. Newman, the youthful and convalescent poet, saw and wrote, "LEAD, KINDLY LIGHT."

Faith is half dare and half common sense. My own personality may not be submerged. Self-reliance is not an infallible strength on which to rely. Try it out if we may. Books from the wisests of all those who have gone before are good only as they give us counsel and strength. I must venture and trust my guide Divine. I must be "in the world, but not of the world." I must be in the multitude, but not lost in it. A lost personality is a lost soul. Jesus alone "came to seek and to save the lost." Happy that soul which, having come to this lonely hour, finds him who said, "I will guide thee with mine eye." Have you found yourself? Have you found the Guide?

THE FAITH OF A SIMPLE CHINESE BOY.

By Rev. George F. Erwin.

(Mr. Erwin is in charge of the evangelistic work of the Siberia Mission. Besides teaching in the Methodist Institute, he is pastor of Central Church in the city of Harbin, one of the most important cities of the Orient. Brother Erwin is a member of the South Georgia Conference, and his support is carried by the churches at Shellmon and Byromville. The Sunday school of Ferguson, Mo., also shares in this missionary enterprise.—Editor's note.)

About one month after we arrived in Vladivostok, Mrs. Erwin found that she needed help with the housework, and the wife of the American Consul recommended to us a Chinese boy who had worked for her. His name is Chyn, and he is very simple looking. He did not know how to do much work, but, like Barkis, "he was willing." We soon discovered that he was very intelligent.

We could exchange but a few words when he first came to us, but after we learned that he wanted to speak English, Mrs. Erwin began to teach him. She gave him an English lesson each evening after supper. I have never seen any one study harder or learn faster. Mrs. Erwin said one day that if he had only had a chance, Chyn could have been a college president.

Not only did he show himself to be a student, but he was very industrious. He soon learned how to cook, and to do it well. He was a good trader at the bazaar, and we are sure he saved us as much by his trading as we paid him. He was trustworthy; in making out itemized statements at the end of each week, he never made mistakes.

As soon as I could talk to him, I found that he did not know anything about the Bible, nor had he ever heard of Christ. I showed him a picture of George Washington and one of Jesus. He recognized Washington's at once, but he did not know Christ's; I bought him a New Testament in Chinese, which he devoured. Many nights we noticed that his light was burning late, and when we investigated we found that he had gone to sleep with the Bible in his hand. Ofttimes he would call his Chinese friends in to read with him. After he read in Chinese he would explain it to them in English.

Chyn was taken sick before we were forced to leave Vladivostok. We had some of the best doctors in the city trying to locate his trouble. All failed, and his left hand and arm were partly paralyzed. He was very sad because we had to move to Harbin and leave him in a hospital. Once he said that if he died it would be all right for us to leave him there, but he did not want us to leave him there sick.

When I last saw him, I asked him If he loved Jesus, and he said, "Yes." Then I asked Chyn if Jesus loved him. Again he replied, "Yes." Thus I parted with my faithful Chinese boy.

"The people called Methodists must be educated in the program of the church until its membership everywhere will have an intelligent interest in the supreme things for which it stands. This cannot be done until we raise up a generation that reads the Advocates of the church."—Bishop W. N. Ainsworth.

Reading Makes A Full Man

In this age it is impossible for a man to keep fully abreast with the procession unless he reads. Not only must he read those books and papers dealing with his daily occupation, but he must read literature on the devotional life, to be a "full man." What better reading for developing the spiritual side of man than the Church paper? It holds his interest in the things for which the Church stands. By reading it he is a more intelligent and enthusiastic worker in his church—a better citizen—a better Christian.

Keep this in mind and do your full part in putting the right sort of reading matter into the hands of your membership.

January 27 has been designated as Good Literature Day by the Methodist Press Association, and it has received the endorsement of the College of Bishops.

We suggest the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the (Nashville) Christian Advocate.

FROM WASHINGTON, MISS.

At the last session of our Conference at Gulfport I was appointed to the Washington charge for 1924. I soon found that I not only had a new charge, but a new presiding elder also.

I went home, packed, and was soon on the way to the new field of labor for the next Conference year. About dark one cold evening we drove our faithful Ford into light coming out through the doors and windows of the parsonage (for it was not only lighted up, but heated up, thanks to the good and thoughtful women) and we found when we entered, that the parsonage was not only lighted and heated for our comfort, but it was inhabited.

So the two good Sisters Starnes and Hoff very graciously received and welcomed us, and Sister Starnes soon invited us into the dining-room, to a nice, warm supper, prepared with her own hands, and—well, we proved to her in a more substantial way than mere words that we really appreciated this thoughtful act of kindness. Then quite a goodly number of ladies came in, and after some time spent very pleasantly, they went away, and we began to look around, and found many good things to eat laid up in store for us for many days; all of which, together with the things which have come from day to day since, have made us glad, and especially so, as we know these are only some tokens of their love for Him in whose name we come, and for Him and not for us only.

Well, our first Sunday here in Washington was rainy and unpleasant, but we had two services, with fair-sized congregations, and received nine members. Then, on the 16th, we had our new presiding elder with us to hold our first quarterly conference. He preached a great sermon at 11 a. m., and held our conference immediately afterward. He is not new as a presiding elder, so everything was looked after in careful and business-like manner. Well, I'll say this right now—if he keeps on preaching as he did here for me, we preachers will have to stir some to beat him. Well, it's mighty good to get to hear a real good sermon occasionally. I like it—would like it better two or three times occasionally.

We are thanking God and taking courage for all the good things that have come our way, and we are praying and hoping and working for a great revival all over the charge, the district, the Conference, the whole church and the whole world. Let's go, let's go!

Brethren and sisters, pray much for us.

Yours in His love,

M. J. MILLER.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

A visit to the commercial department, 421 Baronne street, New Orleans, will always pay.

LETTERS FROM CHINA.

128 Telinskaya Street,
Harbin, China, Oct. 22, 1923.

Dear Miss Howell: Here we are actually in Harbin, somewhat settled, and ready to begin language study to-morrow.

It was a most inauspicious entrance we had into the city. There was a pouring rain, mud everywhere, more baggage than we could manage, and no one to meet us. It was fun, however to find a drosky for ourselves, try to give a Russian sound to the address, get in the little carriage that was about as wet inside as it was on the outside, and drive to the mission house to take them all by surprise there. You see, our telegram didn't get there until after we did.

Harbin is an interesting city. Mr. Jenkins took us for a sight-seeing drive the other afternoon. Over in this part of the city nearly everything is Russian; here the men wear big, thick coats with tight leather belts, baggy trousers and black leather knee boots, and long, curled mustaches; over in Fuchiatien, all is Chinese. I still ache when I see the women's tiny feet.

At first we thought it was a joke about the cold weather here, for though the rain was disagreeable and the mud inches deep, yet it was not cold, and in the house even too warm; but to-night the wind is howling and the snow is falling.

Lillian and I are to have a language teacher, a very fine one, together for an hour each day, and another alone for two hours for practice, but though we can't afford more time than this with teachers, supplementing it with two hours of study alone will be about as much as I can absorb a day anyhow, I think. Lillian got way ahead of me while in Seoul.

It hasn't been definitely decided yet what we are to do to help in the Institute and Gymnasium, but there will probably be two hours a day of teaching for each of us, besides work in the Epworth League to be organized, and the Methodist Instruction Class. There is no limit to the opportunities that we might take advantage of.

We have spent most of the time since we have been here apartment hunting. We have decided on one now that we think will be very satisfactory. It is two blocks from the mission house and five from the school. It has five rooms besides the kitchen. We thought at first it would be too large, but decided that we would need that much room if we carry out our purpose of making it a social center. It is unfurnished; we found only one furnished, and that one impossible. The rent is $75 a month, which is reasonable for Harbin and this particular apartment. With the rest of the rent fund and some that was given to Lillian and to me by missionary societies at home, we will be able to have the furniture made for it. If the same amount is sent for rent the second six months as was sent this time, we think we can furnish it completely. It is bright and sunny and modern in its conveniences. In the meantime, we are living with Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins. It is very homelike here, with three babies on both sides of the house.

It is marvelous to me the amount of work that has already been started. Opportunities are plentiful. The problem is which ones to select. In the face of them all, it will be hard to stick to language study, but to do this we are determined.

We will let you hear from us often, for the work here is to be most interesting, we have already found.

Lovingly,

---

58 Bolshoi Prospect,
Harbin, Manchuria, China,
November 9, 1923.

My Dear Miss Howell: Foreign mail came to-day, and with it your letter! The coming of the mail makes quite an event, and how we do appreciate every piece of it.

By this time you have gotten my letter and know that Lillian waited for me in Seoul, and that we came on the rest of the way together.

We have been living in our apartment a week, to-day, and feel very much at home. Though we are just camping in our bedrooms while the furniture is drying, the rest of the rooms are about complete. We have wicker furniture in the living room, and bought a second-hand dining-room suit, which is very pretty, though of heavy Russian style. Our dining-room is the most cheerful spot in the place. It is bright and sunny, for windows are all across the east side; there is a fireplace, too, and we have fallen in the habit of sitting in here most of the time, and studying around the table.

Chew is our cook and right-hand man. He takes great pride in trying to please, washes the floors of the whole apartment every morning, and respectfully listens to my pidgin Russian and interprets it enough to give us plenty to eat. It has been my turn to keep house this week. Since we have been in our own home we have been obliged of necessity to speak Russian, whether correctly or not, for besides Chew we have a Russian girl with us. She is an orphan, that is, her father is not living, and her mother cannot take care of her. There is no work for her to do in Harbin, nor any place for her to go. She is twenty-one, I think. There are many in her predicament in Harbin, they say. She helps us with our Russian, cleans, and is ready to do anything we ask her. She doesn't know any English, and oh, the brave efforts we make with our little Russian and many signs to draw her into the conversation. She is extremely conscientious in trying to teach us. If we don't learn, it won't be her fault. We have a lot of fun with it; sometimes it takes the combined efforts of all four of us to express one thought. For our morning prayers we use two English Bibles, a Russian, and a Chinese.

We started Monday of this week to teach in the English school. We teach two hours a day, and once a week each of us leads in the chapel exercises, which come between the two classes, so that the time we spend at the school each day is two and a half hours, that is from 3:30 to 6. We feel that more than this would be too much, so have decided not to start anything else until the first of the year, when we have suggested that we give up one of the English classes and have instead Sunday school classes and an Epworth League. There are opportunities to do many things, and we could do them through interpreters now, and I think those already here would be glad if we could do more, for, as I said, the opportunities are many, but we want to be sensible. What do you think? Are we doing too much, or not enough?

We had a wedding in our church Sunday night after services, the first of all Methodist weddings in the city of Harbin. The groom was one of our ministers-in-training. They knew nothing of any wedding ceremony except the Catholic, so it took hours of practice and interpretation. Lillian and I had charge of the decorations. We made a white crepe paper bell, which, though very curiously and wondrously constructed, looked very pretty hung over the pulpit arch of the little church room, with crepe paper streamers looped away on each side. The bride was a little bobbed-haired girl, but looked beautiful in her white dress and veil, an absolute necessity in all Russian weddings. That same evening, before the wedding, six new members were taken into the church—three men and three women. The place was filled to its utmost capacity so that not another one could squeeze in the door, and many were turned away. Some one said fifteen hundred tried to get in.

We have made several pastoral calls with Mr. Erwin. In each place we were there only a few minutes before tea and cakes were served. It is the customary and polite thing to do to serve something to eat to every visitor.

We have not found it colder here than we have been used to so far, but every one tells us in a chill-inspiring voice that it is going to be. There is a beautiful five-inch snow on the ground now, and they tell us that it will be here the rest of the winter. The heat is turned on in our apartment during the night and off during a part of the day—a plan just as sensible as ours, for the windows are not supposed to be opened at all. However, we are going to see the landlord to-morrow and ask him to reverse his order. The windows are tightly sealed, and doubled, and padded at the bottom between the two with cotton and sawdust. We can open the forduska, however, the little door in the windows. I am entirely too hot at night.

I don't know much yet about the inner thoughts of the Russian people, nor of their religious needs, but many have expressed to me their intense hatred of Bolshevism, and their great desire to go to America. About half of those in my classes are studying English because they want to go to America.

It is past bed-time, so,

Goodnight,

The great difference between men, the feeble, and the powerful, . . . is energy and invincible determination, a purpose once fixed, and then death or victory. That quality will do anything that can be done in this world; and no talents, no circumstances, no opportunities will make a two-legged creature a man without it.—Sir T. Fowell Buxton

A SHOWER AT SUNFLOWER, MISS.

One of the most pleasant affairs of the season was spent in the lovely home of Mrs. J. T. Lancaster on last Tuesday, when the Methodist ladies met to show our great love and esteem for our beloved and esteemed pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. F. H. McGee, who have been returned to us by Conference for another year, which is a great delight to our church and meets the approval of every one.

It was a complete surprise to them, and came as a benediction at the end of a very busy and fruitful year under his able leadership; and the new year bids fair to be a birght and prosperous one. Much time was spent in looking over the bountiful supplies brought in by the ladies as a love token and in prayer for what God has done for us during the year. The work of the year was reviewed and gratitude expressed that so much had been done the past year by the pastor and his willing and efficient board and the Woman's Missionary Society, backed by the membership of the church. A new church has been built during the year, to the furnishing of which the ladies have contributed over $1,400.

A dainty salad course was enjoyed, after which we said good-by, feeling it was a blessing to all to have shown our love in such a substantial way.

OUSTS RHEUMATISM.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expels the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

The district stewards will please meet me at the Methodist church, Gulfport, Thursday, Dec. 20, at 3 p.m.

I shall expect the district stewards to do all their work without the assistance of any one. So please come with some plan outlined by which you may expedite the work. While there was a decrease in some of the assessments for this year there was a total increase on the Seashore District to the amount of $327, made necessary on account of our Home Mission work being carried on in our own district.

CORNER STONE LAID AT ARCADIA, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: Sunday, Dec. 16, was red-letter day in Arcadia, La. The corner stone of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was laid. At the 11 a. m. service, Rev. A. S. Lutz, D.D., preached a well accepted sermon, and the service for corner stone laying was held at 2 p. m. The principal addresses were delivered by Rev. K. W. Dodson and Rev. A. S. Lutz. The pastor said a few words commending the contractor, Mr. McClannahan, and the builder, Mr. Zacks, and called out the articles placed in the box. By appointment of the pastor, Rev. K. W. Dodson placed his hand upon the stone and repeated the formula.

The congregation are highly pleased with their structure, and they are looking forward to being housed in it within the next few weeks. The pastor hopes to secure Bishop Dobbs for the opening day service.

H. W. LEDBETTER.

IMPORTANCE OF GETTING A GOOD CHURCH PLAN.

The last annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension adopted the following:

"The Secretary shall require the plans of all churches, to which grants of either donations or loans are made, to be submitted to the Department of Architecture of the Board of Church Extension for approval. Should the plans be unsatisfactory it is made his duty to suspend payment of the grant until the plans are changed to conform to the suggestions of the Department of Architecture. A reasonable charge shall be deducted from the grant for this service rendered by the Department of Architecture."

In passing upon plans the Secretary of this department must be governed by certain definite requirements for church activities, and especially the work of the Sunday school. He must also insist upon a decent regard for good architecture. These requirements are not the arbitrary expression of individual whim or notion. They represent the reasoned conclusions of many experienced leaders in our own and other denominations. A Joint Committee on Church and Sunday School Architecture, composed of equal numbers from the General Sunday School Board, and the Board of Church Extension, was created by the last General Conference, and no requirement is made which has not been most carefully considered by this Joint Committee. Full information concerning these requirements will be supplied on request, and this department can supply a service which will prevent serious mistakes in regard to plans.

The importance of seeking this assistance before employing an architect, or deciding on plans, cannot be too strongly urged. The time for consultation is in the beginning before plans are made. After an architect has prepared a set of plans extensive changes cannot be made except at a great expense and considerable delay. Avoid this by finding out in advance what kind of plans will be approved by the Board.

Correspondence and many church plans sent to the office indicate that there is in some quarters much confusion of thought as to what constitutes a good church plan. When the requirements of a given situation are stated in terms of a given number of "class rooms" it usually means that the Departmental Sunday school has not been heard of. Reference to the increased seating capacity to be secured by "throwing open the Sunday school room" usually indicates a plan of the Akron type, as does the "corner pulpit." Both the Akron plan and the corner pulpit are entirely out of date. Some architects indicate the seating capacity of a primary or beginners' room in figures which would require the children to be wedged in like sardines.

Building a church is an important undertaking. The people are entitled to the best building possible for the money to be invested. A new era in church building is upon us, and all the churches are taking steps to secure a decided improvement over the past. The church building required for the most efficient work to-day is in many respects quite different from the church building of yesterday. Take time to get all the light possible, and especially from the headquarters of your own church. There is an old proverb, "Haste makes waste," and this office has often seen its truth demonstrated.

Address all comunications to Rev. J. A. Baylor, Architectural Secretary, Board of Church Extension, 1115 Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Ky.
